- LAND SETTLEMENT SCHEMES:—Instead of the Government giving land and $500 it would be better if materials and implements were purchased for the men (Capt. Macpherson), 342. There is a call for men in the West who could do agricultural engineering owing to the use of the gasoline engine, the separator, the traction engine and so on (Dr. Harrison), 450. The group system of farms as planned by the Government of New Brunswick (Major Tilley), 519. Land settlement after the war (Major Tilley), 605. Would advise the re-enlistment of returned soldiers and place them on Crown lands in the western provinces to receive the same pay and allowance (Hon. Geo. A. Simard), 553. Sees no reason why the colony scheme could not be made self-supporting in the case of the returned soldier who receives a pension from the Government (Major Munn), 678. Ontario Government scheme to assist the returned soldier to learn farming and for forming land colonies (Hon. G. H. Ferguson), 707-712, and 791. When the land schemes are taken up in the West there will be 50 per cent of the men who will go back to the farm (Mr. Law), 861. Thinks that any land settlement scheme should be part of a general immigration or colonization scheme so far as it affects soldiers. Another scheme would be the community centre for a limited time (G. Harmon Jones), 874-882. From 50 to 60 per cent of the men coming back to Saskatoon are in favour of some grant. The chief proposition is the community system of about 160 acres per man and a long term loan with small interest. The disabled who are unable to work the land should not be debarred. That financial assistance be given to returned homesteaders and those holding pre-emptions who are in financial difficulties (G. H. Herbert), 884-86. At a meeting convened by our association, 70 per cent of those present signified their willingness to become producers if a suitable land scheme were put forward (Sergt.-Major Guilfoyle), 911. A majority of the men at several meetings convened endorsed the suggestion that 320 acres of land are necessary to each man in Alberta—Horses, lumber and implements to be supplied at wholesale rates—The land should not belong to the settler until he gets his patent, but he should be paid for improvements made to enable him to live (Geo. Wells), 912-13. The principle adopted by the British Columbia Commission is a community settlement scheme—The land clearing in our province is a great factor (J. H. Hill), 921. Recommendations regarding community land settlement setting forth the provincial government's purpose (See report submitted by Mr. Hill), 1041. - LAST PAY CERTIFICATE AND PASS BOOK:—Complains present system causes delay in pay (Trooper Brown), 485. Very general complaint about the last pay certificate—Pte. Jones' case reported (Dr. Evans), 536. The pay book is the man's own personal property although he may have handed it out to have it checked at Quebec—The officers at Quebec give the returning soldier a certain amount on account which is recorded on his last pay certificate (Major Wilson), 659. My pay book was taken from me at Quebec; I have not seen it since (W. E. Turley), 772. When at Bath in 1916, my pay book was sent to London and I have not seen it since (Sergt.-Major Whitton), 772. The man's last pay certificate is forwarded to headquarters at Ottawa, his account is adjusted there, and fresh last pay certificate (L.P.C.) is forwarded to Toronto (Lieut.-Col. Forbes), 825. The man returns from overseas invariably with his pay book and is given an advance of $10 when he arrives at Quebec (Lieut. Chadwick), 847. The last pay certificate has been one source of great annoyance (Mr. McRae), 867. Explains grievance about men not being allowed to keep their pay books (Mr. Borden), 1110. The soldier now takes his pay book wherever he goes (Major Ingall), 1126.

Rules for the medical examination of recruits, 288. A Central Examining Board was started in Montreal in the fall of 1915, to which every man had to be brought (Lieut.-Col. Patch), 404. Unfortunately there is no continuity of medical boards at the Discharge Depot (Mr. MacCoy), 525. There should be a permanent Standing Medical Board for the examination of men who are eligible for pensions (Major Purney), 532. Remarks and suggestions respecting the medical aspect of work at Quebec Discharge Depot (Col. Marlow), 804. The Medical Board at Winnipeg and men examined for pensions by a specialist (Mr. Law), 852. REPORT OF THE SPECIAL COMMITTEE OF THE HOUSE OF COMMONS
OF CANADA ON THE CARE AND TREATMENT OF RETURNED SOLDIERS, 1917.

ORDER OF REFERENCE.

HOUSE OF COMMONS,

OTTAWA, February 7, 1917.

Resolved,—That the following members, namely, Sir Herbert Ames, and Messieurs: Bennett (Calgary), Marcil (Bonaventure), Middlebro, Murphy, McCurdy, Pardee, Ross and Sutherland, be appointed a Committee for the purpose of considering, inquiring into and reporting upon:—

(a) The reception, treatment, care, training and re-education of the wounded, disabled and convalescent who have served in the Canadian Expeditionary Forces.

(b) The provision of employment for those who have been honourably discharged from the Canadian Expeditionary Forces, and the training and re-education of those so discharged who are unable to engage in their former occupation.

Attest.

THOS. B. FLINT,
Clerk of the House.

WEDNESDAY, April 25, 1917.

Ordered,—That the recommendations contained in the Preliminary Report of the Committee on Returned Soldiers be concurred in, and the action of the Committee in exercising certain powers and authorities referred to in the Report, notwithstanding the fact that such powers and authorities were not given in the original appointment of the Committee, be approved and ratified, and that the said Committee be hereby empowered to send for persons and papers, to report from time to time, to adjourn from place to place, to print the evidence taken before the Committee; and that the Committee be authorized to sit while the House is in session.

Attest.

THOS. B. FLINT,
Clerk of the House.

SPECIAL COMMITTEE OF THE HOUSE OF COMMONS ON RETURNED SOLDIERS.

HOUSE OF COMMONS,

OTTAWA, Wednesday, 25th April, 1917.

The Special Committee, appointed to consider, inquire into and report upon the reception, treatment, care, training and re-education of the wounded, disabled and convalescent returned soldiers of the Canadian Expeditionary Forces, in accordance with a Resolution adopted by the Committee, beg to present to the House the following

PRELIMINARY REPORT:

Your Committee, pursuant to the Resolution passed by the House on Wednesday, 7th February last, appointing Nine Members to constitute the Committee, met on the said 7th February, when the following Members, namely, Sir Herbert Ames, Hon. Chas. Marcil, Hon. F. B. McCurdy, Mr. W. S. Middlebro, Mr. F. F. Pardee, Mr. Duncan C. Ross, and Mr. Donald Sutherland were present, and elected Sir Herbert Ames as Chairman of the Committee. The Committee at once proceeded to consider what information could be secured regarding existing agencies of assistance given to disabled returned soldiers and instructed the Clerk of the Committee to request the attendance of certain gentlemen of the Military Hospitals Commission, and of the Militia Department to appear and give evidence before the Committee.

On Thursday, 22nd February, when your Committee again met, the Chairman's attention was directed to what the Members of the Committee considered a technical difficulty. Your Committee had not been given power to send for persons and papers, to report from time to time, to adjourn from place to place, to print for the use of the Committee the evidence taken, nor could it ask leave to do so owing to the extending adjournment of the House. Obviously, there was but one course to follow in order to conform strictly to the Rule. All Nine Members present considered that the Inquiry was urgent and that it was the undoubted desire of the House that the Committee should hold immediate sessions. Your Committee thereupon resolved to proceed with the Inquiry as if it had been granted leave by the House to send for persons and papers, to report from time to time, to adjourn from place to place, and to print for the use of the Committee the evidence taken. Notwithstanding this, your Committee, during the adjournment has held ten business sessions at which important testimony was given, and statements and papers were submitted by representatives of Returned Soldiers' Associations, Provincial Soldiers' Aid Commissions, Military Hospitals, Convalescent Homes and Benevolent Societies from every province of the Dominion. Four sessions were held in Ottawa, two in Montreal, and four in Toronto. The Inquiry in respect to the first matter of reference is almost terminated so far as the hearing of evidence is concerned, and your Committee will be able to present to the House an Interim Report in the course of three or four weeks.

Your Committee therefore recommends to the House the desirability of ratifying the action of the Committee in having proceeded with the Inquiry as if the House had granted to the Committee, at the time of its appointment, the various powers and authorities above mentioned, and the Committee further recommends that such powers and authorities be granted for the future work of the Committee, and in addition thereto, that the Committee be empowered to sit while the House is in Session. (See also Votes and Proceedings, pp. 233-234.)

HOUSE OF COMMONS OF CANADA,

TUESDAY, 17th July, 1917.

The Special Committee, appointed to consider, inquire into and report upon the reception, treatment, care, training and re-education of the wounded, disabled and convalescent returned soldiers of the Canadian Expeditionary Forces, in accordance with a resolution adopted by the Committee on Friday, 13th July, beg leave to present to the House the following as their

SECOND REPORT:

In any measures dealing with returned men, it must be borne in mind that the Canadian Expeditionary Force is not made up of professional soldiers, but is almost entirely composed of citizens, who, at the outbreak of the war were engaged in their ordinary peaceful avocations, and who, when they are discharged, will expect and desire to return to a normal life.

Canadians can never forget the magnificent services rendered by these men in the defence of our very existence but it would be impossible for the State to calculate in terms of dollars the value of their services, or cancel by money grant its obligation to its brave defenders. Their chief reward must ever be the approval of their consciences, and the undying gratitude of their fellowmen.

But in the opinion of your Committee, the State owes to each of her citizen-soldiers on his return to Canada at least two things:—

(a) Restoration to fitness, as far as may be possible, if by reason of service, efficiency has been impaired, and—

(b) Preferential opportunity whereby the returned soldier may, by his industry, be assured of a comfortable living.

A new country like Canada with vast unexplored natural resources, which we all believe will be developed after the termination of this Great War, contains countless opportunities for ambitious men to win their way, and in so far as the State is able so to do, the first call upon these opportunities should be placed at the disposal of those men, who, in the hour of peril were willing to jeopardize their lives for our common defence.

It is then with these principles in view that the Committee of Parliament, appointed to examine into and report upon the care and treatment of returned men, submits the evidence taken before it and lays before the House certain recommendations based upon the study of the facts as presented by the various witnesses examined.

CLASSIFICATION.

Returning men may be divided into two classes:—

(1) Those who have suffered from wounds or illness and are being from time to time sent back to Canada:

(a) For immediate discharge as permanently unfit for further military service.

(b) For further medical treatment.

(2) Those who though not impaired in efficiency are given their discharge.

The first of these classes is largely composed of disabled soldiers who, at the present time, are returning at the rate of from 1,500 to 2,000 per month. They form our immediate problem.

The second of these classes are the fit men, who, for the most part, will not return until the war is over but whose distribution and absorption into the civil life of Canada will constitute the general problem of demobilization.

SCOPE OF INVESTIGATION.

Your Committee has very thoroughly investigated the matter of the care and treatment at present being given to wounded soldiers, but has not, as yet, given any exhaustive study to the problem attendant upon demobilization and "liquidation of the war."

WOUNDED MEN.

It has been the policy of the Military authorities to treat in hospitals overseas the great majority of the active cases and to send back to Canada only convalescents and such as require at least six months of further medical treatment before they may again become fit.

These men are being returned on Hospital Ships, specially fitted for the care of the sick and wounded. In summer they are (save those whose ultimate destination in the Maritime Provinces) landed at Quebec, in winter at Halifax or St. John. The main discharge depot, or distribution point is at Quebec. When a shipment of wounded men reaches Canada, they are disembarked and classified as follows:—

(a) Men for immediate discharge—unfit for further overseas service but capable of resuming their previous civil occupation. (These men, having suffered no disability as a result of active service are not eligible for pension.)

(b) Men whose condition may be benefited by further medical treatment, and—

(c) Men with permanent disability already established, whose condition cannot be improved by further treatment, and whose cases should come without delay before the Board of Pension Commissioners for consideration and settlement.

Disposition is made of these classes in the following manner:—

Class (a) Men for immediate discharge without pension are returned to the Military district from which they originated and discharged. The account of the State with them is closed when they have found suitable employment.

Class (b) Men whose condition may be benefited by further medical treatment, being the subject of the major portion of this Inquiry, may be, for the moment, passed over and consideration in respect of them resumed later.

Class (c) Men who have suffered by reason of wounds or disease, their disability being the result of military service or aggravated thereby. They cannot, it is presumed, be benefited by further hospital treatment. As soon as possible after their arrival they are examined by the Medical Board at discharged depot. The Medical history and other documents of each case, together with the report of the Medical Board at the discharge depot are forwarded to Ottawa and the Pensions Board proceeds forthwith to adjudicate upon the matter of pension. Meanwhile, the disabled soldier is permitted to return to his home, if he has one, remaining on full pay and allowances until his pension has been determined and his first monthly pension cheque forwarded to him. His discharge dates from the day before his pension begins. For the purpose of enabling discharged soldiers to maintain themselves until they have secured employment in civil life, a bonus equivalent to three months' full pay allowances from the date of discharge is granted where the soldier has been at least six months in the service and has gone overseas. Members of the Civil Service, however, returning to positions formerly held by them, are not eligible for this bonus. (See Order in Council C.O.N.C. 1091 and 1362.)

TREATMENT OF THE CONVALESCENT SOLDIER IN CANADA.

Class (b) Returning to the subject of the treatment of men whose condition after their return to Canada it is thought may be improved by further medical treatment, this matter naturally falls under four heads:—

1. Medical care and the work of the Military Hospitals Commission.
2. Vocational training and re-education.
3. Provincial co-operation in securing employment, and—
4. Pay and allowance.

1. MEDICAL CARE AND THE WORK OF THE MILITARY HOSPITALS COMMISSION.

The evidence indicates that up to the 31st day of March, 1917, the Military Hospitals Commission dealt with 13,826 enlisted men, who had returned to Canada:— 2,609 in 1915; 6,629 in 1916; and 4,588 in the three months of the present year. Of the 13,826 returned men, 2,891 were entitled to immediate discharge without pension, being either unfit for overseas service and able to take up their previous civilian occupations, or suffering from disabilities not the result of service, and involving no claim as a result of, or aggravated by the result of, military service. 9,124 were men whose condition would be benefited by further medical treatment or rest in convalescent homes, hospitals or sanatoria. 3,514 were suffering from wounds; 670 were affected with tuberculosis; 180 were insane; 9 were totally blind; and 177 suffered from major amputations. The degree of disability of the 13,826 men is fixed by the medical board at the port of disembarkation as follows:—

Up to 25 per cent disability	7,418
From 26 to 50 per cent.	2,923

There is no record of 583 cases.

The necessity for making special provision for the suitable accommodation and medical care and attention of returned soldiers is therefore apparent, not only for those requiring ordinary medical treatment, but also for those who are blind or insane, or have suffered from amputations.

In the early months of the war, active or bed cases were not returned to Canada, but in the month of November, 1916, Sir George Perley cabled the Military Hospitals Commission indicating that there was urgent necessity for provision being made in Canada to take care of such cases. He indicated that there were 300 men then boarded and ready to proceed to Canada, all ambulatory cases and permanently unfit for further service, at the same time estimating that there were 3,000 patients in England who could be disposed of in that way, thus relieving the hospital congestion there. Some public misunderstanding arose at one time; the 300 boarded men were confused with the 3,000 who might ultimately be returned to Canada. Provision was at once made by the Military Hospitals Commission to care for the bed cases; and since the beginning of the year, they have been steadily returning to Canada for treatment.

The evidence indicates that all returned men received excellent care and attention in the hospitals in Great Britain, and that, while accommodation for the transport of bed patients across the Atlantic was at first indifferent, it has steadily improved, and properly equipped hospital ships are now available for the transportation of such men to Canada, and suitably equipped hospital trains have been provided by the railways to forward them to the hospitals and homes selected for their accommodation.

Suitable accommodation with proper medical care and attention and adequate hospital facilities have been provided for the returned men when they disembark at St. John, Halifax and Quebec. A certain number of returned men suffer on arrival from contagious and infectious diseases. In this regard, it may be noted that tubercular patients have received special attention. While there is a disposition on the part of some of the men to decline treatment and return to civil life before they are cured, or at least placed in a condition where nature may effect a cure, every effort should be used to induce the men to remain under treatment at suitable sanatoria until in the opinion of the medical authorities their condition warrants their discharge.

The only effort on any appreciable scale that has been made thus far to supply artificial limbs to returned men is at Toronto. The facilities are inadequate, and the testimony of competent witnesses indicates that the Government should undertake the establishing of suitable factories for the manufacture of artificial limbs, thereby giving employment to returned men who would specialize in the production and repair of artificial limbs, at the same time being able not only to support themselves, but to render a very great and useful service to their comrades.

CARE OF THE INSANE.

The care of the insane involves considerations of the utmost importance. At one time it was thought advisable to establish independent homes for the care of returned soldiers whose minds had been impaired in service. But it is apparent that if the best possible treatment is to be secured it can only be given by those who are specialists; and having regard to the excellent asylums that have been established in the various provinces throughout Canada, your Committee is of opinion that returned insane soldiers should be cared for in provincial asylums at the expense of the Federal Government.

Shell-shock and borderland cases, however, should be cared for in homes established by the Military Hospitals Commission. Such a home is now being organized at Cobourg.

RE-EDUCATION OF THE BLIND.

The re-education of the blind is a matter that in the opinion of the Committee can best be carried on through existing institutions or schools, and your Committee recommends that all men who are blind, and who have not been re-educated in England, should be given treatment in the existing institutions at the expense of the Federal Government.

CARE OF MEN SUFFERING FROM WOUNDS.

The medical care of those suffering from wounds and general, rather than special, disability, has in the main been satisfactory. The hospitals have steadily improved in character. When the first demand was made for accommodation it was necessary to take over and equip many buildings that were only reasonably suitable for hospital purposes; but better accommodation has now been provided, and your Committee believes that the provision now made is ample for the present and immediately prospective demands in this connection.

These hospitals are provided and maintained by the Military Hospitals Commission, and are administered through an organization known as the Military Hospitals Commission Command, which is a unit of the Canadian Expeditionary Force and is staffed by officers and men of the Canadian Expeditionary Force who are appointed and promoted through the Department of Militia and Defence. To the Military Hospitals Commission Command are transferred immediately upon arrival in Canada all officers and soldiers who are returned from overseas for discharge as permanently unfit, or for further medical treatment. In the latter category are included soldiers who, after the requisite period of treatment in Canada, may again become fit to be returned to active military duty in an exactly similar manner as soldiers are returned to duty from hospitals in England and France.

There is in each military district throughout Canada a section or unit of the Military Hospitals Commission Command which covers the same area as the Military District within which it is organized, and such section or unit is in command of an officer who is responsible to the Commanding Officer of the District in which the unit exists. Such unit or section may consist of a number of hospitals each of which is commanded by an officer, preference being given to such as have returned from the front and are unfit for further military service overseas. Discipline is maintained in these hospitals in the same manner as with similar Canadian institutions in England and France. The personnel of the Military Hospitals Commission Command is administered by an officer at Ottawa who reports to the Adjutant-General of the Department of Militia and Defence.

The medical treatment of the returned soldiers is officially under that branch of the Canadian Army Medical Corps known as the Directorate of Medical Services-Invalids, which under existing arrangements is responsible for the health and medical treatment of the soldier from the time he enlists in Canada, including any necessary hospital treatment in Canada, up to and including the time he is wounded or becomes ill in service on the field and through all the various subsequent stages of hospital treatment in France and England, and on the hospital ships across the Atlantic until his final return to Canada. The medical services in connection with the hospitals and homes administered by the Military Hospitals Commission Command in Canada are chiefly provided by the Canadian Army Medical Corps, which also provides the personnel of those military medical boards which are required to examine each soldier prior to his final discharge for the purpose of determining his fitness for discharge and his pensionability if any.

Your Committee, in hearing evidence regarding the care and treatment of wounded men returning to Canada, have found among the witnesses a distinct difference of opinion. On the one hand there is the view entertained by the Military authorities, and those connected with the Militia establishment, in effect that, as the returned men are still soldiers until their final discharge, their medical care and treatment and the administration of the institutions in which they are placed should be provided and controlled by the Canadian Army Medical Service. On the other hand there is what may be called the civilian point of view, which favours the emphasis being placed upon the fact that the returned soldier must be refitted for civilian life, and that therefore his treatment and care should be primarily with this end in view.

Owing to the fact that to a certain extent both of these opinions are recognized, and the existing machinery combines to a certain degree both contentions, the result is that there is dual control. Neither the Military Hospitals Commission nor the officer in charge of the Casualty Command has any real or effective control over the medical officers of the hospitals. The result is, to a certain extent, divided responsibility, and consequent lack of efficiency.

Your Committee, while agreed that this dual control is objectionable, has been unable to unanimously recommend that the care and treatment of returned soldiers should be placed entirely in either military or in civilian hands. Briefly stated, the contending views are as follows:—

THE POSITION OF THE MILITARY AUTHORITIES.

Continuity of the treatment of the soldier by medical officers who are acquainted with his medical history from the time he is wounded in the field and with the military conditions of his service, must be maintained; and the chain of responsibility throughout, kept unbroken. Any system which would provide for another medical service existing side by side with the C.A.M.C., the organization of which is complete in each Military District in Canada, would institute a system of dual control and divided responsibility in the medical treatment of soldiers which would not but lead to inefficiency and confusion. To have a different medical service for the treatment of invalided soldiers who have returned to Canada from overseas, and of invalided soldiers who had not then left Canada (of which latter class, 59,000 cases were admitted to hospital prior to going overseas during the first ten months of the year 1916) would mean an extravagant and unnecessary overlapping of functions, and would lead to a most unfortunate form of dual control in dealing with soldiers generally.

In view of the rapidly increasing importance of the returned invalided soldier problem, the Military authorities are of opinion that the recent creation in the Department of Militia and Defence of a "Directorate of Medical Services-Invalids," and the appointment thereto of an officer of high standing in the medical profession, who has seen long service at the front and who will have special supervision over this branch of the Army Medical Service, will result most beneficially in ensuring thorough and sympathetic care and adequate medical treatment of the returned invalided soldier. The "Director of Medical Services-Invalids" would assume full responsibility in connection with the administration of the medical service in the Units of the Military Hospitals Commission Command and by close co-ordination of effort as between the medical services overseas and in Canada a progressive continuity of treatment will be maintained.

A considerable proportion of men returned to Canada for convalescence, or further medical treatment, will eventually become fit for some form of military service, and it is the intention of the military authorities to use these men in instructional and other capacities in Canada.

With regard to those who will be discharged at the completion of their period of treatment as permanently unfit for further military service, every effort would be made to assist them to return to civil life, and to this end the fullest co-operation by all civilian organizations designed for this purpose would be invited and welcomed, as would any assistance that might be rendered by any information or complaint bureaux established to look after the interests of returned soldiers or their dependents.

THE ALTERNATIVE OR CIVILIAN PROPOSITION.

This may be stated as follows:—

In dealing with the question of the enlisted soldier the end immediately in view must be borne in mind. All agencies brought to bear upon the citizen-recruit have but one object, namely, to ultimately place a trained, disciplined fighting man on the firing line. It is therefore unquestionably admitted that the preparation of the soldier for active service should be in the hands of experienced military men.

When, however, the citizen-soldier has become unfitted for further military service, or when the need no longer exists, it is desirable that he be returned to civil life with the least possible friction or delay. His goal now is a normal civil life, and all measures taken on his behalf should be with the purpose of making him once again a producer and a self-supporting citizen. It is, therefore, reasonable to assume that his restoration to civilian status is an undertaking likely to be best accomplished under civilian guidance. That is to say, as men of military experience are judged most capable of making soldiers out of civilians, so men of civil experience may rightly be regarded as best adapted for remaking civilians out of returned soldiers.

Since the stream of men has commenced to return and the problem of the disabled soldier has become urgent, a number of bodies, governmental and voluntary, have been created to deal with the different phases of this problem. To a considerable degree these agencies overlap, are loosely related to each other, are responsible to different departments, or are a law unto themselves. The consequence is more or less confusion, with attendant lack of success, in so far as the returned soldier is concerned, in securing the best results.

It is therefore maintained by those who do not hold what may be called the military view of the situation, that greater centralization of control might be secured by the creation of a new governmental department, or sub-department, under a civilian Minister of the Crown, directly charged with responsibility for all measures dealing with the returned soldier, such as:

1. In respect of wounded and disabled men:—

- (a) Hospital care and treatment,
- (b) Functional restoration and artificial limbs,
- (c) Vocational training and re-education,
- (d) Casualties' pay and allowances in Canada,
- (e) Soldiers' homes,
- (f) Co-operation with provincial employment bureaux,
- (g) Any relief or disablement fund which may be found necessary.

2. In respect of fit men:—

Co-operation with the Military authorities, with Provincial Governments and other agencies upon all matters affecting their return to civil life.

3. Supervision of voluntary organizations of and on behalf of returned soldiers.

The governmental department herein above described might be continued during the war and until the end of the Session of Parliament held next after the war, or if Parliament is sitting when the war ends, then until the end of such Session of Parliament. It is further suggested by the same authorities that an office of the Returned Soldiers' Department be opened within each Military District in Canada, which may serve as an information bureau and clearing house in respect of all questions which may arise concerning the treatment and care of returned soldiers; that the funds required for the successful operation of all the activities under the Returned Soldiers' Department, and relief work which may from time to time become necessary, be defrayed out of the federal treasury; that all appeals and collections for patriotic purposes, soldiers' relief, and similar objects, be controlled by the Returned Soldiers' Department, and that unauthorized collections be prohibited by law.

Your Committee, unable to reconcile these two divergent views in such a manner as to secure agreement, is reluctantly compelled to leave the question of the control of the agencies for the care and treatment of returned soldiers without a recommendation on its part, having endeavoured in the previous paragraphs to state, with fairness to both contentions, the arguments in support of each view.

2. VOCATIONAL TRAINING AND RE-EDUCATION UNDER THE MILITARY HOSPITALS COMMISSION.

The matter of vocational training and the re-education of returned soldiers has been taken up with great attention to detail by the Hospitals Commission. The whole subject has been placed under the charge of Mr. T. B. Kidner, formerly at the head of Technical Training in the schools of Calgary, who also had experience in similar institutions in England, Nova Scotia and New Brunswick. He has chosen to assist him in the various Districts of Canada competent educational officials who have also been men of wide experience and some of whom are devoting their whole time to this work. Mr. Kidner has studied the experience of France and Britain and has improved upon their methods inasmuch as he has systematized under one authority all this work, which has been done in these other countries by various unconnected, inexperienced and unco-ordinated though patriotic, organizations. This has led to uniformity and an absence of overlapping in the work here, and, although the work of the Commission in this field has been of short duration, the progress attending it has been such as commends itself to this Committee.

The Commission apparently has three objects in view in their system of training and re-education. In the first place, they have learned that the life of idleness usually prevailing in a convalescent home for soldiers has a bad influence upon the inmates, both physically and morally, and they are, therefore, giving them vocational training, not only to make the men better physically, but also in order to keep them occupied and out of mischief, and for the further reason that it has a great therapeutic value and assists the men materially in their recovery. Their second object is to improve the men's elementary education, and, in addition, to make them more competent to carry on the occupations in which they have been engaged. The third object is, in case a man is not able to carry on his previous occupation, to re-educate him in some other occupation for which he is fit, so that he will not become a burden to society.

Since this work has been begun, and up to the middle of January of this year, vocational training during convalescence has been given to—

538	patients in	Quebec.
141	"	the Maritime Provinces.
348	"	Ontario.
105	"	Manitoba.
101	"	Saskatchewan.
148	"	British Columbia.

The Commission in pursuing this policy, has, as far as possible, attached to every convalescent home, a staff of competent teachers for the purpose of carrying on this work, and has even, where the same is advisable, built special vocational instruction buildings as additions to the convalescent homes. At the Mowat Sanitarium, Kingston, and the Mountain Sanitarium, Hamilton, excellent buildings for vocational training have been completed, and since the meetings of this Committee began, buildings are being erected at North Toronto (Military Orthopædic Hospital), Halifax, N.S. (Camp Hill Hospital), Esquimalt and Resthaven Hospitals, B.C. At Winnipeg, at the old Agricultural College, the machinery hall, 100 feet square and three stories high, will be devoted entirely to vocational training and the re-education of the seriously disabled men. Plans are also made for vocational buildings at other centres.

In the early stages of this work, the Commission was confronted by the reluctance of the soldiers to receive vocational training on account of the fear they entertained that if their earning power was thereby increased, their pensions would be decreased. As a result of this experience which was duplicated by the experience of Britain and France, an Order in Council was passed, very fittingly, declaring that the pensions of returned soldiers would not be decreased on account of their increased capacity to earn through their vocational training.

The range of vocational training and re-education adopted by the Commission has been very wide indeed, extending to such subjects as, woodworking, shoe-making, gardening, poultry-raising, farming, motor-mechanics, massage, telegraphy, book-keeping, basket-making, sign-painting, typewriting, shorthand, mechanical drawing and other occupations, full details in regard to which can be found from page 84 to page 160 in Volume II of the evidence taken before the Committee.

Fortunately, so far, very few blind soldiers have returned to Canada, and those who have come back have been educated in the work of massage and typewriting, and have shown great progress in those occupations.

The teachers employed in the various convalescent homes, except in the province of Ontario, are employed directly by the Commission. In that province for constitutional reasons put forward by the Provincial Government, teachers have been employed by the Provincial Soldiers' Aid Commission, but subject to the approval of the Hospitals Commission.

It is only fair to say that a considerable amount of voluntary assistance in teaching in the various schools has been given by patriotic persons, and that the Commission has adopted the policy of using the returned soldiers who showed proficiency in various lines of education as instructors in their institutions, and remunerating them therefor.

The policy adopted in regard to vocational training is to allow the convalescent to some extent to choose the occupation in which he shall receive training, guided of course, by the officials of the Commission. For the purpose of deciding general questions as to the most suitable training to be provided in a locality, the Commission asked the Provincial Commissions to appoint an Advisory Committee on Training. (See page 3, Bulletin No. 2, M.H.C.) These Advisory Committees usually include:—

- (1) Some person acquainted with the processes of education.
- (2) An agricultural educationalist.
- (3) An employer.
- (4) A labour representative.

The procedure adopted to determine whether or not a man is eligible for re-education is as follows:—

Each man who, from his medical record, appears likely to be unable to follow his previous occupation, is specially examined by a small Board known as a "Disabled Soldiers' Training Board," composed of three persons, namely:—

- (a) The District Vocational Officer;
- (b) The Medical Officer in charge of Unit; and
- (c) A member of the Provincial Advisory Committee on Training.

The findings of the Board are transmitted to the Head Office of the Commission, and if approved, the Vocational Officer is notified to arrange for the training of the men in some suitable institution or private establishment.

The question as to what new occupation a disabled man may be trained for is clearly, first of all, a medical one. But it is a question for a technical specialist or "Vocational Counsellor;" a man well versed in a knowledge of the methods of various industries and of the training necessary for those who desire to pursue them. But further, and this is an important consideration; it is an economic question, touching the law of supply and demand. While there are a number of occupations for which it is not difficult to train men, it does not follow that employment can readily be obtained in them. Last, by no means least, the man's own wishes and desires for his future must be consulted.

The question, therefore, is an individual one, and every case is investigated separately. The decision as to the occupation for which an opportunity of being trained is to be offered a man, is made in the light of the medical, training, economic and personal factors of his case, but an endeavour is always made to have him take up some work in which his former training will not be wasted, and some form of employment also in which there is active demand for workmen. For instance, supposing a man had been a painter, but on account of shell-shock was unable to continue in that occupation because of vertigo, he would be re-educated so as to make him a sign-painter.

Twelve thousand men had by the middle of January passed through the hands of the Hospitals Commission, and of this number in the neighbourhood of fifteen hundred had received vocational training and had passed into civil life, and many have by letters acknowledged the advantages they had received from the education given by the Commission. This work of re-education was only begun by the Commission at the end of June, 1916, but at the end of February, 1917, one hundred and eight cases were undergoing re-education. Some twelve cases had concluded their courses very successfully, but the number is probably too small to found any definite conclusion upon. The question arises as to what extent re-education should be undertaken by the Commission, because the process may be long and may be very expensive to the State, and is possible of abuse on account of insincerity of those undertaking it in some cases. A further question arises as to whether it would be wise for the Commission, after the discharge of a soldier who has then not been able to get along in life, to re-enlist or enroll this soldier for the purpose of re-education in some occupation in which it might be possible that he might succeed.

The question of increasing the subsistence allowance to men undergoing re-education was also considered but your Committee has been informed that by Order in Council, No. 976, dated 12th April, 1917, the rate of pay for subsistence of men living out during re-education has been raised from sixty cents to one dollar per day, which would seem to meet the case. The same Order in Council also widened the scope of the definition of "dependents" of men undergoing re-education, in a satisfactory way. Under the Order in Council (copy attached) a scale of payments for men undergoing re-education, and for their dependents, is provided.

Payments under these regulations are continued for one month after the completion of vocational training, whether the man has secured employment or not.

3. PROVINCIAL CO-OPERATION IN SECURING EMPLOYMENT.

At present the question of securing employment for the returned soldier is left largely in the hands of the various Provincial Soldiers' Aid Commissions.

In Ontario, by the Soldiers' Aid Commission, of which the Hon. W. D. McPherson, Provincial Secretary, is Chairman.

In Quebec, by the Soldiers' Employment Bureau, of which the Hon. Geo. A. Simard is Chairman.

In Nova Scotia, by the Returned Soldiers' Employment Committee, of which the Hon. R. M. McGregor is Chairman.

In New Brunswick, by the Returned Soldiers' Aid Commission, of which Mr. Thos. S. Bell is Chairman.

In Prince Edward Island, by the Returned Soldiers' Committee, of which the Hon. J. A. Mathieson is Chairman.

In Manitoba, by the Provincial Returned Soldiers' Commission, of which Sir Daniel McMillan, K.C.M.G., is Chairman.

In Saskatchewan, by the Returned Soldiers' Employment Commission, of which the Hon. Mr. Justice Elwood is Chairman.

In Alberta, by the Provincial Central Committee of the Military Hospitals Commission, of which Mr. Howard Stutchbury is Secretary.

In British Columbia, by the Returned Soldiers' Commission, of which Dr. H. E. Young, Victoria, B.C., is Chairman.

These provincial bodies were created as a result of the Inter-provincial Conferences with the Military Hospitals Commission, held in Ottawa, on the 19th and 20th October, 1915, at which it was agreed inter-alia:

"That each province should assume the responsibility of finding employment for discharged soldiers, who, upon their return to Canada, are physically or otherwise fit to assume such employment, and all expenditures necessary in undertaking this duty are borne by the Province."

At this Conference, however, it seems to have been made plain that the question of finding employment for the physically fit returned soldier concerned only the problems which were those pressing for the moment, and not the provision of securing employment for the whole forces on demobilization.

Up to the present time the various Provincial bodies above enumerated have, through their branches in the several Provinces, assumed the responsibility of providing employment for the returned soldier, and the evidence given before your Committee satisfies it that they have found employment for all returned soldiers desiring such, and within a reasonable time from their application therefor.

Of those members of the Canadian Expeditionary Forces, who have returned from overseas and sought re-employment through the above agencies, only a small percentage have expressed a desire to follow an agricultural occupation; this would appear to be partly due to the fact that those who have already returned are mostly members of the earlier divisions enlisted, and consequently were composed to a large extent of the urban population of Canada. It is probable, however, that a larger percentage of those returning in future will express a desire to go upon the land, and your Committee would recommend that all reasonable efforts be made to have returned soldiers take up farming, or market gardening, as an occupation, where there is a reasonable probability of them making it a success. As the land settlement question is now before the House, and much legislation has been passed by the various provinces, it is not deemed advisable by this Committee to go further into this question, than to submit the evidence taken thereon.

Under Order in Council (P.C. No. 2758) it is provided that in all appointments to the Government Civil Service, preference be given to returned members of the Canadian Expeditionary Forces, especially those who, through disability occasioned by active military service, are unable to follow their previous occupation; such appointments to be subject to the provisions of the Civil Service Act, and to be made with regard to the qualifications of the applicant.

By further Orders in Council, it is provided that no person shall be appointed to the Civil Service unless he is under or over military age, or presents evidence that he has offered himself for enlistment, and has been refused as unfit.

Your Committee finds that returned soldiers are being given preference in accordance with the above provisions in all appointments to the Civil Service, and in other appointments by the various Departments.

Upon the evidence adduced before your Committee, it appears that where a soldier is a civil servant at the time of his enlistment, there is no provision that his time spent on active service should count as though he had been granted leave of absence.

Your Committee is of opinion, that the Pension scheme wisely determines the amount of pension on a basis of injury received, without regard to subsequently acquired earning capacity, so that the pensioner is thus encouraged to make himself more efficient, physically and economically, knowing that his pension will not be decreased thereby.

Much evidence was given before your Committee respecting the problem of providing employment for the whole forces upon demobilization, and returning them to civil life.

NATIONAL SERVICE BOARD.

Mr. Charles W. Peterson, of the National Service Board of Canada, gave evidence before your Committee, and the following is a short summary of the work performed by that Board, with a view of preparing for the return of the soldiers to civil life:—

The work of the National Service Board in regard to obtaining information relating to demobilization, comprises the following:—

Mailing list of Employers.—The first step taken was to prepare a comprehensive mailing list of employers throughout Canada, and to reduce it to card-index form. The Census Bureau was able to give us access to a list that included contract operations, hand-trades and establishments conducted under the factory system. To this list has been added mining, banks, transportation, insurance, express, cartage and transfer concerns, so that our mailing list when completed will cover practically all employers excepting retailers, brokers, agricultural and professional.

Occupational Survey.—In February last a questionnaire was issued to all employers of labour throughout Canada, with a view to obtaining information as to conditions of employment in the various industries, classified according to occupations. Amongst the questions was one in which employers were asked to give their closest estimates of the number of workers that would be required in each class within six months after the end of the war. Other questions referred to prospective employment of men with physical disabilities, such as loss of a leg, an arm, or an eye, or defective hearing; and as to the extent to which returned soldiers could be substituted for present women workers after the war.

Co-operation of Boards of Trade.—In March, a letter was written to the Secretary of each Board of Trade asking for the appointment of a Committee to consider the following questions:—

1. "The absorption into business and industrial life of some half a million men at present under arms."
2. "Re-adjustment of the occupations of an enormous number of men and women now employed in the manufacture of munitions."
3. "New employment for women now temporarily occupying the positions of men serving overseas."
4. "The large immigration to be expected after the declaration of peace."

The Boards of Trade were asked to send reports embodying their suggestions and recommendations on the above points, and a further letter is now being sent to them outlining some of the special problems likely to arise on demobilization, so as to assist them in formulating their suggestions.

Seasons of Unemployment.—In April, a letter was issued to Trades Unions Officials with a view to ascertaining what periods of the calendar year were the most favourable, and least favourable, from an employment point of view, in each trade throughout the various provinces of Canada. This information was asked so as to avoid, if possible, the mustering out from military service of men in the various trades at a time when the demand for that class of labour might be at a low ebb in his province.

Co-operation of Provincial Organizations.—Through the Directors of National Service in each District, information is being gathered as to the nature and scope of the organizations created in the different provinces for providing employment for returned soldiers. Particulars are being obtained as to the activities of the Soldiers' Employment Commissions and similar bodies in each province, with the object of co-ordinating their efforts when demobilization comes.

Card issued to Canadian Overseas Forces.—A card is now being distributed through the Overseas Department of Militia and Defence, to be filled out by all officers and men on active service overseas. There are eighteen questions on this card, and information is sought particularly on the following points:—

- (a) "Trade or profession and name and address of last employer."
- (b) "Whether the soldier's old position is open for him on his return to Canada in fit condition."
- (c) "The location in Canada in which he proposes to settle after the war and the amount of money he expects to have at his disposal."
- (d) "Whether he wishes to take up farming as an occupation; and whether he has ever worked on a farm."
- (e) "As to his desire to take advantage of any available scheme of assisted agricultural settlement, and if so, the province preferred, and whether, in order to gain experience, he would be willing to do farm work for prevailing wages, if his dependents were provided for."

4. PENSIONS, PAY AND ALLOWANCES.

Pensions.—Speaking generally, the witnesses who gave evidence with regard to pensions had two complaints, namely, inadequacy of amount, and delay in payment. Investigation by your Committee disclosed that most of the delays complained of took place in the early stages before the inauguration of the Pensions Board became complete, and that after its operations became more widely understood the earlier differences were to a great extent removed.

In view of the fact that a new Pensions Bill is to be brought down by the Government at the present session, your Committee does not consider it necessary to deal with the subject in any detail in this report. However, on account of the importance of the matter, your Committee earnestly recommends a careful study by Parliament, the Government and the Pensions Board, of the evidence given before your Committee on the subject of pensions. That evidence is in printed form, and is available for the information of all those interested.

Pay and Allowances.—Your Committee deems it proper to point out that the officials of Divisions entrusted with this branch of Army's work had an enormous undertaking beset with numerous difficulties in handling the immense volume of work entailed by the enrolling, mobilizing, recording and paying of over 430,000 soldiers in the capital C.E.F. and Active Militia, to which was added the task of issuing annually over 3,300,000 cheques for separation allowance and assigned pay.

These officials were further handicapped by the fact that the force of clerks had, after the outbreak of the war, to be hurriedly organized, and both the regimental paymasters and the improvised civilian pay and records staff at Headquarters and elsewhere, had to be drawn in predominating numbers from those who were previously uninstructed in such work, and to a great extent ignorant of military regulations and of the procedure which was necessary to efficiently deal with the various matters which came within the scope of their employment.

It is therefore evident that, from the outset, the Pay and Record offices, have had to operate under many difficulties. The nature of these difficulties will be better understood if a short explanation be given of the different stages of the work performed by both.

While a soldier is in Canada his pay account is kept by the Regimental Paymaster, and the Separation Allowance is issued from Ottawa to his dependents.

On proceeding overseas the soldier's Canadian Pay Account is closed with the exception of his assigned pay, which is turned over by the Regimental Paymaster to the Assigned Pay office at Ottawa for issuance.

On arrival in England, the soldier's Pay Account is placed under the Chief Paymaster, London, and a Ledger Account opened there for him. This is his general Pay Account, and all pay issued to him, or on his behalf, is charged up against him in that Ledger. For this purpose, monthly statements of all assigned pay issued at Ottawa are forwarded to the London Office to be there debited in the proper accounts. The Regimental Paymasters in England and the Cashier in the field in France also send in similar statements, so that wherever the man happens to be, whether in England, at the front in France or Flanders, in hospitals at the Base, or in England, the Paymaster or Cashier paying him money takes his receipt for the same and forwards it to the London Office and at the same time enters the amount in the soldier's personal pay-book. Thus a soldier may be to-day in England, next week in the trenches, a few days after in the Base hospital in France and later on in a hospital in England, and may have obtained some pay in each place. In due course, he is pronounced fit to be sent back to Canada. His account is then made up and with it a last pay certificate, which, with other necessary documents, is given to the officer in charge of troops sailing on the particular transport on which the soldier is returning. His Pay Account is thus closed in London and re-transferred to the Casualty Pay Office, Ottawa. Interest is allowed on the soldier's deferred pay and is credited to his account.

Before leaving England, the soldier's pay-book is called in by the London Pay-Office to be checked with the ledger account there. This pay-book should be returned to him before sailing, and this practice is, your Committee understands, now being followed.

Formerly, the practice of the Chief Paymaster, C.E.F., Overseas, was, when issuing the last pay certificate referred to above, which accompanies the soldier to Canada, to forward instructions to the Assigned Pay and Separation Allowance Branch at Ottawa, closing the account for assigned pay. In many instances the soldier did not return to Canada until long after this last pay certificate was issued, and sometimes did not return at all. Ottawa stopped the assigned pay in accordance with instructions received from London, and a soldier's dependent had to get along as best he or she could. In many cases the soldier's dependent suffered hardship through non-receipt of this assigned pay.

This practice has now been stopped, and the assigned pay is continued by the Assigned Pay and Separation Allowance Branch at Ottawa until such time as a sailing list actually shows the soldier as having left for Canada. The account is then transferred by the Assigned Pay and Separation Allowance Branch to the Casualty Paymaster, Ottawa, who continues payments until such time as the soldier is discharged.

While our Inquiry deals with the pay and allowances of returned soldiers, the above outline is necessary to make comprehension of the methods followed, and of the care exercised for the pay of these men.

On arrival in Canada, a small amount of cash is given him for expenses en route to his home or to the hospital, as the case may be, and his last pay certificate and other documents are forwarded to the Casualty Paymaster from Ottawa, who makes up his pay account, and forwards it to the Paymaster of the District to which the soldier has gone.

It takes two or three weeks to make up the pay accounts of the soldiers returning by each trip. In making these numerous entries, delays and errors are of course, liable to occur.

At an early stage of the sittings, your Committee invited all discharged and undischarged soldiers to submit to the Committee any existing grievances and as a result, complaints regarding pay and allowances were placed before the Committee, some of these by the soldiers themselves. The cases so brought to the attention of your Committee have been examined individually, and it has been found that many of the complaints were due to the fact that they had never been laid before the proper parties in the Department.

Of the cases not falling within this category, investigation disclosed that there had been considerable exaggeration in some of the complaints.

There have been numerous cases of hardship due to mistakes and unnecessary delays in the matter of the adjustment of pay and allowances of returned soldiers and their families. Evidence of improvement in recent months is, however, apparent.

THE WORK OF THE PARLIAMENTARY COMMITTEE.

Your Committee, between the 7th of February and the 13th of July, has held twenty sittings, has examined ninety-six witnesses, and submits herewith in fifteen parts the verbatim report of the evidence, together with a number of statistical statements deemed to be of interest and value.

Sittings of the committee were held in Ottawa, Montreal and Toronto, and the conditions existent in every province of Canada were brought under careful examination and review.

Witnesses representing every important agency throughout the Dominion, working for the care of the returned soldier, also thirty-two delegates of soldiers' organizations were heard at length. CONCLUSIONS.

Your Committee thus far has endeavoured to give only a statement of fact and a review of the opinions presented by the witnesses that have appeared before it. It now becomes necessary to try and set forth in condensed form such recommendations as may be desirable for submission to the House.

It must be frankly admitted at the outset that your Committee finds itself in a difficult situation in that on the question of chief importance, namely, as to who shall control the various agencies operating for the care and treatment of the returned soldiers, there is not among its Members unanimity of opinion. Two distinct views have been considered by your Committee:—

(1) That the care and treatment of the returned soldier would be primarily in the hands of the Militia authorities until the time of his actual discharge from the Service.

(2) That the returned soldier on his landing in Canada should be transferred from Military jurisdiction to the care of a special Department of the Government, and that his treatment thenceforth should be along civilian lines.

The first of these contentions, if accepted, carries with the following recommendations:—

(1) That following the example of the French Government, a National Bureau for the discharged soldier should be created by the Government of Canada charged with the duties of: (a) co-ordinating as far as possible the various measures proposed or adopted for the returned and discharged soldiers or the dependents of such as have been killed, or died on service.

(b) Acting as intermediary between these returned and discharged soldiers or their dependents, and the various Governmental and other agencies which are operating for their benefit. (c) Establishment of Branch Bureaux in various centres throughout Canada to act in an advisory capacity and to provide information to returned and discharged soldiers and their dependents. (d) Acting in an advisory capacity, generally, to, and co-operating with the Departments and agencies particularly concerned, and to the Government of Canada and to Provincial Governments, with regard to all proposed measures designed to improve the condition of discharged soldiers and to assist them in re-entering civil life. (e) Supervision of Voluntary Organizations of and on behalf of, returned soldiers.

(2) That the officials of this National Bureau should be, as far as possible, selected from returned officers and men who have served Overseas in the Canadian Expeditionary Force.

This view is favoured by the following Members of your Committee: Messrs. McCurdy, Middlebro, and Sutherland.

The alternative is the proposal for the creation of a new Governmental Department, or sub-department, under a Minister of the Crown, directly charged with the oversight of all measures dealing with the returned soldier on and after his arrival in Canada as more fully described on pages 11 and 12 of this report. This view is held by the following Members of your Committee: Messrs. Ames, Pardee, Bennett, Murphy, Marcil and Ross.

If neither of the above alternatives be acceptable and the status quo is maintained, in the opinion of your Committee, the best interests of the returned soldiers will be served by conferring upon one and the same authority full, complete and undivided control over the administration of the hospitals and homes where such soldiers are placed and the employment of the medical and nursing staff of these institutions.

FURTHER RECOMMENDATIONS.

On the following recommendations, your Committee is agreed:—

1. CARE AND TREATMENT OF WOUNDED, SICK AND DISABLED MEN:

(a) In view of the alarming evidence as to the prevalence of tuberculosis among enlisted men, and the natural inference that similar, if not worse, conditions obtain amongst the civilian population, your Committee recommends that the Federal Government, and the several Provincial Governments, be urged to take up without delay more effective measures to check the spread of this disease.

(b) In respect of the care and treatment of helplessly insane soldiers, your Committee supports the view that it is in the best interest of the soldier himself, and of his friends, that he be not regarded as belonging to a class apart, but that he be cared for at the expense of the Federal Government in provincial institutions under the same conditions as fellow-citizens similarly afflicted.

(c) Your Committee feels constrained to call the attention of Parliament to the serious condition disclosed by the evidence of the military authorities upon the matter of venereal disease and the danger of spreading syphilitic infection, and recommends that any returning soldier likely to transmit disease of this character be quarantined and confined at the port of arrival in Canada until cured.

(d) That orthopaedic institutions be provided at suitable centres throughout Canada in addition to the one located in Toronto. That a sufficient number of disabled returned soldiers be induced to learn and follow the occupation of manufacturing artificial limbs in these institutions, and that such institutions supply the limbs to disabled soldiers free of cost, and also supply renewals and repairs from time to time at the expense of the State, during the life of such soldier.

VOCATIONAL TRAINING.

Your Committee recommends that when a man undergoing convalescent treatment has, during his convalescence, partially completed a course of training, and has, in the opinion of the District Vocational Officer, made such progress as to indicate that it would be to the advantage of himself and the State to complete the course, he may be allowed to continue his course for a period not exceeding two months after he is pronounced medically fit for discharge, subject in each case to the approval of the Military Hospitals Commission, and during this period to remain upon military pay and allowance of his rank.

CO-OPERATION BETWEEN THE FEDERAL AND PROVINCIAL AUTHORITIES TO SECURE EMPLOYMENT FOR RETURNED SOLDIERS.

It is further recommended:—

(A) That the Federal Government should assume the expenses and responsibility of finding employment for the returned soldiers, with such co-operation from the provinces as they are willing and able to give.

(B) That when a civil servant has honourably served in the Canadian Expeditionary Forces overseas, the time which he has spent on active service should be taken into account as though he had been absent on leave, and his grade and standing as a civil servant should be determined accordingly.

(C) That every returned soldier entitled to be placed on the pension list should have it made known to him at the earliest opportunity that the amount of his pension is based on the injury received, without regard to his subsequently acquired earning capacity. This will result in the pensioner's being encouraged to make himself more efficient, physically and economically, knowing that his pension will not be decreased thereby. He will then naturally avail himself of the free and practical vocational training and re-education, and make wiser use of the separation and sustenance allowances now provided by the Government through the Military Hospitals Commission. The object of this is that the returned soldier may, at the earliest possible date, secure suitable employment, and, once more, assist in national production.

(D) That with a view to enabling the disabled soldier to secure employment and of preventing discrimination against him, on the ground that his disability renders him more liable to accidents, the Committee recommends that the Federal Government assume the responsibility, in whole or in part, for insurance, which will place such disabled soldier on a parity with the physically fit, having regard to the pension which he received for his disablement.

(E) Your committee also recommends the establishment and maintenance by the Federal Government at suitable centres throughout the Dominion of general clearing-house bureaux, where information respecting all matters affecting returned soldiers would be given. This should include information respecting pay, separation allowances, pensions, hospital treatment, re-education and vocational training. Such bureaux might also act as federal employment agencies, and should have power to advance transportation expenses to the proposed place of employment and act in conjunction with the various Provincial Aid Committees, War Veterans' Associations, local bodies, heads of municipalities, manufacturers and employers of labour in their district. These should be responsible to the Federal Government for finding such employment.

(F) Your Committee is of the opinion that it is the duty of the State to make all necessary and suitable arrangements for the proper maintenance of returned disabled soldiers and their families, and recommend that legislation be enacted by the Federal Parliament to prevent indiscriminate and unauthorized appeals for funds or other property by private persons or associations on behalf of returned soldiers, so that no appeal for funds, or subscriptions, or any benefits on their behalf be made, except such as may be authorized by legislation of this Parliament.

PAY AND ALLOWANCES.

(a) The soldiers' original pass-book should not be taken from him, or if called in for purposes of verification, should be returned to him before discharge in order that he may be able to assure himself that his final settlement is just, and that he has received all moneys rightly due him. All such pass-books at present with the Pay Department should be returned.

(b) Three months' bonus pay, which, under Order in Council 1091, directs that a soldier who has been overseas and has been on active service, for at least six months, should receive on discharge pay in diminishing monthly amounts, for example: if $100 bonus is due him, he should receive $30 the first month, $25 the second month, $20 the third month, $15 the fourth month and $10 the fifth month, thus enabling him to gradually return to civil life and employment.

(c) The system of giving clothing on discharge should be altered so as to secure for the man a well-made and properly fitted suit of serviceable civilian clothing, made of standard cloth purchased through the War Purchasing Commission, and the cash grant in lieu thereof should be abolished.

(d) Your Committee recommends that steps be taken to reorganize the separation allowance and assigned pay service and that an immediate endeavour be made to secure new and more commodious quarters where the staff can work under better conditions with a thorough business system installed.

LAND SETTLEMENT.

The returned soldiers, especially those from the Western Provinces, evinced much interest in Land Settlement schemes, and several projects on this subject were offered in evidence. Your Committee, however, has not as yet given serious study to questions of this nature, as the Minister of the Interior has already presented a motion for the creation of "The Soldiers' Settlement Board" and much legislation has been passed on this subject by the provinces. (See Appendices to Evidence.)

GENERAL RECOMMENDATIONS.

(a) Complaint has been made that a French-speaking soldier landing in Canada has not always been met and examined on debarkation by persons who have knowledge of the French language, and it is recommended that provision be made at Quebec, Halifax and St. John to remove this cause of complaint.

(b) As soon as a definite policy has been adopted by the bodies concerned (The Militia Department, Military Hospitals Commission, Pensions Commissioners, and Soldiers' Aid Associations) for securing the proper return of a soldier to civilian life, a booklet, explaining the procedure in simple language, should be prepared and distributed among the members of the Canadian Expeditionary Force and made available for the general public.

A request was made to your Committee that it should ask the Government to rescind the Order in Council whereby the benefits of the three months' pay is withdrawn from discharged soldiers who return to positions kept open for them in the Civil Service, but your Committee does not deem it advisable to make recommendations to this effect.

Your Committee also recommends that the Preliminary, and this Report and the Minutes of Proceedings and Evidence submitted herewith, together with a suitable Index to be prepared by the Clerk of the Committee, be printed in both languages in blue-book form for distribution, and as an Appendix to the Journals of the House.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

Chairman.

Clerk of the Committee on Returned Soldiers.

HOUSE OF COMMONS,

COMMITTEE ROOM No. 301,

February 22, 1917.

The committee met at 10.30 a.m., the chairman, Sir Herbert Ames, presiding. There were also present Mr. R. B. Bennett, Hon. Charles Marcell, Hon. Charles Murphy, Mr. Middlebro, Mr. Sutherland (Oxford), Hon. Mr. McCurdy, Mr. Pardee and Mr. Ross (Middlesex), of the Commons; Hon. Messrs. Belcourt, Beaubien and Ross (Moosejaw), and Brigadier-General Mason, members of the Senate Committee.

The CHAIRMAN: You are probably aware, gentlemen, that at the time of the appointment of the Commons Committee, the Senate named a Committee with a similar object and I took upon myself the liberty of writing Sir James Lougheed saying that it would be agreeable to us, if agreeable to them, that the members of the Senate Committee should sit with us at the same time. Some members of the Senate Committee are present this morning, namely, Senators Belcourt, Beaubien and Ross, and Brigadier-General Mason. Sir James Lougheed has been called away on account of the death of his daughter. It is, therefore, probable that we shall have a quorum of the Senate Committee as well as of our own Committee.

At the first meeting of the Commons Committee you were good enough to elect me as Chairman, and in anticipation of your wishes I have given some attention to what might be deemed the lines of investigation. I looked over what was said in the House when the Honourable Member for West Lambton made the suggestion with respect to the appointment of a Committee, and I see that the Prime Minister said at that time: (Reads):

I shall see to it that such a Committee is appointed, and that the information which I am about to give the House, as to what has been done, is placed before it with the view of supplementing, as far as may be necessary, in the judgment of the Committee, the very great work that has already been done, and which I think is very inadequately appreciated.

Later on, when the Committee was named, the Prime Minister said:

This is precisely in the form in which I read the motion to the House yesterday, and I have very great pleasure in moving it now, as I have no doubt that the inquiry which is proposed will elicit not only information as to the existing arrangements, which I have already given to the House in speaking on my honourable friend's motion, but it doubtless will furnish the Committee with very much fuller information on the subject, as my statement to the House was, of course, only a summary of the very great work which has been undertaken by the Military Hospitals Commission and by various Committees and Boards which have already been created.

The motion, as members will notice, is in two parts; the first part dealing with the inquiry regarding impaired men, and the other part dealing with the larger subject of the rehabilitation in civil life of men who are fit. The first part of the question is the one which really presses, since we have with us today very few men other than those who have been returned as unfit for further military service, so that our inquiry probably first will deal with the care of the returned soldier more particularly, those who are no longer fully efficient. I would simply suggest to the Committee that we follow some such course as this: that first of all we get a full record of all that is being done by existing agencies for the returned soldier; that we summon as witnesses those gentlemen who can give us that information, and that every member of the Committee feel entirely free to cross-question the witnesses to the fullest extent in order to ascertain whether the measures being taken are thoroughly satisfactory. I would further suggest that the Committee consider the advisability of, later on, visiting the provincial points, because the work of caring for the returned soldiers is largely a matter of provincial activity and each province has its own machinery. I notice that, according to Bourinot, a Committee of the House of Commons can be authorized "to adjourn its sittings from place to place," as may be found expedient, so I think we would have no difficulty in securing the necessary power to enable us to visit the principal city in each military division, if we deem it advisable to do so, either as a body or by delegating power to sub-committees. I would also suggest that the members of the Committee consider the advisability of promoting criticisms before the Committee, in fact, of inducing people who are under the impression that the present system has not worked adequately, to come here and state wherein they think the present system has broken down. In such cases we would require, perhaps, 48 hours' notice so that we might officially notify the person who comes as witness. In all such cases the expenses of the person offering testimony would be paid. It has been suggested that in case we wish to examine a certain number of people who might have criticisms to offer that the Secretary of the Provincial Soldiers' Aid Commission at the several points we intend to visit, may make that fact known in the newspapers, and would let us know in advance the witnesses that might be available. Subsequently in our work, probably, we would be glad to receive suggestions from citizens who may feel they have valuable experience to offer the Committee when we come to determine upon any recommendations they may make to Parliament. In a book that was published in 1916 by the Military Hospitals Commission of Canada, I notice in the introduction by Colonel the Hon. John S. MacLennan some paragraphs regarding the returned soldier which I would like to read to the Committee. (Reads):

"When he lands in Canada he is met by a representative of the Military Hospitals Commission and the Canadian Patriotic Fund. While at the port of landing he is maintained in an establishment beautified by donations. When he leaves for his home, the Military Hospitals Commission representative wires to the local committee advising the train on which the man will arrive. If the journey is so long that a break or breaks are necessary, say at Montreal and Winnipeg, on the road to the Western provinces, at each of such places, the local committees meet the man and see to his rest and refreshment until he resumes his journey. On his arrival at his home town he is met and welcomed (the supply of automobiles rarely is inadequate). The notifications to the various parties charging themselves with these services, often performed at inconvenient hours, are sent out by the Military Hospitals Commission."

"Provincial and local committees find the man employment; so far, without the slightest difficulty. The invalided who requires further treatment, goes to a Military Hospital Commission Convalescent Hospital. The State supplies any artificial limbs required and special attention is given to make them most efficient. When his treatment is complete, he is, like the man who goes directly home, taken charge of by the Provincial Employment Commission, after receiving such training as will fit him for civil life."

"The aim of the Commission is to do its best for the physical and economic well-being of the man, and to bring to bear on him such influences that he may perform for his country a service not less important than those of the firing line, namely, that instead of being an idle ward of the State, he becomes a shining example to the young, of self-dependence, of courage and perseverance in overcoming disabilities."

Now, gentlemen, if there is no objection we will proceed with the examination of Colonel Sharples, who is our first witness.

MINUTES OF EVIDENCE

Colonel SHARPLES, called, sworn and examined.

By the Chairman:

Q. What position do you at present occupy in connection with the Military Hospitals, Colonel Sharples?—A. Officer Commanding, Military Hospitals Commission.

Q. You were for some time in charge at the Disembarkation Depot at Quebec, were you not?—A. Yes.

Q. Will you give the committee in connected form an outline of the procedure which is followed with the men who are returned from the other side.—A. Well, a man when he returns from the other side, if he comes in winter he comes through Halifax; if he comes in summer, he comes up the St. Lawrence; he is met by the Officer Commanding, Medical Officers, and certain members of the Staff of the Discharge Depot. I might say that he is landed right inside the Depot, on the Louise Embankment, and has only 150 yards to go to get to the Depot.

By Hon. Mr. Murphy:

Q. That is in Quebec?—A. In Quebec, yes. On arrival at the Depot, each man is allotted his bed, he is brought to his bed and is told to stand to until the Officer Commanding, or his representative, sees that every man has got a bed, and that he is comfortable, then he is dismissed. The men are not allowed out of the building, until every man's home address is taken to check up the list of addresses which we already have; that is necessary because we find that men very often change their addresses, and we check it up in order that there may be no delay in forwarding cheques, etc., afterwards. A certain number of men are then told off for the Medical Board, generally 25 in the morning, and 25 in the afternoon, and the balance are then allowed to go.

Q. You are now speaking of men generally, and not of wounded men?—A. These are all wounded men.

Q. What do you mean by the Medical Board?—A. There is a medical board held in Quebec, and they can generally handle 25 men in the morning, and 25 men in the afternoon. The men are taken alphabetically, generally, but if there is a large number of them, and if there are western men among the number we take the western men first and get them away.

By Hon. Mr. McCurdy:

Q. Perhaps you will tell the Committee at this stage what is the character of the cases that come from England? What class of cases are returned to Canada?—A. Men coming back from the other side, sir?

Q. Yes.—A. Gun-shot wounds, insanity, tuberculosis, amputation, shell-shock, and other cases, such as cases of sickness, recovering from fever, or something like that; epilepsy is another disease which has been quite common. These men are classified by the Medical Board at Quebec into three classes. Class one is composed of men who have no disability due to service, who require no further medical treatment, and have no claim to a pension. These men have gone over and have been sent back, perhaps because the sight is bad, and has been bad all his life, and the disability is not the result of, or has not been aggravated by service.

[Colonel Sharples.]

By Mr. Middlebro:

Q. Why should he have gone there in the first place?—A. I can't say.

By Hon. Mr. Belcourt:

Q. Why should he have been kept there?—A. I cannot answer that.

By Mr. Middlebro:

Q. Class One is composed of men for immediate discharge without a pension, whose disability is not the result of service or involving claim as a result of or aggravation by service; he should have not gone over there in that case?—A. I would not go as far as that.

By the Chairman:

Q. "The financial instructions and pay and allowances for the Canadian Expeditionary Force defines the men of Class One as:

"Men for immediate discharge without pension

(a) Unfit for overseas service, but capable to take up their previous civilian occupation.

(b) Disability not the result of service or involving claim as the result of or aggravation by service."

They are men unfit for military duty but who are fit to go back to civilian life?—A. Exactly.

By Mr. Middlebro:

Q. That is men who are unfit for military duty and yet fit for civilian life; they should never have gone over.—A. I would not go as far as that.

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. You cannot speak of that anyway.—A. Not of the men going over there, because I do not know anything about that.

By the Chairman:

Q. These men in Class One are men unfit for military service but fit for ordinary life, who require no hospital treatment?—A. Yes.

By Mr. Middlebro:

Q. I have come across the concrete case of a man who came back physically unfit by reason of heart trouble. He was told that his disease had not been aggravated by the war, and was dismissed without compensation or pension; he is home now and has received no grant in any way or form; the inference is that he was that way when he enlisted. Do you have any cases of that kind?—A. I have never come across any case of that kind where a man has not been given the benefit of the doubt by the Board at the Depot.

Q. Take the case of a man who comes back by reason of defective eyesight, even if that defect has not been aggravated by reason of the war, is he not entitled to some consideration?—A. No, under this Class One, his defective eyesight has not become aggravated by reason of the war.

Q. What is he returned for?—A. Because it was found on the other side that he was not fit for service.

Q. Why was he not fit for service?—A. Because his eyesight was bad.

Q. Then why was he taken over there in the first place?—A. Because they did not know it.

Q. That is the point I want to make. He was taken over there because they did not know his eyesight was bad.—A. Exactly

By Hon. Mr. McCurdy:

Q. Are you receiving men returned here for a period of convalescence who are afterwards returned overseas?—A. That is settled by the Medical Board after a period of convalescence.

By the Chairman:

Q. These men are not convalescents. The Class One that we are dealing with now is composed of men requiring no hospital treatment who are discharged without a pension?—A. Exactly.

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. Men who have not been deteriorated by reason of the war?—A. Yes.

Mr. MIDDLEBRO: All those who have been improperly admitted into the service; is not that what it means?

The CHAIRMAN: Probably all those who have been improperly admitted into the service will fall into Class One, but not all Class One will be men who were improperly admitted into the service.

Q. Will you give an instance where men have been admitted to the service, improperly, suffering from ailments which could not have been detected at the time of their enlistment?—A. Take a man who is suffering from tuberculosis; it is, as you know, pretty hard for a medical man examining a man as a recruit to detect the existence of the disease in the time he has at his disposal. We have had cases where men have been admitted into the service and shortly afterwards tuberculosis has developed. In such cases the men have been well looked after. They have been taken into the sanitarium and treated just the same as the men who have been overseas.

Q. Yes, but that man is not entitled to a pension?—A. Class One admits men for immediate discharge without a pension (a) who are unfit for overseas service but capable of taking up their previous civilian occupation; and (b) men who are suffering from disability not the result of service or involving claim as the result of or aggravation by service. If the man's disability had been aggravated by service he is entitled to some claim, but either under (a) or (b) I do not think that Class One is confined to those who have improperly entered the service. But in the case I have mentioned a man cannot get a pension because his disability has not been aggravated or received in service.

Mr. MIDDLEBRO: There is nobody in Class 1 except those improperly admitted in the first place.

By the Chairman:

Q. There are three classes, I understand, the men who return and come to your Discharge Depot are by you classified into three classes?—A. Yes, or by the Medical Board.

Q. At the Discharge Depot they are classified into three classes?—A. Exactly.

Q. Will you give to the committee the distinction between those three classes?—A. Those requiring no further medical treatment and having no claim are discharged at the Depot.

Q. They are supposed to go directly home?—A. Yes.

Q. And Class 2?—A. Those who require further medical treatment, and who are sent to a hospital or convalescent home, and are not discharged, but are carried on pay.

Q. They are still in the service?—A. Exactly.

Q. And Class 3?—A. They are men who have a claim for pension, but who require no further medical treatment; they are discharged.

Q. They are as bad as they can be?—A. Yes, or as well as they can be.

Q. But they are men who have suffered grievously?—A. Yes.

[Colonel Sharples.]

Q. And are eligible for pension?—A. Yes.

Q. They are still in the service until pensioned?—A. Still in the service until pensioned.

By Hon. Mr. McCurdy:

Q. How do you classify men who are returned from overseas for treatment in Canada but who expect to be returned to the front after a period of time?—A. They are classified by the Medical Board. But I do not quite understand that question.

By the Chairman:

Q. They would come into Class 2?—A. Oh, yes. Take for instance, a man put into Class 2, a gunner, at the end of his convalescent term that man is fit for service and instead of discharging him to a pension or Class 1, with a disability that would not prevent him earning a full livelihood, he goes back into the service in which he originally enlisted.

By Hon. Mr. Murphy:

Q. That is, overseas?—A. Yes, he is not discharged.

By Hon. Mr. McCurdy:

Q. Can you give us figures showing the number returned in that way?—A. No, I could not do that.

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. What do you do with a Class 1 man after you find out he is fit, what is the procedure?—A. We give him a discharge certificate.

By the Chairman:

Q. May I ask one question before that. Will you describe the method in which the Medical Board at the Discharge Depot examines the man, and what that examination consists of. It consists first of looking over the record which comes from the other side, does it not?—A. They have the English Medical Board as a guide to go on.

Q. They have the report of the Medical Board in England?—A. And all specialists' reports as well.

Q. How complete an examination is that man subjected to by the Medical Board at Quebec before he is classified?—A. It is impossible for me to say that. He is stripped and examined. As far as I can tell as a layman, I do not think they leave very much to chance.

Mr. BENNETT: I think the Medical Superintendent should speak upon that point. This gentleman is a layman.

By Mr. Ross (Middlesex):

Q. Have you any report of the examination of that man in this country when he enlisted?—A. We have a record of the state of his health when he enlisted on his attestation paper.

Hon. Mr. BELCOURT: There are no details, only the conclusion that he is fit.

The CHAIRMAN: Will you undertake to file with the Committee for record copies of the card statement, the complete statement, which is prepared with reference to the first, second and third classes at the Discharge Depot. You have a complete form, and I would like the Committee to be made aware of the data that go into this form. Will you also state where this record is kept? With the permission of the Committee I would like to have the form required to be filled in at the Discharge Depot put in as Appendix 1 to our report.

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. Col. Sharples, will you please tell us what you do with these men in Classes 1, 2 and 3?—A. The Class 1 man is a discharged man; he is given his discharge certificate and his balance of pay plus 15 days' pay, a suit of clothes or a credit in lieu thereof; he is given his transportation home, and that is the end of him.

Q. That is all he gets?—A. I should have said that a description of the man and record is sent on to the Provincial secretaries so that he can be found employment.

By Hon. Mr. McCurdy:

Q. And what does he receive?—A. Full pay, plus fifteen days' pay and allowance.

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. Then you are through with that man?—A. Yes, through with him.

By the Chairman:

Q. Where will his record be on file??—A. At the Discharge Depot, the Military Hospitals Commission here, and the unit he is going to, as well as with the provincial secretary, of course.

By Hon. Mr. Belcourt:

Q. Did you say the unit he is going to?—A. I mean the district he is going to.

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. You might finish up the three classes.—A. Class No. 2 men are not discharged; they are given an advance of pay at the Discharge Depot and they are sent forward to the different districts nearest their homes, or to the place where medical treatment would be better administered: amputation cases would go to Toronto, and rheumatic cases to some other sanitarium.

Q. They are given an advance of pay?—A. Yes.

Q. To what extent?—A. $10 at the Depot to carry them through on the trains, and the balance of pay due them is sent by registered mail so that they may get it when they arrive at their homes.

Q. Is that the last you see of them?—A. The last we see of them at the Depot.

Q. Now, you send their pay ahead to whom?—A. To the Officer Commanding the unit to which the man is going.

Q. To the Hospital?—A. Yes.

Q. To the district or to the unit?—A. The unit.

Q. Take the next class?—A. Class 3 is dealt with in very much the same way, with the exception that in certain cases the Class 3 man is allowed to go direct from the Depot to his home. If that is the case and he is a reliable man—which depends upon his behaviour at the depot—he is given his money.

Q. The whole of it that is coming to him?—A. Yes. If he is not a reliable man, and the Officer Commanding does not think he is, because he has been drinking or otherwise misbehaving, his money is sent by registered mail so that it will be at his house when he arrives so that his family will have it.

Q. In the case of a man without an arm or a leg is he fitted there, or fitted later when he gets to his home with a false arm or leg?—A. No, sir. All that I am responsible for is that the man is sent to the centre where he is to be fitted. For instance, a man without a leg will be sent to Toronto with escort to look after him; he is not allowed to go alone.

Q. I see.—A. He is sent on and handed over.

By Mr. Middlebro:

Q. He is still under pay?—A. Yes, he is a soldier.

[Colonel Sharples.]

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. Later on the pension for that man is arranged?—A. I do not know about that.

By Mr. Ross (Middlesex):

Q. You do not mean to say that a man coming from Halifax would be sent to Toronto if he required an artificial limb?—A. Yes, sir, he is.

Q. Is there no place in the east where he could be sent?—A. Toronto is the orthopaedic centre.

Mr. ROSS: I do not think it would be the centre for the whole Dominion.

The CHAIRMAN: It is a matter of some months to fit a man properly with an artificial limb.

The WITNESS: That is a medical question. It depends a good deal upon the condition of the man's system and the circumstances of the case; I would not like to make any statement in that regard.

Q. The man remains at the Orthopaedic Hospital until his leg is fitted?—A. Until the artificial leg fits him.

Q. But you do not know the details of the system that is followed?—A. I do not, sir.

By Hon. Mr. Belcourt:

Q. Has any man so fitted with an arm or leg ever returned to the trenches?—A. As a fighting man, do you mean?

Q. I mean to serve either in the trenches or to engage in work behind.—A. Not as far as I know.

Q. You do not know of any such case?—A. No, I know of no Canadian.

By the Chairman:

Q. Have you any statistics which would disclose how many men of the several classes have passed through the Discharge Depot?—A. Personally I have not, sir, but I am sure the Secretary of the Military Hospitals Commission must have that information.

Q. Who could give us those figures?—A. The Secretary of the Military Hospitals Commission.

By Hon. Mr. Beaubien:

Q. Are we to understand that it is only at Toronto they furnish artificial limbs?—A. That is correct.

Q. If a man lives in Halifax he must travel to Toronto to get his limb and then have to go back?—A. Yes.

By Hon. Mr. Belcourt:

Q. That may involve half a dozen trips?—A. No.

Q. The man has to stay there until the artificial limb is fitted?—A. The man does not go there until his stump is in condition. Then he stays to have it fitted and properly attended to.

By Hon. Mr. McCurdy:

Q. The man is kept in the hospital there?—A. He is kept there and looked after.

Q. Under pay?—A. All the time. His allowance is continued until he is discharged.

[Colonel Sharples.]

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. You say the men get credit or get their clothing. How do they get credit? Is the money sent to their homes?—A. The money is included on their final pay cheque.

Q. Do I understand that the men can go out and buy so much worth of clothing?—A. Yes, they can do that if they like to, but there are a certain number of suits kept in the depot ranging from 600 to 1,000 suits, where a man can go and make a selection. If he wants to select a suit of clothes it is there for him to select. Some men do not want to take those, they would rather take the money. We give them that choice so that they will be satisfied.

Q. The clothes they take from the storehouse, is the cost deducted from their money?—A. No, sir, it is the other way. They are given a free issue.

By Mr. Sutherland:

Q. What do you allow the men in lieu of clothes?—A. $13.

By the Chairman:

Q. In the published "Financial Instructions for the Canadian Expeditionary Force, 1916," page 88, appears the following with respect to clothing. (Reads):

There is a large selection of suits of clothes and there are several different kinds of overcoats: (a) a long coat, suitable for the Maritime Provinces or British Columbia; (b) a short coat, lined with ponyskin, with fur-lined collar; (c) a short coat, lined with sheepskin, and (d) a reefer coat lined with leather; (b), (c) and (d) being suitable for any part of Canada.

Is that the selection which the men are being allowed to-day?—A. Yes.

Q. Where are those clothes obtained, and how?—A. I could not say.

Q. What department has the purchasing of these clothes? Is it done by the Military Supplies Purchasing Board?—A. It is done by the Quartermaster General's Branch, as I think it is called.

Q. Do the men go out of uniform on discharge?—A. At the moment of discharge.

Q. What is the regulation in that respect?—A. The regulation is that on discharge the soldier goes out of uniform.

Q. But so long as he is not discharged?—A. He retains the uniform. He always retains his uniform but he does not wear it.

By Mr. Middlebro:

Q. How many of the three classes have passed through since you began?—A. About 16,000, speaking roughly.

Q. You have been there since the system started?—A. Yes.

Q. You must have some suggestions as to how the existing system may be improved.

Hon. Mr. MURPHY: He has probably put them all into effect.

A. Speaking honestly, I do not think so. My duties are to carry out the instructions of the Department.

Mr. MIDDLEBRO: I know that, but from your experience, is there nothing you could suggest whereby the existing system may be improved?

The WITNESS: I do not think so. If you saw the Depots you would be inclined to agree that every possible thing that could be done has been done in every instance.

Q. What is the most frequent complaint you get from the men?—A. We never get any complaints from the men at the depot.

[Colonel Sharples.]

Q. No complaints at all?—A. In fact we have letters and statements from the men that things are all right. The only complaints we do get some times are on account of food. A man perhaps does not like the food and it is immediately changed. You can naturally understand that a sick man would sometimes like a little different diet, and a change is always made as soon as we know about it.

Q. You have never received complaints from men that they have got into the wrong class—A. I do not deal with that at all.

By the Chairman:

Q. Where are the Discharge Depots, and who are in charge of them?—A. The Depots are located at Halifax, St. John and Quebec. The Quebec Depot is under the charge of Colonel Marriott; Halifax, in charge of Major Adamson; and St. John, in charge of Major Smith.

Q. At the present time each of these three depots would serve to illustrate your work if the Committee should decide to visit them?—A. Quebec is the largest depot; 80 per cent of the men go through it.

By Mr. Bennett:

Q. At the present time the St. John Depot is the one in operation, the Quebec Depot is closed, is it not?—A. No, sir. The men all go through Quebec except those whose homes are in the Maritime Provinces.

By the Chairman:

Q. Quebec has always been the main Discharge Depot?—A. That is right, sir.

By Hon. Mr. Belcourt:

Q. Can you give us the sub-division of the three classes and the number of men in each?—A. I could give it to you, but not off-hand.

The CHAIRMAN: If the Committee wishes that information, Col. Sharples will be glad to furnish it so that it may go into the records. As I understand it, Col. Sharples now has charge of the discipline of the men in all the hospitals, under the Hospitals Commission.

The WITNESS: That is right, sir.

By Hon. Mr. Murphy:

Q. And what about the supervision of the work at Quebec?—A. I am still responsible for Quebec, and I am there constantly.

Q. But you mentioned the name of some other officer who is in actual charge. Could he give us evidence with regard to matters at Quebec which have not come within your knowledge since you left? How long is it since you have had actual charge there?—A. I am still in charge there.

Q. But how long since that officer you mentioned was put in charge?—A. He has been there since about two months.

By Mr. Ross:

Q. How long would a man have to stay at Quebec in order to be examined?—A. It all depends upon the number of men arriving, but it is a very very short time. For instance we handled 1,100 men at Quebec in ten days.

Q. Then some of them would have to stay there ten days?—A. That is the longest any would have to stay, but they do not object to that, they are pretty well entertained in Quebec.

By Mr. Middlebro:

Q. Who has the executive authority in the hospitals of the Commission?—A. Well, in most of the Military Hospitals throughout Canada, there is an administrative [Colonel Sharples.]

officer—I might say before that there has been a Military Hospital Command that has been formed.

Q. And you are the head of that?—A. I am the officer commanding that Command now.

Q. What are your duties?—A. To maintain discipline in the Hospitals; to represent the Adjutant-General, and to see that the medical service is maintained to the satisfaction of all concerned, and further to take charge of the records: we look after the men everywhere. We are supposed to take charge of the Discharge Records and Papers.

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. Is it necessary to discipline these returned soldiers?—A. Well, I think it is, but the majority of them do not require much disciplining. Of course they are a peculiar class of men to handle; these returned soldiers are all more or less nervous, you cannot handle or discipline them the same as if they were men going overseas.

Q. Yes. Does it fall under your jurisdiction to inflict such punishment as may be necessary?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. That is wholly with you?—A. Yes.

Q. Now what is the nature of the punishment that may be meted out to these men?—A. Well, exactly the same punishment as to any other soldier; these men are under the King's Regulations. But I have found that you can talk to them and get better results than by punishing them when you are dealing with men who are sick and nervous.

Q. What I want to get at is, have you, during your occupation of this office, found it necessary to punish certain men, so far? I mean in a military sense?—A. I think at the Discharge Depot I have.

Q. What has been the nature of it?—A. Men have been confined to barracks, that is about the nature of it.

Q. That is all?—A. Yes.

By Mr. Middlebro:

Q. What was the nature of the offence?—A. Drunkenness, disobedience and insulting people on the street.

Q. Have you anything to do with directing what course of employment a man shall follow, or if he wants to be re-educated?—A. No, he can select that himself, through the vocational officers, who are in charge of these matters; I have to see that he gets physical training, something that will keep him going.

Q. But you have nothing to do with his re-education? Is that not it?—A. Nothing at all.

By Hon. Mr. Murphy:

Q. Were you in civil life until the time the war broke out?—A. No, I have been in the service all my life.

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. Do you lay down the rules upon which these hospitals are run?—A. Some of them I do, yes. They are pretty elastic, some of these rules; they have to be. This is to a very large extent new work, and the rules which govern hospitals are not quite suitable in all cases—I am talking altogether of discipline. We are handling a lot of sick men and I have laid down rules which are all more or less elastic.

By the Chairman:

Q. All the men in the hospitals, I understand, are still soldiers?—A. Almost all.
Q. There are no men in the hospitals who have been discharged?—A. There may be a few from time to time.

Q. So that the military discipline holds over every man who is still in the Military Hospital?—A. Except a man who has been discharged and is continued as free patient in a sanitarium, or home, for re-education.

Q. Have you any jurisdiction over them?—A. No, legally, we have no jurisdiction over that man.

Q. He may be disagreeable as he may like, as you have no restraining power?—A. None at all.

By Hon. Mr. Belcourt:

Q. You get your directions exclusively from the Department, do you not? Or do you get them from the Military Hospitals Commission?—A. No, sir, from the Department, and I also get certain directions as to administration of the Homes as to what the Military Hospitals Commission wishes done, and I see that it is carried out.

Q. But you are responsible to the Department only?—A. I am responsible to the Department and to the Military Hospitals Commission.

By Mr. Bennett:

Q. Colonel Sharples, you have been placed in charge of this command?—A. Yes.

Q. And the command has established hospitals throughout Canada?—A. Yes.

Q. What hospitals have they established—take Eastern Canada—"A" Unit?—A. In Montreal, that is where the Hospitals Commission has established a hospital, but to commence with there is the Savard Park Hospital at Quebec.

Q. What is the accommodation there?—A. That has accommodation for 150 patients. Then next is the Grey Nuns' Hospital at Montreal, with accommodation for 300 patients. The third is the Khaki League, Montreal, with accommodation for 99; next the Laurentian Sanitarium, and the Laurentian Inn at Ste. Agathe, with accommodation for 115.

By Hon. Mr. Belcourt:

Q. Is that exclusively for the men under your jurisdiction, or is it a general sanitarium?—A. That is exclusively for the men under the control of the Commission. There is also in this unit the Lake Edward Sanitarium, on the Lake St. John Railway, with accommodation for 60.

Q. That is exclusively for soldiers, too?—A. Yes, for soldiers, too.

Q. So that the civilian patients have left that institution?—A. I do not think they ever had very many, but what they had, have left.

Q. That is all for Unit "A"?—A. All in Unit "A," with headquarters at Montreal.

Q. You number your Units by letter?—A. Yes.

Q. What is the capacity, roughly speaking, of the Institutions you have just enumerated?—A. About 724.

Q. That also involves the establishment of separate hospitals, for tuberculous patients for instance?—A. Yes, two—at Ste. Agathe.

Q. And Lake Edward?—A. Yes.

Q. And those are the only institutions provided for special treatment in "A" Unit for tuberculosis?—A. That is right, sir, yes.

Q. Now the next Unit?—A. The next Unit is "B," with headquarters at Halifax. At Pier 2, Halifax, a hospital with accommodation at the present time for 550 patients. The accommodation at Halifax will, later on, be increased to about one thousand. The reason for that is that Halifax is the point for disembarkation. There is also the Clayton Home at Halifax, with accommodation for 25, and the Parks Convalescent Home at St. John, has accommodation for 35, and there is a Sanitarium at Kentville, where there will be accommodation, I think, for 100, and the Charles Dalton Sanitarium at Prince Edward Island with an accommodation of 30. There is also the Ross Convalescent Home, at Sydney, C.B., with accommodation for 33.

Q. Those are all the Institutions in "B" Unit?—A. Yes.

[Colonel Sharples.]

Q. With accommodation, roughly speaking, for 500 I suppose?—A. More than that, I think, and there is going to be more than that. There are two hospitals in course of construction now.

Q. Yes, I am aware of that, but I am speaking of those actually constructed.—A. There is accommodation for about 700.

Q. And what proportion of these are special hospitals, and for what purpose?—A. The one No. 2 Pier, is a special Hospital.

Q. For what purpose?—A. For receiving the men who come off the ship.

Q. By special hospitals, I mean special for the treatment of peculiar diseases.—A. There will be, I have not mentioned it, but there will be Queen's University Hospital.

Q. I mean in Unit "B."—A. Dalhousie Hospital, but it is not in operation now.

Q. Is there no tuberculosis sanitarium there at all?—A. Yes, at Kentville, N.S., there is one.

Q. Is there any other special hospital?—A. No, sir.

Q. That exhausts "B" unit, let us have "C"?—A. I mentioned the Charles Dalton sanitarium also in "B" unit.

Q. Is that a special hospital?—A. Yes, for tuberculosis.

Q. It is on Prince Edward Island?—A. Yes.

Q. Now, let us have "C" unit.

By the Chairman:

Q. What area is comprised in "C" unit?—A. Kingston district.

By Mr. Bennett:

Q. Is that Military District No. 3?—A. Yes. In Kingston there is the Elmhurst Convalescent Home with accommodation for 42; the Richardson Convalescent Home with accommodation for 27; the Queen's University Hospital with accommodation for 450; the Mowat Memorial Sanitarium, a tuberculosis institution with accommodation for 86. There is the Sir Sandford Fleming Convalescent Home at Ottawa with accommodation for 90; and the Ontario Military Hospital at Cobourg, with accommodation for 144.

Q. The last institution is a special hospital dealing with cases of insanity?—A. With mental cases.

Q. With all mental derangements. Now, go to "D" unit?—A. "D" unit is No. 2 Military District, Toronto. There is the Beatty Convalescent Military Hospital with accommodation for 25; there is the Spadina Military Convalescent Home with accommodation for 275. There is a home which is to be opened up shortly, the Massey-Treble, which is to be a home for incurables.

Q. That is the only home that you have thus far in course of construction for incurable cases, if I am correctly informed?—A. That is right.

Q. That will have accommodation for about how many?—A. I think thirty, if I remember rightly. There is the Central Military Hospital, that is the College Hospital, with accommodation for 130.

By Mr. Middlebro:

Q. The Bishop Strachan School?—A. Yes. There is the Victoria Hospital, Hamilton, with accommodation for 35. There is the Booth Memorial Orthopædic Hospital, which is not opened yet. I am not certain what number will be put in.

By Mr. Bennett:

Q. It will deal only with orthopædic cases?—A. Exactly. There is the Dunedin Military Convalescent Home, Hamilton, with accommodation for 10. Then there is the Oakville Military Convalescent Home, St. Catharines, with accommodation for 25; and the Whitby Home with a present accommodation for 450.

Q. Is that the Ladies College?—A. No, it is a new institution. There is the Mountain Sanitarium at Hamilton with accommodation for 55; and the Muskoka Free Cottage with accommodation for 40.

Q. Is that institution for tuberculosis cases?—A. The last two mentioned are for tuberculosis. That completes the list in "D" unit.

Q. They are all in operation except the Massey-Treble?—A. Yes.

Q. Now, let us have the next unit?—A. The next is "F" unit, with headquarters at London.

By the Chairman:

Q. There seems to be no "E" unit?—A. There is no "E" unit. "D" and "E" are combined. "F" unit is at London. There is the Freeport Sanitarium at Kitchener with accommodation for 33; the Victoria Hospital in London which has accommodation for 130; and the Byron Sanitarium, London, which has accommodation for 40, and which will shortly be increased, and about which the Medical Department can tell you more fully.

Q. Those are all under your command?—A. Yes. There is the Guelph institution which is to be opened shortly.

Q. What is the accommodation there?—A. About 500.

Q. Is that a special hospital?—A. It will be a hospital devoted particularly to vocational training because all their plant is there.

By Hon. Mr. Murphy:

Q. Is it a new building?—A. I could not say, I have never seen it. I believe it is practically a new building, that is to say within recent years.

Q. You were speaking of those hospitals actually in existence?—A. The next unit is "G" with headquarters in Winnipeg. The Deer Lodge Military Convalescent Hospital has accommodation for 45; the Grange Hospital has accommodation for 55. There is the Ninette Sanitarium with accommodation for 30.

By Mr. Bennett:

Q. Is that a special institution?—A. It is for tuberculosis. Then the Immigration Hall is used as a Clearing Depot, and there is accommodation for 110, but the number varies, it has to be kept clear all the time.

Q. It meets all the demands?—A. Exactly. There is the Keefer Convalescent Home at Fort William, with accommodation for 25. I have not mentioned, purposely, because it is not under my charge, the Old Agricultural College which will have accommodation for 600 to 1,000.

Q. Is that in Military District No. 8?—A. No, No. 10, unit "G." The next is "H" unit, in Regina. There is the St. Chads Convalescent Home with accommodation for 45, and the Y.M.C.A. Building at Saskatoon with accommodation for 150.

Q. That has recently been taken over?—A. Yes, and there are other arrangements to be made in that district.

Q. These are the only institutions in operation at the present time?—A. I have been talking of nothing that is not in operation.

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. What district does "H" unit cover?—A. Saskatchewan, the whole province.

By Mr. Bennett:

Q. Now take district No. 13?—A. That is "I" unit with headquarters at Calgary. The Ogden Military Hospital has accommodation for 140. There is the Immigration Building with accommodation for 100, which is used as a clearing depot. There is the Strathcona Military Hospital which is a going concern fully equipped, with accommodation for 150. There is the Frank Sanitarium with accommodation for 64.

[Colonel Sharples.]

Q. That is a special hospital?—A. A special tuberculosis hospital. These are the units today in operation in District 13.

By Hon. Mr. Murphy:

Q. To one of those buildings in Calgary you applied the term "clearing hospital"?—A. That is where the men come off the train and are evacuated and cleared from there to Ogden, Frank, or Edmonton.

By Mr. Bennett:

Q. The Immigration Hall at Winnipeg is used in the same way?—A. Yes. It is fitted up so that the men can rest after their journey, see their friends, and go on to the various places to which they are assigned for treatment.

By the Chairman:

Q. When a man is forwarded from the Discharge Depot, we will say at Quebec, is he sent directly to one of those hospitals, or is he sent to the provincial distribution depot and thence to the proper hospital?—A. He is sent to the distribution centre, sir.

Q. How many distribution centres are there?—A. There is one in each centre.

Q. For each unit?—A. Yes. These are exceptionally large ones—these units are.

Q. So far as I understand the procedure, a Class 2 man, after he has been evacuated from Quebec, is sent to the distribution depot?—A. Exactly.

Q. Of the provincial unit, and from that distribution depot is assigned to the hospital where he shall serve his convalescence?—A. That is right, sir. He goes from Quebec and reports—

Q. To Toronto, for example?—A. —where he is taken to Spadina, and he is given a pass to go home—nearly every man goes home for a while according to his disability—and after ten days or a fortnight he comes back and reports.

Q. At the distribution depot of the unit?—A. Exactly. And he is sent from there, if he is a tubercular case—

Q. To whatever hospital is necessary for his treatment?—A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. Bennett:

Q. Tell us now your accommodation in British Columbia in "J" unit?—A. In "J" unit we have Esquimalt Convalescent Hospital with accommodation for 110, at Rest Haven Convalescent Home, Sidney, B.C., the number is 160. Tranquille Sanitarium, 32.

Q. Where is that located?—A. Right opposite Kamloops. Sunnyview Sanitarium, Kamloops, B.C., 20. Balfour, B.C., which is one of the tuberculosis sanatoria, 70.

Q. That is not far from Frank?—A. Not far from Frank. At the present time, the accommodation is for 70, but we shall have more.

Q. That exhausts your statement as to existing accommodation?—A. Yes.

By Hon. Mr. Belcourt:

Q. Of the accommodation now erected, how much is available?—A. Sometimes about 10 per cent, but it varies from day to day.

By Mr. Bennett:

Q. Nine per cent is in use?—A. Nine per cent is in use.

Q. Now, what accommodation have you in preparation?—A. I am not altogether familiar with all the accommodation which is in preparation.

Q. Some witness from the Hospitals Commission can speak as to that?—A. Yes. I take over the Institutions as they are handed to me.

[Colonel Sharples.]

Q. Will you tell the Committee how these units are constituted?—A. Let me say first of all, that it is the desire of the Commission that all the men employed in the Hospitals Commission shall be returned officers or men.

Q. That is class No. 1, including even medical men if you can get them?—A. Yes.

Q. Now describe the constitution?—A. As I have already said, the majority of the men employed are returned men. Each unit is commanded by a Major or Captain.

Q. To whom is he responsible?—A. He is responsible to me. He has an Adjutant and in every Home containing over 50 men, there is a Lieutenant in charge.

Q. That officer stays on the premises?—A. He is always on the premises.

Q. In charge of the Home.—A. Exactly. He is responsible for the discipline.

Q. Now give us the medical constitution?—A. There is a resident medical man in each large Home. The medical arrangements are carried out under the A.D.M.S. of the districts, who are responsible to the Director General here and also the Medical Superintendent of the Military Hospitals Commission.

Q. That is Colonel Thompson?—A. Colonel Thompson.

By the Hon. Mr. Murphy:

Q. Who is the Director General?—A. Colonel Potter.

By Mr. Bennett:

Q. The constitution of the Commission is as you have described, and it follows military lines?—A. Exactly.

Q. The medical end of it is under the supervision of Colonel Thompson, and is under the direct control of the Director General of Medical Services?—A. Yes.

Q. That is the story, is it?—A. He carries out the policy of the Commission.

Q. I was coming to that?—A. Yes.

By the Chairman:

Q. Are the nurses and orderlies in this hospital under your control?—A. Yes, for discipline only.

Q. Do I understand that every inmate of the hospital, whether an employee or a patient, is, for disciplinary purposes, under your Commission?—A. Exactly.

By Mr. Bennett:

Q. You are the Commanding Officer in charge of all the military operations in connection with the hospitals in Canada for caring for returned soldiers, that is your present position?—A. That is my present position.

Q. There is no question as to that?—A. No, sir.

Q. And for the purposes of carrying out the duties for which you are appointed, there are Majors in charge of these units in each district?—A. Exactly.

Q. And they work out their own salvation under you?—A. Under me.

Q. And you are responsible for the discipline in every one of these institutions?—A. I am, sir. These units are also military units, and the necessary co-ordination is maintained.

Q. The medical end of it is primarily under the supervision of Colonel Thompson?—A. Exactly.

Q. And these commissions co-ordinate their efforts under the direction of the whole military medical service of Canada?—A. Yes.

Q. Up to the present moment, how many patients have passed through these hospitals?—A. I could not give you that information off-hand.

By Mr. Sutherland:

Q. Have you sufficient accommodation for all the soldiers who have returned?—A. Yes, the accommodation is quite sufficient in most of the districts.

[Colonel Sharples.]

Q. Could you give us a statement showing the number of men who can be accommodated in the hospitals and convalescent homes, and also the number that can be accommodated in the special hospitals set apart for the purpose?—A. Do you mean the number of beds in each hospital?

Q. I mean the number of men that can be accommodated in each class of hospital to-day?—A. Yes, I can give you that information.

Q. Can you also state the average time spent by the soldiers in hospital?—A. No, I have not got that information. The system has not been working sufficiently long to enable us to get reliable statistics covering the entire ground.

By Mr. Ross (Middlesex):

Q. Under whose authority are men discharged?—A. Under the authority of the Adjutant-General.

By Mr. Bennett:

Q. But is it carried out through you?—A. It is carried out through me.

By Hon. Mr. Belcourt:

Q. You spoke of orthopædic hospitals, and tuberculosis sanatoria; have you any other special hospitals of any kind except those?—A. No.

Q. You have no special hospitals for example, for venereal diseases?—A. No.

Q. Is there anything being done to-day in connection with such cases?—A. Men are being treated for venereal diseases in special wards in the Military Hospitals, but there are no special hospitals for such cases.

By the Chairman:

Q. Are such cases segregated?—A. That I could not say. Such treatment as there is, is carried out in the Military Hospitals.

By Mr. Ross (Middlesex):

Q. You have no special hospitals for treating mentally unsound cases?—A. We have one, sir.

Q. Are such cases very common?—A. Not very common.

Q. I understand that there is a hospital at Kingston?—A. At Cobourg.

Q. What is the accommodation there?—A. There is accommodation for 150 cases.

By Mr. Bennett:

Q. As to the rationing of these hospitals, the feeding of the patients, the determining of diets, and matters of that kind—how are they dealt with? The rationing of the hospitals, who looks after that?—A. The matrons and the housekeepers, the controllers.

Q. The matrons are responsible under you?—A. Yes, the Commanding Officer is responsible for everything under his command.

Q. Just as the District Officer Commanding, in each district, would be, from a military standpoint?—A. He is responsible for everything in his unit, but the Commission is responsible for the feeding and supplies. The officer commanding the Unit is responsible for everything in connection with his Unit.

Q. To the same extent, having regard to the character of the work, as the District Officer commanding the district is for everything in that district?—A. Practically.

Q. To the same extent as you are responsible to the Minister?—A. Certainly.

Q. And in case of dispute between yourself and Colonel Thompson?—A. It depends, sir, upon whoever backs down first. There, really, could not be a difference of opinion in that way, because our work is so far apart. For instance I would not dare to differ from Colonel Thompson on a medical question, and I do not think he would differ from me on a question of an administrative nature.

[Colonel Sharples.]

Q. And he is responsible to the Hospitals Commission?—A. Yes.

Q. But if a dispute should arise who would determine?—A. The Adjutant-General would settle that.

Q. It would be in the Militia Department?—A. Yes.

The CHAIRMAN: I wish you would have prepared for us a map showing the areas "A", "B", "C", "D", etc., showing the discharge depots and their locations, showing the location in each area of the distributing depots, and also showing the locations of all your hospitals. I would like to have it prepared in black and white, so that a cut can be made of it and filed on the record with the rest of the documents.

Mr. MIDDLEBRO: In the Military Hospitals Commission special bulletin of April 16, there is an article by Dr. C. K. Clarke, of Toronto, in which he explains the different methods of treatment at the ordinary asylums for the insane, and at the end of the article there is a note:—

"The Commission has already given the matter of which Dr. Clarke writes its careful consideration, and has made arrangements to provide a properly equipped institution for sufferers of this type."

What institution does that specially refer to?—A. The one at Cobourg.

Q. And it is the Cobourg institution you refer to?—A. Yes.

Q. What accommodation has the institution now?—A. One hundred and fifty of the type you are thinking of.

Q. Would provision for 150 be sufficient do you think?—A. It has been, so far, they are cleared very quickly, those cases.

By Hon. Mr. McCurdy:

Q. In the matter of operation of your unit, Colonel Sharples, what is your observation as to the most convenient class of hospitals?—A. I think the hospital of from 100 to 300 patients is the easiest hospital to manage.

Q. You get better results from a hospital of that size?—A. We get better results.

By Hon. Mr. Belcourt:

Q. And they are more economical to operate?—A. Yes.

By Hon. Mr. Beaubien:

Q. In making your map, Colonel Sharples, will you put in the capacity of each Hospital?

The CHAIRMAN: That is what we want, its capacity and its character.

Hon Mr. BELCOURT: And how much of its capacity is now taken up?

The WITNESS: We have all those records, and I will furnish the information.

By Brigadier-General Mason:

Q. Have you complaints to any extent from the men in the Hospitals? Are there many complaints from the men regarding insufficient food, or treatment or from any other cause?—A. No, I have never had any complaints from the men as to their treatment at all. The only complaints I have received have been with regard to questions of food, such as you might expect from a sick man.

By the Chairman:

Q. Would it be regarded as a breach of discipline for a soldier in one of these hospitals to write you and make complaint?—A. It would not, under ordinary circumstances, but in this particular class of cases that we are handling we have made these men understand that if they have any complaint we want them to let us know.

Q. Through what channel can a soldier, without breach of discipline, make that complaint?—A. He can always parade before his C. O.

[Colonel Sharples.]

Q. And will that complaint reach you?—A. Oh, yes.

Q. Have you had many complaints.—A. No, sir, very few.

Q. But there is no disability or obstacle in the way of any of the soldiers in these hospitals making their complaints and having them heard?—A. None at all, they are asked every day at their mid-day meal if there are any complaints.

Q. Have you such a thing as "complaint-boxes" in the Hospitals, into which complaints may be dropped by the men—have you anything of that kind?—A. No, sir.

By Mr. Bennett:

Q. I daresay you have seen in the press, statements that there has been a lack of accommodation and that there have been a number of cases that could not be accommodated. That, I understand, is not so?—A. Not to my knowledge—there has been no lack of accommodation generally as far as I know.

Q. And you would know?—A. Yes.

Q. And there has also been the statement that a very large number of rheumatic cases were coming to Canada. Have you any statistics as to that?—A. There have not been any complaints that rheumatic patients in Canada have not received proper treatment.

By the Chairman:

Q. Have you any idea how many patients there are in England that it is intended to send back to Canada within the next few months?—A. I would not like to say how many there are coming altogether, but I understand that we are getting patients back at the rate of 600 per month.

By Hon. Mr. Beaubien:

Q. Are you cramped for space in any of the General Hospitals?—A. No, sir, we are not cramped.

By Hon. Mr. Murphy:

Q. Do you receive advance notice of those who are coming?—A. Yes, always.

Q. How long in advance of their arrival?—A. A week, a good week.

Q. By letter or cable?—A. By cable.

By the Chairman:

Q. There comes back with each man, if I understand rightly, in the possession of the Commanding Officer who comes with the group of returned men, his whole dossier, his medical dossier, his coming back dossier, and his Paymaster's statement?—A. Quite right, sir.

Q. These papers are placed in whose hands on the arrival of the man from the other side?—A. In the hands of the officer commanding the Discharge Depot.

Q. Not to the man himself?—A. No, sir.

Q. They are there in the hands of the Officer Commanding the Discharge Depot when the man comes up for examination by the Medical Board?—A. The medical history sheet is. As a matter of fact the Medical Board have access to all the papers.

Q. Where does the man's record go after he leaves the Discharge Depot?—A. It follows the man right clean through. If he goes to Toronto these papers go with him.

Q. Is there a duplicate at Ottawa?—A. No.

By Brigadier-General Mason:

Q. Have cases come to your knowledge where men have been returned from England suffering from a medical disability of long standing contracted before they left Canada?—A. Yes, there have been some cases of that sort.

By Hon. Mr. Belcourt:

Q. Tuberculosis, for instance?

The WITNESS: Do you mean men suffering from tuberculosis?

[Colonel Sharples.]

Brigadier-General MASON: I mean men suffering from some medical disability of sufficiently long standing to have existed when they left Canada.

The WITNESS: Well, there have been cases of tuberculosis that have developed by aggravation of service which I believe—of course, it is hard for me to answer that question, not being a medical man.

Brigadier-General MASON: Was it some physical disability?

The CHAIRMAN: I think we will get that information from Col. Potter.

Witness discharged.

Col. ALFRED T. THOMPSON, M.P., chief medical officer, Military Hospitals Commission, called, sworn and examined.

The CHAIRMAN: I think, gentlemen, we might ask Colonel Thompson to describe for our benefit the work of the Military Hospitals Commission, as he is their chief medical officer.

Colonel THOMPSON: The work of the Military Hospitals Commission, as it has developed in a medical way, may be divided into different groups of work or phases of work in this way.

By the Chairman:

Q. Would you be good enough, Colonel, first to give us the method of your constitution and the authority under which you are constituted. How was the Military Hospitals Commission created in the first place?—A. The Military Hospitals Commission was created by Order in Council.

Q. Of the 12th of October, 1915?—A. Possibly.

The CHAIRMAN: With the permission of the Committee I would like to put in as evidence this Order in Council, which was published in Bulletin No. 2 of the Military Hospitals Commission, June, 1916.

The WITNESS: Subsequent Orders in Council were passed to extend the scope of its work and extending its powers.

The CHAIRMAN: Please file those also.

P.C. 1472.

CERTIFIED Copy of a Report of the Committee of the Privy Council, approved by His Royal Highness the Governor General, on the 29th June, 1916.

The Committee of the Privy Council have had before them a report, dated June 17, 1916, from the Honourable Sir James A. Loughheed, president of the Military Hospitals Commission, stating that the Military Hospitals and Convalescent Homes Commission, acting under Order in Council No. 2412, dated October 12, 1915, has given a large amount of study and consideration to the question of the vocational training of members of the Canadian Expeditionary Force and also of the reservists of the forces of Great Britain and of His Majesty's Allies in the present war, such reservists having been bona fide residents of Canada at the outbreak of the war, who will be unable to return to their previous occupations by reason of their disability incurred on service. The duty of the State to provide training for some new occupation for those so disabled has been recognized by all the nations now at war. The Commission is of the opinion that the restoration of a disabled man to the fullest possible productive capacity is alike a duty and a step of economic and social wisdom and in its study of the question the Commission has found many evidences that the people of Canada are strongly in favour of suitable provision being made for training to this end.

The Commission has received the assurance of the active co-operation of the provinces and various municipalities in the Dominion in carrying out such a policy. Technical schools, agricultural colleges and other public institutions have agreed to receive disabled men for training and many offers have also been received from private commercial establishments to provide training and subsequent employment when the men have become proficient.

The period of training for a new vocation will vary according to the previous education and industrial history of each individual. The cost of tuition will vary in consequence and also from the fact that in many cases the tuition will be free or the fees nominal.

The Commission has already undertaken the provision of opportunities for training in general subjects and elementary educational work for all men under treatment in the various convalescent hospitals and homes being operated by the Commission irrespective of whether or not such men will later on be subjects for vocational training leading to a new occupation. In a few cases arrangements have also been made for special vocational training leading to new occupations.

The Commission is not able, however, to put into operation a general scheme of vocational training through the utilization of the various facilities which have been offered for the purpose or otherwise until there has been determined a scale of maintenance for the men undergoing training and their dependents.

When a man enlists for overseas service he receives the following pay: One dollar and ten cents ($1.10) per diem if living in barracks, or one dollar and seventy cents per diem ($1.70) if living at home. If he is married his wife receives separation allowance of twenty dollars ($20) per month. In addition the Patriotic Fund contributes on the average from ten to twenty dollars ($10 to $20) per month according to the part of Canada in which the family is residing. On the return of a wounded or invalided man he continues to receive these amounts as long as he remains under treatment whether in a convalescent home, a hospital or in his own home with the exception of the Patriotic Fund allowance, which ceases upon his arrival in Canada.

The Commission is of opinion that the foregoing rate of pay is too high in the case of single men who are not trained by the Government and provided with free training for a new vocation, while in the case of married men it is too arbitrary as it does not take into consideration the size of the family or the number of dependents. The Commission has, therefore, prepared a scale under which a small sum for personal expenses is granted to the men undergoing training and provision on a sliding scale is made for married men and their dependents and for those unmarried men who may have persons legally dependent upon them.

The Minister, therefore, submits for approval the following scale which the Commission request power to establish:—

SUGGESTED SCALE OF PAY AND ALLOWANCE FOR MEN UNDERGOING VOCATIONAL TRAINING AFTER THEIR MILITARY PAY HAS STOPPED.

1. Single men with pension living out, sixty (60) cents per day.
2. Single men with pension living in, including free board and washing, no pay.
3. Married men with pension living in, free board and washing plus eight ($8) dollars per month with the following additions:—
 - (A) For wife having no children $35 per month, less pension of husband.

[Colonel Alfred T. Thompson.]

or if one is between 10 and the maximum age and two between 5 and 10, $50 per month, less pension of husband and allowances for children under the Pension Regulations.

- (b) If all three are between the ages of 5 and 10, or if two are between the ages of 5 and 10 and the third younger, or if one is between the ages of 5 and 10 and two are younger, $45.50 per month, less pension of husband and allowances for children under the Pension Regulations.
- (c) If all three are under five years of age, $44 per month, less pension of husband and allowances for children under the Pension Regulations.

- (c) If all four are under 5 years of age, $47 per month, less pension of husband and allowances for children under the Pension Regulations.

(F) Wife and five children:—

- (a) If one child is between 10 and the maximum age and a second child between 5 and 10, no matter what be the ages of the other children, the maximum allowance may be given, which is $55 per month, less pension of husband and allowances for children under the Pension Regulations.
- (b) If one or more children are between 5 and 10 and others younger, $51.50 per month, less pension of husband and allowances for children under the Pension Regulations.
- (c) If all the children are under 5 years of age, $50 per month, less pension of husband and allowances for children under the Pension Regulations.

(G) Wife and six children:—

- (a) If one child is between 10 and the maximum age and a second child between 5 and the maximum age, no matter what be the ages of the others, the maximum allowance may be given, being $55 per month, less pension of husband and allowances for children under the Pension Regulations.
- (b) If one or several children are between 5 and 10 and others younger, $54.50 per month, less pension of husband and allowances for children under the Pension Regulations.
- (c) If all children are under 5 years of age, $53 per month, less pension of husband and allowances for children under the Pension Regulations.

(H) Wife with seven or more children under the maximum age, no matter what be their ages, may be given the maximum allowance of $55 per month, less pension of husband and allowances for children under the Pension Regulations.

NOTE.—In all the foregoing cases, payment of allowances for the wife and children of a man undergoing vocational training will be made direct to the wife, unless otherwise deemed advisable by the Commission in individual cases.

[Colonel Alfred T. Thompson.]

6. Married men living in their own homes sixty (60) cents per day extra.
7. A widowed mother if she be dependent entirely for support on an unmarried son who is receiving vocational training, and if the son made an assignment of his pay to his mother and also arranged for her to receive separation allowance during the time he was in service, may be paid on the same scale as the wife of a married man with no children.
8. The parents of a man undergoing vocational training if both are old and incapable of work, and if they are entirely or partially dependent on the son in question, may be paid on the same scale as the wife of a married men with no children.

9. Widower's children.—The guardian of a widower's children who are under the maximum age shall be paid the following rates:—

- (a) One child, $10 per month.
- (b) Two children, $17.50 per month.
- (c) Three children, $22 per month.
- (d) More than three children, $3 per month for each child in excess of three with a maximum payment of $35 per month.

Assistant Clerk of the Privy Council.

P.C. 2566.

CERTIFIED COPY of a Report of the Committee of the Privy Council approved by His Excellency the Administrator, on the 20th October, 1916.

The Committee of the Privy Council have had before them a report, dated 5th October, 1916, from the Honourable Sir James Loughheed, President Military Hospitals Commission, stating that the Military Hospitals and Convalescent Homes Commission, acting under Order in Council P.C. 2412 of the 12th October, 1915, and subsequent Orders in Council, especially under Order in Council P.C. 1472 of 29th June, 1916, has made arrangements with the various Provincial Governments whereby vocational training of disabled members of the Canadian Expeditionary Force, and of the reservists of British and Allied Powers, resident in the Dominion on the outbreak of the war, is being carried on.

The Minister further states that in some of the provinces this work is being conducted directly by the Commission with the knowledge and consent of the Provincial Governments acting through the various provincial commissions.

In the province of Ontario it is proposed that the work should be carried out by the Ontario Soldiers' Aid Commission, which has received special authority from the Government of Ontario, for this purpose. The Military Hospitals Commission will indicate to the Ontario Soldiers' Aid Commission the kind of training required in the various centres and for individual men in special cases, and the Ontario Soldiers' Aid Commission will employ the necessary instructors and a special vocational officer.

[Colonel Alfred T. Thompson.]

The minister submits a copy of the agreement entered into between the Military Hospitals Commission and the Ontario Soldiers' Aid Commission.

The minister therefore recommends that authority be given to the Military Hospitals Commission to carry out this agreement, and to reimburse the Ontario Soldiers' Aid Commission for any expenses incurred by them under this agreement, it being clearly understood that before any expenditure is incurred such expenditure will be approved by the Military Hospitals Commission, and that the Ontario Soldiers' Aid Commission will render monthly statements to the Military Hospitals Commission.

The Committee concur in the foregoing recommendation and submit the same for approval.

(Sgd.) RODOLPHE BOUDREAU,

Clerk of the Privy Council.

The WITNESS: Yes. These Orders in Council gave the Military Hospitals Commission the power to draw upon any branch of the Federal Government for assistance in carrying out the work of looking after the returned invalided soldiers. To look after the returned invalided soldiers we have hospitals in various portions of this country, as Col. Sharples testified.

By the Chairman:

Q. Have you anything to add to that list?—A. Nothing, except to, perhaps, classify them as they appear to me, or as I think of them as Medical Superintendent.

The CHAIRMAN: Is it the wish of the Committee that the witness place on record his classification of these hospitals from his point of view?

The WITNESS: One, debarkation hospitals: there are three of these, one at Halifax, one at St. John, and one at Quebec. The one at Quebec has been in existence for some time, the one at Halifax is just now nearing completion, and the one at St. John will be completed in about ten days. These are hospitals which are placed at those strategic points to receive the invalided soldiers when they return by steamship, and the soldiers are kept in these debarkation hospitals until their allocation is finally determined by an examining board.

By the Chairman:

Q. Is that usually a long or short time?—A. Comparatively a short time, a week or ten days, probably not more than two or three days, depending on the number debarked from any particular ship.

Q. You have provision for those cases not well enough to be sent on?—A. Oh, yes, we have very fully equipped hospitals at those places, to take care of every kind of invalid who does return, and we have all kinds from the incurable and helpless to the convalescents who can walk from the ship to the hospital. These are the debarkation hospitals. Then we have active treatment hospitals. We are creating these. I might say here, with the permission of the Committee, that until early in the fall the Hospitals Commission was not doing any more than looking after convalescent soldiers; but due to the actions in Flanders in the past summer the hospitals in Britain became crowded, and through the High Commissioner the Minister of Militia was asked to provide beds in Canada for active treatment cases; and consequently the Hospitals Commission were immediately asked to procure accommodation. We have been doing that, and we are now preparing a large number of beds for active treatment cases. Thirdly, here are convalescent hospitals, properly so called, for men who have had the early part of their treatment, surgical and medical, carried on in England to the point where they can be transferred to Canada and where their treatment is finally completed in convalescent hospitals.

[Colonel Alfred T. Thompson.]

By the Chairman:

Q. Those are filled with Class 2 men?—A. Yes. Fourth, tubercular hospitals, hospitals specially designed and built by ourselves or subsidized sometimes if built by others; at any rate hospitals specially set apart for the care of tubercular patients, some having glandular tuberculosis but mainly for those suffering from pulmonary tuberculosis. Fifth, orthopaedic hospitals, where we care for patients requiring orthopaedic treatment, which means primarily some disability of the arm or leg, but in these later days means bone surgery which may involve any part of the body. For instance, as a case in point: one of our orthopaedic experts recently did a very interesting operation on a man's jaw, by the grafting of a piece of bone from his leg into his jaw. That is done very frequently now, and excellent results are being obtained: the whole history of surgery will have to be written after this war. The re-setting of ribs and bones and bone surgery generally now might be, by a very liberal interpretation, included in orthopaedic surgery. Primarily, however, it means the disability of arms and legs, and amputations, generally speaking. We are creating a larger centre in Toronto. We have accommodation there now for 200 orthopaedic cases and we shall eventually accommodate 500 such cases. Besides this orthopaedic centre, we shall have orthopaedic centres in Winnipeg and Montreal, and eventually perhaps farther west and farther east. The present plan is to locate orthopaedic centres at Toronto, Winnipeg and Montreal. Then we have hospitals for mental cases, where men who are suffering from shell shock, men who are in the border-land of insanity or who, upon their return from the front, have been found to be practically insane. At the present time the three classes are grouped more or less together, but as the work develops, the three types will have to be segregated. As a matter of fact, we are making preparations now with that object in view.

By Mr. Middlebro:

Q. You spoke of men suffering from shell shock, and cases of men who are in the borderland of mental unsoundness?—A. Yes, men who are not insane and yet who are not perfectly sane, it is a descriptive term.

By Hon. Mr. Belcourt:

Q. It is an arbitrary term?—A. Very. You cannot clearly distinguish exactly what class they are in, but many of these cases I am glad to say have ultimately recovered.

By Mr. Ross (Middlesex):

Q. Is the proportion large of soldiers who return from the war hopelessly insane?—A. No. Probably the last link in our hospital system is the hospital train, whereby we transport from the debarkation hospital to the hospitals to which they are finally sent the patients of whatever class they may be. The debarkation hospital, as I have already said, is simply a reception hospital for the men as they step off the ship. We have medical men, nurses and orderlies in the debarkation hospital and the men are retained there only as long as is necessary to transport them by means of a hospital train to the other centres such as Montreal, Toronto, Kingston or Winnipeg, as the case may be.

By the Chairman:

Q. At the debarkation hospital a full medical examination is given?—A. Yes.

Q. Tell us something about that medical examination?—A. A number of highly qualified medical men are employed in doing this work continually, and they examine the individual in the debarkation hospital before he is transported from that point. A careful medical examination is made, and the findings are put on record, and that record accompanies the patient.

[Colonel Alfred T. Thompson.]

Q. Do those medical men constitute the board which determines whether the soldier goes into class 1, class 2 or class 3?—A. Yes.

Q. And is their finding subject to any revision as far as the classification of a man in any one of these three classes is concerned?—A. Yes, but there is nothing final about it. Sometimes it happens that a man is placed in class 1 or class 3, and subsequently he develops some condition which had its roots in his service. He is then put into class 2. There is machinery for that in the case of any of our hospital patients.

Q. Does the Pensions Board act on the finding of this Hospitals Board in reference to classes 1 and 3?—A. No. At least, if so, very, very rarely.

Q. It is very rare that a man receives a pension on the strength of his classification at the disembarkation hospital?—A. So far as I know, not at all. He is sent to the final hospital and his case is dealt with there for pension purposes.

By Hon. Mr. Murphy:

Q. Does the Medical Board have before it the man's previous medical record?—A. Generally speaking, yes. Sometimes the records are delayed or mislaid, but generally speaking, the records accompany the man.

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. Is that the record that went over with the man?—A. It is his medical record, beginning with his disability.

Q. Beginning with his disability overseas?—A. Yes.

Q. And the finding of the Board over there?—A. Yes.

Q. And that is taken into consideration in passing on a man's case?—A. It is taken into consideration, but we do not of necessity bind ourselves by it. However, it is a guide, of course.

By the Chairman:

Q. Men who have been examined by a Board in England, before crossing the Atlantic, are independently re-examined at the disembarkation hospital on arrival here?—A. Yes.

Q. And if the two reports agree the conclusions are probably right. If there is any disagreement between the two reports, which report prevails?—A. That of the Canadian Board.

By Hon. Mr. Belcourt:

Q. Neither of these reports rules in the matter of deciding what pensions shall be granted?—A. Not necessarily. The rule is that the man is finally examined by a special Board for pension.

Q. And this Pension Board have the original certificate before them that the man had when he was enlisted?—A. I am not sure as to that, but they have the medical history of the individual.

Q. The medical history as given by himself?—A. After the man goes overseas his medical history begins from the time he becomes sick, and that history follows him on his return to Canada.

By the Chairman:

Q. His medical history commences from the time of his going on the sick list, as far as you are concerned?—A. As far as we are concerned, and that is the history which influences us with respect to the man's condition. We take that history for our guide.

[Colonel Alfred T. Thompson.]

By Hon. Mr. Murphy:

Q. He has the medical records as to disability only?—A. Yes.

By Hon. Mr. Belcourt:

Q. Would that information which comes before the Medical Board include the medical history of the man previous to enlistment?—A. The statement as to his physical condition?

Q. The statement made by himself?—A. The statement made by the man before the examining officer? Oh, yes.

Mr. BENNETT: The Chairman of the Pensions Board is here and he will tell us about that.

By the Chairman:

Q. Is there anywhere a complete record on file or index regarding every man who returns as a casualty?—A. A complete record.

Q. Is there any one place where there is a complete record of that man, that can be turned up for inquiry?—A. Yes, Headquarters has that.

By Hon. Mr. Belcourt:

Q. In what office?—A. In the Militia Department.

Q. In what Branch, would it to be the Pensions Branch?—A. In the Records Branch, which is a separate Branch by itself.

By the Chairman:

Q. Then if we should ask the Records Branch of the Militia Department to furnish us with a medical history of any man they will be able to supply it?—A. Yes.

By Hon. Mr. Murphy:

Q. Beginning with the medical examination at the time of enlistment?—A. Yes, but very briefly with regard to the history given at the examination; his medical history, properly so-called begins with his casualty.

By the Chairman:

Q. Who is in charge of that Branch of the Militia Department?—A. I do not know who it is.

Q. Is it Mr. Frank Beard?—A. I think it is.

By Mr. Middlebro:

Q. I have a concrete case where a man enlisted, was sent overseas, and presumably was fit, but came back in the course of a year, discharged as physically unfit. He came back to my town and I put him on the letter-carriers staff, but he was incapacitated for that work, and three days after he resigned from the job. He received from the Pension Board no pension at all, no remuneration whatever, on the ground that his disability had not been aggravated by service, so that he gets nothing. Now what provision is there with respect to appeal in a case of that kind?—A. I do not know. That man is a civilian again, and I fancy—that opens up a great question. Mr. Chairman, and I can only speak as Medical Superintendent of the Military Hospitals Commission. I would like to have the committee make some suggestions or express an opinion because it is a live question.

Q. The man came back again, to his home-town he must have been certified to by this Board at the port of disembarkation. What are you going to do with respect to that man? Are you going to take the report of the medical man who examined him in the first place and who said he was all right for service, or will you take the report of the Board, and say that he is all wrong when he comes back again? If he is all wrong, he is unfit for a pension?—A. It is a matter of opinion—if you ask me my opinion—

[Colonel Alfred T. Thompson.]

Q. That is what I want.—A. I have given this important question some considerable thought, and I am rather impressed with this idea, that if the State accepted that man's services it was up to the State to have a medical man who would examine that man properly.

Q. If the man was willing to sacrifice his life and to serve the State?—A. And if the State accepted that man's services upon its medical man's advice, the State is morally bound to care for him.

Q. That is if the man is willing to make the sacrifice, and he is not allowed to make it because he is unfit for service and is then sent back to this country, he should be provided for?—A. I think so, I think the State is morally bound to care for that man.

The CHAIRMAN: I think it is only prudent and proper in this inquiry to examine the Director-General of Medical Services in order to ascertain why and how men of this character were ever allowed to get into the service.

By Hon. Mr. McCurdy:

Q. In the Pensions Regulations of December 12, 1916, there is a clause, 5, which reads that there shall be no appeal from the decisions of the Commissioners, but that an applicant who is dissatisfied with the decision given in the ordinary course of administration may present his or her case before the full Pension Board.

The WITNESS: Oh yes, I did not understand that was the point. There is an appeal to the Pensions Board, but while that appeal is pending decision, what is to happen to the individual who is without means of support, perhaps?

By Mr. Middlebro:

Q. In the case I speak of, the Pensions Board has decided that the man could not have any further consideration. It only comes back to Colonel Thompson's point that having been accepted by the Medical Advisers of the State, who passed this man for service, the State should care for him.—A. Speaking again, if I might, for the Hospitals Commission, I have always regarded our hospitals as hostels for these unfortunates, who have cropped up from time to time, and I have given instructions that our hospitals should be opened to these people and they get what nursing, surgical and medical attention they desire.

By the Chairman:

Q. You have many men under the Hospital Commission who have never gone overseas, in many of whom the trouble was developed or discovered within a few months of the time they enlisted and got into training?—A. Oh, yes.

Q. What do you do with these men, do you treat them as members of the Canadian Expeditionary Force?—A. Yes, they are all members of the C. E. F. to us, and we treat them all alike.

Q. If a man should be passed to-day and become a member of the C. E. F., and to-morrow he should be discovered to have tuberculosis, we will say, would you take him into the hospital the same as if he had gone to the front and had come back?—A. We have several cases in that category now, we make no distinction.

By Hon. Mr. Belcourt:

Q. I suppose there are such cases as where a man by concealing from the examining officer his medical history might get a certificate and would be passed into the service, and it would be some time before that disease would develop?—A. It is exceedingly difficult for the medical examiner to detect for instance pulmonary tuberculosis before development.

Q. And is that the case with regard to venereal diseases?—A. And sometimes with regard to venereal diseases also; there are diseases that no medical man could discover.

[Colonel Alfred T. Thompson.]

By Hon. Mr. McCurdy:

Q. What about rheumatic troubles?—A. It is very easy to cover those up, and they crop up when the men get into the trenches. In many of these cases it is almost impossible to diagnose them, but they are developed by exposure subsequently.

By Hon. Mr. Belcourt:

Q. Would you modify your opinion as to the desirability of a man getting a pension in a case where he had succeeded in passing through concealment of his medical history? Would you make any distinction between a case of that kind where the existence of the cause had been concealed and the general case where it had existed but had not developed?—A. Oh, yes, if it could be proven that a man got into the army by misrepresentation I would not be as generous with him as I would with a man who had not misrepresented matters.

Q. How many men have you under treatment that have not been overseas?—A. There are 1,270 cases in our hospitals to-day, and I might say, Mr. Chairman, that having in mind that we are treating so large a number of men, these figures are not accurate for these men up to this moment. They are approximately so. There are 1,270 men who have not been overseas who are either in our hospitals or out-patients under our care.

By the Chairman:

Q. Out of a total of how many?—A. 3,779.

Q. One-third of all your cases?—A. In the tuberculars, about one-third, yes.

Q. About one-third have never been overseas?—A. We find about 60 per cent of the pulmonary tuberculars have never been overseas.

THE CHAIRMAN: Would you prefer to go on with the examination by taking these hospitals one at a time?

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. You have spoken of two different kinds of tuberculosis?—A. Yes, pulmonary, and glandular. By far the most common is pulmonary. The other is an infection of the lymphatic glands, which is more rare and not so amenable to treatment.

By Hon. Mr. Belcourt:

Q. And then you have cases of tuberculosis of the joints?—A. You can classify them as to almost any part of the body.

By Mr. Middlebro:

Q. It seems to me that 1,270 cases are quite a lot to come from the C. E. F. at home. That will cover, I suppose, all the regiments?—A. The camp cases that were taken ill in the military camps throughout the country.

Q. What proportion would that be of the whole units from which they are taken? Suppose there are 50,000 men in Canada, are these the dregs from the 50,000 alone?—A. These are the left-overs, the derelicts.

Q. What percentage would these be of the total number from which they are taken?

HON. MR. MCCURDY: The accumulation from 300,000.

A. We could not go that far back, they are being evacuated from time to time. There are men in some of our hospitals who have been in since the army was first organized—a few.

By Hon. Mr. Belcourt:

Q. Give us the total number since the inception of enlistment. How many have been treated in hospitals who never went overseas from the start?—A. I could get those figures for the Committee. I have not got them this morning. Major Kirkby reporting from the casualty centre under Col. Reed says than 40 per cent of patients in England from the C. E. F. have never been in France.

By Mr. Middlebro:

Q. And you might secure the percentage of the troops that have been afflicted with tuberculosis in Canada since we commenced enlistment?—A. That information can be very easily secured from the D. G. M. S.

By the Chairman:

Q. What is required is the percentage of the total enlistment who have developed tuberculosis before going overseas?—A. A very small percentage. I will get it exactly, between one and a half and one per cent, I think.

By Hon. Mr. Belcourt:

Q. How many of those cases have been developed on the other side and have come over to your knowledge?—A. What percentage of tuberculars, having in mind the whole army?

Q. What tubercular cases have been developed before going overseas, and how many have developed after going over?

Hon. Mr. MURPHY: How many cases have been under treatment from the beginning of men who have not gone overseas?

The CHAIRMAN: We have a special item with reference to tuberculosis hospitals that the Doctor will amplify after luncheon. It is well if possible to keep the discussion regarding this subject together.

Hon. Mr. BELCOURT: Might I ask the Doctor to furnish us a statement with reference to venereal diseases on the same lines?

The CHAIRMAN: When he comes this afternoon.

By the Chairman:

Q. Now, Colonel Thompson, is there any more you care to tell us about the debarkation hospitals, or has all the information been given?—A. I have nothing more to add just now.

Q. Tell us about your active treatment hospitals. I am going to take up these several classes and have a general discussion upon them and have you tell us what there is to be known. As I understand, the active treatment hospitals take in cases which hitherto have been cared for in England, but are now cared for here?—A. They represent the last word in hospital equipment and are manned by the best surgical and medical skill the country has.

Q. How many are there in Canada?—A. Will you permit me to outline the policy as it has unfolded? So far as convalescent hospitals are concerned, we try to bear in mind the geographical distribution of the troops. We return the man as soon as possible to the district from which he came. So far as active treatment hospitals are concerned we rather consider ourselves an extension of the British hospitals systems, so we confine them to the larger cities in the larger centres where the highest form of medical skill can be secured. Hence our active treatment hospitals will be placed at Halifax, and St. John for the Maritime Provinces, Montreal, Kingston, Toronto and Winnipeg. Then from Winnipeg these active treatment cases will be distributed to the larger hospitals, civilian hospitals in the west, at Regina, Saskatoon, Calgary, Edmonton, New Westminster and Vancouver.

Q. You use the word "civilian hospital"?—A. I mean the ordinary hospital which exists in all the cities of Canada.

Q. Is that convalescent hospitals?—A. No, the ordinary hospitals.

[Colonel Alfred T. Thompson.]

By Hon. Mr. Murphy:

Q. You mean existing apart from war time?—A. Quite.

By Hon. Mr. McCurdy:

Q. They are already created?—A. We find them filled to capacity. However, we have been able to get quite a large number of beds in civilian hospitals for the returned soldiers. The last hospital under the Commission in the West will be at Winnipeg. We shall have other hospitals but they will be civilian hospitals, that is to say there will be beds in civilian hospitals at Calgary, Regina, Saskatoon, Edmonton, New Westminster and Vancouver. In these active treatment hospitals the patients will be taken from the debarkation hospital in the hospital trains direct to Montreal, Toronto, Kingston and Winnipeg.

Q. That is the purpose of your hospital system?—A. We consider Winnipeg a second base, so to speak. We shall have a large hospital there in which the patients from the hospital trains will be unloaded; they will be rested there and treated; then they will be distributed from that point by the three roads to those places I have mentioned, Regina, Saskatoon, Calgary, Edmonton, New Westminster and Vancouver, and subsequently to smaller places.

Q. Are you speaking only of active cases?—A. Particularly of active treatment cases.

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. What do you mean by "active treatment"? These men are in a convalescent state?—A. They are in the early convalescent stage.

Q. Necessarily they must be constantly looked after?—A. Daily. This will give an idea of what I mean: about ten per cent of these cases are stretcher cases that have to be carried on to the train, on to and off the boat, and carried on stretchers until they arrive at the active treatment hospital, men in the earlier stages of convalescence.

By the Chairman:

Q. Men whom you cannot allow to go home, or anything of that kind; they have to be kept under constant medical supervision?—A. Yes, and very frequently operations are performed on them. Wounds are dressed, stumps of limbs and bones are pared off, and X-rays taken. The individual must be under continual observation. When he reaches the convalescent stage he is transferred to the Convalescent Hospital.

Q. Tell us about the Convalescent Hospitals.—A. The individual, after receiving all the treatment we can give him in our hospitals, goes to a Convalescent Hospital. He is able to take care of himself very largely, he does not longer need daily surgical or medical attention, and is able to take up some form of education or vocational work. In that event there are certain forms of exercise which may be helpful to him and educative in character. The officers in charge will advise him to undertake what is necessary for him whether it is by means of massage, the exercising of the joints, and so on. We have exercises through which the men go, and a certain amount of physical drill is given every morning. These can all go on concurrently, depending upon the disability of the patient or the stage of recovery he has reached at that time. Concurrently with these, the vocational officer, through a sub-officer, teaches the convalescent typewriting, spelling or English, or perhaps some of the crafts. He is now being fitted in the Convalescent Hospital for education so that he may take his place somewhere in our social fabric.

Q. Are these men classified as "in" patients and "out" patients.—A. "Out" patients and "in" patients.

Q. Are they both under your care?—A. Every patient is supposed to be receiving medical and surgical care under the Military Hospitals Commission, whether an "in" patient or an "out" patient. If an "out" patient he reports from time to time to the medical officer under whom he is, and that medical officer examines him.

Q. Will you tell us now what is done in the matter of tubercular treatment in the first place?—A. If a man is discovered, before leaving Canada, to be a victim of tuberculosis, he is examined by a Medical Board. His sputum is examined and other facts concerning him ascertained, and his medical history is written up. If it is decided that the man should go into a tuberculosis sanatorium, we select, if at all possible, the institution nearest that man's home, and send him to that sanatorium as soon as possible.

By Hon. Mr. Belcourt:

Q. Do you permit a tubercular patient, an "out" patient, to go to his own home?—A. Not if we can help it. We prefer to have them in our own institutions under our own trained men.

Q. Is there any reason why you should not allow these men to undergo treatment in their own homes? Is it not quite feasible?—A. It is quite feasible, but the difficulty we find is this—

Q. You have to teach them what safe-guards to observe?—A. That is it, we have to educate these men to take care of themselves.

By the Chairman:

Q. When tubercular patients are treated in their own homes is there not a danger to the other members of the family?—A. There is, unless the patient is educated to look after his sputum. That is the difficulty we encounter in dealing with the layman. He seems to think he can expectorate all over the house without exposing other members of his family to the danger. The men who are under treatment are trained to carry sputum cups in their pockets, or deposit them beside their chairs. The cups are afterwards destroyed, as well as the cloths with which they have wiped their lips. Now we have a sanitarium at Charlottetown and one at Frank, 4,000 feet above the sea-level; one at Ninette, Manitoba; one at Gravenhurst, in the lake region of Ontario; one at Kingston; one at Hamilton. We also have sanatoria in the Laurentian Range, Quebec. I am persuaded, after a good deal of careful observation, that the question of climate, humidity or altitude is not so great a factor as we formerly thought in the treatment of tuberculosis, or as sunlight and fresh air are. I am persuaded that the greatest factor in the cure of pulmonary tuberculosis is the individual and intelligent care that the victim receives. He is under the continual care of intelligent medical officers and really excellent results are obtained.

Q. Then all the Institutions you have enumerated are not exclusively devoted to your tubercular patients?—A. No, but we have certain hospitals of our own. The Oliver Mowat Memorial Hospital, Kingston, has been added to and equipped for us, and has been taken over and staffed by our men. We have taken over the hotel at Frank and also the C.P.R. Hotel at Balfour, and converted them into hospitals. These three places are therefore directly under our care. In the province of Nova Scotia we have gone into the matter with the local Government and built extensions to their hospitals. At Lake Edward we went into the matter with the Lake Edward Association and extended their hospitals, giving them a certain amount of money. At Ste. Agathe we pay the Laurentian Sanitarium $1.50 a day. We have gone in with the authorities of the Byron Sanitarium, London; and we are doing the same at Mountain Sanitarium, Hamilton, and at Kamloops.

Q. Have they erected a special building for you?—A. Yes, a special building.

By Hon. Mr. Murphy:

Q. Where is the Ninette Sanitarium?—A. It is between Winnipeg and Brandon; it is a tubercular institution for Manitoba. We shall have 100 beds there very shortly. There is now accommodation for 32 beds and an extension is now being built which will accommodate 62 or 68 more.

[Colonel Alfred T. Thompson.]

By the Chairman:

Q. What proportion of your tubercular cases do you think were tubercular for some considerable time prior to their military experience?—A. That, I think, is impossible to say. We have found that it is exceedingly difficult to diagnose tuberculosis in its early stages. A year ago there was an epidemic of grippe, and following in its train there were a number of cases of tuberculosis. In another section of Canada appeared an epidemic of measles, and following that disease a large number of tubercular cases also developed. These were factors which could not have been foreseen. A change from the ordinary mode of living to barrack life sometimes results in the development of tuberculosis.

Q. Do you know whether a regiment is visited from time to time to ascertain whether any of its men have tuberculosis before they complain?—A. Not so far as I know. Of course the men are paraded before the medical officer in barracks from time to time, and that is the usual way the discovery is made.

Q. Then there is no test that you can subject a battalion of men to, which would indicate whether any of its members had tuberculosis or not?—A. I do not think there is any practical test.

By Hon. Mr. Ross:

Q. Of the returned sick soldiers, how many are insane?—A. Very few. About one in 80 of the sick men who return. If you will permit me, I have some figures here.

The CHAIRMAN: It is now almost one o'clock. We will adjourn until 2.30 p.m.

Witness retired.

Committee adjourned.

The Committee resumed at 2.37 p.m.

Hon. Mr. BELCOURT: Before proceeding with the further examination of Colonel Thompson, I would like to say, Mr. Chairman, so as to have it on the record, that I had been asked by the hon. gentlemen of the Senate who are here to say, in answer to the invitation of the Chairman of this Committee, that we shall be very glad to co-operate with your committee in eliciting the facts with reference to the matter under consideration, with the understanding that when Sir James Loughheed returns to the city we will have a further conference of the members of the Senate Committee and decide whether we shall sit again by ourselves and whether a joint report or a separate report shall be made. In the meantime we will help this committee in getting at the facts. There are present to-day four members out of the seven composing the committee appointed by the Senate. We all know why Senator Loughheed is unable to be present, and Senators Daniels and Thompson will be at the next meeting, and, no doubt, will concur in what has been done to-day.

The CHAIRMAN: The members of the committee have heard what Senator Belcourt has said, and the arrangement he suggests is, I think, satisfactory to them.

Hon. Mr. BELCOURT: Will you, Mr. Chairman, see that the evidence is given to the members of the Senate Committee as soon as published.

The CHAIRMAN: We will see that the seven members of the Senate Committee are treated exactly the same as ourselves, in that and other respects.

The examination of Colonel Thompson continued.

By the Chairman:

Q. Will you, Colonel Thompson, continue your statement with respect to the hospitals under your Board?—A. The orthopaedic part of our work evolved, like every other phase of this great work: We found as we proceeded that there were men coming back who were maimed, who had lost an arm or a leg, or a portion of an arm or a leg, and as the number of these men accumulated the fact was borne in upon the Commission that some means would have to be provided at once to deal with these unfortunates. We accordingly called into conference the very best orthopædists we could get in the country, and submitted the matter to them, and, to a very large extent, acted upon their judgment. That led up to the establishment of what we call our orthopædic centre in Toronto; there we have our own limb factory where we turn out legs, arms, hands and orthopædic apparatus generally.

By Hon. Mr. Murphy:

Q. By "we," do you mean the Hospitals Commission?—A. Yes, that is the work of the Hospitals Commission.

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. Where is that factory?—A. In Toronto. These orthopædists advised that we should concentrate our work in the centre for the treatment of a particular class of cases.

By Brigadier-General Mason:

Q. Have any cases come under your observation where Canadian soldiers have come back fitted with artificial limbs that have been made in England?—A. Yes, there is a place in England where they have 550 beds and where they manufacture these articles, and I suppose some Canadians have been treated there and fitted with limbs; sometimes they come back with limbs that have been made in England which require readjustment, sometimes they are not satisfactory and we have remedied the defect.

Q. It is called the Queen Alexandra Hospital?—A. Yes.

By the Chairman:

Q. Fitting an artificial limb, I understand, takes some months?—A. Yes, when amputation is made, it takes some time before the swelling comes down and the limb hardens, so that it can be used; sometimes it takes six or seven months before you can get a man's stump fitted into the artificial limb. Sometimes in our hospitals in Toronto, and sometimes in England, the patients have to pass some months before they can use their limb freely, and while the limbs are being manufactured and fitted we prefer to have these men in the hospital so that necessary alteration may be made from time to time until the artificial limb fits perfectly. We are going to enlarge our limb factory in Toronto, and put in the Booth Memorial Building.

By Brigadier-General Mason:

Q. In that hospital I speak of in England the patients were assisting in the making of limbs?—A. We may be able to utilize the patients for that purpose also, but up to the present time we have not done so.

Q. They have skilled men to do the work of fitting, etc.?—A. We have a man, Mr. Lecroix, who was in the artificial limb business in the city of Toronto, and we engaged him by the year.

Q. Did you not get there a medical specialist?—A. No.

Q. I was told there is a medical specialist there, who, himself, has two artificial arms, and is able to take measurements and "fit." Is that so?—A. No. I think, perhaps, you are thinking of one gentleman who came to sell us an arm made in the United States, which they claimed had done some wonderful things, but we rather thought they were trick performances. There was a man over there trying to sell an artificial arm, who had both his arms amputated, that arm is known as the "Karns" arm, and is made in the United States. We have an arm of our own. Our artificial limb-maker went to Halifax and made some artificial limbs for a number of unfortunate soldiers who were sent from Jamaica to the front last year, and when they put into Halifax, there were over 100 of them who were badly frozen, owing to exposure to inclement weather on the return journey, and some 20 or 30 of them had amputations, some of them both feet. Their expenses were all paid by the Imperial Government but we sent our own man there, and he fitted them. After a while some of the limbs did not fit as well as they should, and he went down there again and gouged out portions of the limb in order to make it fit better.

By Hon. Mr. Murphy:

Q. Were these men frost-bitten at the front?—A. No, coming up the Atlantic coast.

By the Chairman:

Q. Generally speaking, it is better to have the soldier where the limbs are being made?—A. Yes, that is the idea in having him at our centre. We take the man in the hospital and keep him there until the limb is made, and we keep him there after the limb is made until our experts are satisfied that he has a limb he can work with or walk with, as the case may be.

By Hon. Mr. Belcourt:

Q. Will you tell us what sort of efficiency you hope to give a man in that way?—A. If a man's leg is gone, and sometimes when both legs are amputated, we hope to fit him out so that he will be able to earn a living, unless it is in an occupation where both feet are required.

By Brigadier-General Mason:

Q. In this hospital I visited, the people are very skilful; I saw several cases where the joints had been taken out and the artificial limb was so arranged that the man could make full use of it. They have a printed list of occupations, twenty-four in number, by which men who had lost their arms or legs could earn a living.—A. Our vocational secretary, who is going to testify after I am through, will tell you all that is being done in that regard by our Military Hospitals Commission.

Q. They have had very large experience in the Queen Alexandra Hospital, they have permanently 550 men, and as soon as one man leaves another takes his place. There are 5,000 men waiting admission into that hospital now. When I was there there was a young man in one of these wheel-chairs with both legs cut off almost up to his body, and I saw his picture the other day in a Toronto paper, showing that he has evidently been furnished with a couple of legs; he came from Hamilton.—A. We have all the information we can get from England, France and even from Germany with reference to the treatment of such cases.

By Hon. Mr. Belcourt:

Q. You spoke a few moments ago of some official who is going to give us information in regard to this matter. To whom did you allude?—A. To Mr. Kidner, our Vocational Secretary, who will give you all that information.

Brigadier-General MASON: There are twenty-four distinct sorts of employment that men can make a living at after being furnished with artificial limbs.

By the Chairman:

Q. Do you think that your present equipment is sufficient to take care of all future orthopædic cases, or do you plan to have other centres besides Toronto?—A. That is not finally determined. At present Toronto will be our centre in manufacturing limbs, which is a highly developed branch of industry. There is orthopædic apparatus other than the mere making of limbs, such as braces, which we think we can make in centres other than Toronto. It may be that later on we will manufacture limbs in places other than Toronto.

Brigadier-General MASON: In England they have one central point for orthopædic

cases. The attendants are experts. When I was there, there were about fifty men in the institution requiring to be fitted with artificial limbs. Those who had been furnished with their limb were being inspected and when they were sufficiently expert in the use of them they were passed out. Those who were not, were retained for a longer period.

The WITNESS: We are preparing to do this at the Booth Memorial Building in Toronto, a building taken over from the Salvation Army. We shall there teach our men how to use these legs or arms before they are turned out of the institution.

The CHAIRMAN: Is there anything else you want to ask about the orthopædic work?

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. You have said that the Secretary of the Military Hospitals Commission will explain about the mechanical work?—A. Yes, Mr. Kidner is charged with the educational or vocational department, and I would like to leave that to him if the Committee are willing.

The CHAIRMAN: Now, we come to the nervous and mental cases, such as shell shock and insanity.

By Mr. Middlebro:

Q. Is it your branch that determines into what occupation a man shall go for re-education?—A. Yes.

Q. That is a very important point?—A. I will mention what it is. We have a Board composed of a layman, an educational expert and a medical man. I should say that we do not attempt to educate a man who has not been disabled to a point where he cannot earn his living at his old vocation. In the case of a man disabled from following his former occupation, he passes before the Board composed, as I say, of the vocational officer in each unit, a medical man, and a layman who is preferably a manufacturer, or a man accustomed to the use of machinery and the employment of labour. These three men examine this individual physically, mentally and medically. They make an estimate of his mentality; they make an estimate of his previous experience, and the physician submits a report as to his physical well-being. I am really entrenching on Mr. Kidner's department. We do not scrap information a man may already have had. For instance, in the case of a bricklayer, if that man has had the primary education to build on, we then give him the technical part of his education, to make him a better bricklayer, so that he may become a foreman, or a large or a small contractor. That is the philosophy of our work as exemplified in that particular branch. That is all under Mr. Kidner who is much better acquainted with it than I am.

Q. You are the body which determines the work he shall do?—A. Yes. We do not permit everybody who wishes to be re-educated. We have the final say as to whether we shall make that man a particular artisan.

By Mr. Middlebro:

Q. Supposing that the Board's opinion as to what occupation a man shall go into differs from the man's own opinion?—A. As it sometimes does. For instance, there was one man before the Board, about 45 years of age, who had a very indifferent preliminary education, who wanted the Commission to give him a theological course; he wanted to be a Baptist clergyman. We absolutely refused to undertake to give a man a college course that would cover several years. This is a rare case. Generally speaking a man knows what he wants, and his wishes are generally concurred in.

Q. Are there many who refuse to be educated into any occupation?—A. No, it is the other way. A number want to be re-educated.

Q. Not many refuse?—A. Very few.

[Colonel Alfred T. Thompson.]

Q. Suppose a man said he did not want to go into any occupation at all, that he has his pension?—A. We can do nothing with him; we simply say: All right, the responsibility is on you.

By Hon. Mr. Belcourt:

Q. You are only there to assist these men?—A. We cannot go further than that.

By Mr. Middlebro:

Q. What class of man do you find refuses re-education?—A. Well, the man, who, whether in civil life or military life, is satisfied with his present condition.

By the Chairman:

Q. The man who thinks the public should support him?—A. That type.

The CHAIRMAN: And they are not confined to the Army.

By Hon. Mr. Belcourt:

Q. Have you classified these men?—A. No, it means about $1,000 to the state—

Q. Is there any way of knowing whether they are Canadians or old country people, have you classified them in this way?—A. Yes.

Q. We ought to have that information?—A. We are careful to go into that.

The CHAIRMAN: When we reach the proper person you can ask for that return.

By Mr. Middlebro:

Q. Is it pointed out very clearly to the men that re-education does not diminish their pension?—A. We are careful to point that out.

Q. Do you think that could be made clearer to the men? Would it not be well to have some placard on the wall of the various institutions?—A. Mr. Kidner tells me just now that circulars are being sent out this week advising them of that.

Q. That is very important. Many a man might think he is going to live on the state?—A. Our whole organization converges upon one point, to refit the individual, not for the army, but for civilian life. We stand halfway between the military organization and civilian life.

Q. Are there any of these Boards in each hospital you speak of?—A. In each unit.

Q. What is that?—A. The geographical division.

By Hon. Mr. Belcourt:

Q. Is that the military district?—A. It is almost synonymous for military district although not geographically so. We designate our divisions by the letters of the alphabet instead of by numbers.

By Mr. Sutherland:

Q. Do most of the men appreciate your endeavour to advise them as to the best occupation?—A. A great many are open to advice, and really take it kindly and act upon it. Sometimes you get fellows who will not, and we have to do the best we can with them. Generally speaking our advice is very well received. Sometimes we have to turn them down. For instance, there was a case the other day of a man, a watch-maker previous to entering the war. He was wounded in the ankle. His arms and the rest of his body are quite as good as before, yet he wanted to be given a new trade. In that case we refused because he was quite as able to all intents and purposes, with his pension, to earn his living at his old occupation. It was put up to me and I refused to pass upon it.

Q. What was the result?—He was refused, that is all. He goes on as a watch-maker.

Hon. Mr. MURPHY: And he is in receipt of his pension.

[Colonel Alfred T. Thompson.]

By Brigadier-General Mason:

Q. What occupation did he desire?—A. I have forgotten in that case; I think it was a motor mechanic, or something of that kind.

The CHAIRMAN: Most of the information regarding the re-education of the men will come up when Mr. Kidner comes before us, so that it is the medical side that we want to get from Dr. Thompson.

The WITNESS: The men are examined locally, and then so as to remove the case from any local colour or local influence it is sent up to the Head Office for final consideration.

By Hon. Mr. Belcourt:

Q. Can you tell us the number of men who have returned after passing through your Commission?—A. I am sorry I have not that information here.

Q. I refer to those who have gone back to active service?—A. No, I cannot tell you that, but it is a very small percentage. A very small percentage of those who have returned to Canada have gone back to the front.

By the Chairman:

Q. Of course it is only recently we have had the accommodation for the treatment of the cases?—A. Yes, very recently.

Q. Prior to recent date nearly all the cases that came back here were admittedly cases unfit for further military service?—A. Touching that, the aggravated submarine campaign will make a difference in the number of cases coming to us for treatment. So we have been recently advised.

By Mr. Ross (Middlebro):

Q. You mean the submarine menace?—A. Yes. The submarine menace is going to make a difference in the number of cases we are going to receive for reasons that are obvious. We are going to get a certain number every month, but not as many as we have been receiving.

By the Chairman:

Q. Will you now take up the treatment of nervous and mental cases?—A. These are the most distressing cases we have to treat. The human organism was never before subjected to the same series of concussions as it has been in this war, consequently new pathological conditions have arisen and new diseases have developed. Although cases of shell shock have occurred in previous wars, they were never known to occur to the same extent as in the present great war. Shell shocks are the result, generally speaking, of the continuous bombardment to which men are subjected in the trenches.

By Brigadier-General Mason:

Q. Much larger shells are now employed?—A. Yes. The terrific explosions tend to shatter the men's nerves after a time.

Q. Does the injury consist in a disturbance of the brain?—A. We do not know, that has not yet been determined.

By the Chairman:

Q. What is the disturbance which takes place in the human organism?—A. The world's best psychologists are studying that question and have not yet reached a conclusion. One theory is that the filaments which connect the brain cells and which carry energy from the brain to the muscles are so delicately organized that the tremendous concussion causes a dislocation of the thin fibre or filaments which connects these cells.

By Hon. Mr. Belcourt:

Q. It is really a nervous impairment?—A. Yes, due to a certain dislocation.

[Colonel Alfred T. Thompson.]

By the Chairman:

Q. Yet physically that man may look the picture of health?—A. Yes.

By Hon. Mr. Belcourt:

Q. And one result may be the impairment of the functions of the stomach, resulting for instance in indigestion?—A. The cause is dislocation of the means by which energy is transported from the brain to the different organs of the body.

By the Chairman:

Q. Does that involve mental and physical deterioration?—A. Not necessarily mental. I have been surprised to find in the case of many of these men that although this tremendous dislocation occurs, the mental processes seem to be intact.

By Hon. Mr. Belcourt:

Q. There is often great mental depression?—A. Yes, but the sufferers are quite capable of continuity of thought and logical expression.

By the Chairman:

Q. Do you think a man who has been exposed to a shell shock loses his power of resistance to evil influences? For instance, a man who before he was shocked has sufficient power to refuse to take liquor, would that man's power of resistance be weakened?—A. I think there is no doubt about it. I think his power of resistance is tremendously reduced.

Q. In other words, the morale of the men is reduced?—A. Absolutely.

Q. And the man who, prior to shell shock, was quite able to resist certain deteriorating influences, after receiving the shock loses that power of resistance?—A. His power of resistance is reduced, but he does not lose it completely.

By Hon. Mr. Belcourt:

Q. The mental disturbance persists for some time?—A. For a long time, despite the fact that the man looks healthy. At the falling or overturning of a chair the man may collapse or crumple right up. He sometimes acts the child. His unbalanced mental condition is shown by all sorts of hysterical manifestations, and he becomes a pitiable object. Yet such a man may be in a perfect physical condition so far as outward appearances go. A great many of these cases are hopeful as far as prognoses are concerned; they are recovering, not rapidly, but continuously, in the proper environment.

By Brigadier-General Mason:

Q. Such cases require long and careful treatment?—A. Long and careful treatment. It requires the highest form of skill to treat these men.

By Hon. Mr. McCurdy:

Q. Is there any particular type of man that is more susceptible to the influence of shell shock than others?—A. As far as my observation goes, the more highly organized nervous systems are the soonest affected. The more phlegmatic can stand shell shock and exposure better. We have a gentleman who is making a special study of these cases for the Commission. He is highly qualified and eminently fitted to give you his views.

Hon. Mr. BELCOURT: You are doing pretty well, Doctor.

The WITNESS: Thank you. I will be glad to have the gentleman to whom I refer come before you and give testimony if you wish.

By Hon. Mr. Murphy:

Q. The gentleman to whom you refer has been studying these cases of shell shock?—A. Yes, all these mental cases.

[Colonel Alfred T. Thompson.]

By the Chairman:

Q. Tell us what the Hospitals Commission does for these nervous and mental cases when they come to you?—A. Permit me to say there are three types: The shell shock, the "border-land" case, who is physically perhaps quite all right, but mentally unbalanced, and the insane. These are the three types of cases we have to treat.

By Hon. Mr. Belcourt:

Q. Have you got statistics of these cases?—A. There are statistics, but we have not been in operation long enough to gather statistics that are of very great value. That takes considerable time.

By Hon. Mr. Murphy:

Q. It must be difficult, I should say, to furnish them with accuracy?—A. It is, because the cases blend, particularly the "border-land" and the insane.

By Brigadier-General Mason:

Q. Would a man become insane if he had not been properly treated?—A. Oh no, he would have to be very badly treated. We found, as a matter of fact, that in all the cases we have studied that the men have, I think, had tendencies to insanity, before they were enlisted; many of them had histories of epilepsy, and a few had histories of inherited tendency to go insane, it is quite understandable.

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. Do you get the family history for the men who come back?—A. Yes. We do when we are sufficiently interested to go after it, and in these cases we always do go after it because we want to know as much as possible about the individual, and that is what we have discovered; quite a few of them had displayed tendencies that would cause them to become insane if they had remained civilians.

Q. Are the greater number of men who are insane men of epileptic tendencies or men with a family history which showed insanity in it?—A. Yes.

Q. Is that condition found in normal men, men in a normal state of health?—A. Yes, and it is shown in cases of shell shock, where the control of the muscular system will be lost, and the mentally remain.

By Hon. Mr. Belcourt:

Q. It must produce a corresponding mental depression, because if the conscience and mentality are not impaired, the moral feeling must be proportionately depressed?—A. It would have a corresponding depression which makes a man more or less pessimistic and sometimes morose, but put him under proper environment, and it is surprising how he responds, and he becomes more or less an optimist; they respond quickly. The point I make is that the majority of cases that have developed insanity have the taint. Here is another kind of case and it represents the minority, that is where you have syphilitics, men with syphilis which developed into insanity, men who start out in life with the taint in their system, it is there to the end.

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. Without impairment?—A. Generally speaking, that is our experience, but I wish to say we have not observed a very large number of cases yet.

Q. You might tell us what you do with these other ones, by way of reparation?—A. I may premise my remarks touching the treatment with the statement that we have not yet developed our hospitals system for these particular cases, but we hope that in a very short time at one or two of these depots we shall have the proper facilities to do this. At the present time we have the shell-shocks and border-land cases and a few insanes waiting to be finally placed at Cobourg, Ont., where we took over a Hospital that belongs to the Ontario Government; we have those cases there, we segregate them in that Institute as far as possible. That is to say, one floor is given to "shell-shocks," and another floor is given to "borderland" cases, and when any man develops insanity to the point when we think we cannot treat him there, we send him to the Provincial Asylum, in that province from which he came.

By Brigadier-General Mason:

Q. Who are in charge of these General Hospitals?—A. Men who are thoroughly qualified, and we have all the means for treating them too, it is probably the best equipped hospital, in Canada, for the treatment of this type of cases.

By Hon. Mr. Murphy:

Q. Where did you get the man who is in charge from?—A. He is an Ontario man.

Q. I thought you said you had a number of men?—A. There are two, and I have the man in my office, who is quite a specialist in this work.

Q. Who is he?—A. Dr. Captain Farrar.

By the Chairman:

Q. You spoke of another gentleman a moment ago whom you thought would be able to give valuable evidence?—A. That is the man. You asked me about treatment of these cases. There are three different kinds of cases which we are now called upon to treat, shell-shock, insane, and border-land. With regard to the treatment we found in our experience that the use of continuous baths of the type shown on the diagram, which I will hand in for the information of the Committee, was the most efficient form of treatment. The water in the bath is kept at an even temperature, the men being left there for a considerable length of time.

By Hon. Mr. Belcourt:

Q. That induces sleep, does it?—A. Yes, it has a soothing effect upon the whole nervous system; we do not permit him to sleep in the bath, an attendant is standing there all the time, watching his pulse and taking the temperature of the water all the time. Then we give him an electric bath, that is really a cabinet bath heated by electricity, as shown by this diagram (diagram produced) and beside it here, (showing diagram) you have a needle bath, and the spray bath.

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. Is that the "Violet Rays"?—A. No, it is all water. We use hot and cold water alternately. That is the method of treatment with massage, and we give them plenty of fresh air, sunlight and genial surroundings, which are productive of the most excellent results.

By Hon. Mr. Belcourt:

Q. No drugs?—A. Very, very few. Sometimes a soporific to get him to sleep, that is all, and perhaps a tonic for his appetite, but the drug treatment plays a very small part in the cure of these cases, and our experience is that they respond splendidly. I figure that possibly they should be able to return to good health a very large percentage of these men, I would not like to say how many, but between 75 and 90 per cent, of shell-shocks we will return to good health.

By the Chairman:

Q. Is a man presumably recovered from shell-shock, and who has returned to civil life, subject to break-down from a sudden stroke?—A. That is what we do not know, because the human has never before been subject to this particular strain.

By Brigadier-General Mason:

Q. Whilst I was in France, I was invited down to see a medical exhibit of a course of treatment for cases arising from shell-shock, it was an electric treatment. There was one man being treated who appeared as though he were afflicted with palsy, he could not keep still for an instant, and he was completely cured by the treatment—

[Colonel Alfred T. Thompson.]

I have forgotten the name of the doctor. There was another man who could not bend his knees, as a result of shell-shock, and there were other cases not so serious, all of which were completely cured?—A. We have those electric baths, there is nothing of that kind published that we do not get.

Q. This is rather a new treatment?—A. I will be glad to have the name of the doctor to whom you refer, and to look into the matter.

By the Chairman:

Q. I suppose you have correspondents in the Old Country, in England and in France, who are giving you all the information possible along these lines?—A. Not exactly that but we subscribe to the best medical journals, and get all the information we can from them.

Brigadier General MASON: It was in Paris that I witnessed this new treatment I have spoken of, at the invitation of the doctor who administered it. That is quite new apparently. I think Col. Thompson might get into communication with this doctor.

By Mr. McCurdy:

Q. To what extent are patients suffering from shell-shock returned to active service at the front?—A. Not at all. I would not advise any man to return. I never knew a man—I did know of one but he only lasted about a fortnight after he got there.

Q. You are familiar with the experience in the British service in that regard, as well as from your observations in Canada?—A. I am not as familiar, as a matter of fact, with what they are doing in Britain, but so far as my own experience goes, I do not think one per cent will be able to return.

By the Chairman:

Q. Do you know of any coming back, regarding themselves as well, and developing shell-shock after they have been back a while?—A. No, not unless he had symptoms of shell-shock before he came here.

Q. What is done with the gassed man?—A. The gassed man usually ends up in one of our tubercular institutions, not necessarily with tuberculosis, but with troubles that simulate tuberculosis. We very often send such men to the care of these institutions.

By Hon. Mr. Belcourt:

Q. That is the treatment that suits his case?—A. Yes.

By the Chairman:

Q. Is the man badly gassed likely to be a victim of tubercular trouble?—A. I think he is. The blood supply to the lungs has been interfered with, and because of that he is more liable to be inoculated with tuberculosis or develop latent tuberculosis.

Q. Are you able to restore to physical health a badly gassed man?—A. Many recover. It depends upon the amount of lung tissue destroyed. If too many of the air cells in the lung have been destroyed the prognosis is not good. The prognosis in any gassed case depends upon that. If the destruction is not too great the prognosis is good.

By Hon. Mr. Belcourt:

Q. What happens to the lung cells, what does the gas cause?—A. As far as the studies have carried the profession the result is this: Chlorine gas has been chiefly used, and the chemical effect that takes place, that is as to how much of the chlorine is absorbed, is not clear. The gassing has the effect of causing a gangrenous condition.

Q. Does it result in a fibrosis?—A. Yes, the fibrosis occurs on the lung, a scar forms, and a cavity collapses and fills up.

Q. The lung tissue is all gone?—A. Exactly, and of course it can never be replaced. That is what happens. It is more of a mechanical irritant to the mucous surfaces of the air cells which irritates them to the point where they swell up, the blood supply is cut off, and consequently gangrene takes place. Then they break down, and the person coughs up the broken down matter. The fibrosis then occurs, the scar closes, and the individual goes on with that much less lung.

Q. Consequently he dies?—A. Not necessarily, if he has enough lung left he may go on.

Q. Can he go on with one lung?—A. Yes, it depends upon how many of the air cells have been absolutely destroyed. They can never be replaced.

Q. With a whole lung fibrosis would his fitness be impaired?—A. Oh, yes; after all, one lung is gone. But nature is wonderfully provident, and it is surprising how the other lung would develop to meet the condition.

By Mr. Middlebro:

Q. He would be more predisposed to take consumption, would he not?—A. He would not mix in with the tubercular patients, but the treatment is practically the same.

Q. Gassed cases are segregated in the tubercular institutions?—A. Yes.

Q. He would be more apt to contract tuberculosis?—A. Yes, for the reasons I have given you. The blood supply is not as good as it was.

Q. Would you send him to a sanatorium?—A. He would not mix with the tubercular patients, but would be placed under a skilled man.

Q. In the same building?—A. Not necessarily in the same building, but in the same vicinity.

By Hon. Mr. Belcourt:

Q. Is there any more danger of contracting tuberculosis in a sanatorium than elsewhere?—A. No, not if the sputum is taken care of. That is a scientific fact, but the public do not know that.

Mr. MIDDLEBRO: That is what I referred to.

By the Chairman:

Q. You have finished with the shell-shock cases. What do you do with your borderland cases?—A. In those cases we do everything possible to get them back to a sane view of things. They are not hopeless. Many of these men are of a low mentality and never will be anything else, perhaps never were. They can be brought back to the point they were at before the war. To do that, Mr. Kidner will be able to tell you what is being done. We have occupational training; we give them things to take their minds off themselves, try and give them wholesome occupations, and by games, and exercise, and food and rest, and talk, everything is done to bring these people back to a normal view of things.

Q. You endeavour to have institutions of this character well lighted and as attractive as possible?—A. That is a prime necessity. You must have the environment cheerful and the attendants sympathetic, but we get good results.

By Hon. Mr. Belcourt:

Q. What are the manifestations of this condition? Do they have all sorts of delusions?—A. They have almost any amount of delusions.

Q. Not one particular delusion?—A. There is one particular kind when the patient is a paranoic, where he has visions of grandeur or hallucinations. We do not hope for much from these cases.

Q. There is no particular delusion due to shell-shock?—A. No, the man's mentality is quite clear.

Q. But in these borderland cases?—A. In the borderland cases there is no particular hallucination or delusion. He may not be very far off at all. He has peculiar ideas.

[Colonel Alfred T. Thompson.]

Brig.-Gen. MASON: Loss of memory.

The WITNESS: They are the ne'er-do-weels in every community. Perhaps they will develop a grouch against civilization, or some particular mental taint which prevents them from fitting in in the social fabric. These men went to England, were put through a stiff course of training, and developed this complaint. Not many get to the trenches. They are mentally warped. We do what we can for them. The best we can do is to turn them out mental defects.

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. Do you say this type was practically a borderland case before he went over?—A. Quite. He might have been an epileptic. We were told in December to prepare for 4,000 cases, and of that 4,000 there were 50 insane and epileptics. That is one in 80 out of 4,000 invalids.

Q. Will you repeat that statement?—A. Sir George Perley cabled in December to make ready to receive active treatment cases from England, and in those 4,000 he gave the percentage of tuberculars and insanes, and the insanes and epileptics combined made 50 in 4,000. One in eighty, that will perhaps be a very fair proportion.

By Mr. Middlebro:

Q. Of the two classes?—A. Yes, the epileptics and the insanes are closely allied.

By Hon. Mr. Belcourt:

Q. These cases are not very much worse than before they went?—A. They are practically no different from what they were before. Take an epileptic; the examining officer has not the means of going into his mental condition.

Q. It is not the life in the camps of England that would make his condition worse?—A. Possibly, it depends on his outlook. They get a grouch, some of them, and that seems to prevent them from becoming fit soldiers.

Q. The open air life and the good food and exercise in the camps should improve his condition?—A. It does with the normal man, but with the man who is abnormal it does not always operate that way.

By the Chairman:

Q. You might tell us about the insane?—A. There is not much to tell in that regard. If insanity develops to the point where the case seems hopeless, we retain him in the hospital until we are satisfied with the fact. Then we get into communication with the authorities of the asylum in the province from which the individual comes, and send him back there.

Q. Have there been many cases of insanity where you have reason to believe the man was perfectly sound when he went to the front?—A. No. If you trace up the case you will find that the man might reasonably have been expected to have gone insane anywhere; because he was a syphilitic or alcoholic subject. Alcohol and syphilis are the two great factors in insanity that is not altogether of an hereditary type, and even if you trace the hereditary insanity back far enough you would probably find its inception was due to either of the two influences mentioned.

By Hon. Mr. Belcourt:

Q. Would you express the opinion that these two classes of cases should receive the same consideration at the hands of the nation?—A. These men break down before they get to the front. But what are you going to do with such cases?

By the Chairman:

Q. Have you any idea what number of soldiers become insane, either in France or in England, before they are ever subjected to the hardships of actual warfare?—A. I have no statistics that will show that.

[Colonel Alfred T. Thompson.]

Q. Have you any impression that a considerable number of the soldiers become insane without having been subjected to actual war conditions?—A. Very few of those we have to do with ever saw the front at all.

Q. The war then is not primarily responsible for this insanity?—A. It is not. A great many cases—I am speaking now of the hopelessly insane—would have become insane anyway.

By Hon. Mr. Belcourt:

Q. Is that clearly borne out by the statistics furnished from England and France?—A. We have not got medical statistics from the other side.

Q. It might be advisable to get them.—A. We are doing that now. We are now co-ordinating our work with the work over there, but it takes time to do that. We shall have that information eventually, we are trying to obtain it, but the evidence I am giving now is derived from a study of the cases I have seen in Canada.

By the Chairman:

Q. Without being able to furnish definite statistics you are of the opinion that the vast majority of the men who are insane, either had a predilection to insanity or are the victims of alcoholism or syphilis?—A. Yes.

Q. And that actual work in the trenches was responsible for very few cases of insanity.—A. Very few. It is responsible for practically all the case of shell shock—I should say to an extent of 99 per cent.

By Hon. Mr. Belcourt:

Q. In the case of tubercular patients, what percentage would you say?—A. A remarkably small percentage of our men who have developed tuberculosis ever saw the trenches.

Q. Let me put it in another way: How many men in the trenches have developed tuberculosis?—A. I would not care to venture a statement as to the men who are engaged in the trenches.

Q. But does not trench life provoke tuberculosis?—A. It does.

Q. By reason of exposure to wet and cold?—A. Yes, the immersion of the men's legs in the terribly cold slime they have over there.

By Mr. Ross (Middlesex):

Q. Could you tell us how many insane patients you have in the hospital at the present time?—A. Yes.

By the Chairman:

Q. State how many there are in Canada at the present time?—A. I cannot do that, because when cases of undoubted insanity develop, we send them to the Provincial Asylums. I think there are about 25 insane cases at the present time, but we have sent quite a few to the Provincial Asylums.

Q. Each province makes provision for its own insane?—A. Yes.

Q. When a man becomes hopelessly insane, you pass him out and he then comes under provincial care?—A. Yes.

Q. He ceases then to be under your supervision?—A. Yes.

By Hon. Mr. Belcourt:

Q. But still he is a pensioner?—A. Yes.

Q. Who gets the man's pension?—A. I understand that the rate which is paid to the Provincial Asylums is about $1 per day. The difference between that sum and the man's maximum pension (which is about $480) inures to the Federal Treasury.

By the Chairman:

Q. That is, if he has no dependents?—A. Yes, if he has no dependents. In the case of the man who has no dependents, the difference between the sum paid to the Asylum authorities and what is awarded to him as pension, reverts to the public treasury.

By Mr. Middlebro:

Q. How many soldiers have been reported insane since the beginning of the war?—A. I am sorry I cannot give that information at present. We might be able to procure it for you later.

Q. About 400,000 men have been enlisted, and whether they have all gone overseas or not does not matter for the purposes of comparison. Do you think the proportion of insane is larger among the enlisted men than among a similar proportion of the population in civil life?—A. Our information leads us to believe that the difference is very slight. The present population of our Institution at Cobourg is: Insane from overseas, 35; from the Camps, 21. That would be 56.

Q. That is all you have?—A. Yes, so you see we have not so very many of them.

By the Chairman:

Q. Some of your "borderland" cases will perhaps become insane?—A. A small percentage of them.

By Mr. Middlebro:

Q. The number you have given is not the total number of insane from the Canadian Expeditionary Force in Asylums in Canada to-day?—A. No, it is the total number in the Cobourg Institution at the present time. We have passed others on to the Provincial Asylums.

Q. Will you get statistics showing the total number of insane cases?—A. I think you had better apply to the Director General of Medical Service (Colonel Potter) for the required information. He will be able very shortly to give the number of men returned from overseas as insane.

By Brigadier General Mason:

Q. I suppose a good many of the cases are hopeless?—A. Not necessarily hopeless. Still, there are quite a few that are hopeless. Might I be permitted to add that with regard to rheumatics I omitted to mention this morning there are a good many men with rheumatic tendencies. We treat these men at St. Catharines, we have a hospital there near some baths, and we have another at Winnipeg; we also have our eye on certain hotels and hospitals, near hot springs, in case we have a considerable number of these cases to deal with.

Q. Are there a considerable number of our men rendered incapable of military service by rheumatism?—A. No, I cannot say.

Q. Is there a large percentage of the total, because we hear a great deal about rheumatism among our men in the Old Country?—A. When Sir Sam Hughes came back from Europe early last fall, he told Sir James Loughheed and me to get ready to receive 1,500 to 2,500 rheumatics, and we scurried all over the country, from Caledonia Springs to the hot springs in British Columbia, expecting to have that number to provide for, but we did not get 200. A number of these cases must have recovered in England.

Q. Is there any medical relationship and——A. There is in the lay mind, but scientifically there is not. There is a type of rheumatism called gonorrheal rheumatism which it is exceptionally difficult to treat, but it is not rheumatism at all.

By Hon. Mr. Beaubien:

Q. Do you know Dr. Ross? Have you obtained any information as to all the new methods of curing these cases in baths?—A. I haven't, Senator, but I shall be glad to get his suggestions.

By the Chairman:

Q. You might tell us what your hospital treatment is to-day with respect to venereal diseases.

Hon. Mr. BELCOURT: I have some questions that I think ought to go before that.
[Colonel Alfred T. Thompson.]

By Hon. Mr. Belcourt:

Q. Have you any statistics about venereal diseases in these men?—A. No, Senator, for this reason: you will notice that in the remarks I have made I have said that our statistics are limited; we have not been at this work long enough to have statistics about that.

Q. You know that men have been passed for service who showed signs of venereal disease?—A. I would say that should not be.

Q. Would it be your opinion that those who came back with that disease might have contracted it over there?—A. You can quite understand that where a man was exposed to the poison of syphilis, that exposure may have been before enlistment, and yet he may have been accepted in perfect good faith, as far as the man himself and the physician are concerned.

Q. It may have been inoculated, but the germ was undeveloped?—A. No, it does not develop very quickly.

Q. You have no statistics on that point?—A. Not definite. Venereal cases should be segregated. We have an arrangement with the Military Hospitals, and they segregate them in their hospitals. If such statistics are available, I think the Acting Director-General, who is going to testify, will be able to give you that information.

Q. Do you think that is a very important question?—A. Yes.

Q. Did you see a report that was made last year by a committee in England from which it appears that the disease is very bad?—A. Yes, I saw that.

Q. You would conclude, from reading that report, that the matter is of prime importance?—A. Absolutely, but many of these venereal cases, gonorrheal diseases, recover in England before they come back here. Syphilitics do not recover so quickly: they may never recover.

By the Chairman:

Q. Do a large proportion of the gonorrheal diseases develop into syphilitic?—A. They are absolutely different diseases.

By Hon. Mr. Belcourt:

Q. They are very infectious and contagious??—A. Gonorrhea is contagious and infectious.

Q. If you have any statistics or information upon that subject, will you give it to the Committee?—A. Will you be good enough to ask Colonel Potter, who, I think, will be able to give you some information? I will also endeavour to get that information. We have not the means of treating these cases in our hospitals and we send them, by arrangement, to the militia or base military hospitals.

By the Chairman:

Q. And that base hospital is not under your control?—A. No, that is under the control of the officer of the district.

Q. The military base hospital takes care, if I understand rightly, of the men in the Canadian Expeditionary Force, or is that the Overseas Force? Does it take care of the returned soldiers?—A. You mean the Military Hospitals?

Q. The Military Base Hospitals?—A. They are not under our control at all.

By Hon. Mr. Belcourt:

Q. What cases do they look after?—A. They look after the ordinary cases that develop in the camp.

Q. You mean venereal diseases?—A. They look after all venereal cases.

Q. And of all sorts of diseases?—A. Yes, they are regular Military Hospitals.

[Colonel Alfred T. Thompson.]

By Hon. Mr. Murphy:

Q. What do you mean by that? You say this Military Hospitals Commission has for its function the looking after invalided soldiers?—A. No, the Military Hospitals look after all the soldiers who have been enlisted, and who, during training, break down or require surgical or medical treatment, like the one in Toronto.

Q. You have just mentioned a certain class of cases under your purview which might be transferred to them?—A. We have an arrangement with them, by which, if they have acute cases, they pass them over to us, and if we have a certain class of cases we transfer them to their hospitals; there is a working arrangement between us.

Q. Could not that all be done by one hospital?

Hon. Mr. BELCOURT: Shouldn't it be done by one?—A. You see, when the army was being mobilized and there were 300,000 enlisted, their hospitals were filled up and they did not have room in them for returned soldiers.

Q. Could they not have secured other hospitals?—A. Perhaps they could. Now that the army has been enlisted, arrangements have been provided whereby greater co-ordination of these services will be brought into effect.

Q. How many of these other military hospitals are there?—A. I am not sure, Colonel Potter will be able to tell you.

By Hon. Mr. Belcourt:

Q. Have you considered the advisability of treating these venereal diseases by themselves, having one special hospital for these special cases alone?—A. Yes, but there is this objection. Generally speaking, a man does not want to admit that he is a victim of venereal disease by going into a venereal hospital particularly so called. I quite agree that that would be the best way to deal with them.

Q. But there is the community besides to be considered.—A. The civilian hospitals deal with this question in this way. They set apart a ward which they call their venereal ward. When a man enters a civilian ward, the ordinary man does not know what he has, but the medical men know. I think, having in mind all the facts, that is the only way it could be dealt with efficiently. If you had only one hospital you would find very many objections because it would earmark the men.

By Mr. Middlebro:

Q. Can they be treated just as well in the segregated part of the general hospital?—A. I think so.

Q. Would they be a danger to the rest of the patients?—A. They segregate them absolutely. They are in the same building, but you would not know it.

Q. It gives a man a chance to recover?—A. Exactly, in the treatment of this disease that is a factor.

By Hon. Mr. Beaubien:

Q. Do these diseases require long treatment?—A. Gonorrhea? No, not very long treatment. Syphilis does.

Q. Days or months?—A. For gonorrhea, from six weeks to two months.

By the Chairman:

Q. Do a man's pay and allowances go on when he is suffering from a disease which is due to his own indiscretion?—A. I think they do, but they can be stopped.

By Brig. Gen. Mason:

Q. Is he confined to the hospital?—A. Col. Potter could answer that.

By Hon. Mr. Belcourt:

Q. Have you an absolute cure for syphilis?—A. I think salversan is, if properly administered, "606" as it is called.

[Colonel Alfred T. Thompson.]

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. You are with the Military Hospitals Commission?—A. Yes, sir.

By Brig. Gen. Mason:

Q. I was going to ask what is a military hospital as distinguished from another hospital. In Bulletin No. 2 of the Military Hospitals Commission it is stated as follows:—

“1. That a Commission, hereafter to be called the ‘Military Hospitals and Convalescent Homes Commission,’ the short title of which shall be the ‘Military Hospitals Commission’ be appointed to deal with the provision of Hospital accommodation and Military Convalescent Homes in Canada, for Officers, Non-Commissioned Officers, and Men of the Canadian Expeditionary Force who return invalided from the front, and for Officers, Non-Commissioned Officers, and Men invalided while on active service in Canada, Bermuda or elsewhere.”

What is a military hospital? If a man doing duty in Canada gets sick, is he taken to a convalescent home or to a military hospital?—A. If he is in camp in Canada he is put in a camp hospital or sent to one of the base hospitals.

Q. What is done with a man invalided while on active service in Canada?—A. He primarily goes to the military hospital, and then he is transferred to the convalescent home where he convalesces. We have not been in the active treatment line for any length of time. We have been in the convalescent business.

By Hon. Mr. Belcourt:

Q. The active treatment branch is merely an extension?—A. For cases coming from overseas because of the great pressure there.

By Brigadier-General Mason:

Q. I was referring to a man invalided on active service in Canada?—A. If he were doing duty in Canada he would be put into the military hospital. When he began to convalesce he would be sent to us.

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. You are with the Military Hospitals Commission?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And are you and Colonel Sharples the heads of that Commission?—A. Colonel Sharples is the Officer Commanding the Military Hospitals Commission command and I am the Medical Superintendent of the Commission.

Q. You necessarily have to see everything that goes on in these hospitals?—A. I should.

Q. Is there, in your opinion, sufficient accommodation at the present time for Canadian wounded soldiers?—A. In Canada?

Q. Yes, if they should come back, or have come back?—A. We have ample accommodation for any active treatment cases when they come back. We have about three thousand beds ready now in Canada for these active treatment cases regarding which I have been attempting to tell you. We have ample accommodation for tubercular soldiers of whom we have some seven hundred in our hospitals, and we have made arrangements for a number of beds to take care of almost any influx that may come.

Q. According to your statement, even were all the Canadians who are now wounded in England to come back for treatment in the various hospitals, is there accommodation enough in Canada for them now?—A. No. The Prime Minister said there were 70,000 casualties in the Canadian forces in England, and that 39,000 of those would not return to the front.

[Colonel Alfred T. Thompson.]

Q. I am just talking about the convalescents that should come over, not the men who are so seriously injured that they cannot be moved. If these were to come back now at the rate they have been coming would there be sufficient accommodation at the present time?—A. There would be for the active treatment cases and the tuberculars, but we might be short on convalescents, because they were being sent back very rapidly.

Q. Do you hope to have sufficient now?—A. Absolutely.

Q. In what time?—A. Well, from a fortnight to a month, perhaps three weeks. From the information we have in regard to the number of ships that may be at the disposal of the British Government, we expect never to be cramped again for beds.

Q. You consider at the present time that your accommodation is quite adequate or that it will be quite adequate when the rush comes again?—A. Yes. We have not a doubt of that now.

Q. In your work are you thrown in contact with a Colonel Marlow? You have read the statements he has made?—A. I know him. I have read some of his statements.

Q. In what connection do you work with him, you and Colonel Sharples?—A. Well, we are not connected with him at all; he is the A.D.M.S.

Q. Has he nothing to do with your branch of the service at all?—A. No.

Q. Who would be his superior officer?—A. The Director General of Medical Services.

Q. Then, when he has made these charges which have been seen in all the papers, is he talking about something that is not connected with his branch of the service at all when he refers to the Military Hospitals Commission?—A. Yes, he would have nothing to do with the Military Hospitals Commission—except, that is not quite right; he has in this way. Perhaps I might be permitted——

Q. I would like you to tell the committee?—A. I will tell you just how he is connected. He is not directly connected, but indirectly in this way. There is the Canadian Army Medical Corps in charge of the Director General of Medical Services, who has his assistant directors in the various military divisions throughout Canada, and the Assistant Director—the A.D.M.S. as he is popularly known—names the members of the Army Medical Corps, from which corps his staff, the Military Hospitals Commission, and the camps, and the medical men who go overseas are supplied. When the Military Hospitals Commission took over its work, the Order in Council empowered them to use any branch of the Federal Government to carry on their work. They asked for certain medical men from the Canadian Army Medical Corps to do certain work in their hospitals. In some cases they were seconded from the Medical Branch to the Military Hospitals Commission. In Toronto they were not seconded, consequently those doing the work for the Military Hospitals Commission in Toronto were under and continued to be under Col. Marlow, who is the A.D.M.S. there. Therefore Col. Marlow was directly responsible for the work under him in that division.

Q. In Toronto?—A. Yes, and the district of which Toronto is the centre.

Q. Therefore, that is the only district he can speak of?—A. I believe so.

Q. I want to be quite fair with you and the committee. I have a newspaper article here which apparently emanates from Dr. Marlow, but as to that I cannot say. However, the article says (reads):—

“Thousands of disabled Canadian soldiers who are unfit for further service at the front but who have sufficiently recovered from their wounds to permit of their return to Canada, are being detained in Britain because the Military Hospitals Commission of Canada has failed to provide the necessary accommodation in the Dominion for the care of the wounded, and because adequate arrangements have not been made for the return of these men to civil life.”

I want you to make it clear to the committee to what extent that statement is true because the public have a right to know the facts?—A. The statement is not at all true

[Colonel Alfred T. Thompson.]

We have arrangements on foot for the provision of 10,000 beds in Canada at this time. We have been in constant communication with Sir George Perley and from time to time have been making preparations to furnish beds for these men when they return. Of course, you understand that a hospital is not like Jonah's gourd, it does not grow up over-night. It takes time to provide the necessary accommodation.

Q. I understand. All I am trying to do is to ascertain what is true and what is not?—A. The fact is this: never at any time have we been short of beds for the men they sent from England.

Q. You say that every man sent from England up to date has been taken care of?—A. Yes, he has been taken care of.

By Hon. Mr. Belcourt:

Q. And there is accommodation to spare?—A. Yes. It is only fair to say this: Sometimes when these shiploads would come, and they did come in shiploads, if we did not have all the beds that were required at the moment, the men would be permitted to go to their own homes for a week or so.

Q. Anyway, when they were ready for treatment you were ready to receive them?—A. We were ready to receive them. So far as I know, not a single Canadian soldier has suffered because he did not have a bed to return to when he came to Canada. That is the broad statement I make.

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. Dr. Marlow, or whoever it is, is speaking of the Toronto District. You say the statement he makes is not correct?—A. He is speaking of the Toronto District of which he himself is Director. No, I believe the statement is not correct.

Q. Then you say the statement is not correct so far as the rest of the Dominion is concerned?—A. Yes.

Q. Did you see Dr. Marlow's report?—A. To the Minister?

Q. Yes, he made a report, did he not?—A. If he did, I have not seen it. May I be permitted to say that when Colonel Marlow was asked by General Hughes to make a report, the former wrote to me asking if I would have any objection to his visiting any of the hospitals under the Military Hospitals Commission. I immediately wrote to him saying that to my mind this was part of one great work, and I would be glad to have him see the hospitals and report on them and make any suggestions he pleased.

Q. Did he visit the hospitals?—A. He did.

Q. Did he visit them all?—A. I think so, I did not see his report.

Q. You did not see his report?—A. No.

Q. But you know such a report has been sent in?—A. Yes.

Q. He told you that?—A. Yes.

Q. It was sent to the Minister of Militia, I take it?—A. I believe so.

By Brigadier General Mason:

Q. Why was the distinction made in the case of the Toronto District? Other districts were furnished with medical officers by the Hospitals Commission, Colonel Marlow himself speaks of it. The statement is made that the Army Medical Corps furnishes officers for the Hospitals Commission?—A. Yes.

Q. Except in the case of the 2nd District?—A. I did not make myself clear on that point. Generally speaking they do furnish the officers, but in some instances they did not.

Q. Not in No. 2 District. They did not second the Doctors that were attending those hospitals, I wonder why?—A. The answer we got was that they were needed for other duties.

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. What is your total accommodation of beds?—A. We have in convalescent Homes, 2,955, in Sanatoria, 620. Then we have a large number of beds that are being prepared to receive the patients when they return from time to time.

[Colonel Alfred T. Thompson.]

Q. Do I understand that 2,955 and 620 beds, is your total accomodation now of all kinds?—A. No, that gives the number of beds in the Convalescent Homes and in the Sanatoria. Then we have 2,139 other beds that are being prepared for the active treatment cases.

Q. Does that include any of the eight classes which you have enumerated?—A. No, there are still other beds.

Q. Give me the number of those, please?—A. 1,200.

Q. For what?—A. For convalescents.

Q. But you have already given us 2,955 beds for convalescents?—A. These are beds that are being prepared at Whitby. There are 600 beds that can be occupied there, and are being occupied at the present time. In three months we shall have 600 more.

Q. I would like you to give to the Committee to-morrow morning the total number of beds you have available in the event of 12,000 men being ready to come to Canada to-morrow?—A. We have 10,863 beds.

Q. But I mean beds ready for use?—A. In a short time we shall have them ready for use.

Q. When will they be ready, in three or four weeks?—A. Mr. Scammel says they can be got ready as fast as we need them. For instance, 300 beds in the Vancouver General Hospital can be got ready in 90 days. At New Westminster, 300 beds can be got ready in 60 days from the time we notify them. Those in charge of these institutions are responsible people; they have the hospital accommodation, and all they want is time to procure the necessary equipment.

By Hon. Mr. Belcourt:

Q. You have given us the total number of beds which could be made available in two or three weeks. Now give us the number that are immediately available?—A. We have 2,000 beds available for active treatment cases to-day. In answer to Mr. Pardee's question I would say that if these beds were needed inside of 90 days we could have 10,000 ready.

Q. But how many beds have you that are immediately ready?—A. 2,000 beds immediately ready.

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. You say that you are in a position to take care of any number that comes along in the ordinary way?—A. Yes, and let me remind you that we do not spend the money too far in advance. It costs money to get ready, and unless we know the patients are coming we do not want to contract too far ahead.

By the Chairman:

Q. Suppose it should be intimated to you by the authorities in England that they were sending across a considerable number of patients, could you increase your accommodation so as to meet that eventuality?—A. We believe we could, bearing in mind the present state of shipping in the North Atlantic.

Q. Then there would be no truth in the statement that men were retained in England because there were no beds available for them here?—A. Not only that, but Sir George Perley and the people over there know it; we have been in constant communication with them.

Q. What I want to ascertain is this, whether it is true that thousands of Canadians are being retained in hospitals in England because you are not prepared to take care of them if they were to be evacuated and sent home?—A. No, it is not true.

Q. You can take care of them here just as fast as they can be evacuated from the hospitals there?—A. We can take care of them here and we have advised Sir George Perley that we can take care of them as fast as he can send them.

[Colonel Alfred T. Thompson.]

By Mr. Middlebro:

Q. Suppose you were sent a three months' supply, going at the rate of 600 a month, could you take care of them?—A. Yes. Although that would be a large order, we could do it.

By Brigadier General Mason:

Q. What notice do you get of men coming over?—A. Very short notice, as a rule. We get notice when the ship sails, generally speaking.

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. You say none of these men have been kept in England on account of lack of accommodation here?—A. I make the statement here, as the Medical Superintendent of the Hospitals Commission, that not one man has been kept in England on account of the lack of beds in Canada.

By Hon. Mr. Murphy:

Q. Referring to your statement regarding the expenditure of public funds that suggested to me that it might be advisable to inquire how the expenditure of the Military Hospitals Commission is provided for; is it voted specially to the Commission, or is it appropriated from the amount in the general war vote?—A. I am not informed on those facts, but I understand it is through the war vote.

Q. There is no special vote for the Hospitals Commission as far as you know?—A. As far as I know. We have had no difficulty in securing the funds we require. The point I wish to make is we do not wish to contract too far ahead.

Q. Or spend more money than is necessary—the determination as to the amount to be expended, I presume, rests with this Hospitals Commission Board?—A. Yes.

By the Chairman:

Q. Do you remember the amount the Prime Minister said would be required for 1917, when he gave us the details of the war expenditure?—A. I do not.

By Mr. Middlebro:

Q. Has any expenditure incurred by the Hospitals Commission been made against the appropriation by the War Office?—A. No.

By Brigadier General Mason:

Q. While on the subject of Colonel Marlow's report, a difficulty has arisen partly, I think from what Colonel Thompson has said, from the fact that the Medical Officers in charge of the Hospitals, the Convalescent Hospitals have not been seconded, that they are still under the jurisdiction of Colonel Marlow, while those that are seconded are under your jurisdiction?—A. If they were seconded they are under my jurisdiction.

Q. But those in the Toronto Hospitals are not seconded?—A. The man in charge of the Hospital up there, Major Munn, has never been seconded to the Hospital Commission.

Q. That is the cause of the difficulty that Colonel Marlow claims authority over him, is that it?—A. I do not understand what it is that Colonel Marlow complains of.

Witness retired.

Brig.-Gen. J. LYONS BIGGAR, Director General of Supply and Transport, called, sworn and examined.

By the Chairman:

Q. General Biggar, we understand that you have charge of the arrangements that are made with the railway companies for the transportation of returned soldiers from the point of debarkation to their ultimate destination. Will you kindly give the Committee the details of this work?—A. At the present time we have been receiving patients on the regular passenger ships, the arrangements being made by the authorities in England, who have been sending us out about five hundred a week on the mail ships. The largest number arriving in any week, I think, was 500. These ships arrive at Halifax and at St. John, depending upon the lines. The Canadian Pacific ships come to St. John, and the Cunard and White Star boats to Halifax. This generally means about a ship a week, it would average about that. To meet the situation, were we even tied up by railway congestion, we have what I might call a receiving depot in which there are beds for 550 or 600 men. This is stationed on the pier, being the upper part of pier 2 at Halifax. At St. John the armoury has been turned into a receiving depot into which we can take the men and sort them up, giving us time to make our train arrangements. These were constructed by the Hospitals Commission. We have always maintained at St. John, since the patients began to arrive, a discharge depot for the Maritime Provinces. That is, any man belonging to either Nova Scotia, New Brunswick or Prince Edward Island is never brought farther west until he is dealt with, his papers examined, and he is medically disposed of; that is, he is either sent home to his people or to one of the institutions of the Hospitals Commission. If he is to go to one of the institutions under the Hospitals Commission the Commission takes charge of his transport to whatever sanatorium or hospital they see fit. They have been supplied with a number of requisition books which enable them to issue the necessary railway warrant to carry the man to the sanatorium hospital, or to his home, whichever it may be. My own officers only look after the transport of these men from the port of disembarkation to Quebec, which until now has been the discharge depot for the whole Dominion, plus the one at St. John for the Maritime Provinces. Our train is made up according to the number coming out. We get advance information as far as we can as to the class of patients that are coming, that is, how many insane, how many tubercular and how many maimed, and we arrange accordingly. The Hospitals Commission ordered some time ago from the Canadian Government railways ten cars called hospital cars. In some of these they have a door very like the doors in an express car, wide enough for a stretcher to be carried in, and in others there is a large door at the end of the car almost as wide. The accommodation varies according to whether the opening is in the side or the end. Some of them have fifteen regular hospital cots furnished as in a hospital. They have ordered from the Canadian Pacific Railway ten more cars. These were not ordered or paid for by the Militia Department, but by the Hospitals Commission, but they have been placed at our disposal for the handling of patients. Since these two receiving depots have been prepared at Halifax and St. John we will be able to put the patients in them, and not necessarily have our train ready when the ships come in, but sort them up in these depots and make up our trains later. We hope with these hospital cars to be able to run patients through without a break as far west as Winnipeg. These men for the West will be sorted up and a certain number of cars set apart for Winnipeg. The train will start as a special from Halifax, and we will throw off so many cars at Quebec and so many at Toronto, as the case may be, according to the number of men for these various points. The difficulty, of course, as you can readily see, is to co-ordinate between these two organizations, the Military Hospitals Commission and the Militia Department. But, after consulting with Sir James Loughheed, it was considered that this was a fair division. As we enlisted these men at different points, such as Winnipeg, Calgary, Toronto, the Militia

[Brigadier-General J. Lyons Biggar.]

Department is in duty bound to send them back to the place of enlistment. But if the Hospitals Commission decided that for the sake of his health the man ought to go for treatment to a sanatorium, Gravenhurst, for instance, they would look after that side trip, so to speak. When the man was ultimately discharged from an institution, the Militia Department would take him up again and send him home. Up to the present everything has worked most satisfactorily.

Q. Have you had any cases, General, where men have been compelled to go to the place from which they enlisted when they would have preferred to go somewhere else?—A. Not to my knowledge.

Q. I have a case in mind of a man delivered at Edmonton when he desired to go to Toronto. He was told that as he had enlisted at Edmonton he must be discharged from Edmonton. Supposing a man's money had gone ahead of him to the Officer Commanding the unit to which he was going, or of the district to which he was going. If, for example, he should want to go to Toronto instead of to Edmonton would his money be sent to Toronto or Edmonton?—A. I do not quite follow you when you say the money was sent to his commanding officer. He probably is in France.

Q. Supposing a man on his arrival at the disembarkation depot had a hundred dollars of pay coming to him. He would receive $10 with his transportation, and $90 is sent ahead for him to get when he arrives at his destination. If they insisted upon sending that money to the point where he originally enlisted, would they send the man to another point?—A. That is a Pay Branch matter, I could not say about that.

Q. What I want to find out is whether a man has an option if he desires to go to another point other than where he enlisted?—A. Yes.

Q. Do you look after the physical transportation?—A. Yes.

By Mr. Middlebro:

Q. Supposing you have only five men going to one place from a debarkation depot, would you get a whole train for that number?—A. No, they would go on the regular train. We provide a train only when there are enough men to make it worth while. In the case you mention we would put them on regular trains and supply them with meal tickets.

Q. But speaking of invalids?—A. If they were invalids we might send one car. But the minimum for a hospital car would be eight. We would keep them at the receiving depot, because otherwise we would have to pay for the movement of the car.

Q. You would wait until there was a carload to go?—A. Yes, we keep them at the discharge depot.

Q. At the discharge depot they get medical treatment?—A. Oh, yes, the discharge depot at Quebec has the whole top floor of the Immigration shed, and is comfortably fitted up.

Q. They do not suffer in any way by waiting for a full car?—A. Not at all. We put a man on these trains. He telegraphs to the officers at Montreal or Toronto how many men he has on board, whether they will need an ambulance at the station to meet them, and all that sort of thing, and on these hospital cars I have supplied them with soups and other refreshments that they might require between meals, or that the nurses on board need, because we put nurses and doctors on these trains. All who are able go into the dining car where they are supplied with good meals.

THE CHAIRMAN: Would the Committee desire to have the cuts of the Hospital cars included in the printed evidence as an exhibit.

Suggestion concurred in.

By Hon. Mr. Belcourt:

Q. How many cars have you?—A. There will be twenty shortly. The ten Government railway cars are finished, and I think six of the Canadian Pacific.

Q. Are the new ones being made exclusively for this purpose?—A. Yes. The Canadian Government cars are old Pullmans.

[Brigadier-General J. Lyon Bigger.]

Q. But the new cars?—A. Those were ordered by the Hospitals Commission. I saw only one. They were placed at my disposal to use to move the patients west.

Q. Are you sufficiently equipped to meet any emergency of that kind?—A. We have frequently handled a shipload of 500, and there is a shipload on the ocean to-day of 600. We have had no trouble in taking care of them. We have had this experience in the matter of accommodation on board ship, that unless we revamped the vessels we could not make them quite as comfortable as we would like. You see the hospital accommodation on the ordinary vessel is meagre, it does not provide for more than 30.

Q. It has been stated that our men are more comfortable and better cared for on a hospital ship?—A. Not only will they be better cared for and be more comfortable, but a hospital ship is considered safer because she is a Red Cross Ship, and as such is considered neutral.

By Mr. Sutherland:

Q. Do you make two trips a month?—A. A round trip a month is, I think, all we can expect with the discharging and coaling at both ends.

Q. And the vessel brings out 600 men at a time?—A. Yes, that is her capacity.

Q. How many men are you expecting per month from now on, have you received any advices as to how many you may expect?—A. I gather the impression from Sir George Perley's cables and from the conversations of Sir James Lougheed, that we will get 1,000 to 1,200 per month to take care of.

Q. They send a telephone to you and you have plenty of transportation accommodation to take care of that number?—A. I can move 5,000 a month, if that number are sent.

By Hon. Mr. Murphy:

Q. After you bring them up from the sea-board and deliver them to these places and after they are discharged from those places you move them still farther to their homes?—A. Yes. We cease to deal with these men once they are handed over to the Commission until it reports that it is through with them; the men are entitled under their enlistment to be returned to the place of enlistment.

By Mr. Sutherland:

Q. After they are discharged from the Convalescent Hospital, you take them up again and send them to their homes?—A. Yes, to the point of enlistment.

Q. Supposing they want to go to some other point?—A. If it does not cost any more, I always let the man go where he wants. I have had men already who were enlisted in British Columbia and who wanted to return to England. As it costs no more, and in some cases less, we arranged it. I think that is fair, the public does not suffer by the transaction.

By Hon. Mr. Belcourt:

Q. You told us a moment ago that when you get advice of convalescents or wounded coming over you ask them to give you information as to what disease they are suffering from and if they say that there are tubercular cases, you make arrangements accordingly, and so on. What notice do you get?—A. The trouble is they have been sending along a list of the names, but never giving the details, which come by wireless less than 24 hours before they reach port. I am now asking them to cable from the other side so that we will know if there are tubercular cases, because we cannot send cases of tuberculosis in a car that is afterwards to be used by the public.

Q. Do they segregate those cases on the steamer?—A. Yes, they put some cases of tuberculosis on a White Star ship, and we had a great deal of trouble to get the stewards to wait on them. Then afterwards we had to burn everything that was used in the part of the ship in which these cases were quartered.

Q. Do you segregate cases of venereal disease also?—A. No,—I do not have anything to do with that, that is done in England.

[Brigadier-General J. Lyons Bigger.]

Q. But taking the case of the troops who are going across from here, are those cases segregated on board the ship?—A. There is a hospital and a medical officer on each ship, and I presume they keep them by themselves; as a rule no man that is ill is taken when a regiment goes. He is put in hospital here, and when he recovers is sent over.

Q. Do you know of cases of that kind that have been sent over?—A. I know that in the hospitals there are remnants of regiments already gone over and now and again I am told that there are a few men belonging to regiments that have gone who are now fit to rejoin the regiment, and we send them over by the next ship.

Q. What I would like to know is whether you know that venereal cases have gone over with the troops on the transports?—A. No, I do not know that.

By Brigadier-General Mason:

Q. What personnel accompanies a shipment of invalid soldiers?—A. There is the Conducting Officer, and if the numbers are large, there are two assistants, with the necessary number of nurses and hospital orderlies.

Q. Do they return to England?—A. Yes, at once.

Witness retired.

Colonel J. L. POTTER, called, sworn and examined.

By the Chairman:

Q. Do I understand rightly you are the Director General of Medical Service?—

A. The Acting Director General of Medical Service.

By Hon. Mr. Murphy:

Q. Who is the Director General?—A. General Jones, who is now overseas, I believe. I am only acting.

By the Chairman:

Q. And your title is Acting Director of Medical Service?—A. No, sir, Acting Director General of Medical Service.

Q. I think the committee will be glad if you will clear up at the beginning this matter of difference between the Military Hospitals Commission and the Military Base Hospitals. Will you tell us about the Military Base Hospitals, what they are, where they are located, and what function they perform?—A. I think there has been, perhaps, too much stress laid upon the "Base Hospital" part of it. They are simply military hospitals.

Q. Where are they located, and how many of them are there?—A. We have a military hospital at London, Ont.; we have one, which is known as the base hospital, at Toronto, because it was actually performing that function for District No. 2; that, I may say, is the old Toronto General Hospital, which is now being used for military purposes.

Q. Who is in charge there?—A. Lieutenant-Colonel Harvey. There is a military hospital at Hamilton.

Q. Who is in charge of that?—A. I can't give you the officer's name just now, but I can get that for you, because there has been a change recently made. A military hospital at Stanley Barracks, Toronto; really the important hospital there is the base hospital. Those are the military hospitals for Military District No. 2.

Q. Now, will you take the military hospitals for Military District No. 3?—A. For District No. 3 we have the "Ongwanada," so-called to distinguish it at Kingston, and we have the Venereal Hospital at Kingston.

Q. Where you segregate them?—A. Where we segregate them.

[Colonel J. L. Potter.]

Q. You have one at Hamilton, haven't you?—A. That is Military District No. 2. That is part of the Hamilton organization, and we have in Military District No. 4 the Isolation Military Hospital at St. John.

Q. Is that a venereal one?—A. No, that is for infectious diseases, we have St. George's Home Military Hospital in Montreal, it is used as a venereal hospital.

Q. These are in District No. 4?—A. Yes, and we have a small isolation hospital at Montreal for emergency cases. For example, we had an epidemic of mumps recently, and we used it for that. Then there is a small military hospital at St. Johns, Quebec, which is a small hospital within the boundary of the barracks, it is for general cases. In Military District No. 5, that is Quebec, we have a large military hospital there right in the city, and a smaller one located in Beauport just outside Quebec, which handles mostly venereal cases at present.

By Hon. Mr. Belcourt:

Q. Mostly?—A. Yes. There might be other cases sent out there; if we had only half-filled the hospital with venereals there was no reason why some other patients should not be sent there to utilize the vacant beds. We have to be more or less elastic. Then in Military District No. 6 we have a large military hospital at Halifax, right in the city. We have a large military hospital known as the "Rockhead" Military Hospital, which is a short distance outside the city, and is a building formerly used as an immigration hospital. We have with the military hospital in Halifax city certain infectious disease pavilions. We have a small military hospital at Pictou, N.S., and a small military hospital at Fredericton, and a small military infectious disease hospital at St. John, N.B., and a general military hospital at St. John, N.B.

Q. When you say "infectious," you mean diseases like the mumps?—A. Yes, we have to provide for such diseases as that. A small military hospital at Truro; we have an infectious diseases hospital at Charlottetown. That covers pretty well everything east of London.

Then going west, there are ten places where battalions are recruited, that have, at each battalion headquarters, a few beds to meet emergencies, for the men who are not likely to be sick over a couple of days, and then we use the civil hospital accommodation, in the regularly established civil hospitals.

Q. And you pay the civil hospitals so much per day?—A. We pay them so much per day. We found that a very good scheme, it reassured the public and we are sure that our patients get good treatment. Then for District No. 12, a newly organized district, and formerly part of Military District No. 10, is composed of the province of Saskatchewan, and we use the civil hospitals wherever required. We found they give good accommodation for the troops in training. We recently established a small infectious diseases hospital at Regina, which was to meet temporarily an outbreak of infectious disease, diphtheria. We are considering the establishment of a small venereal hospital because the civil hospitals do not wish to take these cases. In Military District No. 13, still going west, we have a military hospital at Calgary, which is in the building of the old Calgary General Hospital. We have large civil hospitals throughout Military District No. 13, sufficient in quantity to meet our needs. Coming to Military District No. 11, we have a military hospital at Esquimalt, and we are establishing another military hospital known as the Irving Property Hospital.

By Hon. Mr. Murphy:

Q. Where is it?—A. At Victoria, right in the city. Then I may say, generally here and there, wherever circumstances warrant it, there are small hospitals attached to the battalions, which have a suitable number of beds to handle cases which only are sick about forty-eight hours.

[Colonel J. L. Potter.]

By Hon. Mr. McCurdy:

Q. You have the hospitals at the camps as well?—A. I am speaking of the present situation. When the camps open each camp is provided with its own camp hospital.

By the Chairman:

Q. I understand that none of these hospitals that you have mentioned are under the jurisdiction of the Military Hospitals Commission?—A. No, sir.

Q. They are entirely under the jurisdiction of the medical service of the Militia Department?—A. Of the Militia Department.

Q. Where do you get your patients, who are eligible for these hospitals?—A. They are the sick from the troops mobilized from the district.

Q. Are they all men who have not gone overseas?—A. Practically.

Q. Do you take care of any men who have gone overseas?—A. Any man who conveniently may be treated, who is a returned soldier, it is open to him.

Q. How many returned soldiers did you treat in the hospitals under your department?—A. Not a very great many. I could not give you the exact number because you see the Military Hospitals Commission establishments have relieved us of the necessity of providing accommodation for them in our purely military hospitals.

Q. Why should you have any returned soldiers in any of your hospitals?—A. Only as a matter of convenience.

Q. For instance, in a place where the Military Hospitals Commission might not have accommodation?—A. During the growing expansion of the Military Hospitals Commission.

Q. Do you expect that subsequently the Military Hospitals Commission will take care of all cases of returned soldiers, and that you will devote yourselves only to the care of the men of the battalions on their way overseas?—A. That will have to be decided as a matter of policy between the higher authorities.

Q. Have you any idea how many men you have in your hospitals to-day who have been overseas?—A. I could obtain the figures.

Q. Will you insert them in the evidence. What is the total capacity of all your hospitals, the total number of patients, and the number of those who have come from overseas?—A. I might say as regards the total capacity of our hospitals, that would be a very elastic thing because we use civil hospital accommodation here and there throughout Canada as required.

Hon Mr. MURPHY: That information could be stated in addition.

Hon. Mr. BELCOURT: I would like to get the number of patients there now.

By the Chairman:

Q. I have asked for the total number of patients in the hospitals under your jurisdiction?—A. I might say that we get monthly returns of sick from each of these hospitals, say at the end of each month.

Q. Your latest monthly return would be satisfactory for our purpose. Have you the number of those who have been overseas, or who are overseas men?—A. As regards the overseas men, they might be treated. If the Hospitals Commission had a venereal patient, and wished us to treat him, certainly we would do that.

Q. Does the Military Hospitals Commission when they have a venereal patient, pass him over to you?—A. That is the understanding. I could not say definitely whether any such cases have occurred.

By Mr. Middlebro:

Q. Outside of the venereal cases which have been passed over to you, how many returned soldiers have you?—A. I can get you the return and the classes of returned.

By Hon. Mr. Belcourt:

Q. I should like to ask the witness what means of compulsion he has with reference to men who have not gone overseas. For instance, take a man who has a venereal disease. He objects to go to a hospital either at Kingston or Beauport. Do you have authority to compel him to go there?—A. He is compelled. It is a crime under military law to conceal venereal disease. He must report it. We have periodic examinations both by order in advance and warned for the purpose of detecting venereal disease.

Q. The man's own feelings in the matter are not consulted?—A. Not at all.

Q. Are the institutions you have mentioned at Kingston, Beauport, and the one in Military District 12, quite sufficient to handle the venereal disease cases you have?—A. These are particularly referred to as venereal disease hospitals because they are used for that alone, but in our other hospital establishments certain sections of these hospitals provide sufficient accommodation to deal with these diseases in the districts.

Q. Could you give us by districts the number of soldiers suffering with venereal diseases at the present time, for instance, in your last monthly report?—A. I can give you that, I brought a report along.

By the Chairman:

Q. If you would like to put in any figures at this stage you might read them and put them in?—A. This is a return which is now being printed covering the first ten months of 1916, and it has figures in it relative to venereal diseases.

The CHAIRMAN: If it is the wish of the Committee we will have that return go into the record as an addendum.

By Mr. Middlebro:

Q. How many cases does that return show?—A. For the ten months a total of 4,313 cases of gonorrhea; 566 cases of syphilis, and 206 cases of soft chancre.

By Hon. Mr. Belcourt:

Q. Out of a total number of how many patients?—A. Out of a total number of 59,050.

By Mr. Middlebro:

Q. Ten per cent have venereal diseases?—A. That is the sick altogether in that time.

Mr. McCURDY: One man may be sick half a dozen times.

By Hon. Mr. Belcourt:

Q. You never had 60,000 men in the hospital at one time?—A. Oh, no. The average number of cases in Canada per month from January 1, 1916 to October 31; 1916 was 5,905, scattered from one end of Canada to the other, with diseases varying from a simple cold to something more serious.

Q. Can you give us the average monthly cases of venereal diseases?—A. Divide that 5,000 by ten.

Q. Would not the cases of venereal diseases be much longer in the hospital than cases of cold?—A. That is quite possible.

Q. And the monthly average would be higher in reference to venereal diseases than with reference to the others?—A. Yes, owing to the extended period of treatment.

Q. Yes.—A. Possibly, but while one case of venereal disease might be in, there might be nine or ten cases of influenza.

Q. Your monthly average would likely be higher, because the other includes many cases of cold, influenza, etc.?—A. Where one man remains in with gonorrhea for six weeks, there might be ten or twenty cases of influenza admitted in the same period in and out.

By Mr. Middlebro:

Q. That makes the percentage of gonorrhea all the more?—A. The average period of treatment would be longer.

By the Chairman:

Q. Have you any statement, for example, that shows on a given date the total number of men in hospital, and the disease for which they were in hospital on that date?—A. We can always come to that if sufficient time is given for us to get our reports in. We are always, perhaps, a month or six weeks behind.

Q. Have you got such a statement for the months of December and January?—A. I think I can give it to you for the month of December. If one hospital return is held up for any reason, and has to be sent back, it means that everything else is held up until the required return comes to hand.

The CHAIRMAN: You may give us a statement for your last complete month that will give us an idea of the percentage of the various diseases.

By Hon. Mr. Beaubien:

Q. Will you tell us whether the percentage of cases of venereal disease is increasing or diminishing?—A. I would have to look up the individual monthly reports from which this information is compiled. Then I think I could give you some definite information upon that point.

By Hon. Mr. Belcourt:

Q. What is the limit of your accommodation in the Kingston Venereal Disease Hospital?—A. 22 beds.

Q. And at Beauport, what is the accommodation?—A. 50 beds.

Q. Now give us the accommodation of the hospital out west?—A. That is being fitted up. We have been forced to provide that accommodation owing to the civil hospitals refusing to take in these cases. I cannot tell you exactly how many it will contain.

By Mr. Sutherland:

Q. Speaking of the men that have been rejected as medically unfit and have been granted their discharge, do you allow them to be treated in the base hospitals after that time?—A. If that man is finally discharged on account of unfitness, and it is considered he will have an extended period of convalescence, we then would transfer him to one of the Convalescent Homes under the Hospitals Commission until his case had arrived at a stage of finality. Then he would be dealt with in the ordinary way as a man for discharge, and any claims for compensation or pension considered.

Q. Provided he was recommended for a pension under Clause 3, and wished to be treated in hospital, would you treat him?—A. We never discharge a man from the Military Hospital if he is still in need of medical treatment, and is not in a position to take care of himself. What I mean to say is, that he would be discharged from the service, but if there was no way to dispose of his case he would be kept there indefinitely. The door is thrown open, in other words to what may prove a large question later dealing with incurables.

Q. Are not some of the men discharged as medically unfit who are not sent to the hospital at all?—A. Those would be cases in which the medical authorities would consider the stage of finality, as far as medical treatment, has been reached, and any more treatment would be of no use to them.

By the Chairman:

Q. Colonel Potter, you are as the Acting Head of the Medical Service, responsible, I understand, for the examinations which have admitted men into the service of the C. E. F. Can you tell us why it is that so very large a number of men who have been admitted have been subsequently dismissed as medically unfit?

By Mr. Middlebro:

Q. First of all can you tell us how many have been dismissed?—A. That is a thing that I think inquiry was made about before the House adjourned, and the information was being prepared by the Records Branch which I think will be able to give you the number; I haven't the information myself.

By the Chairman:

Q. Can you tell us why it is—we will take it for granted that a very large number, a very large percentage of the regiments were in the final examinations declared medically unfit. How was it possible for these men to get into the regiments in the first place?—A. The situation is a rather difficult one.

Q. We will be glad to have your story of the situation?—A. In this way, the medical authorities in their examination, if they are strict, the result is shown in the recruiting, and there are many influences on the side of the recruiting officers and that fact may lead the medical officer to be less strict than he might otherwise be. Situations have developed where the medical officers, no doubt, have been exposed to more or less influence as to turning down recruits.

By Brigadier-General Mason:

Q. Helping the commanding officer out?—A. You have a good knowledge of the situation, sir, and there has been over-anxiety on the part of those responsible for securing the required number of men.

By the Chairman:

Q. What safeguard has the service if men have been permitted to join battalions on the mere examination which they get at the point of original recruiting?—A. That was so, I believe, in the early part of the war, but our present system is much more thorough. The regimental examination in many cases was made by the individual medical officer, either a civil practitioner, or a military medical officer, and that is followed wherever possible by an examination by the Medical Board, before the man is permitted to join.

Q. How many of these Medical Boards are there?—A. That is something which I am making up for my own information, and I will be able to give you that in a short time.

Q. Is there more than one in a Military Division?—A. Oh, yes; several.

Q. How many members are there on the Medical Board?—A. Usually three.

Q. And, to-day, is a man not permitted to be permanently attached to a battalion until he has been "boarded"?—A. Until he has been "boarded."

Q. He has the same medical examination by a civil practitioner?—A. Sufficient to enable him to be "boarded."

Q. How long does it take to bring him before the Board?—A. It depends upon the distance the man has to be brought.

Q. And that recruit is not actually accepted until?—A. Until he is "boarded."

Q. Has that system been in operation long?—A. It was to a certain extent. It has been in operation in the larger centres for quite a long time, but on the 12th September last a special order was sent out with regard to that.

Q. What was that order?—A. It was a circular letter with regard to examining men at mobilization centres.

By Hon. Mr. Beaubien:

Q. What was the effect of it?

By the Chairman:

Q. Can you file a copy of that?—A. Any correspondence would be with the Adjutant-General. I think you could obtain it if you asked for it.

By Mr. Ross:

Q. Can you tell us what the effect of that order was?—A. Just as I have stated.

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. A moment ago you said that was in vogue to a certain extent for a long time—to what extent?—A. They had medical boards at the larger centres like Winnipeg, Toronto, and they have one at Montreal. The larger centres, I am speaking of many months ago.

Q. How long ago?—A. I would like to look that up.

Q. Well, in rural districts they had no such system; it was an examination by one medical man?—A. That was in the winter of 1916.

By the Chairman:

Q. And when these men had been recruited at a number of small county centres and came to be mobilized in the spring in the regiment, were they again examined?—A. They were supposed to be by the medical officer.

Q. According to your knowledge were they in all cases again examined?—A. I could not say definitely.

Q. You have reason to believe that many were not?—A. I have reason to believe that the medical officer did not scrutinize his men when they actually got together. In December, 1915, an order was issued whereby all the men were to be examined by a travelling medical board during the winter; but, apparently, owing to the wide distribution of the small units it was very difficult to get it done.

By Mr. Sutherland:

Q. The men might be under training for several months before being passed by a board?—A. It was with that in view that the order was issued, to see that the men were not kept longer.

Q. They would be boarded before they would go overseas?—A. Yes, we have not come to that point yet.

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. Do you say, Colonel Potter, that ever since recruiting started every man was boarded before he went overseas?—A. I would not say that.

Q. I am not asking you to make too broad a statement. Was he supposed to have been boarded?—A. He was supposed to have been boarded since—I could not give you the exact date, but we have the order on file. The situation is now that all ranks are medically boarded before a unit is allowed to proceed overseas and the commanding officer of the unit must certify that he has no men under him under or over age; and the certificate of the medical board that they have examined these men and passed them as fit is also attached.

Q. Has that only been in force for the last few months?—A. Last summer they were boarded, the men from the camps.

By Brigadier-General Mason:

Q. You do not remember the date of that order?—A. I could get it.

By Mr. Middlebro:

Q. In the County of Grey, the 248th Battalion is the last battalion organized, starting about the 1st of January. We have now about 350 men recruited. They are examined by the local medical man of the battalion. Do they really not belong to the 248th regiment now unless they have been examined by the board?—A. I am not familiar with the particular circumstances of that particular unit.

Q. The 350 men so far recruited in the 248th Battalion have been examined locally by the surgeon of the 31st Grey Regiment. Are these men on suffrance until they come before a board?—A. I would have to look up the particular unit to see the circumstances.

[Colonel J. L. Potter.]

Q. These are the facts?—A. I dare say that in some instances it will be impossible, owing to the location of the units, to have them all medically boarded when they join; but it is our endeavour to do that.

Q. Would these men have to pass a board, say in Toronto, subsequently?—A. Before they go overseas. More than that, they would have to be examined every month by the medical officer and a report furnished by him.

Q. If there are any men to be thrown out they should be thrown out at the first opportunity. If this battalion goes on recruiting until May, carrying unfit men, it is a useless expenditure of money?—A. That is what we have been endeavouring to stop a long time.

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. If there were 350 recruits, would it not pay you to send a board up there to examine them?—A. It is left with the A.D.M.S. of the district; once he gets his general instructions the Assistant Director of Medical Services of the district is responsible for working out the details in his own district. I may say that it is our effort, in so far as conditions and the distribution of troops and recruiting methods will allow, to have men medically boarded on joining.

By the Chairman:

Q. Don't you supervise it in Ottawa to see that cases are followed up within a reasonable delay?—A. In what way?

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. You have now returned from England 20 per cent of rejected men who have gone overseas. You are recruiting another battalion, the 248th, which has 350 recruits. Now, you will not get that battalion recruited up to full strength for another year in all probability, at least not until next fall. Would it not pay the medical service to send a board up there and to have every one of those 350 men now mobilized brought before a board at once rather than carry a lot of unfit men?—A. Quite right. That is a proper thing to do, and we have to leave these details—

Q. Is that a detail? That is not a detail, if you will permit me to say so. That is the very essence of the whole proposition. It means thousands of dollars to this country; for every man it means a thousand dollars practically to this country who may be next fall refused by a board?—A. Take this particular battalion: are you sure that they have never been before a board?

By Mr. Middlebro:

Q. We are recruiting in all the different centres of the county, and we leave the men in these centres as long as we can so as to gather in recruits as much as we can. We perhaps have 200 men in Owen Sound?—A. I would like to look into that battalion's circumstances and be sure they have not been boarded as they joined.

Q. If they were boarded would the board come up there and examine them?—A. They would be boarded at different places, perhaps a board, we will say at London, would board some of them, who would afterwards be forwarded to join the battalion.

Q. Would that be done from the beginning of the corps?—A. I am not familiar with the geography of that county.

By the Chairman:

Q. What it seems to me should be done is this: you are the head of this service; you have men in each military district under your control; it would seem to me that you should assure yourself that every one of these regiments as they are being formed is boarded within a reasonable delay and that the condition of affairs that Mr. Pardee refers to is not possible?—A. Yes, but I am not sure that they have not been boarded. It is the case that a battalion may be mobilized in a number of sections in different parts of Canada who go before the local board and are then transferred to the headquarters of their unit. In that case the A.D.M.S. has his full instruction, and we follow them up.

Q. Would the Assistant Medical Director, if he lets the thing slip, be subjected to pressure from the head office to make sure he does not neglect a work of that importance?—A. We check them up, sir.

By Hon. Mr. Beaubien:

Q. Can you make rules to provide that all recruits are boarded? Is that in your power?—A. I can only recommend. I have no power to actually do anything.

Q. What is the effect of your recommendation?—A. The effect is to get the order out that the men must be boarded.

By the Chairman:

Q. To whom do you make the recommendation?—A. To the Adjutant General, General Hodgins.

By Hon. Mr. Beaubien:

Q. Is he not supposed to follow that recommendation?—A. Yes, to a certain extent.

Q. Has there been from your department a recommendation to that effect to board recruits within a certain delay?—A. That has been in for some time. That recommendation is in and has been in effect since September 12.

Q. What is the purport of the recommendation that you have sent out? Is it a vague or a positive one? Have you fixed a special delay?—A. My recommendation is that every man should be boarded before he is allowed to join.

By Mr. Middlebro:

Q. Boarded?—A. Yes.

By Hon. Mr. Murphy:

Q. When was that made?—A. September 12, last.

Q. Has it been acted on?—A. To some extent. That is a point on which, I may say, the office is working out, and has been working on for some three weeks now, to get actual details of what is actually being done in each military district. I have been all over Canada since September, and I have seen a great many of these boards actually working, and I know that they are saving the money that you refer to.

MR. MIDDLEBRO: In the county of Grey they are joining the battalion I have referred to at the rate of about ten or fifteen a day. You would have to bring a board into that county.

THE CHAIRMAN: It would be well for us to examine the Adjutant-General regarding this matter of boarding, and regarding the discharge of soldiers.

HON. MR. MURPHY: Mr. Middlebro has brought this very illuminating matter up, and the point he has just made should be explained by the Colonel. The witness has made a recommendation that these men be boarded at the very outset. Mr. Middlebro has inquired if that would be feasible.

By Mr. Middlebro:

Q. Unless your board followed every recruit it could not be done?—A. My recommendation involves more than actually the medical side of it. It involves recruiting problems and other things, and it involves perhaps things a little further in advance than should be carried out.

[Colonel J. L. Potter.]

Q. The effect, you say, would be that every man would be boarded?—A. Would be boarded. It might also have the effect of doing away with battalions and dividing the country into sections.

HON. MR. MURPHY: Perhaps it would save time if Colonel Potter were asked to produce the report. We would then be in a position to determine whether we could carry the examination any further along this line. (To the witness). You can produce the report?

THE WITNESS: Yes. I might say that an order was made for a monthly examination whereby we could actually check up every unit in Canada. That was the only reason for the order, and perhaps it was unnecessary, because it was already laid down in regulations of the Army Medical Service that such shall be done.

By the Chairman:

Q. When you have boarded and rejected these men, what is done with them?—A. Do you mean the men from the battalion?

Q. Yes.—A. Their cases are disposed of upon their merits.

Q. But what is done with the rejected man?—A. He is either discharged from the service and allowed to go as a civilian, or if his case requires medical treatment, he gets it either in a Military Hospital or a Convalescent Home.

Q. But you have men now boarded, and declared to be medically unfit for military duty, and yet they are transferred to the Special Service Companies?—A. Yes, if they are fit for that.

Q. Why are men who have been pronounced hopelessly unfit for overseas service, retained as fit in the Special Service Companies?—A. That is really not a medical question, that is a matter of policy, isn't it?

Q. It is a very burning question. There are 1,500 men to-day who enlisted for overseas service, who have been refused and placed in Special Service Companies which are only supposed to do chore work.

Brigadier-General MASON: Drawing pay.

Q. Drawing overseas pay and overseas separation allowance, and doing chore work to-day in Canada. Most of them never can go overseas, and the Government will not release them to go back into private life.—A. That is not a medical question, sir.

Q. What I want to find out from you though is this: When men are rejected as unfit for overseas service, a great many of them are put volens volens into the Special Service Companies.—A. If they are to be disposed of, as may be indicated later.

Q. Most of them are put into Special Service Companies. Now, how many of these men become subsequently fit to go back on active service?—A. That would be very difficult to say. Most of them are there because they are not fit and we do not expect them to get better.

Q. And the Government is leaving 1,500 men in Special Service battalions on overseas pay, when it is known that they are medically unfit to go on active service?—A. That is not a medical question.

Brigadier-General MASON: Is that the case?

THE CHAIRMAN: That is the case.

THE WITNESS: I have no doubt some departmental official could answer that.

HON. MR. BELCOURT: And some men who are in the hospital getting treatment.

THE WITNESS: If the man is sick, that is all right.

By Mr. Ross (Middlesex):

Q. If you find a man is not medically fit to become a soldier, why should you take him into hospital and treat him?—A. I think you are labouring under a misunderstanding there.

[Colonel J. L. Potter.]

Q. Suppose the man is passed by the doctor and boarded and found medically unfit, would you take him into a hospital?—A. No.

Q. You would give him no treatment at all?—A. No.

Q. I thought you said he would be given treatment?—A. He would be still on special service. The fact of his being on special service would indicate that he had been in some other battalion before.

By Hon. Mr. Belcourt:

Q. Does that not open the door to this kind of thing; I am suffering from some disease or other and want to be treated. All I have to do is to declare my intention of enlisting. Then I go before a board, am found to be suffering from a disease, and am sent to the hospital?—A. That does not happen. You are not sent to the hospital or given treatment unless you have enlisted.

Q. All that it is necessary to do in order to get that treatment would be to go through the form of enlisting. Then I would be sent to the hospital at the expense of the State?—A. You are not enlisted by simply being examined once.

Q. Assume the case of a man who has contracted a disease of some sort and says: "I will enlist, and when they find I have a disease, they will send me to the hospital and take care of me." That is quite possible, is it not?—A. It is possible, but improbable. If the Medical Officer does his duty, he should detect the disease that a man has when he tries to enlist.

Q. I am afraid I am not making myself understood. Take the cases of the men who are declared to be unfit. If they have a disease which requires immediate attention, instead of discharging and sending them home, you send them to the hospital?—A. But they are already soldiers.

Q. I understand that.—A. We must do that.

Q. But suppose a man enlists and he is found to have some disease which requires immediate attention, instead of discharging him and sending him home and letting him get a doctor for himself, you send him to the hospital?—A. An enlisted man must be looked after. If you did not give that man a certain amount of medical attention he would certainly make a claim for, perhaps, aggravation by service.

Q. I have not yet made myself understood. What I mean is this. I want to assume that I mean to be dishonest about it. I say to myself, I have got a disease, and I think the time has come when the State should look after me. I am a civilian, and say, I am going to enlist. Should the military authorities find out I have got disease they will send me to the hospital, where I can get free treatment?—A. No. If our doctors do their duty, they will turn you down at once, so you cannot get into the hospital.

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. Can you, to-morrow, give to us a report as to whether or not in the 248th there are 350 men that have not yet been "boarded" and, if not, when they will be, and what had been the number taken after further medical examination?—A. Yes.

Mr. Mr. Ross:

Q. I would like you also to give us the information regarding the 118th. There have been reports in the papers that in that battalion, which mobilized in London, 30 or 40 per cent were discharged on account of unfitness.

Brigadier-General MASON: In England?

Mr. Ross: No, here. I would like you to give some explanation how that occurred.—A. The case of the 118th Battalion was very carefully gone into. I think the Adjutant-General's Department would be willing to give the information you ask.

By the Chairman:

Q. Can you give us the information to-morrow? Will you communicate to the Adjutant-General's Department that it is the desire of the Committee to have that information. Can you also give us to-morrow what proportion of men in the Special Service Companies, I think they aggregate about 1,500 men, how many of that number are regarded as undoubtedly unfit for proceeding overseas?—A. I would take it from the fact that they are in the Special Service it is very unlikely that any of them are.

Q. That is not absolutely true, because some of them will be permitted to go shortly. I would like to know how many of those special service cases are regarded as without question never likely to see overseas service.—A. I do not think you can get that information by to-morrow, but the whole question regarding the physical fitness of the members of the Special Service Battalion can be got for you as a whole, I think.

The CHAIRMAN: If you cannot get it for us to-morrow, you can get it for us next week.

Witness retired.

Committee adjourned.

MINUTES OF EVIDENCE.

HOUSE OF COMMONS,

COMMITTEE ROOM No. 301,

The Committee met at 10.30 a.m., the Chairman, Sir Herbert Ames, presiding. There were also present Hon. Mr. McCurdy, Hon. Mr. Murphy, Mr. Pardee, Mr. R. B. Bennett, Mr. Middlebro, Mr. Ross, Mr. Sutherland, Hon. Messrs. Belcourt, Ross and Brigadier-General Mason.

After discussion, it was decided that the Committee should meet again in Ottawa on Thursday and Friday, March 1st and 2nd, to continue the enquiry by the examination of witnesses that are available at Ottawa, and then proceed to Montreal, where sittings will be held on Thursday and Friday, March 15th and 16th, to enquire into matters relating to Quebec and the Maritime Provinces. That on Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, March 20th, 21st, 22nd and 23rd, the inquiry should be continued at Toronto, the first two days being devoted to Ontario business, and the last two days to Western matters.

The Chairman was authorized to make the necessary arrangements with regard to the meetings at Montreal and Toronto, and the Clerk of the Committee, Mr. Clouthier, to issue summonses to witnesses, whose names were furnished to him by members of the Committee.

Col. J. L. POTTER recalled and further examined.

By the Chairman:

Q. When we adjourned yesterday there were two or three matters on which you promised to furnish us this morning statistical and other information. Could you give us that information now?—A. There has been such a short time to get it that I was going to suggest to the Committee that they should allow me until the meeting next week to get this information together. It requires not only statistics from our own office but also from the Adjutant-General's office.

By Hon. Mr. Murphy:

Q. Have you got your own report of September 12, 1916?—A. That was not my own report, but a circular letter that was sent out. Here is a copy of it (producing document).

By the Chairman:

Q. Can you file with the Committee a copy of the report which you made?—A. Yes, sir. I think it will be more satisfactory if I had the extra time and could put things in better shape and file them all at once.

Q. That report that you spoke of is a completed document?—A. Of September 12. That was a circular letter.

THE CHAIRMAN: You can file that with the Committee for reference. Is it the wish of the Committee that we allow Col. Potter to reappear on the 1st day of March and give us this information?

Concurred in.

THE WITNESS: Col. Marlow, who is the A.D.M.S. of Military District No. 2, is here this morning, and he could give information about the 248th Battalion that was asked for yesterday.

[Colonel J. L. Potter.]

Mr. MIDDLEBRO: We have not got Col. Marlowe's report yet, and I should like to read his report before he is examined at all.

The CHAIRMAN: Are there any further questions that the Committee desires to ask Col. Potter.

By Mr. Ross (Middlesex):

Q. Did you get any information regarding the 118th Battalion about which I asked?—A. That is on file at headquarters, and you could get it the same way as you could get Col. Marlowe's report, by asking the department.

Q. We will be examining you again a week from to day. Can't you produce that report then?—A. It is at the headquarters office.

Q. Have you asked for it in order to produce it before this Committee?—A. I could do that.

The CHAIRMAN: The proper way is for the Committee to ask the Adjutant-General to furnish us with a copy of that report, and I will request the clerk to have that done. Is there anything further to ask the witness?

By Mr. Bennett:

Q. What is your relation to the Pensions Board, for instance, in determining the physical condition of the men who get pensions?—A. The proceedings of the Medical Board dealing with pensions pass through our office.

Q. Yes, but what is the relation of your office as the ultimate medical authority in the Dominion to the Pensions Board, in practice?—A. In practice we are very closely associated.

Q. You are?—A. Very closely.

Q. Who determines the physical condition of the men who apply for a pension?—A. The medical officers in the district, the medical board.

Q. What is your relation to them?—A. When the proceedings of that board come forward we scrutinize the board and pass it on to the Pensions Commission.

Q. Have you a reviewing power?—A. Oh, yes.

Q. You have, in practice?—A. You mean we could send that board back?

Q. Yes?—A. We have that power.

Q. Can you amend the findings?—A. No, we do not amend the findings.

Q. But you yourselves have no power to alter, either by amendment or otherwise the findings of that board?—A. We can make remarks on that finding.

Q. That necessitates the report going back to the board?—A. Not necessarily. It could be returned to the board with a remark "returned for reconsideration."

Q. While the final tribunal to determine the amount of pension is the Pensions Board, I am trying to ascertain whether or not on the medical side of it your office exercises any jurisdiction at all, beyond sending it back to the original medical board for further consideration, that is in practice?—A. I think it would be impossible to actually alter a medical finding when you do not see the case.

Q. That is what I want to know. So far as your office is concerned, you are merely an office through which a report passes from the medical board to the Pensions Board?—A. For checking and revision.

Q. And if you feel dissatisfied with the report from the standpoint of the medical authorities, you send it back to the board?—A. Or if we think necessary from the special circumstances of the case we might forward it to the Pensions Commission with remarks.

Q. That is exactly what I want to get to the bottom of. You do not see the case, you have not seen the case?—A. That is obvious, we cannot.

Q. That is obvious. The board see the case originally, and upon that base a report which is forwarded to you, is that right?—A. That is right.

Q. And that report is for transmission to the Pensions Board?—A. That is right.

[Colonel J. L. Potter.]

Q. Then what I want to find out is by what right would you undertake to make recommendations to the Pensions Board other than those that have obtained in the report of the medical board who saw the patient?—A. It would not be in the nature of a recommendation, but rather in the nature of a remark on a special circumstance. We might know that this man had perhaps gone to England, the board in itself might not be as complete as we would wish; therefore it could be forwarded to the Pensions Commission with the remark: Will you take this board as it stands, otherwise it will mean more delay if it is sent back.

Q. Do I not make myself clear: the Pension Board has not seen the soldier?—A. There is no such thing as a Pension Board, the proper name is "The Pension Commission."

Q. I accept your correction. The Pension Commissioners have not seen the soldier?—A. No, sir.

Q. Then their judgment as to the man's physical condition, upon which they base a scale of pensions, is determined solely on the report of the Medical Board that sees the soldier?—A. Yes.

Q. And that board reports to the Pensions Commission through you?—A. Yes.

Q. What I am endeavouring to find out is whether you—speaking as your office—exercise any jurisdiction with reference to that report, except to send it back for a more complete consideration or with a recommendation?—A. We do not attempt to influence the Pensions Commission.

Q. Follow my question, please. Again: Does your office exercise any jurisdiction over the report made by the Medical Board that saw the wounded returned soldier and made a report to the Pensions Commission through your office?—A. Exactly what do you mean by jurisdiction, sir?

Q. By way of recommending a revision of the report or sending it back for further consideration?—A. We could do any of these things with the exception that the original report by the Medical Board would always be there for comparison.

Q. This is a vital matter and therefore I want to have the point clearly brought out. Can you revise that report?—A. What do you mean by revision?

Hon. Mr. MURPHY: Alter.

Mr. MIDDLEBRO: Add to it.

The WITNESS: We can add to but not alter the original report.

By Mr. Bennett:

Q. On what authority can you add to that report without having seen the soldier?—A. Because it may be apparent in the report that the percentage assessed is out of all proportion. •

Q. How are you to sit as a judge on the report of the medical men who saw the soldier whom you did not see?—A. Take the case of the man who has lost an eye. Medical Boards in different parts of the country have had a great deal of difficulty in arriving at a definite assessment of the disability because of the loss of an eye.

Q. That is a matter solely under the jurisdiction of the Pensions Commission under the statute?—A. Exactly.

Q. The question of the determining of the amount of a man's pension is fixed by the Pensions Commission and not by you?—A. Exactly.

Q. So you have nothing to do with it?—A. Nothing to do with it, except we might say that the assessment for the loss of an eye is much greater than is usual.

Mr. BENNETT: But that does not touch the question of revising the report.

The CHAIRMAN: You act as a sort of Equalization Board? When you get two reports from different parts of the country putting a different degree of stress upon the loss of an eye you make equalization, do you not?

By Mr. Bennett:

Q. You see this is vital from my standpoint. If you have any power over this matter other than the determination of the man's condition, his physical condition might become a political instead of a purely administrative matter, and I want to make it clear that you have no power over that soldier?—A. No power to alter the original report, but we get particular instructions from the Pensions Commission. We know what they want and we try to get the information for them. Our function is to get the information for the Pensions Commission.

Q. Your office has no power to alter or vary any finding of fact made by a Medical Board, has it?—A. No, sir.

Q. They do not transmit the evidence to you, do they?—A. The proceedings of the Board, I presume, form the evidence.

Q. They do not re-cite the questions they ask, they merely send you a precis as to their determination?—A. The form of the proceedings of a Medical Board are laid down in question and answer.

Q. And you send out that form to the Medical Board?—A. They have it in the respective Districts.

Q. It is a printed standard form? I think we might have a copy of that form before us ultimately. Perhaps you will submit to us one of these forms which you send out to the Medical Board?—A. Yes.

Q. And you send the Board no special instructions, but they are constituted for the administrative purpose only of determining the physical condition of the patient?—A. The standard instruction of the Pensions Commission are forwarded to the respective Districts, and are available to everybody there for guidance.

Q. Those instructions are for universal application from one end of Canada to the other?—A. Yes.

Q. So that every wounded and returned soldier who receives a pension is dealt with by the one universal rule?—A. Exactly.

Q. Carried out by the Medical Board and the Pensions Commission?—A. Yes.

Q. Let me start the matter from the bottom and finish it up. Mr. A is an applicant for a pension, as he is a wounded, returned soldier. Trace his history up to the time he gets his pension, so far as your Department is concerned.—A. Mr. A is in a Convalescent Home. The time comes when his case has reached the state of finality, medically. The Medical Officer immediately in charge of this case brings forward this case to the Medical Board.

Q. Who appoints the Medical Board?—A. The A.D.M.S. of the District.

Q. And it consists of how many men?—A. Three. It may occasionally happen, if medical officers are lacking, that there will be but two, but there must be three if possible.

By Mr. Middlebro:

Q. Is there just one Board for every Medical District?—A. No, Boards are provided as required.

By Hon. Mr. Murphy:

Q. As the cases arise?—A. Yes. The A.D.M.S. of the District provides the necessary medical personnel to constitute this Board.

By Brigadier-General Mason:

Q. Are they permanent?—A. It is very difficult to obtain permanency in any services since the war.

By Mr. Bennett:

Q. You get the best men you can?—A. Yes.

By Hon. Mr. Belcourt:

Q. Does the same Board which decides that Mr. A., for example, is unfit for further service and is a proper subject for a pension, also have to decide the question with [Colonel J. L. Potter.]

reference to a pension?—A. The Medical Board, in deciding as to disability and discharge do that work for the Pensions Commission. The proceedings of the Medical Board are then sent in by the members of the Board. It is made in a form provided by the Department, which has been settled by the Medical Officers after consideration. That is then forwarded to Ottawa.

Q. In addition to giving the questions and answers of the man, they make a report, do they not, making a finding as to his physical condition?—A. The form is made up in the questions and answers, so that when the Medical Officer brings forward a case, and passes upon it, the Board can make their remarks on anything in the statements made by him, and give their finding, which may agree, or not, with his statement.

Q. Then what next?—A. The proceedings of the Board are forwarded to Ottawa.

Q. That is when your Department first comes in in the case of Mr. "A"?—A. Our officer at Ottawa, yes.

Q. What do you do?—A. The "Board" is read over to see if it is correct in that there is no obvious error made, and that sufficient information has been given to enable the Pensions Commissioner to deal with the report when it comes to him.

Q. In other words to complete the revision?—A. A revision of it—a checking up, if you like.

Q. To see whether or not all the information that could be got has been given, that is your primary reason?—A. Yes.

Q. What next?—A. It is approved and passed to the Pensions Board.

By the Chairman:

Q. If the information is complete, in your judgment, it goes to the Pensions Board?—A. Yes.

Q. Supposing it is incomplete?—A. If it is incomplete, or if it is obvious that there is any other way of getting information from other documents, it is returned, it has to be, because we know the Pensions Board would not accept it.

By Mr. Bennett:

Q. Incompleteness is more or less negligence?—A. Possibly lack of information, to obtain information from other documents.

By the Chairman:

Q. It is returned to the original Board which made it?—A. Returned to the district where the A.D.M.S. sees that the case is reconsidered.

Q. On the ground that the data is insufficient for the Pensions Board?—A. Yes.

By Hon. Mr. Belcourt:

Q. Do you suggest that it is subject to insufficiency?—A. On the particular point involved.

Q. Do you suggest anything in addition any new matter to be gone into?—A. We suggest anything that we think is necessary to give the man's case a fair consideration. That is our whole object.

By Mr. Bennett:

Q. You mentioned a moment ago previous documents. Obviously those documents have nothing to do with the man's "then" physical condition, that Board has to determine the man's "then" physical condition, has it not?—A. It has.

Q. Then if the Board is there for the purpose of determining the man's "then" condition, what have these previous documents to do with that condition?—A. Because there are documents in connection with every soldier's case that have a direct bearing upon it. There is the previous Medical Board proceedings, conduct-sheet, etc., that may require consideration by the Medical Board.

Q. They are already on record?—A. As far as possible they are, but documents get lost sometimes.

[Colonel J. L. Potter.]

By Mr. Middlebro:

Q. When the man's answers come back to you, there will be found all the questions and answers asked by the local Board?—A. Yes.

Q. As soon as the questions are complete do you ever revise the comments that they make upon this examination, do you change the findings that they make?—A. No.

Q. You do not do that, you do not attempt to do that?—A. The officer checking that might make a remark of something that was very much out of the ordinary, but it does not in any way affect their findings.

Q. If you come to a different conclusion to what the Board came to on the questions and answers, would you take any action upon that?—A. If it were obvious that the Pensions Commission should have their attention drawn to it, it would be done.

Q. By way of recommendation?—A. By way of recommendation, but it must then go to the Pensions Board.

Brigadier-General MASON: Perhaps Colonel Potter might give us a specific case by way of illustration.

Hon. Mr. MURPHY: Would it not be better to get the ordinary procedure of the Board along the line started by Mr. Bennett before we proceed to that.

By Mr. Bennett:

Q. Along that line, I want to ask you, you have a Superior Officer?—A. Yes.

Q. I want to make you declare whether or not, after dealing with the question of pensions, it would be possible for a superior officer to say to you "Colonel Potter, I want Mr. "A" to get a better pension", and to get a recommendation whereby "A" would get a better pension than he would by the application of these principles which have been laid down for the guidance of the Board. There must be no chance of a soldier getting special consideration in that way?—A. My inclination, in a case like that, would be to make a special report to my superior officer on what has happened.

Q. But you have not any power?—A. No, I would never have any conversation like that with a man.

Q. I have been told many times that can happen, and we should make it quite clear that it is not so.—A. What can happen, as anybody can see, is I think this complaint has been made that a man has been harshly or unfairly treated, and when a complaint of that kind is made there is no reason why it should not be reconsidered.

Q. And the man himself can demand that?—A. Yes.

Q. So far as your Board is concerned, you have no original power to make a recommendation and to determine what he shall get?—A. We deal with nothing but the medical examination of the case.

Q. And if it is unsatisfactory that report goes back to the Board?—A. Yes.

Q. But the man himself might ask for reconsideration?—A. Certainly.

By Hon. Mr. Murphy:

Q. Supposing a report is complete and quite satisfactory, and you did not send it back to the medical Board, what would you do with it?—A. It goes to the Pension Commissioner.

Q. It goes out of your hands?—A. Yes.

By the Chairman:

Q. The word "revision" is not, I think, a proper word to be used in this connection. If the data which is laid before the witness is incomplete, he sends it back and asks them to make it complete, and if the data is complete, he forwards that to the Pensions Board.

By Brigadier-General Mason:

Q. Do you remember any case in which such action was taken?—A. It very, very frequently happens that the medical officers on the Medical Board do not give sufficiently detailed information of the man's present physical condition, and, knowing that, we then have to send it back, which means revision by the original Medical Board.

By Senator Belcourt:

Q. For the purpose of getting further information?—A. That is it.

By Hon. Mr. Murphy:

Q. The questions which have been asked by Mr. Bennett suggest another question which I should like to ask the witness: Is there any reason why the work done by the Hospitals Commission should not be done by your branch of the department? Is there, in your opinion, any practical difficulty in the way of your doing it?—A. That is a matter upon which I have submitted my report to my superior officers, and they now have it under advisement.

Q. Is that the report that is being put in this morning?—A. No, that is another matter. They have it under advisement, and they might answer your enquiry with reference to it.

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. What report is that?—A. It is a report on that question, practically.

Q. When was that filed?—A. I could not give you the exact date.

By Hon. Mr. Murphy:

Q. How long ago?—A. There are several reports on the subject; I would have to look up the correspondence. I may say that matter is one with my superior officers at the present time, and I think they might very properly answer that question.

By the Chairman:

Q. Is that a matter that the Adjutant-General would be able to tell us about? He is directly your superior officer?—A. Yes, I think it might be asked of him.

The CHAIRMAN: If he was questioned on that matter he could give us that information?

Hon. Mr. BELCOURT: He would likely say: My superior officer should be asked, and pass it on.

By Mr. Bennett:

Q. Whom do you report to?—A. It is a matter which has been under discussion for some time.

Q. You made several written reports before this Military Hospitals Command was formed at all?—A. I would not say the report was directed to the Adjutant-General. It was reporting on a situation generally which has been under the Adjutant-General's office.

By Hon. Mr. Murphy:

Q. To whom was the report made?—A. To the Department. Everything is for the Minister's information.

Q. It is to the Minister that the report went?—A. Really.

Hon. Mr. MURPHY: Mr. Bennett suggests that that report should be produced. I think it should be.

By the Chairman:

Q. As I understand, there are several of them?—A. They are more in the nature of minutes from time to time to the Adjutant-General, but the Minister was in possession of all the information.

Mr. BENNETT: The witness is right as to that. His duty is done when he has transmitted a report to his superior, and it is proper to get it from the superior and not from him. He is under military discipline to that extent.

The CHAIRMAN: Shall we ask the Department of Militia to furnish us with that report?

Concurred in, and instruction given to the Clerk accordingly.

Hon. Mr. MURPHY: How will these reports be identified? My question was: Is there any reason why the work done by the Hospitals Commission should not be done by the Army Medical Service?

Mr. BENNETT: The Chairman of the Military Hospitals Commission would tell us, as being responsible for that organization, how he thinks it should best be done.

The CHAIRMAN: Are you through with Col. Potter? If so we will let him retire. I may say that I have here, through the speed and despatch of the Militia Department, a copy of the report to the Hon. the Minister of Militia upon the Medical Service of Canada generally and in respect to the C.E.F. particularly, by Col. F. W. Marlowe, C.A.M.C., A.D.M.S., M.D. No. 2., acting as principal Medical Inspector in respect to the C.E.F., Canada, dated October 20th, 1916, also a Memorandum to the Adjutant-General upon Col. Marlow's report to the Hon. the Minister, by the A/D. G.M.S., dated 1st February, 1917. There is only one copy of these documents, and if it is the wish of the Committee we will have typewritten copies made and mailed to each member. Shall we permit Col. Potter to retire?

The WITNESS: I have been looking over my evidence, and I think there are some things I would like to revise.

The CHAIRMAN: Very well. If Col. Potter wants to revise his evidence we will be glad to have him here at half-past two this afternoon.

Witness retired.

The CHAIRMAN: I am going to ask the Committee to hear Senator McLennan, who has given much time to the vocational training and employment section of the Military Hospitals Commission. Senator McLennan is here to-day, and he is going away next week, and I think he can give us a statement regarding the work along these lines carried on by the Hospitals Commission that would be useful. Is it the pleasure of the Committee that we should ask Senator McLennan to say a few words?

The Hon. J. S. McLENNAN, Called:

The CHAIRMAN: I have already mentioned to the Committee your Introduction to the Special Bulletin of the Military Hospitals Commission. You might tell us about the rehabilitation of the soldier as carried on by the Hospitals Commission.

Hon. Mr. McLENNAN: The whole subject was new to us in Canada, as it was to everybody dealing with the problems of the war. What struck one in the early days in our smaller convalescent homes was the great disadvantage of idleness. If you went in any time after nine o'clock in the morning you would find the men in idleness, simply putting in the time amusing themselves until it was time to go to bed. Many of the men had been for a considerable time in hospital on the other side before they came out to Canada, and they were then fairly well cured men, but would require treatment for a good many months with us. I suppose there would be many men who from the time of their wounds or disability, would require over a year before they would be in a position to go before the Pensions Board and be discharged. Therefore, during that time the effect of idleness was demoralizing to them, rendering them less active and less capable of going out into the world and taking their proper positions as civilians. Everybody connected with the care of the soldier saw that it was extremely undesirable that he should go out and live in idleness for the rest of his life, either with his pension, or in a soldiers' home, or as a member of something that would correspond to the Grand Army of the Republic in the United States. The guiding conception, I think, was that we were not dealing with soldiers in the ordinary sense, but that we were dealing with citizens who had taken up arms for a cause they considered worthy, had suffered in that cause, and were to be returned as soon as possible to what they were in essence, namely citizens of Canada again. So the first phase of the work that was taken up was to give these men occupations which would be incidentally beneficial to them in the way of education. What that education was, or what the value of the output should be, were not matters very much to be considered from the economic side, but from the social side it would give these men during certain hours of the day a mental and physical training that would benefit them and sharpen them up, which is a distinct advantage. Schools for that purpose were established in nearly all our convalescent homes. I may say gentlemen, that I did not expect to speak to you this morning, and that a more detailed account will be given to you by Mr. Kidner, who has been the active officer in establishing this work. I will give you merely the general principles on which the Commission has been endeavouring to work. In what you may call occupational training the men do all sorts of things; there are some simple subjects, they brush up their three "r's" as it were, make fancy articles, such as boxes and picture frames, and in many cases there is a metal industry. In Montreal the men are engaged in wood and metal working, and they have orders for more of that kind of thing than they can turn out.

By Hon. Mr. Belcourt:

Q. What are those things?—A. Trays, tables, and that kind of woodworking, and some metal working, and people come and buy them. They are very creditable performances.

Q. How many men are doing that kind of work?—A. Mr. Kidner will tell you that. The number would vary, because that work depends entirely on the length of time that a man is in the home. The other class are the men who are unable to resume their former occupations. These men the Government has, through the Commission, undertaken to train in some new trade or occupation, which they might pursue in place of the trade they are no longer able to carry on. For example, a house painter who has been touched with shrapnel and is subject to fits of giddiness cannot any longer carry on his old trade because he would be liable to fall from a ladder. Hence, he is trained in some other work, and the general principle universally followed in dealing with these matters is to take advantage of all the skill that is left to the man. Instead of making that man a motor engineer, for example, you would probably endeavour to direct his attention into some form which would enable him to exercise his skill with a brush, and perhaps make him a sign writer. In the same way, we deal with men in other trades. For example, a molder is suffering from a wound which has weakened his back so that he is no longer able to lift heavy weights, as a molder has to do. Such a man would be trained along lines in which his skill in the working of metals would count, so that he could take the place of foreman in a molding shop by improving his education.

One thing that delayed the progress of the work in that regard in its earlier stages was the uncertainty about a pension. It was deemed of very great advantage in France and in England, if a man learned any useful trade or occupation during his period of convalescence that increased his earning power, to reduce his pension. Last year, however, the Canadian Parliament, with the greatest wisdom, laid down the general principle that increased earning capacity should not interfere with the pension.

By Mr. Middlebro:

Q. The French Government still reduces the pension according as the man develops his earning power?—A. They were doing so the last time the matter came under my knowledge.

[Hon. J. S. McLennan.]

Q. And the British Government were doing the same thing?—A. The whole question of pensions has been up for consideration in Great Britain, and I do not know to what extent there has been a reduction. Mr. Kidner tells me that the British Government have reduced the sustenance allowance but not the pension.

Q. In reading the literature of Britain and of France on this subject, you must always bear in mind that their pensions take cognizance of the man's ability to earn.—A. Yes. Canada has established the very wise provision that no deduction should be made in a man's pension by reason of his undertaking to equip himself to engage in some form of industry, and it has been of enormous advantage in dealing with this matter. For that reason men have been much more ready to take up the learning of some occupation which would enable them to become useful citizens rather than remain dependent on their pensions.

A further difficulty we encountered in the progress of our work had reference to the sustenance of the man and his family during the time he was undergoing re-education. That, however, has been provided for, and Mr. Kidner will disclose to you the details of the arrangement.

By the Chairman:

Q. There is an Order in Council which covers that?—A. There is an Order in Council which covers that. These are the two great classes with which we have been identified, and they involve the provision of technical training, and what you might call elementary training in practically every home that we have. But between these two classes of men, there are others who need to be given occupation on medical and other grounds. Quite a few men, when their period of treatment is over, will go back to their old occupations with more or less of a pension, but it seems a pity that they should not, during the four, six or eight months that they are in our institutions, be given a good sound training along technical and educational lines, particularly as the Government is providing for the other two classes in these respects. Doubtless action will be taken in this direction, although there has yet been no formal decision by the Commission with respect to it. Certainly we should endeavour to do the very best we can for these men while they are with us. Even should a man be returned to his own trade he can get from us a training, if he is willing to take it, that will make of him a better artisan, or craftsman, as the case may be. This idea has commended itself, I think, to everybody who has been consulted in regard to it. Those men who remain in the hospital for a long time form a not inconsiderable number, and if we can, without any serious additional expenditure, make any of them more intelligent and efficient in their own trades, or shift them into other pursuits from occupations in which they have been more or less misfits, I think we shall be justified in doing so.

The matter is likely to develop—and in this connection I am anticipating, I hope, the Commission's decision—for the Ontario Government, as you all know, has evacuated the Whitby Institution, and turned it over to us. The building, when completed, will accommodate from 1,000 to 1,200 men, and will afford a splendid opportunity for the installation of schools of a very wide range without increasing the cost. At Guelph also the Ontario Government is giving us very large accommodation, enabling us to utilize the factories and various shops which have been established there by the Provincial authorities, not operating them entirely by means of returned soldiers, because that could not be done, but in each department, training a certain number all the time. The industries in question include, as perhaps you know, woollen mills and furniture factories. Furthermore, the Agricultural College is located at Guelph, and there the returned soldiers who are so disposed may get a good training in agricultural science.

These are the lines and the places at which our work will be carried on at first, and we shall develop it elsewhere through the country as the necessity is seen to arise. But in the meantime in all the provinces work is being carried on in the two other Departments, and the general principle we would be inclined to advance is that we want to make a man take up productive work, as far as possible, rather than administrative work. That second class of men will probably produce a considerable amount of material, which is sufficient in volume, to be marketed and to be produced in a large way. There comes in the question as to what the man should get for the work. If a man is idle he gets his $1.10 a day, just the same as if he works; but you do not want to give the man enough, even if he is producing something, to make him want to settle in any institution indefinitely; and apparently the sound principle of remuneration would be to give him something to stimulate him to work and learn his trade as well as possible and, in no event, to make him feel that he wants to settle in one of our institutions indefinitely.

By Hon. Mr. Murphy:

Q. Unless what he receives in connection with that kind of work is less in an institution than what he would receive for the same work outside there would be a tendency that way?—A. That is the line on which we are working, although in no institution has that stage yet been reached.

By Hon. Mr. Belcourt:

Q. Have you found that the inducement which is offered the men of bettering their condition has been appreciated by any large number?—A. A very considerable number, and, I think, on the whole the result is gratifying. I would like to call the attention of the Committee to one question, which is a very important one, and one that we have not yet dealt with: there is now abundant labour in Canada, but the time will come when there will be less, distinctly less.

The CHAIRMAN: Abundance of labour?

The WITNESS: Abundance of opportunity for labour, I should say—demand for labour; but the time will come when that will probably not be the case. A great many of our men will be below normal: they will be invalids, some of them without one eye, others without one arm, or with some other disability. Now when that time comes and the employer is in a position to choose between the man with some disability and a "whole" man, in other words when there is no scarcity of labour, the employer can very well pick and choose his men, and he will naturally choose a "whole" man, with whom there will be less risk, one more likely to be absolutely regular at work, and at the same time less liable to accident.

By Hon. Mr. Belcourt:

Q. If these men in the meantime have improved their knowledge of their particular trade or avocation, will that not compensate a great deal for the other disability?—A. Certainly, a great deal, and that is what we hope we will achieve, that men who go through our institutions will be so much more expert and so much better trained in their work, whatever it may be, that they will have very much to compensate for the physical disability from which they suffer. But that, I am inclined to believe, will not reach far enough, and I think Canada will have to take up as France has taken up, and as England is taking up, the question of the State paying the extra accident insurance which that man's disability lays on him.

Mr. MIDDLEBRO: In Ontario we have the Workmen's Compensation Act which covers that point.

Hon. Mr. BELCOURT: And in Quebec that is also provided for.

The WITNESS: Yes, but the employer will not take a maimed man. You have the one-armed soldier, who goes back into the factory, or perhaps you have the one-eyed soldier, both are a little more liable to be caught in the machinery, or the one-legged man is more liable to accident than the man with two feet.

[Hon. J. S. McLennan.]

Mr. MIDDLEBRO: Yes, but his compensation in case of accident is fixed on the basis of the salary he is earning and therefore the liability of the employer from that risk it not so great.

The WITNESS: But if the employer can choose between two men, one with a disability, and one without that disability he will be inclined to choose the one without the disability.

Mr. MIDDLEBRO: But in case of accident the employer will have to pay compensation for injury according to the wages a man earns, so that the man that gets less wages will not get as much compensation as the employer would have to pay in the case of a better man.

The WITNESS: That is what we do not want that any of our returned soldiers should get half wages or no employment.

Mr. MIDDLEBRO: You do not think he will be as efficient with a limb off as he would be without having a limb off?

Hon. Mr. BELCOURT: The pension is given in compensation for that.

The WITNESS: It seems to me that is a question which should have some consideration as to whether we should do anything along those lines or not.

Mr. MIDDLEBRO: You started off on the assumption that it might injure that man because he was unable to earn a living by reason of the injury received. The answer to that is if you, as you say, take the mutilated man and by treatment he is enabled to earn good wages, therefore he will be getting, including his pension, as much as the other man, who is not maimed, will. In other words, he would get as much wages as the whole man, and he would get his pension besides.

The WITNESS: I have said that we aim to make him as efficient as before, or to supplement by the training the physical disability under which he suffers.

Hon. Mr. McCURDY: He would still carry extra risk of accident all the same, by reason of that physical disability.

Mr. MIDDLEBRO: I think, speaking offhand, with what he gets by way of pension, as well as what he gets with his improved education would be more than he could make as a "well" man; although I think he should be placed in a little better position than he was before.

The CHAIRMAN: You might say, Senator, what you had in mind upon that question.

The WITNESS: This is largely my own personal opinion, I am not speaking now for the whole Commission, because it has not yet been worked out—I think that the man with a disability is less likely to earn a livelihood where the employer is in a position to choose between two men, one with a disability, and one without.

Mr. MIDDLEBRO: At the same price.

The WITNESS: At the same price. That, in so far as it is a physical question, as regards the risk of accident, which involves that employer, the risk is greater with a man who has some physical disability than it is with a man who has none. I submit that it is a question whether the country should consider that risk and that disability and provide extra accident insurance for the man in that position in order that he may find after he has been trained that he will still be in a position to get employment on terms not unequal with the whole man.

Mr. MIDDLEBRO: The principle is all right.

The WITNESS: Another thing, even if the man is equally well off financially, the fact that we want as many of these returned soldiers to be producers as possible is one that should not be lost sight of. Even, if the man has a pension or private means, it is to the economic advantage of Canada to make that man productive, and that when he enters into the labour market that he should be at no disadvantage as compared with the unmaimed man in his chances of seeking employment.

[Hon. J. S. McLennan.]

By the Chairman:

Q. That is the basic principle you follow?—A. Yes, and which many of the continental nations are following, France particularly. I do not think it has reached the stage of law yet that the State should assume that burden or obviate that particular disability.

By Hon. Mr. McCurdy:

Q. Is not this the situation, Senator: that where a soldier is maimed, and therefore more liable to accident on account of his disability, when he applies to an accident insurance company for insurance they in turn charge him a higher rate, which additional rate is provided by the French or British governments?—A. They would assume so to speak, the difference between his rate as an ordinary man and his rate as a maimed man.

Hon. Mr. McCURDY: In other words, would put him in the same position as before he was injured as regards accident insurance.

By Hon. Mr. Belcourt:

Q. You are only referring to physical disability, not to pathological conditions as a result of indigestion or rheumatism for example?—A. No.

Mr. BENNETT: That is covered by the Workmen's Compensation Act in any event.

By Mr. Middlebro:

Q. In France as a man becomes efficient, his pension is decreased?—A. That is not yet determined, that has been the practice.

Q. It is the law now in France that the amount of pension determines his ability to earn a living?—A. It has been, but there is a very strong agitation and unless it has been recently passed it has not come to a determination one way or the other, as I remember the state of the question.

By Hon. Mr. Belcourt:

Q. Will you tell us how long a man may take advantage of these betterment conditions which you speak of, this technical training, can he have as much of that as he chooses?—A. No, practically not, only while he is being treated. And there is a question coming up there that has not yet been quite determined by us and which is now under consideration. A man goes in to a home and the medical prediction is that he will be six months in the convalescent home while he is having whatever is the trouble with him straightened out and brought down to the lowest possible point.

Q. If he is able to take the training he can do so?—A. Yes, and the whole European experience has shown that the nearer to the time of the actual wound that he can commence his re-education the better. There is this doubtful situation, you assume a man is going to be six months in a home having his bad arm or leg, or other ailment, healed up. You start in to train him, or to improve him in his old trade, or to retrain him. Suppose he gets on very well physically and his physical cure is completed in four months let us say. Now, he is two-thirds through his educational training or perhaps more, and it seems a pity to waste that, and yet we have not as yet felt justified in keeping that man on under pay and allowances in order to complete his education. So that is a question we will have to decide, and I think probably the line will be that if the man will make some sacrifice, I think it would be desirable, say, to board and lodge him and give him pocket money if he is willing to go on with his education, rather than to turn him out for the sake of a couple of months and so lose the work you have been doing on him for four months.

By Mr. Ross (Middlesex):

Q. Have you any definite rule in regard to when a man shall be examined by a board to determine the amount of his pension? From what you have said it seems to me that that man should be examined just as soon as he possibly can be in order that his pension can be determined, because he is then more willing to learn. Is a man in the hospital, six days, or three months or six months before he is examined for re-education? It would lead to economy I think to have him examined as soon as he goes into a convalescent home. What is the practice as a matter of fact?—A. The man is examined by the medical board Col. Potter spoke of, and he is sent to one of our homes where he is under medical supervision and treatment all the time.

Q. Is that done promptly, or do they dilly dally?—A. The pension is based on his ultimate disability. When our medical skill is no longer able to improve that man's condition, then he is able to go before a medical board and have his pension determined on the remaining amount of stiffness, for example.

Q. You mean you keep him there for six weeks or three months for the purpose of finding out what his pension would be?

Hon. Mr. BELCOURT: It depends on the doctor in charge of the hospital. The question is whether the doctor exercises his proper discretion.

The WITNESS: We keep him as long as his physical condition can be improved. Just as soon as our medical staff says that man is as well cured as he can be, then he is boarded.

By Mr. Ross (Middlesex):

Q. It rests with your doctor to say so?—A. The doctors in charge of our home say when that man should be boarded.

Q. Are they doing that as soon as he comes to a certain point?—A. We are trying to, and on the whole—there have been cases where there has been delay in the early days when the Militia medical service was terribly rushed.

By Hon. Mr. Belcourt:

Q. Have you an officer whose special duty it is to see that that is done?—A. Yes, the medical officer in charge, and in addition to that we have an inspector from the head office, one of Col. Thompson's assistants, who travels over the whole country looking into the medical administration of our hospitals and homes, and one very important part of his duty is to see that the men are not kept there any longer than they should be, or to transfer them from one home to another where they will get better appliances.

By the Chairman:

Q. How about your out patients. Are they also under the same supervision so that as soon as an out patient is regarded as cured, he too may be boarded and his pension settled?—A. Yes, there has been a very material improvement in that respect, both in reducing the number of out patients and in getting them through and boarded.

Q. I was going to ask if, as you state of late there has been a tightening up, you are able to say that men who are ready for their discharge, are no longer delayed in your hospitals because their pensions have not been adjudicated upon?—A. I think there has been a very great improvement in that respect.

Q. It is a waste to the State to have a man still in your hospital when he is ready for discharge, because the next step has not been technically performed for him?—A. The last step taken in regard to that is that forms were being prepared in order to place the responsibility for any such delay: There would be a notification, a fortnight or ten days in advance, to the Medical Board, that a patient would probably be ready for discharge, or rather for examination by the Board, on the 10th of the month, or whatever date it might be. If there was any delay in his treatment, so that the man would not be ready at the specified time, it would be reported to the Examining Board. Our head office is to be informed that the notification was given and also if any delay occurs. It is hoped by such action to eliminate the possibility of delay.

Witness discharged.

[Hon. J. S. McLennan.]

Mr. T. B. KIDNER called, sworn and examined.

By the Chairman:

Q. In the Order in Council creating the Military Hospitals Commission, Provision B, we find that the work of the Commission falls under three heads. The second head is the provision of vocational training for those who, through disability incurred on active service, would be unable to follow their previous occupations. I understand you are the officer, under the Military Hospitals Commission, in whose hands the carrying out of this work especially lies?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You may give a statement to the Committee of what steps have been taken since the creation of the Military Hospitals Commission towards the vocational training of injured men.

Hon. Mr. MURPHY: If you will permit me, before doing that, it might help in the appreciation of Mr. Kidner's evidence if he would tell us what his previous occupation was prior to assuming his present position.

The WITNESS: I was a teacher of technical subjects and an organizer of technical work in England. In 1900 I came to Canada as an organizer under the Macdonald Fund, of which Dr. James W. Robertson was the administrator. I was sent to the province of Nova Scotia to organize technical work and I spent four years there.

By the Chairman:

Q. Under the Provincial Government?—A. For three years under the Macdonald Fund, working with the approval of the Provincial Government, and for one year under the Government itself. I then went to New Brunswick, where, for seven years, I carried on similar work.

By Hon. Mr. Murphy:

Q. For the Provincial Government?—A. Yes, for the Government of New Brunswick. In 1911 I was appointed Director of Technical Education for the city of Calgary, where I developed certain new lines of technical work and had general charge of all the technical work in the schools. A year ago, about January 1, I obtained leave of absence for an indefinite period from the Calgary school authorities.

By the Chairman:

Q. In order that you might take up this work?—A. In order that I might take up this work.

By Mr. Middlebro:

Q. Have you been overseas?—A. Do you mean since the war broke out?

Q. I mean, have you gone over there purposely to examine the institutions on the other side?—A. No, it has not been possible. There has been a great deal too much to do here.

The CHAIRMAN: Perhaps the best way to proceed will be for you to give your statement, and when members of the Committee ask you to do so, you can amplify it. You can go back to the main lines of your statement after the explanations have been given.

The WITNESS: Supplementing what Senator MacLennan has told you, I might say that at the meeting of the Hospitals Commission, held in Montreal on February 5, 1916, Senator MacLennan offered to devote himself especially to the work of functional and vocational re-education. The offer was accepted, and the honourable senator has taken the closest interest in the matter ever since. I make this explanation because Senator MacLennan is referred to in one or two extracts from the minutes of that meeting, which I should like to read. The following is an extract from the minutes of the meeting of the Commission, held at Montreal on February 5: (Reads).

The following extract from the minutes of the meeting of the Commission held in Montreal on February 5, 1916, states the general plan upon which the work has been carried on in the Convalescent Hospitals:—

[Mr. T. B. Kidner:]

Vocational Re-education:—

Mr. T. B. Kidner, Vocational Secretary, suggested that the term "Functional re-education" be used to denote the retraining of the disabled men on the physical side and that the term "Vocational re-education" be used to denote the technical training for new occupations. As Mr. MacLennan had said these two phases of re-education must be closely related from the beginning in each case.

By Hon. Mr. Murphy:

Q. Are the definitions of these respective terms peculiar to this Commission, or are they generally accepted definitions?—A. They are the definitions used in France and by ourselves. They are new terms in medicine and in education, but they are becoming general.

By the Chairman:

Q. As I understand, the distinction between them is that functional re-education is to enable a man to pursue his old vocation?—A. No, sir. Functional re-education is a medical matter.

Q. That is to put him in physical condition?—A. Or perhaps mental, so that his body will function properly, in all directions. As far as may be possible, functional training should proceed side by side with vocational re-education. Now let me quote further: (Reads).

"Mr. Kidner stated that preparations are being made for a complete survey of the physical and functional disability of each case; also of the educational and industrial history of the man. The information thus obtained will be carefully considered by a vocational counsellor with the view of determining the best kind of occupation the invalid can follow; taking into account his physical disability, the trade or calling which he followed previously, his aptitudes, his intelligence and his tastes. Mr. Kidner also emphasized the advisability of taking account of the needs of the various industries so that there may be no difficulty in the "placement" of the re-educated men; also that assistance may be afforded to industries in need of trained workers.

"As an immediate step which the Commission might take, Mr. Kidner recommended for consideration the plan of opening a school in connection with each Convalescent Home. Under a suitable teacher, instruction could be given in English, Practical Arithmetic, Industrial History and Geography and related subjects. For those whose mother tongue is not English (of whom there are likely to be a considerable number) instruction in the English language would be an important feature of the work."

That, I may say, refers to our foreign born population of whom there are a great many in the West, who enlisted in the C. E. F.

"In addition to the general subjects, as outlined in the foregoing, provision should be made for instruction in some simple forms of manual work, such as Draughting, Modelling, Basketry, Bench-work in wood and metal, etc. A considerable amount of voluntary help may be expected in this work, but it will be necessary in most places for the Commission to employ an instructor who shall be responsible for the organization and conduct of the school, together with assistants in the larger centres. These instructors should be carefully selected with a view to their ability to deal with adult pupils.

"The instruction provided should be open to all inmates, also to outpatients residing near the homes, whether or not they are later to be cases for re-education for new occupations. The value would be threefold. First, it would provide occupation for the men and thus assist in maintaining the discipline in the Homes; second, it would afford interest and exercise and thus have a therapeutic value; and, third, it would enable a man to improve his chances for employment after recovery.

"In the case of men destined for technical re-education experience has shown that almost all men require training in general subjects before they can properly benefit by special training.

"After some questions and discussion, the Commission decided that Mr. Kidner should proceed at once with the organization of schools in the Convalescent Homes."

That was at the meeting in Montreal, in February last.

By the Chairman:

Q. Are you prepared to tell us at this stage of the organization of these schools, and how many of them there are?—A. I can give you that, Sir, and the subjects taught in the different institutions of which I have a list before me. The first on the list is the convalescent hospital at Ogden, Calgary, Alberta, which is now known as the Red Cross Military Convalescent Hospital.

By Brigadier-General Mason:

Q. How many are there in that hospital?—A. About 125. The subjects taught are gardening and poultry work, Civil Service preparation, commercial and business subjects, general elementary subjects and arts and crafts, that is wood and light metal work, motor mechanics and electrical work.

By Hon. Mr. Belcourt:

Q. What staff have you to impart this knowledge?—A. There are four or five men there, Sir, five men and the Director of the whole province.

By Hon. Mr. Murphy:

Q. Where were these men obtained? Were they engaged in other schools and taken from those other schools to that institution?—A. We have had very great difficulty in getting sufficient instructors. We had not enough qualified instructors to supply the needs of Canada before the war and, for the past seventeen years, we have been importing men from Great Britain and the United States for our technical work. As a great many technical men enlisted (no less than five men from the technical staff in the city of Calgary alone), and went over-seas, and that is true of most cities—one of the great difficulties we have experienced has been in obtaining suitable instructors. We have obtained them in various ways; in one instance we procured a man's discharge when he was going overseas. In other instances we have brought men back, men who have been slightly disabled, from the other side. One of the best instructors we have at Montreal is a man who was wounded and was sent over as the Conducting Officer with a party of sick, and we have retained him with the permission of the Adjutant-General. Yesterday another man was engaged, a young man who was hurt, shot through the hand, who is to be engaged in supervision. It is very difficult to obtain suitable instructors.

Q. Where do you get the rest of your men?—A. From various sources.

Q. From the United States?—A. We have not yet brought in any men from the United States, although some of our men have lived in the United States and obtained experience there, but it has not been necessary up to the present to bring in men from the United States.

Q. During the seventeen years that you speak of, have there not been men in Canada, Canadians, who are qualified for your business?—A. Yes; I am speaking on general lines. We were short of instructors before the war and it retarded the work because of our inability to get instructors. The Ross Convalescent Hospital, at Sydney, N.S., instructs in wood-work, mechanical drawing, general subjects, and commercial subjects.

By Hon. Mr. Belcourt:

Q. Will you give us the number of the staff in each case?—A. The difficulty is that if I gave you the staff there it might not give the information you want. I could give you a return covering the whole of our schools, but the staff in that particular instance, as in some other cases, go to the school classes for certain periods through the day. We have four instructors there; each teaching for part-time only.

Q. Well, take the Calgary school?—A. Our experience is, generally, that if there are one hundred names on the list, it needs from three to four instructors to look after them properly. In the case of the smaller Homes, such as the Ross Home, which only accommodates from 30 to 35 men, we have had "visiting" teachers who are paid so much per hour for teaching. In the Ross Home if their time were all added together, it would be about equal to the whole time of one and a quarter instructors.

Q. Do you find that by that method there is sufficient instruction?—A. Yes, in that instance.

Q. Do you think it is necessary to augment that teaching?—A. We do the best we can, but in small Convalescent Homes that is one of the difficulties we have to contend with; it is most difficult to arrange for proper instruction in some of the smaller Convalescent Hospitals or Homes.

Q. You spoke of Whitby, what was that institution used for before it came into your possession?—A. That was one of the very best planned institutions for the treatment of mental cases and has a model equipment. A party of men were sent in there last week for the first time, and the equipment for vocational instruction is being sent there now.

The next on my list is the Clayton Military Convalescent Hospital at Halifax, which was specially established to deal with those coloured men of whom Dr. Thompson spoke; in fact that was entirely a re-education centre; every man there had to be re-educated for some new vocation because he had suffered amputation. The occupations for which these men were trained were, garment-making, shoe-making and repairing, tinsmithing, chauffeur, bookkeeping. In addition, each man was given instruction in general subjects.

By Hon. Mr. Belcourt:

Q. I understand there were 100 negroes there; did they come from Canada? Where did they come from?—A. From Jamaica.

Q. Are they going to settle in Canada?—A. They have gone back to Jamaica, but the Military Hospitals Commission as it had the staff and conveniences, undertook to provide these men with vocational training and artificial limbs at the cost of the Imperial authorities.

Q. These men are not eligible for pension in Canada?—A. No, Sir, they are Imperial soldiers. In the Grey Nuns Hospital at Montreal are taught commercial and general subjects, woodworking, drafting, motor mechanics, shoe repairing and light metal work. At the Deer Lodge Convalescent Hospital, Winnipeg, we have gardening and poultry, arts and crafts, drafting, commercial and general courses, motor mechanics, welding, etc.

By Hon. Mr. McCurdy:

Q. As you go on, can you tell us the number of patients or students in each of these places?—A. I will give that later, Sir. I should like to point out that wherever there has been accommodation, in addition to the subjects suggested at the meeting of the Commission last year, outdoor subjects have been arranged, such as gardening, poultry-keeping and bee-keeping, with the hope that some men, at least will be given a bias towards these things and take them up afterwards, even if only as hobbies, in civil life. At Esquimalt, at the Old Naval Hospital, we have motor mechanics, commercial subjects, general subjects and woodworking. At the Parks Convalescent Home, St. John, N.B., we have general subjects, mechanical drawing, woodworking and commercial subjects. At Savard Park Convalescent Hospital, Quebec, we have general and commercial subjects and woodworking. In Toronto we have elementary general subjects in a room borrowed from the Lansdowne public school for Spadina patients. For patients at Spadina and General Hospitals, we have elementary general subjects, civil service preparation, commercial branches and telegraphy, in rooms at the Y.M.C.A. We have woodworking in the Central Military Convalescent Hospital; motor mechanics, machine shop practice and electrical work at the Central Technical School. There are also at the Technical School a few other students scattered around in other classes such as advertising, plumbing, printing, painting and decorating, etc. Shoe repairing has been asked for, and is being started this week. In London we have wood carving, cabinet making, and general subjects at the Central Military Convalescent Hospital; and machine shop practice, carpentry, show-card writing, mechanical drawing and electrical work at the Technical and Arts School. In Hamilton we have elementary work, commercial subjects, and light shop work at the Victoria Military Convalescent Hospital; and machine shop practice, mechanical drawing, electrical work, and shop mathematics at the Technical and Art School. At Regina, we have woodworking and general subjects, gardening and poultry work at the St. Chads Military Convalescent Hospital. At the Sir Sanford Fleming Military Convalescent Hospital in Ottawa, instruction is provided in commercial and general subjects, wood work and light metalworking and motor mechanics is being arranged for. These classes have all been established in consequence of the instructions given at the meeting of the Commission a year ago.

[Mr. T. B. Kidner.]

By the Chairman:

Q. You might tell us at this point if all this vocational work is directly under the National Hospitals Commission or if it is under provincial supervision to any extent?—A. If I may go on, sir, it will come out in the next part.

Q. Very well.—A. After these instructions were given me, and the members had approved of it in general, they suggested that I should confer with the Provincial Commissions and the leading educationists of each Province, and present a report dealing with further aspects of the question of re-education. The preliminary work authorized did not consider re-education for new occupations, but for the improvement of the men during convalescence and it was to be offered them irrespective of whether or not they might later have to learn a new trade.

Q. Do I understand then that where a man is convalescent, if he is trained by you it is a Hospitals Commission matter, but if the man is well and has to be taught a vocation it is a provincial matter?—A. No, sir.

Q. I want to get the line of demarkation between the jurisdiction of the Hospitals Commission and the jurisdiction of the Provincial authorities?—A. A meeting of the Commission was held in Ottawa on March 13, 1916, and the following is an extract from the minutes (reads):—

The Vocational Secretary submitted a statement of his visits to Montreal and Toronto and, arising out of these minutes, suggestions for a scheme of organization for the educational work of the Commission.

As it appeared from the Vocational Secretary's remarks that there was a possibility of the question arising of provincial autonomy in matters of education it was resolved that the scheme be referred to a committee consisting of Mr. W. D. McPherson, Honourable J. S. McLennan and Honourable George A. Simard, with power to act.

[Mr. T. B. Kidner.]

Q. Were these gentlemen all members of the Hospitals Commission?—A. Mr. McPherson was, as President of the Provincial Soldiers' Aid Association, an ex-officio member; the Honourable George A. Simard was also a member ex-officio as President of the Quebec Soldiers' Employment Commission. The Honourable Mr. McLennan was a member of the Commission. They were given power to act.

Q. Just one question for clarification: the Soldiers' Aid Association is not a part of the Military Hospitals Commission?—A. You will find in the bulletins that we have put in, Sir, that it is regarded as a Committee of the Hospitals Commission.

Q. Is there a Soldiers' Aid Association in each province?—A. Yes, Sir, but under different names, unfortunately.

Q. By whom is it appointed?—A. By the provincial authorities.

Q. And are they regarded as sub-agents of the Hospitals Commission?—A. I would prefer that answer should be given by Mr. Scammell.

Following the appointment of this Committee a meeting of the Commission was held in Ottawa on April 29, when the following action was taken. (Reads):—

The Secretary submitted a report which is attached hereto, which was drawn up as the result of a meeting in Montreal, held pursuant to a Resolution passed at the last meeting of the Commission, at which the Honourable J. S. McLennan, the Honourable Geo. A. Simard and the Vocational Secretary, were present. This report was adopted on a motion proposed by Mr. W. K. George and seconded by Mr. Lloyd Harris.

The report submitted a memorandum which was published in Bulletin No. 2, on pages 3 and 6, and recommended that it form the basis of the arrangements to be made between the Military Hospitals Commission and the provinces.

MEMORANDUM.

The facilities for training disabled soldiers referred to in this memorandum are intended to apply only to men whose disability, incurred on service, is such that they cannot follow their previous occupations, except that all men undergoing treatment in any of the Military Convalescent Homes and Hospitals under the Commission may be given instruction in general subjects and elementary vocational training while they are inmates or out-patients of such Homes or Hospitals.

In order to carry out such a scheme with efficiency and economy, it would seem necessary to provide for:—

1. A Board or Boards competent to consider and determine who would be fit subjects for such training:

2. A body for each province which would have general advisory powers for the co-ordination of local efforts and for securing the co-operation of training and educational institutions:

3. Vocational Officers who would be in immediate charge of the work in each locality.

The following procedure is suggested:—

1. BOARD TO CONSIDER WHO WOULD BE FIT SUBJECTS FOR TRAINING.

The Commission to arrange for a Board or Boards, as may be deemed necessary, each of three persons, to be termed a "Disabled Soldiers' Training Board," in each place where it may be deemed necessary. The Board to consist of:—

- (a) A member of the Provincial Advisory Committee.
- (b) A Vocational Officer.
- (c) A medical man.

NOTE.—As the training of disabled men for new occupations is likely to involve a considerable sum of money for the support of men and their dependents (if any) and, in many cases for tuition, each case for training should be considered individually on its merits.

Duties of Board.

(a) To consider all cases which, in the light of the medical reports, appear to be subjects for special training and to report upon each, with suitable recommendations, to the Military Hospitals Commission.

(b) To consider from time to time reports of the progress of men undergoing training and to make recommendation as to change of treatment, or of training, or its discontinuance.

2. PROVINCIAL ADVISORY COMMITTEE OF TRAINING.

The Provincial Commission to be asked to nominate suitable persons in each province to act as an Advisory Committee on the training of disabled soldiers.

The personnel of a Provincial Advisory Committee might include:—

- (a) Some person acquainted with the processes of education.
- (b) An agricultural educationist.
- (c) An employer.
- (d) A labour representative.

Duties of a Provincial Advisory Committee on Training.

(a) To prepare, with the assistance of the Vocational Officer, schemes of instruction in general subjects and elementary vocational training, in, or in connection with the Convalescent Homes or Hospitals of the Province, for the approval of the Military Hospitals Commission, which may then sanction the expenditure involved in any scheme, or suggest modifications, or otherwise, of the scheme.

(b) To organize and carry out such schemes as may be approved by the Military Hospitals Commission.

(c) To maintain a regular inspection, preferably through the Vocational Officer, of all instruction, being carried on under schemes approved by the Military Hospitals Commission.

(d) To make a survey of the facilities at present, and from time to time, available for vocational training in (a) public educational institutions; (b) private educational institutions; and (c) private workshops, farms, etc.

(e) To assist the Employment Commission by providing definite information as to the training received by men who desire assistance in obtaining employment.

(f) To appoint or approve local sub-committees on training in connection with local Employment Committees in centres where it may appear to be necessary to have such a Committee.

(g) Generally, to advise and assist in the training of returned soldiers in every possible way.

3. OFFICERS IN IMMEDIATE CHARGE OF THE WORK IN EACH LOCALITY.

The Military Hospitals Commission to appoint qualified persons, to be termed Vocational Officers, whose sphere of work may extend over one or more provinces; every such officer to be ex-officio a member of and to act as Executive Officer of the Advisory Committee on training in the province or provinces to which he may be assigned.

Duties of a Vocational Officer.

(a) To act in co-operation with the Advisory Committee on training of the province, or provinces, to which he may be assigned, as indicated in Section 2.

(b) To make personal surveys, when necessary, of all cases where the man indicates his desire to be helped to obtain employment and to transmit suggestions on each case to the Provincial Employment Committee or its local sub-committee.

(c) To act as a member of the local "Disabled Soldiers' Training Board" and to transmit its recommendations to the Military Hospitals Commission.

(d) To arrange, through the Advisory Committee on Training or otherwise, for the placing in educational institutions, private workshops, farms, etc., of all men who have been passed for training by the Commission, and to maintain a regular inspection of all such men and report upon each case at stated intervals to the Commission.

(e) To arrange for regular or occasional meetings of the local Disabled Soldiers' Training Board, as the circumstances may require.

(f) Such other duties as may be assigned him by the Commission from time to time.

Local Vocational Officers to be associated with the Vocational Branch of the Commission through the Vocational Secretary.

The CHAIRMAN: I think we had better have that filed in our record.

The WITNESS: It is to be found at pages two and three in Bulletin 2, dated June, 1916. That sets forth a working scheme. Later, this memorandum was submitted to the authorities of the several Provinces, except Prince Edward Island. With the exception of Ontario, each of the Provinces agreed to accept it as a basis of agreement with the Military Hospitals Commission. The Province of Ontario did not accept the memorandum as a basis of agreement, and later on a special arrangement was entered into, by which the work of vocational training there was to be undertaken by the Soldiers' Aid Commission.

By the Chairman:

Q. Is that an incorporated body?—A. That is an incorporated body, and in their incorporation the Legislature of the Province gave them power to undertake vocational training, but the Military Hospitals Commission indicates the training which is to be provided.

Q. Is that the Committee of which Hon. W. D. McPherson is Chairman?—A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. And under whose supervision is that training?—A. Under the direct supervision of the Soldiers' Aid Commission. The Hospitals' Commission, under an agreement of which a copy can be submitted, indicates the training which it desires to be given.

Q. Who are the Soldiers' Aid Commission responsible to?—A. The Government of Ontario.

By Hon. Mr. Belcourt:

Q. And yet you give the directions? Is that right?—A. They are in a measure responsible to the Military Hospitals Commission. The Military Hospitals Commission calls on the Soldiers' Aid Commission to provide the particular training. Not only that, but the Military Hospitals Commission has power to disagree with what is being done and to request the Soldiers' Aid Commission to carry it out differently.

[Mr. T. B. Kidner.]

By Mr. Middlebro:

Q. That is by agreement?—A. By agreement.

By the Chairman:

Q. Who provides the financial resources necessary for the Ontario Soldiers' Aid Commission?—A. As far as regards vocational training, the Military Hospitals Commission, the Federal organization. The financing of their work of finding employment for disabled men, which was the original purpose for which they were appointed, is done from the provincial revenues.

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. But the funds for the actual vocational training are provided by the Federal Government, are they not?—A. Yes.

Q. And are they handed over to the Soldiers' Aid Commission?—A. No. The Soldiers' Aid Commission submits monthly statements to the Military Hospitals Commission and they pay the bill.

Q. But the funds come from the Federal Government?—A. Yes.

Q. And the Soldiers' Aid Commission is responsible only to the Ontario Government?—A. It is responsible, I suppose, to the Hospitals Commission for the vocational training.

By Hon. Mr. Murphy:

Q. That is by virtue of the agreement?—A. By virtue of the agreement.

Q. And the basis, of that, I presume, is the providing of these funds?—A. The Soldiers' Aid Commission may not even make expenditures on equipment until they have been approved by the Military Hospitals Commission.

By the Chairman:

Q. I was going to ask you, has the Hospitals Commission any oversight of expenditure?—A. Absolute oversight.

Q. And has control of the expenditure made by the Soldiers' Aid Commission of Toronto?—A. Yes, as far as regards vocational training. The Military Hospitals Commission asked for the establishment of certain classes and the engagement of the necessary teachers to teach a certain number of subjects.

Q. And they carry out your recommendations?—A. Yes.

Q. Can you file with us a copy of that agreement? We will take it as one of the exhibits?—A. Yes, sir.

By Hon. Mr. Belcourt:

Q. Is that the agreement you referred to before? The one to be found on page 3 of the Military Hospitals Commission Bulletin No. 2?—A. No, sir, Ontario did not accept that as a basis, but the other provinces did.

By Mr. Middlebro:

Q. The Ontario Soldiers' Aid Commission acts as the medium or agency for the expenditure of your money?—A. Yes, that is what it does.

MR. MIDDLEBRO: And they only pay the cost of getting a man employment after you are finished with him?

By the Chairman:

Q. The Soldiers' Aid Commission is doing one thing as an agent and another thing on their own private initiative. They act as your agent in vocational training, but when they secure employment for soldiers they bear the expense themselves?—A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. Middlebro:

Q. Whatever expense is incurred in getting soldiers employment, they pay for it?—A. As in the other provinces, but they have assumed the additional duty of looking after vocational training.

Q. Is not the Province also tendering you the free use of certain Institutions?—A. All the provinces are doing that wherever they can.

By the Chairman:

Q. But the Province of Ontario is the only one with whom you have a special contract of the character referred to?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. The others have accepted the agreement that is stated here (indicating M. H. C. Bulletin No. 2)?—A. Yes, sir; on the lines of that memorandum. The Military Hospitals Commission is in direct control except that there are advisory Committees in connection with the work in each province.

Q. I do not mean that. What I mean is this, in every province there are two functions; one of these, in Ontario, has been performed by agreement with you by the Commission created there by virtue of the powers of the Legislature; in the other provinces it is done by the Local Boards, under your immediate supervision?—A. The first intention was, and that has not been departed from except in the case of Ontario, that the Provincial Commissions, by whatever name they are known, should undertake only to provide employment for men. As, however, the provision of employment might, later on, be closely related with the provision of vocational training, and because education is a provincial matter, it was thought advisable to ask in that memorandum for an Advisory Committee. That is the extent of the connection with the other provinces, namely: that they have an Advisory Committee to whom the Military Hospitals Commission may apply for advice in carrying out their vocational training.

Q. In the other provinces you carry on the work with Advisory Boards, having an advisory capacity, but in Ontario the Soldiers' Aid Commission acts really as the agent of your Military Hospitals Commission, and carries on the work, under your general supervision, and you pay the bills?—A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. Ross (Middlesex):

Q. You choose the teachers in the other provinces?—A. Yes.

Q. Under that agreement, is it the Ontario Commission that chooses the teachers for Ontario?—A. Yes.

Q. It chooses the vocational officers, the teachers in the schools?—A. Yes.

Q. You do not do that in Ontario, but only in the other provinces?—A. Yes.

Q. Are those appointments subject to your approval?—A. Yes. The point, as I take it, was that the province was anxious to preserve beyond the shadow of a doubt its right to control education, so that we do not deal directly with any teacher in the province of Ontario, but, if a teacher was not satisfactory we could call the attention of the Soldiers' Aid Association to the fact, and he would be replaced.

By the Chairman:

Q. When we re-assemble at 2.30 this afternoon, will you please put in a list giving the proper name of each of these Soldiers' Aid Associations in the various provinces?—A. They are on the bulletin, Sir, of June, No. 2.

[Mr. T. B. Kidner.]

Q. Now, Mr. Kidner, will you please go on with your statement?—A. The next step taken, Sir, was to appoint Vocational Officers. The vocational officers were appointed—

Q. By whom?—A. By the Military Hospitals Commission, one for Quebec and the Maritime Provinces, in the person of Mr. F. H. Sexton, Principal of the Halifax Technical College, and Director of Technical Education for the Province of Nova Scotia, who was allowed through the courtesy of the Nova Scotia Government to devote three-fourths of his time to the work of the Military Hospitals Commission. He has charge of the vocational work from Quebec to the sea. In British Columbia, Mr. John Kyle, Provincial Organizer of Technical Education, gives one-third of his time.

Q. What is Mr. Kyle's residence?—A. Victoria, B.C. In Alberta, Dr. J. C. Miller, Director of Technical Education, Winnipeg, nominally gives one-third of his time, but resides at Calgary. That has been changed this week to two-thirds of his time. He is really giving practically all his time; the provinces have been exceptionally liberal about this matter, and also the municipalities. In Manitoba, Mr. W. J. Warters, Director of Technical Education, Winnipeg, nominally gives one-third of his time, but negotiations are in progress now whereby we shall get, we hope, the whole of his time.

By Mr. Ross (Middlesex):

Q. These are all under salary and paid by the Hospitals Commission?—A. Yes. In Saskatchewan, Mr. H. W. Hewitt, Director of Manual Arts, Saskatoon, was appointed for a portion of his time, but, from the middle of this month, will give the whole of his time.

By the Chairman:

Q. Are these officers regularly under your direction as general superintendent of their work?—A. Yes, they receive orders from the Commission through me.

Q. And their stipend is paid by the Military Hospitals Commission?—A. That is for such portion of their time as they are engaged by the Military Hospitals Commission work; I should like it to go on record, however, that though they are nominally engaged for part time they are practically giving their whole time to the work, with the concurrence of their provincial or municipal authorities by whom they are employed.

By Hon. Mr. Belcourt:

Q. Are they under salary to both authorities, to the provincial or municipal authority, as the case may be, as well as to the Military Hospitals Commission?—A. No, sir. What has usually been done in each case is that the Province or Municipality pays for sufficient assistance to enable them to do the routine work of the office; we only pay a portion of their salary, and there are scarcely any cases in which the men have more salary now than they were earning before, indeed as a matter of fact, some vocational officers are out of pocket. I know that in Mr. Sexton's case, he is out of pocket, and there are others, I could name.

By the Chairman:

Q. Do your vocational officers select the instructors?—A. Yes, but their nominations are submitted to us here before they are appointed, which means that their particular qualifications and experience are submitted for our approval just as any other official.

By Mr. Ross (Middlesex):

Q. Except in Ontario?—A. Except in Ontario, sir. These officers organized the work on the lines suggested at the February 1916 meeting of the Commission, and, in response to general requests, were directed also to organize wherever convenient, classes in gardening, poultrywork, etc., also, in some centres, classes in motor mechanics and shoe-repairing, which were not referred to at that meeting.

[Mr. T. B. Kidner.]

In September an agreement was entered into with the Soldiers' Aid Commission to carry out similar work in Ontario and, on the 5th of October, an Order in Council, P.C. 2566, was obtained enabling the Military Hospitals Commission to reimburse the O. S. A. C. for any expense incurred by them in carrying out the agreement. The Ontario Soldiers' Aid Commission was requested to provide instruction in connection with the several convalescent hospitals in Ontario, according to a memorandum submitted.

The CHAIRMAN: Please have that Order in Council filed in the record as an exhibit in connection with this evidence.

By Hon. Mr. Belcourt:

Q. Is it in any of these bulletins?—A. No, I do not think so. (Reads) Mr. W. W. Nichol was appointed by the Ontario Soldiers' Aid Commission to take charge of this work."

By Mr. Ross (Middlesex):

Q. Is he the vocational instructor?—A. He has charge of the vocational work that is being done in Ontario.

Q. What is his official title?—A. He is called Vocational Officer.

By Brigadier-General Mason:

Q. What is his previous experience?—A. He was a science teacher in the Ontario schools, and he was in charge of the evening Technical classes in Ottawa. Ottawa has developed quite a system of evening technical classes, and he was in charge of that work.

By the Chairman:

Q. What is his address?—A. Toronto, sir. If I have made it clear about the general work that is being carried on in the hospitals for disciplinary, for therapeutic and, most important of all, for the improvement of the man to the greatest extent, I should like to go on with the matter of re-education, unless the Committee would like one or two examples of men who have been benefited by work during convalescence.

Q. I think by way of clarification, I should be glad if you would repeat, with respect to disciplinary, therapeutic and general improvement, with an example, so to speak, of how those three kinds of training operate. Give us a sample of what you call disciplinary, therapeutic and general improvement cases?—A. I did not mean disciplinary training, but for its disciplinary value.

Q. What do you mean by the disciplinary value of your work?—A. A year ago very vague ideas prevailed as to the treatment of soldiers in our convalescent hospitals. In many cases they were being spoiled by over-indulgence, in most luxurious surroundings, with nothing to do but sit around and smoke cigarettes. In consequence, many of them, following out the old adage of idle hands finding mischief to do, got drunk and there were various disciplinary troubles, due largely, it was considered, to the lack of occupation. When I speak of the disciplinary value of the work, I mean its value in helping in that way by giving the men something to do.

Mr. Ross (Middlesex): Keeping them out of mischief.

By the Chairman:

Q. It is your first function to keep them employed in order that they may be kept sweet and happy?—A. Arising out of keeping them employed, you get the therapeutic value. The therapeutic value of having something to occupy their minds and to greater or less extent their bodily faculties is now generally recognized, and it has been found that medical men who have experience of this work have asked for it because of its value on the health and contentment of the men, whose subsequent recovery is considerably helped by the occupational work.

[Mr. T. B. Kidner.]

Q. It would strengthen and harden their bodies, I suppose?—A. That is looked after in the system of physical training. But the mere fact of having something to occupy their minds prevents them becoming "hospitalized," as it is termed.

By Hon. Mr. Belcourt:

Q. Have you derived any concrete benefit from this occupational training? I mean have they been able to make anything in these homes that you have been able to sell or derive profit from?—A. Yes. Perhaps I should say that by the direction of Sir James Loughheed we prepared a little exhibit for this Committee, which is in the office of the Military Hospitals Commission, and it was the intention of Sir James Loughheed to invite the Committee to come down and see it. It is arranged for your examination and I should be very glad if this Committee could go down this afternoon and see some samples of what has been done.

The CHAIRMAN: We prefer to get your evidence and that of Mr. Scammell before we go down.

By Hon. Mr. Belcourt:

Q. The exhibit will only show, Mr. Kidner, what can be done in the way of producing things, but my question was rather whether you had made any use of that training or derived any revenue from it?—A. As far as the Government is concerned, no.

Q. But as regards the men?—A. Yes.

Q. They get for their own profit whatever may be realized out of the things they make?—A. Yes, sir. As far as possible each man who exerts himself and makes things which are of value and which can be sold is given a proportion of the proceeds. The material is paid for and a little is deducted for overhead expenses. The book-keeping is done by the men themselves, under the instructor, and they are given the benefit of their work.

Q. Will you tell us what kinds of articles are made by the men?—A. In the Grey Nuns Convalescent Hospital we have a class of men who are engaged in making metal work souvenirs from cartridges picked up behind the lines in France. We procured about a ton of these through the Militia Department, and the men are making little souvenirs, such as shoe-horns, buttonhooks and manicure tools out of these cartridges which have been brought back from the front. There is a ready sale for these. They have undertaken an order for 100 bed tables for the hospital. These tables are to put over a man's knees. They have had a lot of orders for such things as tabourets, picture frames and brackets and many other articles which can be made out of wood. But your question can be best answered by seeing the exhibit, sir.

Hon. Mr. BELCOURT: But we want to have the information on the record, too.

By Mr. Middlebro:

Q. Is this exhibit the result of the education or of what has been done for its therapeutic value?—A. Made incidentally in the hospitals. It is expected that the results of re-education will be in the men themselves.

Q. And in the products too, I suppose. Senator Belcourt was asking you if the articles made during the time they were under therapeutic treatment were of any practical value. What I want to know is whether these exhibits are the result of that work or the result of re-education?—A. There are some men who start their re-education as soon as they enter the convalescent hospital. Theoretically, and actually, in the French and Belgian hospitals, a man starts his re-education as soon as he comes out of the ether. Here we start wherever our organization has a class and we have the facilities. A man's re-education often starts during his convalescence. For instance, if a man is to have a six months' convalescent treatment, and if it is quite clear that at the end of the six months, because of the loss of his foot, or because of some other disability, he will not be able to return to his former occupation, we do not wait until he is discharged to commence his re-education. Quite often this work is going on from the two points of view. That is why we want a wide range of subjects taught in each hospital. A man may start even while in bed to brush up his arithmetic and English.

By Hon. Mr. Belcourt:

Q. I have seen soldiers in English homes making baskets and things of that kind right in bed?—A. We do that in the case of tuberculosis patients.

Witness retired.

Committee adjourned until 2.30 p.m.

The Committee resumed at 2.35 p.m.

The examination of Mr. T. B. Kidner resumed:

By the Chairman:

Q. Before adjournment at the luncheon hour you had been telling us about the schools you have at Convalescent Homes?—A. I think, Sir, you would be interested to know what we are doing for the men suffering from tuberculosis in the sanatoria.

Q. I remember when you touched upon the Laurentide Institution your saying that you would like to speak about that?—A. That is a subject I want to take up. At the request of the Medical Superintendent, and with his assistance, the needs of tuberculous patients were investigated, and work has been commenced in several of the sanatoria. At the Laurentide Inn, St. Agathe, Que., a simple workshop has been equipped, where light work in wood and metal is undertaken, sufficient machinery being installed to prevent the work putting any strain on the pectoral muscles of the men. Typewriting, shorthand and commercial work have been introduced, and work in motor mechanics is also being arranged for.

Q. In order to train chauffeurs?—A. Yes, and to train attendants and repairers. At the Laurentian Sanatorium, also at St. Agathe, there are a number of soldier patients; some of whom have done beautiful work in embroidery, etc., while still in bed, under the instruction of the matron. As soon as the weather permits, outdoor work is to be undertaken; also work for the men who are porch cases. Roughly, the men in the sanatoria are divided into three classes: First, those who are in bed, with a temperature; second, those who are called generally "porch cases", and are allowed to get up and walk to the dining room for their meals, but for the rest of the day recline in chairs in the fresh air. As soon as the weather permits a great range of work is ready for these men. It has been too cold during the last two months, as they had to keep their hands covered up. They will take up weaving, basketry, drawing, writing, etc. The third class of men are those who are able to walk about occasionally. They commence with 15 minutes exercise in the morning and 15 minutes exercise in the afternoon, generally a gentle walk. These men are soon able to undertake some shop work, but while it is not in my province as vocational officer, I may say there is a good deal of discussion amongst tuberculosis specialists at present as to how far this work should go. There are two schools of specialists, so I am told, and some of them believe that absolute rest and stuffing is not quite the best method to pursue, and that it certainly does produce a man who is very averse to work after a very long period of idleness. The work that is being undertaken will, we hope, not only counteract that tendency but will help in the men's recovery. Light wood-work and metal-work, drafting and commercial subjects are undertaken by the patients at the two institutions named, and similar things are being done at Lake Edward, Que., and at the Dalton Sanatorium, Prince Edward Island. At present, it is the intention that at each of the sanatoria where the Commission has men, provision shall be made for this work. Yesterday arrangements were concluded to put it into the Tranquille Sanatorium at Kamloops, B.C. That is a provincial institution where we have some 30 odd men, and a joint arrangement has been made between the Commission and the sanatorium authorities whereby shop work and general subjects are to be taught there. Classes are also being carried on at the sanatorium operated by the Commission at Frank, Alta.

By Hon. Mr. Belcourt:

Q. Can you tell us how many cases are of an incipient nature and how many are in an advanced stage of tuberculosis?—A. No. These figures could probably be furnished by the medical officers of the Commission.

Q. They would be in the possession of the Commission, would they not?—A. I think so.

Q. Doctor Thompson could tell us, I suppose?—A. Doubtless he could. Now as to instruction in the sanatoria, what happens is this: we pick out the best instructors we can find for the work and they are sent to the Institution and operate wholly under the direction of the doctor. As to how much a man may do, as to when he may work and the kind of work he may undertake—these are matters for the medical specialist in charge of the Institution.

Q. I have another object in asking the question, and it is this: It would be important to ascertain the care with which these men were examined at the time they left for active service, because advanced cases now would mean that the victims were pretty well infected before they went overseas. Perhaps you could get the figures for us as to incipient, advanced and incurable cases.—A. I think the medical superintendent would be able to furnish that information and I will make a note of it for his attention.

By the Chairman:

Q. Have you accommodation enough at the present time for the vocational training of all men that appear to require it in Canada?—A. No, sir. Building are being erected now at the Mowat Sanatorium, Kingston, with the other new buildings, for the accommodation of the men. We are short of accommodation in Winnipeg at present, but in order to remedy that deficiency the old Agricultural College has been taken over. In Montreal we have a school on the ground floor of the Grey Nuns Hospital, and last week arrangements were concluded with the authorities of the Montreal Technical School, whereby they will turn over a portion of their building to the Commission, and it is being equipped. The McGill University authorities have also generously offered to place certain of its rooms and equipment at the disposal of the Commission.

Q. Will the men live and sleep in the Montreal Technical School?—A. No, they have to go from one building to the other. The suggestion has been made that the Commission procure a large motor bus and take the men to and fro, but this matter is now being worked out. The ideal condition, if we had it, would be to have all the methods of treatment of the men in the same Institution, so that the men could go from the vocational classes to medical treatment, etc., inside the walls of the Institution.

Q. The Grey Nuns Building is in the western end of Montreal and the Technical School in the eastern end. The two buildings must be from two to three miles apart?—A. I think not quite so far as that, Sir. The Drummond Street Convalescent Hospital is several blocks east from the Grey Nuns Building, and most of the men taking vocational classes will be in the Drummond Street institution.

By Brigadier-General Mason:

Q. I suppose, Mr. Kidner, in selecting a place for the treatment of these men there are various questions taken into consideration?—A. That is entirely a medical matter, I do not come into that until the Institution is there, and I have been asked to provide work for the patients.

[Mr. T. B. Kidner.]

By the Chairman:

Q. The point I have in mind is to ascertain whether accommodation is being supplied to meet the needs to your satisfaction always keeping in mind the possibility that there may be an increase in the number of men requiring accommodation; I would like to know whether you are at present able to take care of all cases requiring vocational training?—A. You are speaking now of cases during convalescence?

Q. Yes, are you able to provide for all your needs?—A. In most of the districts, yes. In other districts the great number of men who came in during the last few months of 1916 rendered it very difficult, and we have not overtaken that.

Q. You have not overtaken your prospective probable needs. Do you believe with the plans you have at present in view, if they can be carried into effect, you will be able to take care of the additional strain that the additional number of men requiring training will make upon your organization?—A. Yes. In Winnipeg we shall have in the old Agricultural College twenty rooms in one building, so I am informed. I have not seen it, but I have seen the plans. In Saskatoon, we are taking over the large new Y.M.C.A. building which will give us a great deal of accommodation. In Calgary an extension is being made to the Red Cross Hospital at Ogden and we are also using the Provincial School of Technology. At Resthaven in British Columbia, which I did not mention in my list this morning, as it has been opened since this list was prepared two or three weeks ago, a considerable number is provided for.

Q. I suppose your accommodation is being increased to accommodate the men as fast as you are taking them in?—A. Not for the last few months.

Q. You have not reached your maximum load yet?—A. No, sir. Next fall there will likely be an increase. Usually many weeks elapse between the time a man is wounded and his arrival in a convalescent hospital in Canada. I have seen men who have had from six to eight, and sometimes twelve months hospital treatment in England before they came out, but they are coming out sooner now than they were formerly.

Q. Do you feel satisfied that you can secure all the accommodation and the staff necessary for the training of the probable increased number of men?—A. I think there is no doubt about the accommodation, Sir, that is a mere matter of dollars and cents, but for the staff I think we shall begin at once, as soon as we have our larger institutions, to develop a staff for the new places.

Q. To what extent do you think you can take selected men from these returned soldiers who have been in your institutions and make instructors of them, so as to create a staff out of your own material?—A. I think wherever a man has a chance at all of becoming an efficient instructor we should take him in other branches of the Commission's work. Preference is given to returned men and in a number of cases we are, at present, using them as instructors. At Lake Edward we are making experiments with the object of obtaining the whole instruction staff from among the men. We found there a graduate of the Guelph Agricultural College, a graduate of a Technical School, and a graduate of a business college, and we are using those men there and giving them a little extra for instructing their fellows. In the instruction of tubercular patients it is most desirable to get men who have passed through the institutions themselves. We had engaged a man last week who refused to fulfil his agreement when he found we wanted to send him to a sanatorium. We must develop instructors from among our own men as far as possible to overcome that difficulty.

Q. In your own schools, or outside?—A. As far as possible in our own institutions.

Q. Supposing you want a technical man, would you think it proper to take a man from some American Institute?—A. I do not think we shall have to do that, because if we did we should have to train him in the methods of our own particular problem. We could get a technical man, but he would have to be instructed how to deal with these men. The instructor is in many cases playing the role of a man who as it were is not an officer in the usual sense. The men are often moody, and a patient knowing that it is an instructor he is talking to will often tell his personal troubles and be helped materially. It is not an easy business at all to deal with these patients. Side by side with the College graduate, you will have a man who is learning to write his own name. The composition of the Canadian Expeditionary Force is such that you have that kind of thing to contend with. To give an instance of the way in which we hope to train our instructors, I may say that at the first tuberculosis sanatorium where work was introduced, Ste. Agathe, Que., we have three instructors. One of them, after spending three months there as an assistant, has been selected to take charge of classes in another institution. We are replacing him with a young man who will, if he proves efficient take charge elsewhere later on. These were men who were refused for overseas service, they are not soldiers.

By Hon. Mr. Belcourt:

Q. Are the patients who are teaching paid extra allowances?—A. Yes the men who are acting as instructors at Lake Edward are receiving $15 per month, and at other places they are receiving 50 cents per day, that is extra to their pay and allowances.

By Mr. Sutherland:

Q. Can you tell us what proportion of the men in the Hospitals have seen active service, and what proportion of them have been rejected here, or have gone overseas, without going to the front?—A. The secretary can tell you that, he is here, and I have not that information.

By Hon. Mr. McCurdy:

Q. Have you a statement showing the different vocations that men are being trained for?—A. The new vocation, sir?

Q. Yes?—A. Yes, roughly.

Q. I would like to get a statement showing the number in each business, such as manufacturing, agriculture, and clerical work?—A. I could submit that, I haven't it here to-day, but I can prepare it.

By Hon. Mr. Murphy:

Q. Do you plan to provide technical education in agriculture?—A. Our plans provide for that.

Q. Have you started that branch of your work?—A. Yes, there are several cases of re-education along that line in the province of Alberta, where the men are attending one of the Provincial Schools of Agriculture, and in Saskatchewan we have men attending the Provincial University course in Agriculture.

By the Chairman:

Q. And their expenses are paid by you?—A. Yes. I am coming to that shortly. Before I leave the question of vocational training in the Convalescent Hospitals, I should like to submit figures showing the number of men who since the inception of the scheme, have received training. This is giving the number of individuals, not counting the number by classes, if we did that we should have two and a half to three times the numbers that I shall quote, because a great many of the men are taking up four or five subjects, this is the total obtained by counting "noses". In Quebec 538, the Maritime Provinces 141, Ontario 348, Manitoba 105, Saskatchewan 101, Alberta 122, British Columbia 148, and there came in yesterday the numbers from Lake Edward, Que., where 47 T.B. patients are receiving training.

By Hon. Mr. Belcourt:

Q. Have these men completed their training?—A. Yes.

Q. Or are they at present undergoing training?—A. They are those who have gone through the classes from the opening of the work until the end of January, to the advancement of the man as much as these other employments?—A. Yes, sir.

[Mr. T. B. Kidner.]

By Mr. Ross (Middlesex):

Q. And have been discharged?—A. Yes, this statement is up to the end of January, and is taken from our latest monthly returns. These are the men who have been admitted to classes in convalescent hospitals.

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. And have gone through and are out?—A. Some of them may still be there. These were taken from our monthly returns up to the end of January.

The CHAIRMAN: The total is about 1,500 men.

By Mr. Sutherland:

Q. Is that all kinds of patients or T. B. patients?—A. For our T. B. patients, the first school was only opened in November last at Ste. Agathe.

By the Chairman:

Q. What proportion is this of the entire number that have been accommodated in hospitals? I think the figure of 4,000 men has been given as having been accommodated in hospitals?—A. That is a difficult thing to state in proportion. These numbers have been cumulative. We know how many we have handled but it would be rather difficult to find how many we have handled since these classes were started. I could not give it correctly offhand. We know how many men have passed through the hands of the Commission roughly.

Q. How many have passed through the hands of the Commission?—A. About 12,000, sir. Then there were some who returned before the Commission was in operation; I am not counting those, but only the number as far as I can gather it from our returns.

By Mr. Ross (Middlesex):

Q. Have these 12,000 been in your convalescent hospitals?—A. Not necessarily.

By the Chairman:

Q. They have passed through the hands of the Hospitals Commission?—A. Sometimes we have merely passed them on to their homes or to the Provincial Commissions to find employment.

Q. How many have you in hospitals at the present time?—A. The Secretary has the weekly return for the last week. I cannot give you that figure.

The CHAIRMAN: You might explain why Quebec seems to have trained more men than any of the other provinces?

By Hon. Mr. Murphy:

Q. You mentioned a moment ago that forty-seven or forty-eight names came in later from Lake Edward. Are they to be added to the 538 from Quebec?—A. Yes, Sir. Those Lake Edward men are not all Quebec men.

By the Chairman:

Q. Why is it that the figures for Quebec are so much in excess of those in any other province?—A. Quebec started earlier. The first vocational officer was appointed in the person of Mr. F. H. Sexton for Quebec and the Maritime Provinces. A beginning had earlier been made in Calgary and we commenced shortly after in the other western provinces, but we had smaller numbers to go on. At the time we commenced our largest unit hospital was in Montreal, and we had the other Homes in Montreal to draw on.

By Hon. Mr. Belcourt:

Q. To what extent have you made use of the institutions in Montreal for that purpose, and what are the institutions which you have so used?—A. We borrowed instructors at first from the Provincial Polytechnic School; that was the extent, but arrangements have just been concluded whereby McGill University will give us the use of its workshops and drafting rooms for so many days per week without cost. The Provincial Polytechnic School will give us a certain portion of the building and the use of certain rooms which are equipped with machinery for instructing in certain subjects, but no instructors, and the Commission bears the cost of any alterations which may be needed in the building and pays the salaries of the instructors. In McGill we pay the cost of instructors and for the material which may be used.

[Mr. T. B. Kidner.]

By the Chairman:

Q. When we visit Montreal, Mr. Sexton will be able to tell us about this work?—A. Yes, Sir.

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. You may be coming to it, but you have not mentioned what is being done for the blind?—A. I can do that now. With regard to the blind, fortunately there are very few blinded Canadian soldiers. So far as our present returns go, there are not more than twenty up to the present time. We had no institution in Canada which was at all comparable with St. Dunstan's Hospital, Regents Park, London, and early last year the Commission requested the Canadian Medical authorities in England to retain the few blinded men in London for training at this institution which has been planned for blinded soldiers and sailors. We have had a few blinded men back.

By Mr. Middlebro:

Q. Is St. Dunstan's Sir Arthur Pearson's establishment?—A. Yes. There are at present two or three blinded men under the care of the Commission in Canada. There are one or two more who may become blind, and we have commenced their training on the assumption that they will become blind. Some others have been returned after training at St. Dunstan's, and have gone back into civilian life.

By the Chairman:

Q. Are you training any of the blinded men in massage?—A. Yes, that is one of the best things. One of our blinded men went to Halifax last week and is to be trained for that work.

Q. You have no blind soldiers at present who have been trained for massage?—A. Yes, I believe there is one in Winnipeg. He was trained in England and the authorities over there wrote out to see if we could find work for him, and we informed them that there was a good opening in Winnipeg. Mr. Scammell tells me, just now, that he has not come back, as he is being employed on the other side.

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. What other employment besides massage are you teaching the blind, typewriting?—A. Typewriting and Braille writing. The latest authorities on the training of the blind are against training them for some of the occupations which have been so much in evidence, such as broom making and basket making. The blind basketmaker can never become a very high priced workman. Broom making is another "blind alley occupation" if one could so speak. It is an occupation that does not take a man very far; and the best authorities on the training of the blind are suggesting massage, salesmanship and small lines of business. Salesmanship especially has proven a good field of work.

Q. What do you mean by that?—A. A man becomes an agent for some specialty for instance.

By Hon. Mr. Murphy:

Q. Would that not necessitate his moving around from place to place?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is there not a disadvantage in that?—A. A blinded man gets the full disability pension plus an allowance for an attendant as one who is totally disabled, and he is helped of course, by the additional fact that people will regard him sympathetically and a great many will deal with him.

Q. I was speaking with particular reference to his occupation and not to his remuneration. It is harder for a blind man to get employment where he has to go from place to place?—A. That is why it was suggested that men be trained to take charge of a small business.

By Hon. Mr. McCurdy:

Q. You regard the attitude of the public towards him as a valuable asset?—A. Undoubtedly, if he is not trading on it, and is doing his best to help himself.

By Hon. Mr. Murphy:

Q. You do not favour broom making and basket making because they do not tend to the advancement of the man as much as these other employments?—A. Yes, sir.

By Hon. Mr. Belcourt:

Q. That would apply almost equally to any line of manufacture?—A. Yes.

Q. If that is so in the case of brooms it would apply also in the case of boot-making? They cannot compete in those occupations with a sighted man?—A. Quite so. They cannot compete with the sighted man. We have been helped very much by the Canadian Free Library for the Blind in Toronto. It is providing literature, free of cost, to any blinded man whose name is sent to them. When a blinded man comes home from England his name is sent to the Canadian Free Library for the Blind, and they provide him with literature free of cost. They have a large library and they have also advised quite often on the training of the blind.

By the Chairman:

Q. Such services as telephone operator and telegraph operator are open to such men?—A. Yes.

By Brigadier-General Mason:

Q. I understand that 12,000 returned soldiers passed through the hands of the Commission?—A. Those were my own figures, taken from the returns.

Q. Many of them were not detained by the Commission?—A. They may be Class 1 or Class 3 men. Information as to that class was given yesterday.

Q. All the returned soldiers who are injured pass through the hands of the Commission?—A. Yes, they are helped to get employment by the Provincial Commissions, whether or not they are sick when they are returned.

By Hon. Mr. Belcourt:

Q. How far back can you trace any number of cases who have had a complete vocational training and have gone out into the world?—A. I think there are very few such cases. It was not until the 29th of June last that the Commission was able to go ahead with re-education, because until then the question of a man's maintenance during the period of re-education was not settled, neither was the question settled of whether or not his pension would be adversely affected if he increased his earning capacity. Our re-education really did not commence until then, although we had a few isolated cases where the Commission assumed they were going to get the needed power and went ahead with the training.

Q. So that it is altogether too soon to estimate the result of your vocational training outside. You keep in touch with these men, do you not?—A. Yes.

Q. I mean that you follow them up after they have left you?—A. There is not a very good follow-up system, because when a man has been finished with, as far as his training is concerned, the Provincial Commission looks after his employment and takes care of him. As to how far the provincial authorities are following up these men, I am not able to say.

[Mr. T. B. Kidner.]

Q. You will later on be in a position to know. It is part of your duty to ascertain what are the beneficial results of your system, is it not?—A. Yes.

Q. Just now it may be too soon to estimate results?—A. Well, I have the particulars of two or three men who have been re-educated which perhaps you would like to know. I will take first the case of Private James S. Holmes, of the 10th Battalion, who was re-educated at the public expense. His disability was that he lost an arm. He had been a locomotive fireman previous to enlistment, so of course he was absolutely debarred from going back to his former occupation. He was given a course of training as a telegrapher and railway operator, subjects in regard to which he knew something previously. As Colonel Thompson put it yesterday, we did not “scrap” his previous training and experience, but we built on it and gave him a course in telegraphy and railroad operating. He is now a station master, and he says in acknowledgment of the receipt of the cheque for his subsistence during the period of his training and for one month afterwards—a man and his dependents are given subsistence for one month after his period of re-education is over—he says that he is paid from $105 to $110 a month, working 12 hours per day, for seven days in the week.

By Hon. Mr. McCurdy:

Q. Where is he located?—A. On the C.P.R. at Shepherd, in Alberta. Holmes says in regard to this line of work, that it would be very hard for any one over 25 years of age to learn it, and unless he had some idea of railroad work he would have to study for some time, and very hard too. In this, my own opinion is that if a man is on the wrong side of 30 it would be almost impossible to teach him an occupation de novo.

By Hon. Mr. Belcourt:

Q. That man's earnings are as good, if not better than they were prior to his enlistment?—A. In addition, he has his pension for the loss of his arm.

Q. His pay is about as large as it was before enlistment, if not larger?—A. The pay of locomotive firemen in the West varies a great deal. They are paid by the run.

Hon. Mr. McCURDY: A locomotive fireman, working 12 hours a day for 7 days in the week would get pretty good pay.

Mr. PARDEE: No locomotive fireman could remain on duty for such a protracted period.

By Hon. Mr. Belcourt:

Q. At any rate, the man in question receives a minimum pay of $105 per month. How large a pension would he get?—A. With his left arm off at the shoulder, for pension purposes he would be in the second class.

The CHAIRMAN: $24 a month would be his pension.

Hon. Mr. McCURDY: So that his stipend would be $130 per month, including his pension.

The WITNESS: I can give you the case of another man.

By Hon. Mr. McCurdy:

Q. Are these cases you are selecting the most successful cases you have had?—A. We have had very few.

Q. Are they outstanding cases or average cases?—A. We have not been able to get particulars of very many. We have the particulars only of a dozen or so and I am picking out a few examples.

Q. But are these few average examples or selected cases?—A. I will give you all I have. We have not a great many as yet.

Q. But are the men you refer to average cases or successful cases?—A. We have not completed the re-education of a dozen men as yet.

[Mr. T. B. Kidner.]

By Hon. Mr. Belcourt:

Q. Perhaps we shall be able to have a history of every one of those twelve cases?—

A. In six months' time we shall be able to give particulars of many cases.

By the Chairman:

Q. Will you put on the record a brief synopsis of the twelve cases you have re-educated?—A. We have not completed the re-education of twelve cases at the public expense, outside of what has been done in the Convalescent Hospitals, but I have some interesting cases of men who have benefited and been able to take up new occupations from work that they have done during convalescence. I should like to submit one or two cases. I have already mentioned one case. The second one I shall mention is that of a man who was for several months in the Grey Nuns Hospital, Montreal. He makes this statement in writing: (Reads).

"Despite my thirty years of experience as a mechanic, I can state, Mr. Chartier (the writer's instructor), that through your instruction and assistance my efficiency and earning power were considerably increased.

The fact is that at the outbreak of the war, when I enlisted, I was earning about $3 a day at my trade; at present, and since I was discharged from military service, I am, technically, a better man all round; I am now able to hold the job as Foreman in a machine shop at more than twice the salary I was getting before. This benefit to me is greatly due to your practical information, and my only regret is that I was unable, after my discharge, to continue instruction with you as you had advised."

By Hon. Mr. McCurdy:

Q. Bear in mind that he is operating under different conditions now to what obtained in 1914. If he is working in a Munition Factory he is doing work for which very high wages are being paid at present.—A. Quite so.

Hon. Mr. McCURDY: If he is making a comparison with the conditions which existed in 1914, that comparison is apt to be misleading. The general run of wages in that class of employment is double and treble what it was in 1914.

By the Chairman:

Q. What is the character of the disability for which the pension was awarded in that case?—A. It is not given, but he was discharged into Class III, so he is up for pension now. He made this statement, and I asked Mr. Sexton to get it from him in writing.

By Mr. Sutherland:

Q. Then your experience is that a very small proportion of them require to be re-educated.—A. Yes.

Q. Do you know what proportion?—A. I could not give it exactly yet.

Q. Would it be 5 per cent?—A. 5 per cent of what, Sir, the total number?

Q. The total number.—A. The total number of wounded I could not give that now. In France it has been found that less than one half of one per cent of the total wounded required re-education, but I cannot give an answer for Canada at the present time, that is of those who will not be able to return to their previous occupations. These French figures were given after nearly two years of experience of casualties. Of course we do not deal with the total number of wounded, and if you take the proportion of men we have to deal with in Canada, it will be considerably higher than that.

Q. Is the training you are giving them here equal to that given in England?—A. I could not answer that.

Q. You would not like to express an opinion?—A. No.

[Mr. T. B. Kidner.]

By Hon. Mr. McCurdy:

Q. It is better, is it not?—A. I will say this, that Canada was the first of the warring nations to plan this definitely; France has done a tremendous amount and is doing it splendidly; but about a year ago there were over 50 different agencies in France engaged in this work. In England, at the present time, it is being done in many ways by various societies, I have before me at the present time the report of what the Society of Electrical Engineers are doing over there, I can put that in if you like, showing the difficulties with which they have had to contend. The report refers particularly to the maintenance of a man undergoing re-education which is provided for under the powers of the Commission.

By the Chairman:

Q. You provide also for their families, while they are under instruction?—A. Yes. I will deal more fully with that in the question of re-education.

By Hon. Mr. Belcourt:

Q. Will that table which you are going to prepare show the number of men who are willing to go into agriculture?—A. I could not give you that, as it could only be obtained by taking a census of the men, but I can give you the particulars of every man who has been specially examined with a view to deciding his future vocation.

By the Chairman:

Q. You can give us a table showing us the result of the examinations you have made with regard to the desires of the men for vocational training?—A. Yes, up to date, sir.

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. Are the men claiming that they are not going back to the land, that that was not the class of employment they desired? In your talk with all these returned soldiers have you found there are many objecting to going back to farming?—A. Yes.

Q. And what is the proportion?—A. By actual count of the first 340 or 350 men who returned, to one province, 6 wanted to go on the land.

By the Chairman:

Q. Is that the province of Ontario?—A. No, sir, the province of Alberta.

By Mr. Ross:

Q. Had these men been farmers before they entered the service?—A. No, sir—there were some cases of men who were farmers before who wanted to go into the cities.

By Hon. Mr. Belcourt:

Q. Are we to conclude that none of those of this number who were willing to go on the farm had been farming?—A. No, I would not say that because if the man was a farmer and he is going back to the farm nothing would be said to him, but of the number of men who were asked what they wanted to do, if they wanted to go into any special trade or occupation out of 340 odd, only 6 expressed their desire to take up farming. I could not tell you how many of that number had been farming before.

Q. Can you tell us how many men had been farming before and were going back to the farm? Is there any way of telling that?—A. No, if the records had been taken very closely it could have been told, so far as all the men who went through the hospitals are concerned.

Q. Can you make an effort to ascertain how many men have gone back to farming who were farming prior to their enlistment? (No answer.)

By Hon. Mr. McCurdy:

Q. Would it not be possible to have that information recorded from this time on? Have you any information along the line of showing the number of men who were formerly on the land, and who are now applying for re-education on other lines, or wishing to keep store or something of that kind?—A. I can get you that, sir.

Hon. Mr. BELCOURT: If we can get that information I think it will answer my question.

By Mr. Sutherland:

Q. You could not say with regard to the six men you have referred to, whether they had been on the land or not?—A. No, sir.

Q. Can you find that out?—A. Yes. But the tendency of men who had been living together in a large aggregation seems to be to direct them towards the cities and not towards the land, so far as I have been able to find out in talking with them.

By Hon. Mr. McCurdy:

Q. Do you endeavour to induce them to follow agricultural pursuits, do you try to change their point of view?—A. Yes, that is one of the reasons that wherever there has been accommodation, that is the necessary ground for the purpose, the Commission has established courses in outdoor work, gardening, poultry-work, and so forth, as in the four Western Provinces, where there was ample ground near the large Convalescent Hospitals.

By Mr. Middlebro:

Q. What do you think of this statement in the article by Dr. Bourillon on page 83 of the Special Bulletin issued by your Commission in April last (reads):

“There are, above all, peasants who evince a most ardent desire to return to the former scenes of their labours, and what is very interesting and worthy of being encouraged, many of the invalided who were formerly workmen in towns, manifest the same keen desire for the country, as in their distress they appreciate more the sweetness and the economic advantage of a rural life.”

Your experience is six men desiring to return to the land out of 346?—A. Dr. Bourillon refers to the French peasant, not to the men of the Canadian Expeditionary Force.

Q. But he says “many of the invalided who were formerly workmen in towns, manifest the same keen desire for the country.”

The CHAIRMAN: That refers to France, not to Canada.

The WITNESS: It is not our experience to date.

By Mr. Middlebro:

Q. Ours is absolutely the reverse of that?—A. Absolutely the reverse.

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. Of those 346 cases that you have spoken of have you asked them directly if they want to go back on the land?—A. That was asked by the secretary of the Provincial Commission, or by the official who interviews each man at the Discharge Depot, Quebec. The Secretary of the Provincial Commission gave me these figures. We were endeavouring from the very first to find these particulars—the first fifty that came back and entered our convalescent hospital in Calgary I personally examined, and out of the fifty only one man wanted to go on the land.

Q. Did they express an extreme aversion to going back on the land?—A. No, some of them would go on the land if they had a nice farm in a warm valley, and had a couple of thousand dollars, some livestock and a few other qualifications like that.

[Mr. T. B. Kidner.]

By Hon Mr. Murphy:

Q. Of those fifty men do you know how many had been on the land before the war?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How many?—A. Three or four.

By the Chairman:

Q. As a matter of fact the earlier enlistments, those in the first contingent, contained few men who came from the country. They were almost entirely from the cities. The first wounded men returned, being city men, preferred to remain in the cities?—A. Yes.

By Mr. Belcourt:

Q. What proportion of these men had only recently come to Canada before enlisting. Can you tell that?—A. No, sir. We can tell you in connection with their re-education, because that is a question we ask, the date they came to Canada.

By Mr. Ross (Middlesex):

Q. Would you kindly repeat that?—A. One of the things we consider in making the survey of a man who is candidate for re-education is the date on which he came to Canada. If he came out at ten years of age and received his education here, we regard him as a Canadian. If he came when he was eighteen, we do not regard him as a Canadian for purposes of vocational counsel because he has had his education in the Old Country. I will submit our forms for the information of the Committee.

By Hon. Mr. McCurdy:

Q. What is your explanation as to their preference for the city?—A. They form gregarious habits.

Q. What effect has the excitement they have gone through had on their inclinations? (No answer.)

The CHAIRMAN: I do not think, gentlemen, that the first returns from overseas are of any great value, because the first contingent consisted of 80 per cent of Englishmen, and was recruited almost entirely in the cities. These are mainly the men who have come back so far.

By Hon. Mr. Murphy:

Q. Can you say who were included in the 346 cases?—A. They were practically all first contingent men. The figures were obtained a year ago.

Mr. ROSS (Middlesex): Are you quite sure these men came from the cities?

The CHAIRMAN: The men at Valcartier mostly came from the cities.

Mr. ROSS (Middlesex): I thought they were mainly from the ranches in the West.

THE CHAIRMAN: The first contingent was almost entirely made up of city men.

Hon. Mr. MURPHY: Of course, we have no evidence of that.

Mr. MIDDLEBRO: The Chairman is probably speaking from his knowledge of the Patriotic Fund.

Hon. Mr. BELCOURT: Probably most of them had but recently come to Canada and were mainly from cities on the other side.

The CHAIRMAN: The point I am making is that we would be wholly at fault if we regarded the statistics of the returned men from the first contingent as liable to be maintained in successive contingents. The first contingent contained very few Canadians, and very few came from the country. The subsequent contingents were made up largely of Canadian born, especially when we got to raising rural battalions. The figures of the men coming back now are much more likely to be representative. You can draw no conclusions from the first fifty wounded men who came back.

Mr. MIDDLEBRO: One conclusion we can draw is that men who have lived in the cities and who have followed industrial life before they enlisted, do not prefer to farm.

Brigadier Gen. MASON: I had occasion to go into that matter, Mr. Chairman, and when I made up a return in March last over 63 per cent of enlistments were what we call British born. That would bear out your reasoning.

Hon. Mr. McCURDY: Up to what date is that return?

Brigadier Gen. MASON: Up to about the 1st of March.

By the Chairman:

Q. You might proceed, Mr. Kidner.—A. On pp. 2 and 3 of Bulletin No. 3 there is a statement as to vocational training. I should like to submit that, sir, as it deals with several points of importance. (See Exhibit No. 1, Appendix 2.) First the pensions Order in Council is dealt with, and Section 9 is quoted as follows:—

No deduction shall be made from the amount awarded to any pensioner owing to his having undertaken work or perfected himself in some form of industry.

Until that was settled it was not possible to approach the men successfully. I beg to submit this printed notice (producing poster) as having been issued to be placed in all hospitals, discharge depots and other places where soldiers are likely to see it. This notice is as follows (reads):

Canadian Expeditionary Force.

Pensions and Industry.

The Order in Council establishing the pension system declares, in Clause 9:

“No deduction shall be made from the amount awarded to any pensioner owing to his having undertaken work or perfected himself in some form of industry.”

“The amount of a man's pension is decided simply by the extent of the incapacity he has incurred by doing his duty as a soldier.

By Hon. Mr. Murphy:

Q. What occasion arose that made it advisable to print and distribute this card containing Sec. 9 of the Order-in-Council establishing the pensions system?—A. Our vocational officers and instructors reported that, as in France and Great Britain, a great many of the men in hospitals were averse to undertake training because they thought it might affect the amount of their pensions.

By Mr. Sutherland:

Q. The French Government has also adopted a similar ruling to ours, have they not?—A. The matter, I understand, is under consideration.

By the Chairman:

Q. That notice card has been put in the record. Have you any explanations to give in connection with that?—A. I think it is well to amplify a little the procedure which is adopted to determine the eligibility of a man for re-education. I shall submit some forms directly, sir, but I will explain them briefly beforehand. When it appears from a man's medical record and his physical condition that it is possible or likely that he will not be able to return to his former occupation, a survey is made of him by a Vocational Counsellor, or Vocational Officer. This officer is a man who understands the kind of training which is necessary for particular vocations and the kind of training that is available in schools; also whether it can be given in special institutions or whether it must be obtained under commercial conditions—in short, a vocational education expert.

By the Chairman:

Q. You have such in each province, have you?—A. Yes, sir. The Survey Form "A", as it is termed, contains the usual particulars of the man's name and address, his regimental number, and so forth, his age last birthday, his birthplace, and if born abroad, the date he came to Canada; his religion, the nationality of his father and his mother, and the occupation of his father. The occupation of the father is often significant with men from the older countries where they follow the father's trade. Quite often a man will tell you if you ask him where he learned his trade: "I picked it up running around with my father". Next, the form deals with the man's elementary schooling—where obtained, the kind of school and how many years, the age on leaving, his Grade or Standard on leaving, and the reason for his leaving school. It is of great significance when a man tells you he left school when he was thirteen or fourteen to know why he left. Sometimes he will tell you there was no higher school, or that he could not afford to go on. Another man will say: "I had to go to work, I wanted to earn money". The form next deals with his subsequent education, and I might give you the different heads: High, or Secondary School; trade or technical school; business college; College or University; evening classes; Correspondence School and otherwise. Next, the man's industrial history is dealt with; trade, or principal occupation, how long followed; whether learned by apprenticeship or otherwise, and the average wages. Then his other work. The answers to these questions are most interesting and often show that our young men have not had the right kind of education to enable them to earn their living under the prevailing conditions. Some of them have drifted about in from eight or nine widely different occupations in the course of four or five years. Then the man is asked this question: "What occupation do you prefer for the future?" He is asked to give his first choice and second choice and to state the reasons for his choice. Next he is asked: "If a course of instruction were provided for you would you be willing to follow it earnestly and faithfully?" Then he says "Yes," and signs his name. That form is filled out as thoroughly as possible when the man arrives at the Institution or depot of the Unit to which he is sent after his arrival in Canada.

By the Chairman:

Q. That is done while the men are in a Convalescent Home?—A. Yes. We also had this object in view, that there were a number of men who had passed through our hands and are residing in small towns. The local Secretary of the Patriotic Fund, or the Red Cross Society, or the Soldiers' Aid Commission, may report to us. "There is a man here who thinks he wants re-education." Well, we get him to sign this statement as a preliminary. The man is then examined by a Vocational Counsellor, one of the specialists of whom I spoke. The Vocational Counsellor's sheet contains the identification particulars and a brief statement of the apparent disability, not in strictly medical terms, but from the layman's point of view. Then the personal characteristics, as obtained by questions, are set forth, such as his recreations, his hobbies, his favourite reading, his habits—whether he is a drinker or a smoker, his appearance and manner, and his general intelligence. Then from records and inquiries, his conduct on service, his conduct in the Convalescent Home, and by reference from employers. There is also placed on the sheet a record of his training during convalescence. Then the Vocational Counsellor sets down the vocations for which the man's ability and aptitude are evident. Particulars of the man's educational and industrial history and of his personal characteristics are obtained in an interview which often takes three or four different approaches to the man before the Vocational Counsellor can get inside his guard. He has been before Boards of

[Mr. T. B. Kidner.]

Medical and Military officers until he is sick of them, and he is a little difficult to get at sometimes. But the Vocational Officer must penetrate the man's guard to get at his wishes and feelings. Then the Vocational Officer, with his knowledge of conditions, the means of training the man, the man's possibilities and the subsequent chances of employment, records his preference for a future vocation and gives the reasons for his preference, the method of training recommended, and an estimate of the cost of training the man and of supporting his dependents. Next the Medical man comes in. A medical man is especially detailed to make an examination of the candidate for re-education, not with a view to his disability but with a view to his remaining ability. A number of questions are set down, some in the form in which they are set down for similar examination purposes in insurance. First of all, an extract from the record of the last Medical Board, stating where it was held and when, the nature of the disability, the nature of the wound or affection from which disability resulted, the date and place of origin, and the medical officers who made the examination. The special Medical Officer has that information before him. He then examines the man as to his present condition: Complications present (if any), treatment, results, if movement is impaired, degree remaining; if an amputation has been performed, he states its nature; length of stump; character of stump; power of stump; usefulness of stump. Is an artificial appliance required. Has it been ordered. Has it been received. Extent of disability (stated in percentage) height, weight, girth, chest. Then questions as to his mentality. His present mental condition, whether it is alert or sluggish. His general intellectual capacity—whether sub-normal, normal or hyper-normal. Then he states the precautions which, in his opinion as a medical officer, should be observed in the choice of occupation. The three sheets which I have enumerated (and now beg to hand in for insertion in the record) are submitted to a Board which is described in what I have submitted in Bulletin No. 3 as "A Disabled Soldiers' Training Board."

By the Chairman:

Q. Is there one Board in each province or is the Board located at Ottawa?—A. There are several of them. They may be constituted wherever they are required.

Q. Are they permanent or temporary?—A. In the larger centres there is a permanent Board. In the out-lying centres they may be brought together and appointed from time to time, just as the Army Medical Corps may appoint a Board to sit in an out-lying place. A Disabled Soldiers Training Board consists of the District Vocational Officer, a Special Medical Officer appointed for the duty, and a layman nominated by the Advisory Committee of the Provincial Commission, to which reference was made before luncheon. That man represents the local, unofficial part of the work, and is usually chosen for his knowledge of labour and employment conditions. Those three men examine the applicant. If possible each of them see him, but two must have made a personal examination of the man. The Disabled Soldiers Training Board then forwards its recommendations to Ottawa. Those recommendations are gone through carefully, from the medical point of view especially. The Medical Superintendent, or his officer, goes through them and discusses the case with the Vocational Branch and then if the recommendation is approved the District Vocational Officer is notified and the man is at once entered upon his course of training. As soon as his military discharge takes place, he goes under the Order-in-Council, P.C. 1472, which is the Order-in-Council under which the Military Hospitals Commission maintains the man and his dependents during his re-education and for one month after his re-education is completed.

Q. How long is the re-education expected to take ordinarily?—A. It varies from three months to two years, but the longest course yet granted has been one year.

[Mr. T. B. Kidner.]

Q. During that time the cost of maintenance of the man and his family are all borne by the Commission?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Have you any idea of what the average cost is?—A. Not yet, sir.

Q. It represents, I understand, $1,000?—A. In the case of some married men it will certainly be $1,000, but it is too soon yet for averages.

By Hon. Mr. McCurdy:

Q. Upon what basis is it placed?—A. Upon the scale given in the Order in Council which was very largely based on the experience of the Patriotic Fund.

By the Chairman:

Q. I think that would be a very good thing to put in on the record, the Order in Council P.C. 1472, giving the policy of the Commission for the maintenance of the man who is taking this re-education course?—A. These payments are stated so that the man before he enters upon his training course may know exactly what he is going to receive per month.

Q. The chief object is to provide for the man and his family comfortably during his period of training?—A. It is impossible to talk to a man about entering upon a course of training unless he can be assured that he and his family are to be provided for during the progress of that course.

By Mr. Ross:

Q. He gets his soldier's pay, and his wife gets the Patriotic Fund and separation allowance?—A. No, sir, he is a discharged man, and he gets no pay and allowances from the Militia Department.

Q. I understand that he gets paid to some amount?

The CHAIRMAN: He gets the full pension and the wife gets a separation allowance, I think?—A. No, sir, he is a discharged man, and he gets a pension.

Q. He gets the full pension of $40 a month?—A. Yes.

Q. And there is a certain amount for each child and a certain amount for his wife?—A. Yes.

Q. And in the meantime the Patriotic Fund helps him out a little if necessary?—A. The Order in Council is so worded that a wife having no children gets $35 per month, less her husband's pension, but the man himself gets $8 per month pocket money, and a subsistence allowance of 60 cents a day, or if he prefers to live in one of our institutions he gets board, maintenance and laundry.

By Mr. Middlebro:

Q. I thought it was 75 cents per day for subsistence?—A. That is in a Military Service not during re-education. From several districts, statements have been received to the effect that the 60 cents per day is not sufficient and it will probably have to be raised to $1 as the cost of living is increasing so.

By Brigadier-General Mason:

Q. It sometimes happens that the recommendation of a local board is not accepted?—A. Yes, occasionally it is sent back to ask if they have any further remarks, but usually it is done on medical grounds, and the remarks of the medical superintendent or specialist to whom the case is submitted are transmitted to the Local Board for their further remarks. Last week a case came in, in which the medical man stated that no precautions need be observed in this man's choice of occupation, that he could work at anything, but, in the other part of that report it stated that this man could not walk very much. The report was sent back and the doctor stated that he meant to say the man could undertake any occupation that did not involve walking.

[Mr. T. B. Kidner.]

By Hon. Mr. McCurdy:

Q. You take great precaution that these cases which are to be re-educated are promising prospects for re-education?—A. Yes.

Q. Have you had any disciplinings amongst these re-education cases to the extent of having to let these cases out?—A. Yes, we have had three cases.

Q. Three cases out of how many?—A. There are about 150 cases; at present we have one or two we have had to let go for misbehaviour, and we have one or two who have refused the re-education that is provided for them, preferring to go to work.

By Hon. Mr. Belcourt:

Q. Three or four out of how many?—A. 192 cases have been surveyed up to last week.

Q. How many gave it up after commencing?—A. We have had two or three who gave it up.

Q. I understand those two or three refused to begin at all?—A. No, sir, two refused to begin, and two or three have given up.

Q. That will bring it up to five out of 192?—A. Something like that. After a man has been started upon this course of re-education, he is reported upon each month. If we discover after one month or two months that a mistake has been made the man is allowed to change to another kind of training provided there is reason for it.

Q. The five you have mentioned did not give up for the purpose of taking another course, but they gave up altogether?—A. Oh, yes. If a man changes from one occupation to another that is not counted as giving up, for instance, we had a man with his leg disarticulated at the hip, who during his treatment at the Convalescent Hospital became immensely interested in poultry work, and he was entered for that course, but after two months he found it was impossible for him to get about. There is really no effective artificial limb made for that particular amputation, from which he is suffering, and he has gone over to the commercial side, and is taking a course in commercial work. The monthly report on each case undergoing re-education is sent in by the Vocational Officer, and is called the "Progress Report of man undergoing re-training." It gives the place of training, the name of the Institution, and the name of the workshop and gives the progress which the man has made and also any medical remarks should a man require medical attention during his re-education. The Commission has decided that though these men are discharged soldiers, they are wards of the state while undergoing re-education, and they are given medical attention by the Commission if they require it. We have several cases where the men have thrown themselves so vigorously into their course of training that they have broken down and have had to take a rest for a few days.

Q. Is that medical attention given outside?—A. The particular cases we have had to deal with are men who have been living in hospitals or attending hospital classes. There was no trouble about their treatment, as there was a medical man there every day. I should like to submit these forms, sir. (Survey Forms A, B and C, and Monthly Report. See pp. 118-121.)

The CHAIRMAN: They will be incorporated in the record.

The WITNESS: Next, it may be of interest to state where these men are receiving their training. In the first place, certain occupations can be taught with the simple equipment that we put into the hospitals for the occupational work, the improvement work, offered during convalescence. For instance, the difference between a class room for instruction in general subjects, in which a man can brush up his ordinary education, and the school in which commercial training could be given, is only the buying of a little more equipment, such as typewriters, adding machines, filing apparatus, etc., and the provision of a skilled teacher. The addition of some simple appliances to a metal working shop will give us a very good motor repair shop. Motor mechanics, especially in the West, is a subject in great demand, not only for automobile work, but for work on gasoline engines, tractors, internal combustion engines, and other similar apparatus.

By Hon. Mr. McCurdy:

Q. We will shortly add flying machines to that.—A. Yes, sir. Then, at the Inter-provincial Conference, which was held in Ottawa in October, 1915, at the invitation of the Prime Minister, it was understood that the provinces would place at the disposal of the Hospitals Commission any of their institutions. The municipalities in most cases have agreed to do so also. The idea is that as long as the inclusion of disabled soldiers to be trained does not involve the addition of equipment or an increase of the staff, no charge will be made, but wherever more equipment or special instructors are required the Military Hospitals Commission bears the cost.

By the Chairman:

Q. I understand that the only men who are eligible for this training or retraining are men who have passed through the hospitals?—A. Not necessarily.

Q. Can a perfectly fit man come back from the front and have the advantage of this training if he wants it?—A. No, sir.

Hon. Mr. McCURDY: Perfectly fit men do not come back.

The WITNESS: That has never been the intention.

By the Chairman:

Q. You do not contemplate, when the war is over, and fit men come back, to extend to them the same opportunities?—A. We have no authority for it.

Q. It is purely for the man who is disabled?—A. Yes, sir, except that we have interpreted very broadly the training that we are giving during convalescence. We are making that daily more directly useful to a man. At first the main idea was that it would provide them with occupation and have considerable therapeutic value.

Q. Is the man, for example, who falls sick with rheumatism in England, and is invalided back, eligible for all these benefits?—A. Yes, if he is disabled from following his previous occupation.

By Hon. Mr. Belcourt:

Q. Is that the line of demarkation?—A. That is for re-education, sir.

Q. Take the case of the man suffering from enteric fever, but who recovers his health. Is he eligible for vocational training?—A. If the medical authorities say that he could not return to his previous occupation because of some weakness left by that disease, he would be eligible for the training.

Q. His ability might be improved by undergoing educational treatment in the hospital. In that case would he not be given it?—A. Yes, during his convalescence. The question was asked, I understood, about re-education after discharge. Special re-education after discharge is at present only given to those men whose disability as a result of service would prevent them following their old occupation efficiently.

Mr. MIDDLEBRO: This is the wording of the order in council (reads):—

That a Commission be appointed to deal with the provision of hospital accommodation and Military Convalescent Homes in Canada, for Officers, Non-Commissioned Officers, and Men of the Canadian Expeditionary Force who return invalided from the front, and for Officers, Non-Commissioned Officers and Men invalided, while on active service in Canada, Bermuda, or elsewhere.

The qualification seems to be that they shall be "invalided."

[Mr. T. B. Kidner.]

By Brigadier-General Mason:

Q. Has the Commission anything to do with men who return when the war is over, who are not wounded, but sound men?—A. I do not know, sir.

Brigadier-General MASON: Because Bulletin No. 1 says (reads):—

“Later, it was decided by the Prime Minister that the powers of the Commission should be extended to cover the matter of the vocational re-education of those who through their disability might be unable to follow their previous occupations; also that the necessary machinery, in the form of Provincial Commissions and local committees, should be installed in order to provide employment, not only for disabled men, but, at the close of the war, for the able bodied as well. A revised order in council was therefore passed.”

Would that authority bring such men under the jurisdiction of the Commission?

Mr. MIDDLEBRO: That is dealt with in Section 7 of the Order in Council. It says “for members of the Canadian Expeditionary Force on their return to Canada.”

Mr. ROSS (Middlesex): That is done through the sub-committees.

The CHAIRMAN: That does not really come under Mr. Kidner's line of work, Mr. Kidner having the vocational training end, and not dealing with the employment of thoroughly fit men.

Brigadier-General MASON: I raised the point because it might come within the province of this Committee.

The CHAIRMAN: It certainly will, but with other witnesses.

By the Chairman:

Q. Will you go on, Mr. Kidner?—A. I should like to put in some extracts from a pamphlet (see Exhibit No. 2, Appendix 2), issued by the Institution of Electrical Engineers, Victoria Embankment, London, showing two or three points of difficulty that they are finding in England, and which I think it only fair to Canada to show what we have determined by our regulations here. I referred to them just now.

By Hon. Mr. Murphy:

Q. Could you state briefly what they are, Mr. Kidner?—A. First, there was the difficulty of obtaining candidates for admission. The pamphlet says: “This has proved the greatest difficulty which the Committee has had to face. The most obvious source from which applications should have been obtained, namely, the Military Hospitals was found to be of no practical use.”

Q. For admission to what?—A. Re-education course. (Reads): “The stumbling-block was the fear, widely prevalent amongst convalescent men, that any attempt to improve their earning capacity would injuriously affect the amount of their pension.”

Q. How did the Institution of Electrical Engineers come to issue this pamphlet?—A. Because all sorts of societies are going into this work in England, as the Government has not done it. It is being done by institutions of all kinds, such as the Lord Roberts Memorial Homes, the Red Cross and other societies.

By Hon. Mr. Belcourt:

Q. Are you speaking now of employment?—A. No, of re-education, sir.

The CHAIRMAN: A multitude of agencies in England is undertaking re-education, whereas we are making it one state affair.

By Mr. Middlebro:

Q. In England I suppose these agencies are overlapping each other?—A. Yes, and inefficiency results. The second difficulty found by the Institution of Electrical Engineers was the selection of candidates—the nature of the disablement should be considered, and so forth—and the other was the question of maintenance during training; it is only fair to state that the Commission has met all these points.

I should like to mention another question which arises very often—it was mentioned by Colonel Thompson yesterday—of men who have spent three or four months in our convalescent hospitals. For the first time in their lives they have had time to sit back and consider how much better they would have been with a little more education, and they have gone in for some course during convalescence and done well. Then the time comes when they are medically fit to return to civil life and they are discharged. They are civilians, and as such the Federal authorities have no more concern with them and they go out. A great many of these men would like to go on with the training course they had started and which they might conclude in two or three months more. It is perhaps a difficult matter to decide, but I should like this Committee to take into consideration whether or not we could devise some plan whereby these men who desire to continue their course could do so. To some extent the need is being already met by evening class work. Not all of our re-education cases are taking courses in the day time. We have over 30 men for whom instruction in the evening has been provided at the cost of the Commission. In Alberta there are two or three men who have lost arms, and they are being trained as Sanitary Inspectors. The only cost to the public which this entails is the salary of the teacher, as the local authorities supply the building, and furnish light, heat, and the services of a janitor. Quite often, if we have to pay an instructor for one or two re-education cases like that, we admit a number of other men to the class. That is being done in several cases. But the question of continuing the man's training at the end of his period of convalescence, when his medical treatment is over, is of importance. Personally I should like to be able to say to certain men: "Yes, you may go on and complete your course."

By the Chairman:

Q. That would mean that the State would provide for them when they were physically fit in order to increase their efficiency?—A. For the sake of the country.

By Hon. Mr. McCurdy:

Q. To what extent should that cost be met by the Federal authorities if the Provincial Governments, who are responsible for the matter of education, perform their duty?—A. I suppose theoretically the Provinces are responsible. In the case of your own province of Nova Scotia, Mr. McCurdy, in response to the question whether some arrangement could not be made in regard to vocational education after discharge, the reply was that the province was quite prepared to provide evening classes in any subject for any of its population, especially soldiers.

By Hon. Mr. Belcourt:

Q. Gratuitous instruction?—A. Yes, sir, without cost to them.

Q. That applies generally? Not merely to soldiers?—A. They do that for the whole of their population.

By Hon. Mr. McCurdy:

Q. The classes are not entirely free, are they?—A. In Nova Scotia fees are collected, but they are returned when the attendance is regular. In that province any man who required further training after he had left the hospitals would be given it in the Provincial Technical Schools.

By Mr. Middlebro:

Q. Free of charge, you say?—A. Free of charge.

By Hon. Mr. McCurdy:

Q. Does that meet the difficulty?—A. Yes, it meets the difficulty in Nova Scotia. In Manitoba the Winnipeg School Board has also arranged to admit free to its evening classes any returned soldiers who may be nominated and recommended by the District Vocational Officer. But there are provinces in which these facilities do not exist, and if these men can be rendered more valuable to the country I think it is a matter for serious consideration whether some means could not be devised to provide some special training for the soldiers after they are discharged.

[Mr. T. B. Kidner.]

By Brigadier-General Mason:

Q. Have you any recommendation to make?—A. No, sir. This big question of technical education is a matter for the Governments of the Provinces and of the Dominion.

By the Chairman:

Q. These men are physically restored, and therefore are able to earn their own livelihood in so far as they will ever be able to do so?—A. Yes.

Q. They draw a pension if their incapacity is considerable, therefore they have reached a self-supporting position?—A. I am not speaking of that type of man but of the discharged soldier, coming from the Convalescent Home, who gets all right again and goes back to civil life unimpaired in health.

Q. He is physically all right?—A. Yes.

Q. He is physically able to support himself? Is it not enough then to give him an even, steady opportunity?—A. It is not always possible for him to get that.

By Hon. Mr. Belcourt:

Q. Would not the fact that he has served his country and done active service give him as good a chance of securing employment as the man who has not done so?—A. It is not a matter of securing employment but of increasing his efficiency by some special training.

By the Chairman:

Q. Let me use a concrete example: suppose a man said while in the hospital: "I would like to know both French and English, I could support myself very much better if I did." He takes his primary study in French and gets to be only fairly proficient when he becomes physically fit and is discharged. You would like to have some arrangements made whereby that man could complete his French study sufficiently to make it a useful, practical working agency for him?—A. Yes, sir, although I should not have chosen such an example, but something more in the way of productive work.

Q. Yes, I know, but in Montreal a man who has a good knowledge of both languages can add 25 per cent to his salary?—A. This country wants men who can do things with their hands and their heads. That is the kind of training I should rather have used as an example, although the principle of your illustration is quite right.

Q. You feel that the man ought to be supported by the Government while he was perfecting himself in the subject he had only partially studied?—A. It is a most difficult matter to deal with. There are a number of cases which come up from time to time, where our vocational officers say: "I wish we could keep that man in hospital a little longer for the purpose of finishing his course."

By Brigadier-General Mason:

Q. Keep him in hospital?—A. I mean keep him in the classes.

By Hon. Mr. Murphy:

Q. What is done in such a case as that, where the vocational officer makes such a request or statement as that?—A. There is nothing done because the medical officer reports for discharge, and he is discharged. We always give the man a chance to come to the class, but do not do anything else. I am bringing up this point, sir, because I may say as you go about the country this question will be raised as to whether or not we cannot do something for these men we discharge.

[Mr. T. B. Kidner.]

By the Chairman:

Q. The danger is that knowledge that the man is going to be kept as a re-educative until he acquires certain efficiency may operate to delay progress very materially on the part of that man?—A. Yes. May I speak of another important point? Senator McLennan this morning dealt with the value of the products which are obtained in the hospital workshops. We have not yet worked out to finality the system to be adopted. We have tried two or three ways in the Grey Nuns, Montreal, and in hospitals in other centres.

By Hon. Mr. Belcourt:

Q. You are speaking now of the disposal of the product of these workshops?—A. Yes. The men can sell all and more than they produce.

Q. Is it sold at its real value, or at a sentimental value?—A. I do not know. The difficulty is that if it is sold at a sentimental value some of the men might be induced to take up the production of these articles because of the sentimental price which they obtain for them, and try to make a living in that way, which would in my opinion be very bad for them, because their market would depend upon the compassion of the public, which will not last very long after the war is over. But, incidentally, I think that a man should be allowed to earn a little money during his convalescence, in the workshops or gardens—because it applies equally to the gardens as to the workshops. The fact that he can earn a little will often induce a man to busy himself, and he will thus obtain the other advantages arising from being busy rather than from sitting around doing nothing. In other ways we have encouraged them to do a little work, because of our belief in the therapeutic benefits which result from keeping them occupied. For instance, we wanted some appliances made for use in the hospitals, and the men undertook to make them. The cost of the material and a little for wear and tear, 10 per cent or so, was deducted, and the balance was divided among the men.

Q. Are you able to make doors, chairs, drawers, and things of that kind that you use in your hospitals?—A. At Esquimalt, bedside tables were made at the shops by the men and a number of other small articles for use in the hospitals. At one or two points old motor cars which have been contributed, have been rebuilt and are being used by the men in going to and from the hospitals and the instruction shops. We are applying at present for some worn cars from the Department of Militia, so that when we get them we can rebuild them and in this way find something for the men to do in motor mechanical construction.

Q. How about the boots, caps and clothing that the men themselves wear in the hospitals? Are they made by the men?—A. The only class in tailoring that has been established up to the present was established in connection with those coloured troops who were re-educated in the Clayton Hospital, Halifax. The work of boot and shoe repairing has been taken up very successfully in several of the hospitals in Montreal, Quebec and Halifax, and we are just starting this work in Winnipeg. We obtain from the Ordnance Branch of the Militia Department old, discarded boots; sometimes they are cut down in our workshops and made a size smaller. A great many men are interested in this work, and it is an occupation which is by no means overcrowded, and to which, if our people are going to learn thrift, a little more attention will be devoted in the future than it has received in the past. The statement was made in Montreal last week, that in the Maritime Provinces alone they could absorb two or three hundred shoe repairers. In fact statements have been made showing the possibility of their finding work all over the country. That is one of the occupations that can be taught at very little expense and in a very short time.

By Hon. Mr. McCurdy:

Q. A great many men are going in for market-gardening re-education, I understand?—A. Yes, there are a few cases being re-educated in the West. We have not started down here yet in that work. These are things we are going to undertake at Whitby and Guelph, but unfortunately up to the present nearly all our hospitals have been in the cities where ground is not available for instructional work along these lines.

Q. You say "unfortunately." What do you mean us to understand by that?—A. All the hospitals in the East are in that position except at Whitby, where there are 300 acres available, and at Guelph, where there are large grounds and the Provincial Agricultural College at a short distance affording excellent opportunities for agricultural work.

Q. Could not some attempt be made to induce men who are going in for re-education to take up that class of work?—A. That point is before the Vocational Branch all the time, but, to the present, not a great many men have expressed a desire to go into those classes.

By the Chairman:

Q. Do you not think that if steps were taken to make market gardening more attractive to the man by attractive surroundings you might induce more men to go into it?—A. Yes, and at Deer Lodge Convalescent Hospital in the suburbs of Winnipeg, there are grounds, 7 or 8 acres in extent, and they are a model of their kind, where they raised last year in a very short season (the hospital was not opened until the end of June), $800 worth of products from the gardens and poultry houses. Flowers were also raised in large quantities for sale in the market, and altogether as far as possible there was a little model grange.

Q. Are steps being taken to show the high prices at which these things can be sold and the good living that can be made at this work?—A. Yes, sir,

By Hon. Mr. Belcourt:

Q. You have a case at Ogden where that is being done?—A. That is a piece of prairie that was given to the Commission out there and a garden was made under the auspices, and with the assistance of, the Provincial Department of Agriculture. I have referred in a statement put in to the fact that great assistance has been received from all the Departments of Education and the Departments of Agriculture, both Federal and Provincial. They will send their lecturers and demonstrators to any of the hospitals to help. The poultry houses have been planned by provincial officers so as to fit the local needs.

The CHAIRMAN: If the Committee will consent we will release Mr. Kidner so that we will have time for one more witness to-day.

By Hon. Mr. Belcourt:

Q. If you could get this information it would be very satisfactory to me. Could you give us in tabulated form an idea of what is being done to-day in Great Britain and France as compared with Canada for the returned or discharged soldiers in the way of pension, re-education, vocational training, and so on? Could that be obtained and put in tabulated order?—A. No, sir, I should not like to undertake it. We have three reports on what is being done in France, and one is a fairly bulky volume, and if one attempted to go into what was being done in England it would need a Royal Commission.

Q. Could not something of that sort be done, not by one man alone, but with assistance. After all it would be helpful for us to know?—A. We have a great deal of information on file. The Commission has been supplied, through the authorities in England and by the French authorities, with particulars of a great many things. There are dozens of documents on file.

By Hon. Mr. McCurdy:

Q. An inquiry addressed to the various governments would elicit the information.—A. There is to be a conference in Paris next month on the vocational re-education of disabled men, which is being called, I understand, at the instance of the Belgian Government. An invitation has been received that Canada shall be represented there. I saw this morning the letter which was passed on to us from the Minister of Militia.

Q. Could you write over there and ask the various governments to give this information to you?—A. We have reports in the office which give great numbers of agencies which are dealing with the re-education of the soldier.

Q. If an enquiry is directed to the French and English Governments you will get information as to the extent to which they have gone in these matters.

By Hon. Mr. Belcourt:

Q. I think we are doing far more in Canada than they are doing on the other side, and if that is so it ought to be known.—A. I will endeavour to do that. I agree with you that so far as our official plans are concerned we are doing a great deal. But there is an enormous amount of work being done in France by various agencies.

Hon. Mr. BELCOURT: I mean, of course, Government agencies.

By Mr. Middlebro:

Q. Have you any suggestion to make to this Committee with a view to improving, or in any way making, the Military Hospitals Commission more efficient than it is at the present time? Are there any additional powers desired?—A. Of course, technical education men are always looking after their own end of the game. I wish that we could interpret very liberally the powers given by the Order in Council for the re-education of the men. There are often cases in which from a medical standpoint a man can go back to his previous occupation, but there is a borderland of cases, which, strictly speaking, we should do nothing for under our powers. I should like to have some power by which we could deal with a large number of citizens who could be made better producers, and therefore better citizens if we could give them some re-education, and with whom, because they do not fall strictly within the present regulations, the Commission in strict fulfilment of its powers has nothing to do, perhaps.

Q. Apart from that, have you any other suggestions as to internal management or regulation, the constitution of medical boards, or any improvements that you think of?—A. As far as the relations of the medical officers and my branch are concerned they have been perfectly satisfactory. There has been here and in England some difficulty in finding what they had in France—a sufficient supply of doctors who were well enough acquainted with industrial processes and industrial disabilities and abilities. France has an advantage over the other countries in the respect that she had before the war institutions where men maimed in civil life were retrained. We had nothing of the kind.

Q. Do you suggest that we should have some expert of that kind to help in determining vocational work?—A. It is working out that in each district a special medical officer is being detailed for that work, and he is soon discovering what is needed.

By Hon. Mr. McCurdy:

Q. Are you speaking now, Mr. Kidner, of the fields not covered, which is really outside of the proper provincial purview?—A. Oh, yes, this is not provincial. With regard to those men of whom I was speaking a moment ago—

Q. You mentioned an analogy in France between those maimed in civilian life and those being re-educated. That does not come under federal jurisdiction?—A. The point I desired to make was that France had some experience to go on.

Q. Under our system they would properly be under provincial jurisdiction, therefore the need you speak of would also fall under provincial jurisdiction, would it not?—A. No, sir, as far as regards our dealings with the soldiers. I was asked, as I understand the question, if there were any particular ways in which we could suggest better and more help.

By the Chairman:

Q. You would like to have a millionaire endow the Commission with the interest on five million dollars which could be devoted to selected cases?—A. That goes without saying. I should like to have something in this country that they have in France, a scientific method of determining a man's powers before his vocational future is considered.

Mr. MIDDLEBRO: That is a very important point.

By Mr. Ross (Middlesex):

Q. In your reports, particularly in your Special Bulletin, there are cuts of certain apparatus used by Dr. Amar in connection with his work. Are you being supplied with similar apparatus?—A. We have nothing of the kind in Canada, but that is a medical matter.

Q. But you would like to have that?—A. It would help very considerably.

Q. Would it be very expensive?—A. I do not know.

By Hon. Mr. Belcourt:

Q. Are there any provincial institutions which might be utilized for the purposes of your work which are not already interested or giving you assistance?—A. No, sir.

Q. You do not know of any?—A. We have on all hands been splendidly received wherever we have gone. The time for using the provincial institutions is not very often during the convalescence of a man, but as we get more and more of these re-education cases we shall be able to make more use of existing institutions and facilities.

By Mr. Ross (Middlesex):

Q. Are you badly handicapped in your work by not having the Amar apparatus?—A. I would not say that, I am hoping the matter is going to work out satisfactorily. We study a man from all points—medical, social, personal and vocational—but we have not that scientific study which you referred to as having been remarked on in the Bulletin; there are very few men qualified to make it. As I say, that is a medical matter.

By Hon. Mr. Murphy:

Q. You have spoken of training men in poultry keeping, market gardening and bee farming. Are these the only agricultural lines along which you provide for re-education?—A. The men for whom training has been provided up to date are partially disabled men.

Q. Yes, but have you provided training in any other forms of agriculture than those mentioned?—A. No, sir, because our work is only to provide training for partially disabled men.

Q. So that is the extent to which you have gone into things which are even remotely connected with agriculture?—A. Yes, work for these partially disabled men.

Q. So that training in agriculture, in the form in which it is generally understood, has not yet been undertaken?—A. No. Of course, there are a great many partially disabled men who, given a knowledge of machinery—of internal combustion engines and modern farm appliances—would be enabled to earn a good living on the farm, although their muscular powers may be somewhat impaired.

Q. Has no effort yet been made to take advantage of the facilities provided at the Macdonald College, Ste. Anne?—A. Not yet, sir. The Macdonald Agricultural College arranged a short course in poultry work, and we endeavoured to get men to take it. Our officers found only one man in the Montreal Convalescent Hospitals who wanted to go out and take a fortnight's course in poultry work.

By the Chairman:

Q. 170 men went out to-day to that College on an excursion?—A. That excursion was arranged I understand with the hope that some of the men would be induced to consider taking the course, but when our officer went round and interviewed them a week or so ago there was only one man who felt like taking up the work.

By Hon. Mr. Murphy:

Q. Earlier in your evidence you spoke of men being trained to go into poultry keeping on a large scale. I suppose your poultry expert knows that it is a mistake for a beginner to commence on a large scale?—A. This man had no capital. He was being trained to be a worker.

By Brigadier-General Mason:

Q. As a hired man?—A. Yes, as a hired man. This work is undertaken in the respective localities by the local poultry experts. In the Province of Quebec the Provincial Poultry Inspector goes to Savard Park Convalescent Hospital every week and gives demonstrations.

By Hon. Mr. Belcourt:

Q. Have you thought of the Quebec Afforestation School as something to which the men might devote attention?—A. It is down on the list of facilities to which our men may have access.

Witness retired.

Lieutenant J. K. L. Ross, Chairman of the Board of Pension Commissioners, Called, Sworn and Examined.

The CHAIRMAN: Lieutenant Ross, you may tell the Committee about the pension system now in operation, place on record a statement showing the pensions that are paid, and answer such questions as the gentlemen may desire to put to you concerning pensions.

Hon. Mr. MURPHY: First state who compose the Board of Pension Commissioners.

The WITNESS: Colonel Labatt, Major Todd and myself. The Board consists of three members.

By the Chairman:

Q. Where are your two colleagues domiciled?—A. Col. Labatt's home is in Hamilton, Ontario. Major Todd's home in the past has been in British Columbia, but of late he has been doing work at McGill. In civil life he is known as Doctor Todd. He is a medical man and has done overseas service. He has been carrying out at McGill special duties of a medical nature and also research work.

Q. Then Major Todd's home is in Montreal?—A. He has been located in that city for some time.

Q. For the benefit of the members of the Committee please state briefly the modus operandi followed when a soldier becomes an applicant for a pension?—A. I might state first that we are working, as you are doubtless aware, under Order in Council (P.C. 1334).

Q. To which amendments have since been made?—A. Yes. I will now hand in a document which contains the provisions of the Order in Council referred to and most of the amendments thereof since made.

BOARD OF PENSION COMMISSIONERS FOR CANADA.

PENSION REGULATIONS.

As amended to December 12, 1916.

1. There shall be a Commission to be known as the Board of Pension Commissioners for Canada, consisting of three members appointed by the Governor in Council

[Lieut. J. K. L. Ross.]

(hereinafter called the Commission). Each Commissioner shall hold office during good behaviour for a period of ten years from the date of his appointment, but may be removed at any time by the Governor in Council, for cause, and a Commissioner, on the expiration of his term of office, shall be eligible for re-appointment. The Commissioners may, from time to time, elect one of their members to be chairman of the Commission.

2. Subject to the regulations hereinafter set out, the Commission shall have exclusive jurisdiction and authority to consider and make all grants and payments of military and naval pensions, and of gratuities, allowances and assistance to persons wounded, injured or incapacitated in the military or naval service of Canada (hereinafter called members of the forces), or to their dependent relatives, and shall have exclusive jurisdiction and authority to deal with all matters pertaining to such pensions, gratuities, allowances and assistances.

3. The Commission shall have authority to engage such clerical and other assistance as they may consider requisite for the transaction of their duties, and at such salaries as may be approved by the Governor in Council.

4. In the administration of their powers by the Commission great care shall be taken to insure all applications being considered and determined with the utmost despatch.

5. There shall be no appeals from the decisions of the Commission, but every applicant for a pension, gratuity, allowance or assistance may present his or her case either personally or by counsel before the full Commission sitting for the purpose of hearing the complaints of those who may have been dissatisfied with decisions given in the ordinary course of administration.

6. The pension or other grant awarded any member of the forces, or any dependent of such member, shall not be assigned, charged, attached, anticipated or commuted, nor shall any assignment, charge, attachment, anticipation or commutation be recognized in any way by the Commission or any officer or servant of the Crown.

7. All pensions awarded to members of the forces shall be determined by the disability of the applicant without reference to his occupation prior to enlistment.

8. Each case shall be subject to review at the end of a year from the time when the pension is first granted, except in those cases where the disability is obviously permanent, and then there shall be no further review.

9. No deduction shall be made from the amount awarded to any pensioner owing to his having undertaken work or perfected himself in some form of industry.

10. The Commission shall make provision for the vocational training of those who are desirous of taking advantage of it, and for the supplying, from time to time, of artificial limbs and appliances to those who would thereby be benefited.

11. The Commission shall have power to entrust to a reputable person for administration the pension or other grant to any pensioner or beneficiary when the Commission is satisfied that it is being improvidently expended by the pensioner or beneficiary, and the expense of such administration, if any, shall be borne by the Crown.

Class 6.—Disability under 20 per cent, a gratuity not exceeding $100.

For example—Total deafness in one ear.

Partial deafness in both.

Loss of index or other finger.

[Lieut. J. K. L. Ross.]

14. To those up to and including the rank of Sub-Lieutenant (Naval) or Lieutenant (Militia) who are totally disabled and in addition are totally helpless so far as attending to their physical wants is concerned, a further allowance may be made of an amount not exceeding $250 year, but such special allowance shall be subject to annual review.

15. Those, up to and including the rank of Sub-Lieutenant (Naval) and Lieutenant (Militia) who are disabled and are entitled to a pension in the 1st, 2nd or 3rd class shall be paid, in addition to the personal pension, a special allowance of $6 a month for each child; of the rank of Lieutenant (Naval) and Captain (Militia) $7 a month for each child; of the rank of Lieutenant Commander (Naval) and Major (Militia) $8 a month for each child; of the rank of Commander, Captain or Commodore (Naval) and Lieut.-Colonel, Colonel or Brigadier-General (Militia) $10 a month for each child. "Child" shall include a step-child and also a child in respect of whom the pensioner was in loco-parentis but in either case only if the relation had been established before the pensioner's disability arose.

16. If a member of the forces has been killed, or has died as the result of injuries received, or disease contracted or aggravated while on active service, the widow, until re-marriage, shall be entitled to the equivalent of the pension mentioned in Class 2, and also be entitled to draw the allowance for children. On the re-marriage of the widow her pension shall cease, but she shall be entitled then to a gratuity of an amount equivalent to one year's pension.

17. If a member of the forces who has been killed, or had died, as the result of injuries received, or disease contracted or aggravated while on active service, was a widower, but leaves a child or children as defined in Regulation 15, said child or children shall receive an allowance of $12 per month each.

18. In the event of an application being made for a pension on behalf of a woman who has, without being married to a member of the forces, lived with him as his wife, or on behalf of the child or children of any such man or woman, the Commission shall be authorized to grant the customary pension and allowance for a wife or for a child or children, on being satisfied that the circumstances were such as to warrant the conclusion that the woman had at the time of enlistment and for a reasonable time previously thereto, publicly been represented as the wife of said member, or if the Commission is satisfied that justice would be done by the recognition of such woman, for the purpose of a pension, as the wife of such member. On the marriage of the woman her pension shall cease but she shall be entitled to a gratuity of an amount equivalent to one year's pension.

19. No allowance shall be paid to or in respect of any child, if a boy, over the age of sixteen, or a girl over the age of seventeen, unless owing to mental or physical infirmity the child is incapable of earning a livelihood, in which case the allowance may, if in the discretion of the Commission it seems best, be continued until the child is twenty-one. No allowance shall be paid in respect of a child after the marriage of such child.

20. No pension or allowance shall be paid to a member of the forces or any person dependent upon him when the disability or death in respect of which the claim is made was occasioned by the negligence of such member, unless the Commission otherwise consent.

21. In all cases the claims by members of the forces for pensions must be made within two years of the date of the appearance of the disability in respect of which the claim is made.

22. A widowed mother, step-mother or grandmother wholly or mainly dependent upon a member of the forces who is killed or dies as the result of injuries received or disease contracted or aggravated while on active service, if such member was without dependent children and unmarried, or a widower, shall be entitled to a pension of

Class 3, provided, however, that no such woman shall be entitled to more than one pension. On the marriage of the woman such pension shall cease, but she shall be entitled then to a gratuity of an amount equivalent to one year's pension.

23. A father, wholly or mainly dependent upon a son who is a member of the forces and who is killed or dies as the result of injuries received or disease contracted or aggravated while on active service, if such member was without dependent children and unmarried, or a widower, shall be entitled to a pension of Class 3.

24. If a member of the forces to whom a pension has been granted in either Class 1 or in Class 2 dies, leaving a wife to whom he was married at the time of his incurring the disability in respect of which his pension was granted, or a woman occupying at said time the position of a wife within the purview of Regulation 18, or leaving children by such wife or woman, the pension for the Class next below that granted the said member shall be given said wife or woman, and the allowance on behalf of any child or children shall be continued subject to the restrictions as to age as provided by Regulation 19.

On the marriage of the wife or woman her pension shall cease, but she shall be entitled then to a gratuity equivalent to one year's pension.

25. Pensions to widows and allowance to children shall take effect from the day following that on which the death of the member of the forces in respect of whom said pension is granted occurred, and a gratuity equivalent to two months pension, or two months allowance, shall be paid the first month in addition to the pension.

26. Subject to the approval of the Governor in Council the Commission may make such rules as it deems necessary for carrying out these regulations and the other duties assigned to it.

27. These Regulations shall only apply to or in respect of members of the Naval Forces of Canada and of the forces serving in the Canadian Expeditionary Forces during the present war; and shall be deemed to have come into force on the fourth day of August, 1914, and shall apply to or in respect of all casualties occurring in the said forces since the said fourth day of August.

28. Where a pension is awarded to a member of the forces in consequence of his insanity, if the pensioner is in an asylum or other institution the cost of his maintenance therein shall be paid to the Superintendent or other proper officer of the asylum or other institution and the balance of such pension shall be paid to such dependent relative or relatives of the pensioner as the Commissioners may direct, and if there is no dependent relative, such balance shall be retained until the pensioner's recovery or his death. If a pensioner is not in an asylum or other institution but remains in the care of the family, the whole of his pension may be paid to such member of his family as the Commissioners may direct, or part of the pension may be paid to such member of his family and the balance retained until the pensioner's recovery or death. Provided, however, that if a guardian of the pensioner has been appointed by any court of competent jurisdiction the Commissioners may direct that the pension be paid to such guardian.

29. No section.

30. In any case or matter in which the Commission desires the approval of, or to report to, the Governor in Council, such report shall be made through the Minister of Finance.

31. The Commission shall, at the end of each month, submit to the Minister of Finance a report in writing of their proceedings and of the pensions, gratuities, allowances and other grants made by the said Commission during such month, and such reports shall be laid before Parliament by the Minister of Finance.

I have here in a condensed form a statement showing the amounts of the pension, which I can distribute to the members if you like, giving the amount of pension in each class for all the different ranks.

N.B.—Widows receive an 80% total disability pension. See Par. 16, Pension Regulations.
Father, widowed mother, step-mother or grandmother, wholly or mainly dependent upon deceased soldier, provided unmarried and without children or a widower, receive 60% total disability pension. See Par. 22-23, Pension Regulations.

To those up to and including rank of Sub-Lieutenant (Naval) or Lieutenant (Militia), who are totally disabled and helpless may receive, in addition to their pension, an allowance not exceeding $250.00 per annum. See Par. 14, Pension Regulations.

THE WITNESS: You will observe Mr. Chairman, and Gentlemen, that there are two amounts given in the statement opposite each rank, representing the amount of the pension for one year, and one month respectively. These amounts are worked out separately for convenience and accuracy in checking in the Department. Of course there are different modes of procedure in the difference of pensions, in this way: there is a pension to a widow of a soldier who has been killed, and that is the simplest and quickest class of cases we have to deal with at the present time. There is the pension of the man who has been disabled—

Q. Do you make any difference in definition between the different classes of pensions? Do you speak of one as a pension, and of another as an allowance or gratuity?—A. We speak of it as a disability, as a soldier has been disabled and comes up for a pension.

Q. Do you use the term "pension" whether it is the widow of a soldier, or the soldier himself?—A. Yes, but it is spoken of in the office according to the form we have for each class. Regarding the "disability" of a widow, or mother, when we talk of a "mother's" form, we refer to the mother of a soldier, or to a step-father, or step-mother, etc., as laid down in the Order in Council. There is also the gratuity, and we differentiate slightly on that. In the first place, take the pension of a widow whose husband has been killed, or has died as the result of service, we receive notice from the Militia Department, and we then immediately send over, and "draw" the fyle of that man. We see that all the papers are there, but at the present time we are delayed slightly and sometime the delay is a cause of complaint—may I just preface that?

Q. Delay by reason of not getting the fyle?—A. No, not that, but delay by having to wait before we receive from the Militia Department the amount of deductions to be taken off the first month's pension cheque. However, a new Order has been passed so that there will be no delay from that cause in the future.

Q. You might explain what deductions are made from the pension of the widow?—A. If the man killed was in debt to the Government, instead of the Government being in debt to him, it has been customary to deduct the indebtedness from the widow's first pension cheque. It has been contended, and the contention has been finally admitted, that the woman's pension should be unimpaired on the part of the husband.

MR. PARDEE: How can a man be in debt to the Government?

THE CHAIRMAN: By overdrawing his account, probably for advances made to him in excess of the amount he was entitled to.

By Hon. Mr. Murphy:

Q. Mr. Ross and his board wanted to be relieved of that, as I understand it. Is not that so, Mr. Ross?—A. Yes, we wanted to be given a free hand. I do not know whether or not the Order has gone through to-day.

By Mr. Ross:

Q. For some time after a man is killed the widow continues to get her separation allowance and the adjustment of that might cause delay?—A. Yes. What we want now is that when a man is killed we will then make out a pension for the full amount, and that, if he had a dependent, then the separation allowance and assigned pay would be continued by the Militia Department until we had the first pension cheque ready, so that we could say to the Militia Department, for example, "We want to stop the assigned pay and separation allowance, on the 28th February of this year, and we will send the widow a pension cheque from the first of March."

By the Chairman:

Q. That question, if I understand rightly, of the separation allowance, stands in this position: If a man is killed, leaving a widow, the assigned pay ceases after a certain date. But now the idea is that the separation allowance and the assigned pay shall continue to the widow until she got the pension. As a matter fact, does not the widow now get her pension, whatever the amount may be, from the date of the death of her husband?—A. That is right, but now, under the new Order, in accordance with our request the Militia Department will continue the separation allowance and the assigned pay up to the day we are ready with the pension cheque.

Q. She may get more under that arrangement?—A. No. Take a case at the present time. We will say to the Pay Branch: Stop your pay and the separation allowance and assigned pay on the 28th of February; we are sending a cheque on the 1st of March.

Q. Even then she may get more?—A. Slightly more.

By Hon. Mr. Murphy:

Q. The idea is that there shall be no hiatus?—A. Yes.

By Mr. Ross (Middlesex):

Q. Can you give me an idea of the average time required to put through a pension? I have had some difficulties myself?—A. There has been on an average—there are a number of cases that have gone over a lapse of a month where the women would have missed her cheque.

Q. I know of some cases in which the widow has not been able to get her pension for six months?—A. I know that.

Q. How do you account for that?—A. Well, in the case of a widow there have been a number of things, getting the final settlement.

By the Chairman:

Q. She must be able, I suppose, to produce her marriage certificate?—A. The marriage certificate and the birth certificate we have been lax with requiring in granting the first cheque, allowing these to be sent in afterwards. We have not held up a pension for the sake of these.

By Mr. Middlebro:

Q. The widow gets not only the pension since the husband's death, but two months' pay in addition?—A. Yes.

Q. If a married soldier were killed on the 1st of March, and the widow had received assigned pay for January and February, would she also get her pension for January and February?—A. No, not under the new arrangement.

By Brigadier-General Mason:

Q. Is the two months' gratuity a new arrangement?—A. No. Under the new arrangement there will be separation allowance and assigned pay up to the time that the pension starts. There will be no overlapping.

Q. And no gratuity?—A. And there will be two months' gratuity.

Q. She will be getting for two months assigned pay and separation allowance by way of gratuity?—A. She got that before.

THE CHAIRMAN: The gratuity is regarded as a present to enable her to reorganize her home.

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. That gratuity is still part of the pension?—A. Absolutely.

Q. She does not get any gratuity in the next cheque?—A. No, it is a present of two months allowance.

By Hon. Mr. Murphy:

Q. It is only a bonus paid at the start?—A. Yes.

By Mr. Ross (Middlesex):

Q. Is it always given with her first cheque?—A. Yes.

[Lieut. J. K. L. Ross.]

Q. In some cases, it has not been given?—A. I will tell you why. Under the old regulations there may have been deductions amounting to that.

Mr. Ross: Not in the cases I refer to.

By the Chairman:

Q. How many pensions have you granted to widows so far? If you have the record there of the different kinds of pensions granted, you may give it all at one time: that is, the number granted to widows, the number to disabled men, and so on?—A. I have a statement that I will put into the record.

Q. You might give us that statement?—A. It is as follows:—

PENSIONERS AND CHILDREN OF PENSIONERS IN RESPECT OF WHOM PENSIONS AND ALLOWANCES ARE PAID.

European War

To February 22nd, 1917.

(Approximate Figures.)

Pensioners:

Disabilities	4,065
Widows of Soldiers	2,843
Orphan Children	150
Other Dependents, including Fathers, Mothers, etc.	641

Pensioners less cancellations	7,699
Children of Pensioners in respect of whom allowances are paid	4,955

Total Pensioners and Children of Pensioners in respect of whom pensions and allowances are paid	12,654
---	--------

Q. The 4,065 disabilities represent soldiers themselves?—A. Yes, the amounts varying according to the scale.

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. Have you the disabilities classified?—A. Yes, on another statement.

By the Chairman:

Q. What do the pensions granted amount to in money?—A. For the month of January this year, we have paid from Ottawa $249,831. That does not include pensions paid in England. I have not the January statement from England yet; but in December the English payments were $62,905, or in other words the total in December for all pensions was $298,374.

Q. Give us the December figures for Canada?—A. They amount to $235,469. I have a statement showing the payments every month since April, 1916.

The CHAIRMAN: I think that will be interesting as showing how the pensions have grown.

By Hon. Mr. Belcourt:

Q. Are all of the widows living in Canada?—A. We have practically a branch in London who sit on cases over there of soldiers who are disabled and who are to take up their residence in England. The dependents, widows or mothers, who reside in Great Britain or Ireland, have their pensions paid over there. Even of the pensions that have been granted on this side, some of the women have moved over to the Old Country and have requested that their pensions be paid from England.

By the Chairman:

Q. The rate paid is the same whether in Canada or England?—A. Yes.

[Lieut. J. K. L. Ross.]

By Hon. Mr. Belcourt:

Q. These figures do not indicate the classes of pensioners residing in England. There are some of both classes?—A. Yes.

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. For the benefit of the Committee will you give us the amount of pensions paid a year ago and for the last completed month that you have?—A. The figures I have here only date from last April. In April 1916, the total here and in England amounted to $44,687.

Q. And in January, 1917?—A. In December it was $298,374.

Mr. MIDDLEBRO: In that period it had increased six times.

WITNESS: The amount paid from the Head Office here in Ottawa in April, 1916, was $27,000, and in January, 1917, $249,831. I will now file a statement showing the total actual payments on account of the war from April 1, 1916, to January 31, 1917.

Q. The payments this month in pensions will amount to over $300,000?—A. Yes, over $300,000.

Brigadier-General MASON: About $10,000 a day.

By the Chairman:

Q. Have you figures with you as to how many pending cases there are?—A. I was about to give you that information in another way. Here is a statement of the number of pensions issued and gratuities granted from August 4, 1914, to February 22, 1917.

Now, I cannot vouch for the absolute accuracy of the figures for September and October, 1916, as we were then in a state of metamorphosis caused by the removal of the office from the Militia Building to our present location.

By Hon. Mr. Murphy:

Q. Where are you located now?—A. In the Union Bank Building. The number issued from August 4 to September 11, 1916, namely, 3,901, represent the heads of families, it does not include children.

Q. Have you an idea as to how many applications you have to deal with?—A. I know that yesterday there were applications in the office being typed and to go through to the number of 725. Some of those are included among the 722 so far granted this month.

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. That means 1,400 odd pensions granted and applied for so far this month?—A. There is an accumulation, but it is gradually being reduced. Even with the accumulation we cannot be a month behind.

By the Chairman:

Q. You are not a month behind now?—A. No.

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. I thought the applications had piled up this month?—A. Not this month. There are usually some 500 applications in our office in the course of carrying through.

By the Chairman:

Q. If no more pension claims come in you would finish up with those on hand in two or three weeks?—A. I should say easily.

Q. Have any of the pension claims been before you for any considerable length of time?—A. When we receive all the data required, there is nothing to hold up the applications.

Q. Not when the data is complete?—A. No, sir.

Q. Is it possible for an application to be pigeon-holed and for a lengthy period to elapse before it is dealt with?—A. I do not think so unless there is some inadvertence. It would be only some few odd pensions that through absolute neglect or inadvertence would be held up. That, however, is not where the complaints have come in. Furthermore, we are certain now that under the new regulations bona fide complaints will amount to next to nothing.

[Lieut. J. K. L. Poss.]

Q. Most of the complaints, as I understand, occur during the hiatus between the time the pay ceases and the pension commences?—A. Yes. Complaints have also arisen from another draw-back, which we ourselves have corrected. That is, in regard to a disabled soldier who has to come up for re-examination. Practically no pension is granted, say on an 80 per cent disability scale, and continued indefinitely; the man must come up for re-examination either at the end of six months or at the end of a year. There have been complaints with respect to a man not being re-examined in time to prevent a hiatus in his pension.

Q. And where would the fault lie?—A. So far as I know the notices for re-examination have always been sent out promptly; but since the receipt of complaints, not always entirely well-founded, we have adopted the policy of continuing the man's pension on the same scale until he has been re-examined, unless there is direct evidence that the man refused to take re-examination or that he was entirely to blame. In that event we must stop the man's cheque in order to bring him up for re-examination.

Q. Take the case of a man whose pension was based on 40 per cent disability, and who breaks down completely afterwards. What machinery is there to permit that man to be re-examined, and to reconsider his pension?—A. Under clause 5 of the Order in Council that man is entitled to appeal.

Q. Appeal to whom?—A. To the Board of Pension Commissioners.

Q. To the three of you sitting as a Board of judges?—A. Yes. We would ask for re-examination for a case like that.

Q. Who conducts your medical examination for you?—A. We send the man to a medical board.

Q. Is the re-examination carried out by the staff of the Army Medical Corps?—A. It will be done by medical men of the Military Hospital Commission or a military board.

Q. You have not a medical board of your own?—A. We have no medical board of our own, although there are doctors in our office.

Q. Have you a medical staff in connection with your office which critically overlooks each Medical Board's report, concerning pensions, that comes in?—A. Colonel Belton, in our office, does that, and Colonel Dunbar overlooks the medical history of the invalided soldier and the report of the Medical Board, and reports to our board his opinion. We look it over and pass or send it back for further reference.

Q. And if the docket is not complete?—A. They might not be on the file in full detail, in regard to the Medical Board's report; they might not give the proper percentage, they might give a percentage that might not fit. In other words, they might have the man down for a percentage of disability—I have in mind cases which have come to my knowledge—where they would have a man down 30 per cent disability, but from the reading matter in the report which would come to us he is entitled to a greater disability.

Q. What would you do in a case like that?—A. What I would do in that case would be to go in to Major Todd, who is the medical man on our board, call his attention to the matter, and he would take it up.

Q. You set up a final board of appeal in Section 5 of the Order?—A. Yes.

By Mr. Ross:

Q. I have an incident in mind in which a man was killed in France; he had gone from this country a private, and had been raised to the rank of sergeant. While he was in France he was put in a cadet corps, I think they call it, to qualify for a lieutenant. While he was undergoing the course of training, he was taken out and put in the trenches, and put on temporary pay as lieutenant. The man was killed. Would that woman be given a pension as the widow of a sergeant, or as the widow of a lieutenant? What is the practice in a case like that?—A. It depends altogether upon whether he was acting and was paid as a lieutenant when he received his disability. If he was acting and paid as a lieutenant at that time he would receive the pension of that rank.

Q. He was taking a lieutenant's course, and was taken out and put in the trenches?—A. The duty he was doing at the time would be the determining factor in that case. Here is the order which applies to such cases (reads):—

“If, during the present war, a soldier dies, or is wounded or injured, while holding paid acting rank, any resulting grant of pension or gratuity to his widow or children, or other dependents, or any pension awarded to the soldier in consequence of medical unfitness caused by the wound or injury may be made at the rate appropriate to the acting instead of the permanent rank.”

Brigadier-General MASON: In the case spoken of by Mr. Ross the man was qualified for the position in which he was acting?

Mr. Ross: He was qualified.

WITNESS: But he was only acting.

By Mr. Ross:

Q. That man was killed on the 30th July, and the widow has not got a pension yet.—A. I do not know what the cause of delay was, I would like very much to know.

Q. Another case happened in my town in which a man was killed on July 9, and his mother only got her pension within 10 days?—A. “Mother” is the difficulty.

Q. There was no difficulty in this case.—A. “Mother” and “father” cases in some instances take a longer time to settle. They have sometimes to go back for further consideration.

By the Chairman:

Q. What do you do in the case of a man reported “missing”?—A. That is also another case in which delay occurs, and it is another case of “hiatus” under the present arrangement which will be obviated under the new regulation. At the present time if a man is reported missing, it is six months before he is officially reported to us as dead—the dependents will receive assigned pay and separation allowance in the meantime.

By the Chairman:

Q. They do not receive the assigned pay now, and they will receive it under the new regulation?—A. They receive the assigned pay and separation allowance for three months, and, at the end of three months, the assigned pay continues for another three months. But under the new regulation, both will continue for the six months, or, until such time, as the pension is ready.

By Hon. Mr. Murphy:

Q. After the six months, then what?—A. They should be ready for pension. Under the new regulations we are going to start machinery to work so that we will be ready to start the pension by the seventh month.

By Mr. Ross:

Q. Have you any other case, such as I have mentioned, where a man taking a course on active service has been killed?—A. No, I have not come across any.

By Mr. Sutherland:

Q. Would this case come under your rule: a young man was killed who was the sole support of a mother who was not a widow, but whose husband had deserted her ten years before?—A. She would get a pension.

By Mr. Middlebro:

Q. Is she not prima facie entitled to a pension if on separation allowance?—A. A clause was put into this new Order, in regard to that.

By the Chairman:

Q. It does not necessarily follow that she is entitled to a pension?—A. Not necessarily, but it gives prima facie evidence that the claim is reasonable.

Q. Is a mother living out of your jurisdiction entitled to a pension?—A. Yes.

Q. If she lives out of Canada, in the United States?—A. Yes.

Q. Is there anything further you would like to put on record for the edification of the Committee? Are there any documents you wish to put in?—A. Yes, I would like to say something on the insane question, upon which some evidence was given yesterday, in reply to questions by the Committee. We have to deal with pensions to insane people under clause 28 of the Regulations which reads as follows (reads):—

“28. Where a pension is awarded to a member of the forces in consequence of his insanity, if the pensioner is in an asylum or other institution, the cost of his maintenance therein shall be paid to the superintendent, or other proper officer of the asylum, or other institution, and the balance of such pension shall be paid to such dependent, relative, or relatives of the pensioner as the commissioners may direct, and if there is no dependent relative, such balance shall be retained until the pensioner's recovery or his death. If a pensioner is not in an asylum or other institution but remains in the care of the family, the whole of his pension may be paid to such member of his family, as the commissioners may direct, or part of the pension may be paid to such member of his family and the balance retained until the pensioner's recovery or death, provided, however, that if a guardian of the pensioner has been appointed by any court of competent jurisdiction, the commissioners may direct that the pension be paid to such guardian.”

By Brigadier-General Mason:

Q. In the case of a married man would that regulation apply, as his wife is practically a widow?—A. May I say now just what we are doing with these cases? In the case of the insane we have made arrangements with nearly all of the Provinces to take tically a widow. Why should she suffer?—A. She will not suffer. I will explain: We are authorized to grant a further allowance than the $480 and to provide $250 a year for attendance.

By the Chairman:

Q. That is if the man is totally disabled. You regard an insane man as totally disabled, as he cannot look after himself?—A. Yes.

By Brigadier-General Mason:

Q. Take the case of a married man confined in an insane asylum, his wife is practically a widow. Why should she suffer?—A. She will not suffer. I will explain: We are authorized to give a total disability of $480 plus $250. Now, we do it in this way: we have made arrangements with the insane hospitals or asylums in the different provinces, excepting British Columbia, and if you like I will put a précis of the agreements on file.

The proposal submitted to each of the provinces was as follows:—

That the province should agree to maintain and care for Insane, Discharged and Pensioned Members of the Forces at the rate of $250 per year, in the various asylums throughout each province.

Province of Prince Edward Island.—This province will care for and maintain 25 insane soldiers in the Falconwood Hospital, at the rate of $250 per year.

Province of New Brunswick.—This province will maintain insane discharged soldiers at the Provincial Hospitals at Fairville, at the rate of $250 per year.

[Lieut. J. K. L. Ross.]

Province of Saskatchewan.—This province will maintain and care for insane discharged soldiers at the rate of $250 per year.

Province of Nova Scotia.—This province will care for and maintain insane discharged soldiers in the Nova Scotia Hospital at the rate of $250 per year, provided such soldiers have a settlement in the province, and provided there is room in the hospital for the patients. This was only a tentative arrangement, and is subject to a definite agreement which is to be made between this Board and the province, at a later date.

Province of Alberta.—This province will maintain insane discharged soldiers at the rate of $250 per year while in the Hospital for the Insane at Ponoka, Alta. The special rate does not cover cost of transportation and other incidentals prior to admission in the said hospital, nor does it apply to any other institution in the said province.

Province of Ontario.—This province will maintain insane discharged members of the forces at the institutions for the insane for this province, at the rate of $250 per year.

Province of Manitoba.—This province will maintain in institutions all discharged insane soldiers committed to them by any military hospital for the insane, at the rate of $250 per annum. The Lunacy Act is to be amended to provide for this arrangement.

Province of Quebec.—This province states that the proprietors of the St. Jean de Dieu Asylum will accept insane discharged soldiers at the rate of $250 per annum, certain formalities having been properly carried out, provided that when enrolled the soldiers were domiciled bona fide in the province of Quebec. As regards soldiers on active service already confined, these will be continued when discharged, at the rate of $250 per annum. The Provincial Secretary of Quebec states that the asylums in Quebec are at present overcrowded.

Province of British Columbia.—The proposal of the Board has not as yet received acceptance, nor has this province in any way acknowledged the letters which this Board has written. I am given to understand that the rates in this province vary from nothing with respect of men domiciled in British Columbia, to $1 a day for those not domiciled therein.

By the Chairman:

Q. In the case of all the provinces but British Columbia you secure the care of the insane patient for $250 a year, that leaves $480?—A. That leaves $480. But that man, when he is in the asylum, as Senator Mason has said, is practically dead, and the wife is almost a widow; so we grant her $384 a year which is the amount a widow would receive.

Q. That is $32 a month?—A. Yes, plus $6 a month for each child, if she has any children, and that is what she receives if her husband is in the asylum. Now there is a difference of $96, namely the difference between $384 and $480 not accounted for. That $96 remains in the Government to the credit—

Q. It reverts to the State?—A. Not if the man had dependents. We carry that $96 in trust for that man. If he is cured and comes out, then he goes off pension. If he stays in the asylum three years he would find about $300 to his credit and then he would go off pension.

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. Does his pension cease?—A. If he is cured?

Q. Yes, does his pension cease then?—A. Certainly.

By the Chairman:

Q. If his insanity is temporary and he is thoroughly cured, he gets no pension?—

A. No. If he came out of the hospital pronounced by a medical board as fit his pension ceases.

By Mr. Ross (Middlesex):

Q. That seems hardly fair?—A. It is the only interpretation of the regulations.

Mr. ROSS (Middlesex): It seems hardly fair, for during his confinement in the asylum he has gained nothing, he has lost his trade or occupation.

The CHAIRMAN: There has accumulated for him about $300, and his wife and family have been taken care of.

The WITNESS: What can we do?

By Mr. Ross (Middlesex):

Q. We are trying to have things made right if they are not right.—A. The man's family have been taken care of.

Q. Better than if he were dead?—A. The widow would get that pension if he were dead.

By Mr. Middlebro:

Q. The man might come out in ten years from the asylum and be less able to earn a livelihood.—A. That is different from pensions. If that man had no dependents, or if he died, that $96 would go to his estate.

By the Chairman:

Q. To his natural heirs?—A. If he had any dependents and died.

The CHAIRMAN: To use a concrete example, for a man with a wife and three children, if insane and sent to an asylum, it would cost the Government $850 a year; $384 would be allowed to his wife, $216 a year for the three children, and $250 for his keep in the asylum.

By Mr. Ross (Middlesex):

Q. If the man died the widow would receive $480 a year and $18 a month for the children?—A. No, she would get $384.

By Brigadier-General Mason:

Q. Up to what age is pension allowed for the children?—A. Sixteen years for a boy, seventeen years for a girl, unless they are mentally disabled.

By Mr. Ross (Middlesex):

Q. What percentage of $480 does the widow get?—A. She gets 80 per cent and the mother of the soldier gets 60 per cent.

By the Chairman:

Q. Is there anything further you would like to file on the record?—A. I have here a list of the number of insanity cases that we have at the present time. It is as follows:—

By Mr. Ross (Middlesex):

Q. Have they all been at the front?—A. I could get that information.

Mr. ROSS: I would like to know if they have all been actually in the firing line.

The CHAIRMAN: We will ask the witness to put on file for us how many of these forty cases have been at the front.

Hon. Mr. MURPHY: And what the membership of the families is.

Mr. PARDEE: I believe it has been stated that 99 per cent of the men who became insane were either epileptics, syphilitic or alcoholic. If we could get the history of 20 out of these 40 cases, it would be most enlightening.

By the Chairman:

Q. I think, Mr. Ross, you could take these 40 cases and analyse them for us on the lines suggested?—A. I am sorry to say, that at the present time, of these forty cases it happens that there are 5 that we do not know the addresses of. These insane people have got lost, or something. Of the 40 cases, 9 are in private homes, and 26 in asylums. The remaining five we do not know just where they are.

The CHAIRMAN: Probably their friends may know.

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. Are you paying allowances for them?—A. We cannot pay them because we do not know where they are.

By Mr. Sutherland:

Q. Do you know what proportion of this number have been overseas?—A. No, I am going to get that.

Q. I do not mean actually at the front; I mean cases that developed before they went overseas?—A. There are some, perhaps, but I could not say offhand.

The CHAIRMAN: The witness is going to take these 40 cases and give us an analysis of them, as to how many went to France, how many to England, and how many became insane here; secondly as to the cause of the insanity. If he has the facts I should like the witness to give us the nationality, the place of birth, of each case.

The WITNESS: I will try and get as complete a statement as possible from our files.

[Lieut. J. K. L. Ross.]

By the Chairman:

Q. Is there any further matter?—A. I do not know whether you are interested in it, but I have a classification of the disabilities as on the 26th of January. I did not make it originally for this Committee.

Q. That is worth putting in the record.—A. It gives the number of men in the various classes.

By Mr. Ross (Middlesex):

Q. That should be on the record?—A. It gives also the number of cases of tuberculosis and insanity. The statement is as follows:—

By the Chairman:

Q. Are you in a position to tell us with respect to tuberculous cases that have been pensioned, how many got to the front, or as far as England, and what were the fundamental reasons for these tuberculous cases?—A. We have 449 tuberculous cases at the present time.

Q. Could you give us an analysis of these cases?—A. We will have to take the files and look over their history.

The CHAIRMAN: I do not think you could have better material for a study of tuberculosis among our soldiers than these 449 tuberculous cases. You have in the Department all the data concerning these cases, and if you analyse them and find out how many reached France, how many reached England, and how many remained in Canada, it would be possible to discover those men that were in an incipient stage of tuberculosis before enlisting. The figures afford excellent material for investigation.

By Hon. Mr. Murphy:

Q. Has your Board met with any special difficulties in its work?—A. The greatest difficulty, as I explained before, has been to overcome the hiatus.

[Lieut. J. K. L. Ross.]

Q. But you have overcome that difficulty by means of your new regulation?—A. Yes.

Q. Have any other difficulties confronted you?—A. One problem we had to solve was the creation of an efficient organization. We are now fully satisfied that we have such an organization. We feel that we have an organization we have no need to be ashamed of. We have been blamed for some things, but I venture to say that in 99 out of every 100 such cases we were not responsible.

Q. What I mean is, you have not met with any difficulties which you have not been able to overcome, or that you do not see a fair prospect of overcoming in a short time?—A. No.

Q. The funds at your disposal are provided by a special Act of Parliament?—A. We come under the Finance Department. We make an estimate of our needs and cheques are drawn up in our office and lists of the amounts to be paid, and they are sent to the Auditor General, from whose office payment is made.

Q. What does your staff number?—A. About 150 in Ottawa.

Q. And elsewhere, how many?—A. We are at the present time opening offices between Vancouver and Halifax to the number of 16. That is being done to facilitate the granting of outside pensions, and we intend to make sure that every pensioner is seen at least once a year by a representative of our office.

By the Chairman:

Q. Have inspectors been appointed for every locality?—A. Not yet, sir. They will, I think, have been before the middle of March.

Q. Do you plan to have the entire field divided into districts and have an inspector visit every family in each district at least once a year?—A. We do.

Q. But you are now creating 16 new offices?—A. Yes.

Q. How many will the staff number in each office?—A. Two to three, or four to five.

Q. And you have a staff of 150 at your head office now?—A. Yes.

Q. How many have you overseas?—A. That work is under Sir Montague Hugh Allen's Board.

Q. Is that distinct from your board?—A. They are under us, but there is no pay office in his place; they merely constitute a board to sit in judgment on cases.

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. And report to you?—A. Reports from them have to be confirmed by us.

By the Chairman:

Q. Can you make any inspection of cases outside Canada?—A. Do you mean in the United States?

Q. In the United States or in England?—A. As to England, yes. We want to establish there an organization similar to what we have here, except that over there all the work will be done from the head office. There will only be one office, as, owing to the small extent of country, branch offices are not needed.

Q. You continue the pension for a boy until he reaches the age of 16?—A. Until 16 in the case of a boy, and 17 in the case of a girl.

Q. What means have you of making sure of their birthdays?—A. We have a birthday book—really a card index book, in which the several months appear, beginning January 17.

By Brigadier-General Mason:

Q. What information are you supposed to have as to whether these children are living?—A. Once a month, with every cheque that goes out, we send out a form. This (showing document) is a widow's form, and this other a man's form. In these forms they must fill in every month the name of each child and the date of its birth. Every March and September they must make a further statement on the same form. The March forms are going out now. At the bottom of each form must appear this certi-

[Lieut. J. K. L. Ross.]

It is only during the months of March and September the following certificate must be completed.

.....Signature.

.....Rank or Position.

.....Postal Address.

.....

Q. Have you any check system at Ottawa whereby, when the cheques come back you can verify the signatures?—A. The cheques go to the Auditor General.

Q. You do not attempt to make sure that the right woman gets her cheque?—A. We soon hear about it if she does not.

Q. In giving a pension do you grant it to the person whom the soldier indicates to be his dependent, or do you grant it to his legal wife? Suppose a man left his legal wife four years' ago and lived with another woman. Afterwards he enlists and is killed. Which of these two women gets the pension?—A. The real wife.

By Mr. Ross (Middlesex):

Q. Does not the other woman get the separation allowance?—A. We do not issue that.

Q. But do you know, as a matter of fact?—A. That depends upon how the matter has been dealt with in the Militia Department. I must say that we have given the cheque to the wrong woman first at different times, because of the report of the Militia Department stating that the deceased soldier's next of kin was so and so.

By the Chairman:

Q. Your practice would differ from the Militia Department?—A. We cannot do otherwise.

Q. The Militia Department makes payment to the woman whom the man, when he enlists, says was dependent upon him at that time. That woman accordingly gets the separation allowance, but it frequently happens that the woman who drew the separation allowance when the man was living is cut off after the man has been killed?—A. That may happen.

The CHAIRMAN: What would happen if a man had two families of children? The Patriotic Fund at Montreal has 152 wives who are claiming half-allowances.

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. Do they both get the allowance, or do you accept the legal wife?—A. Yes and all the children, provided it is proven that the man lived with the woman publicly.

Q. But supposing she produces the marriage certificate, even if he were not living with her publicly?—A. We mean the wives producing the marriage certificate. I am talking of the married wife.

By Hon. Mr. Belcourt:

Q. How do you determine whose children they are, in the case of an unmarried woman? Do you take the statement of the woman?—A. No, we require to have more than the statement of the woman. The man must have lived publicly with the woman as his wife. We get not only her statement, but the statement of somebody else in the district.

By the Chairman:

Q. Are these orders in printed form in any pamphlet so that they can be readily referred to?—A. They are not; being constantly subject to change they are not printed; but we have them mimeographed.

[Lieut. J. K. L. Ross.]

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. You say that $250 extra is granted to a man who is totally incapacitated, to the insane man, when an attendant is required to take care of him? Does that provision apply to a blind man?—A. Yes—the allowance is “up to” $250. It is, in our judgment, how much we shall give.”

Hon. Mr. BELCOURT: Will you prepare a tabulated statement showing what is done in England and France in the way of granting pensions?

The CHAIRMAN: Put it into the file so that we will have the information before us.

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. Who gets the $250?—A. It all depends. In the insane cases we pay the asylum: In the case of a blind man, if he has a wife and we are satisfied he will be properly looked after at home, we pay it to them.

Q. Are there any other cases besides the insane and blind who are allowed so much for attendance and if so how many?—A. I could not tell you offhand, how many cases there are; I could, from the records in the office, but I cannot give it to you now.

By Hon. Mr. Belcourt:

Q. Are we paying for attendance to men who have, for instance, two legs amputated?—A. That will depend upon circumstances. In that connection there is another question which will have to be determined shortly, we have discussed it among ourselves and we think that from the first of the next year they will probably have to receive a greater amount for attendance than is now paid, because it is becoming more costly to keep and look after them.

By the Chairman:

Q. A bed-ridden tubercular person will be allowed attendance?—A. Yes.

Q. That is in the discretion of the Board?—A. Yes, and also on a medical report.

By Hon. Mr. Murphy:

Q. Can you tell us what is the cost of operation, etc., of your Branch?—A. I cannot give it to you offhand; you mean the cost of administration, the expenses?

Q. Yes?—A. We have it in the office because only the other day we made up the estimates.

The CHAIRMAN: The stenographer will telephone sometime to-morrow for the statement and place it on the record.

WITNESS: We have it for the Head Office and for the Branch Offices separately.

The CHAIRMAN: You can give us an analysed statement of your expenditure.

Witness filed the following statement with respect to casualties:—

APPENDIX 2.

EXHIBIT No. 1.

VOCATIONAL TRAINING FOR WOUNDED SOLDIERS.

GOVERNMENT ALLOWANCES FOR THE MEN AND THEIR FAMILIES.

Since the issue of the last Bulletin two Orders in Council have been passed, both of which are of importance in connection with the Vocational Training of the disabled. The Order in Council, P.C. No. 1334, date June 3, 1916, making regulations for pensions (see page 7 of the present bulletin), contains the following:—

Sec. 9. "No deduction shall be made from the amount awarded to any pensioner owing to his having undertaken work or perfected himself in some form of industry."

The importance of this regulation may be seen from the following quotation from an English review:—

"Both in France and Germany one of the greatest obstacles in the way of training the disabled has been the men's fear that their earnings will be made a pretext for reducing their pension. In Germany this has been so marked that this state of mind has been named 'Pension hysteria.' It is vital to the success of any systematized training that it should be made clear to the men that the State pension is based on the degree in which earning capacity has been impaired, and not on actual earnings."

The Order in Council, P.C. No. 1472, dated June 29, established a scale of maintenance allowances for disabled soldiers and their families in the case of men unfitted for their former work and therefore undertaking vocational training for new occupations. The period of training will vary, according to the previous education and experience of the individual. Provincial and municipal authorities are co-operating in this matter with the Dominion Government; and the training will be given free of cost to the men concerned. Disabled Reservists of the British and Allied Armies who were bona fide residents of Canada when the war broke out are eligible equally with disabled members of the Canadian Expeditionary Force.

Here is the scale which the Commission has been empowered to establish. It will be understood throughout that "maximum age" means 16 for a son and 17 for a daughter:—

1. A single man, with pension, living in, receives free maintenance; that is, board, lodging and washing.

2. A single man, with pension, living out.—60 cents a day.

3. A married man, with pension, living in.—Free maintenance and $8 a month, with the following additions:—

For wife having no children, $35 a month, less her husband's pension.

For wife and one child, if child is under five, $38; from five to ten years, $39.50; from 10 to maximum age, $42.50; less, in every case, the amount of husband's pension and children's allowances under the pension regulations.

For wife and two children, from $41 to $47 a month (less pension and allowances) according to age of children.

For wife and three children.—$44 to $50 (less pension and allowances), according to ages.

For wife and four children.—$47 to $53 (less pension and allowances), according to ages.

For wife and five children.—$50 to $55 (less pension and allowances), according to ages.

For wife and six children.—$53 to $55 (less pension and allowances), according to ages.

A wife with seven or more children under the maximum age may be given the maximum allowance of $55, less pension and allowances.

All these allowances for wife and children will be paid direct to the wife, unless otherwise thought fit by the commission.

4. A married man living at home will receive 60 cents a day. (This of course is in addition to the allowances for wife and children.

5. A widowed mother, if dependent entirely upon the unmarried son who is receiving training, and if the son made an assignment of his pay to his mother and also arranged for her to receive separation allowance while he was on service, may be paid at the same rate as the wife of a married man with no children.

6. The parents of a man undergoing training, if both are old and past work, and entirely or partially dependent upon him, may also be paid at that rate.

7. The guardian of a widower's children (under the maximum age) will be paid monthly:—For one child, $10; for two, $17.50; for three, $22; and $3 for each child in excess of three, with a maximum of $35.

Payments under these regulations will be continued for one month after the completion of vocational training, whether the man has secured employment or not.

DETERMINING ELIGIBILITY.

The procedure adopted to determine whether or not a man is eligible for re-education is as follows:—

Each man who, from his medical record, appears likely to be unable to follow his previous occupation, is specially examined by a small Board known as a "Disabled Soldiers Training Board," composed of three persons:—

- (a) The District Vocational Officer;
- (b) The Medical Officer in charge of Unit;
- (c) A member of the Provincial Advisory Committee on Training.

The findings of the Board are transmitted to the Head Office of the Commission, and, if approved, the Vocational Officer is notified to arrange for the training of the man in some suitable institution or private establishment.

Already a great many men have been surveyed by Disabled Soldiers Training Boards and have entered upon courses of re-education. In one province in particular, practically every man who appeared likely to be a case for re-education has been surveyed and his case reported by a Disabled Soldiers Training Board.

—THE CHOICE OF OCCUPATION.

The question as to what new occupation a disabled man may be trained for is clearly, first of all, a medical one. But it is also a question for a technical specialist or "Vocational Counsellor;" a man well versed in a knowledge of the methods of various industries and of the training necessary for those who desire to pursue them. But further, and this is an important consideration, it is an economic question, touching the law of supply and demand. While there are a number of occupations for which it is not difficult to train men, it does not follow that employment can readily be obtained in them. Last, but by no means least, the man's own wishes and desires for his future must be consulted.

The question, therefore, is an individual one, and every case is investigated separately. The decision as to the occupation for which an opportunity of being trained is to be offered a man, is made in the light of the medical, technical, economic and personal factors of his case.

TRAINING DURING CONVALESCENCE.

Reference was made in the June Bulletin to the policy which the Commission had adopted of providing training of a sedentary kind, in class rooms, where men can brush up their general education in arithmetic, language, penmanship, and other general subjects.

In most of the hospitals this has been extended so as to include book-keeping, shorthand and typewriting.

For the numerous foreign-born members of the Canadian Expeditionary Force, instruction in English has been provided for such as are under treatment in the Convalescent Hospitals.

In addition to the foregoing training, active occupational work of several kinds is also carried on. Arts and crafts work of various types, such as wood-working, light metal-working, mechanical drawing, drawing, clay modelling, and other forms of handiwork, are undertaken in rooms equipped in the hospitals.

Active work outdoors is provided in gardening, poultry keeping, bee-keeping, vegetable and flower gardening and similar pursuits, in the grounds surrounding the hospitals. At several centres, short courses in automobile and internal combustion engine work are being given. Shoe-repairing is also taken up in some centres.

THE DAY'S PROGRAMME.

The whole of this work forms part of the daily routine of the hospitals. After breakfast and morning fatigue duties are over, a regular programme is followed from 9 to 12.30, and, after dinner, from 2 to 4.15.

The programme for the day includes:—

- (a) Parades for physical exercises, or walks, for about thirty minutes in the morning and thirty minutes in the afternoon, for all but bed cases.
- (b) The necessary therapeutic treatment when ordered by the medical officer.
- (c) Classroom, workshop or garden parades.

Throughout the hours named, each man is required to be engaged in one or other of these ways, unless excused by the medical officer.

The programme for each hospital is arranged jointly by the Officer Commanding, the Medical Superintendent and the Vocational Secretary, acting through their local officers. These local officers are: (1) The Officer Commanding the Local Unit, Military Hospitals Commission Command, (2) the Medical Officer in charge of Hospital, and (3) the District Vocational Officer.

THE OBJECT AND EFFECT OF THE TRAINING.

This training during convalescence is undertaken primarily for its curative value, and in that direction has had excellent effects. Men who, from the experiences they had gone through, were nervous, irritable, and out of key with a normal environment, are benefiting wonderfully from the active work of the classes in which their minds and bodies are healthily occupied. Their interest in life is re-aroused, and their ambition to succeed in civil life again is developed by the work undertaken.

But while the work has been primarily curative for mind and body, a great many men have found the training received during convalescence to be of actual commercial value in after life. Already numerous instances of this have occurred, the following being a typical example of the help which can be given in this way. It is well known that a little skill in mechanical drawing, the ability to read and interpret a blue-print, and a knowledge of simple shop arithmetic or mathematics, will enable the ordinary craftsman, in most cases, to become a foreman or superintendent. These things can be, and are being, imparted to men in our hospitals, and cases have already occurred in which men have returned to civil life and taken better positions than they held before enlistment, in consequence of the training given them during convalescence.

In practically every centre, the classes in general subjects have developed a distinct commercial side, in which typewriting, shorthand, book-keeping and related branches are taught. There is at present a considerable demand for male help in these lines in various parts of the country, and many slightly disabled men, of no particular occupation, have been able to qualify for clerical positions in this way.

Automobile and internal combustion engine work is being carried on with much success in various centres. At Calgary, an old car was presented to the class for experimental purposes, and the men have repaired it and now use it to ride to and from the workshop and the hospital, and are able to learn to drive a car at the same time.

In the arts and crafts shop, a large amount of useful work has been done for the hospital, and in some cases for sale, the men sharing in the proceeds.

The outdoor work, gardening, poultry keeping, etc., has been most successful and is being introduced in every centre where the conditions permit. As in the arts and crafts work, the poultry work and gardening are made as practical as possible, the products being sold and the profits, applied to the extension of the work and for the benefit of the men engaged in it. Returns from the Deer Lodge Convalescent Hospital at Winnipeg show that products from the poultry houses and garden last summer were sold to the amount of $544.21; besides vegetables valued at $263.40 and $60 worth of flowers supplied to the hospital itself.

Egg circles have been formed in connection with the poultry plants in several hospitals. The following is a quotation from the report of the Instructor in Agriculture at the Savard Park Convalescent Hospital, Quebec:—

“The pullets have to give strict account of themselves because each is trap-nested as soon as she begins to lay and a record of each is kept, so that the best layers may be selected for breeding. A careful accounting is made of all the food consumed by the flocks, the eggs are sold in the open market, and the profit of the undertaking is worked out to the last detail. The soldiers have joined an Egg Circle and send out a big case every week marked ‘Returned Soldiers Poultry Club.’”

The report also deals with some important work which was done in under-draining a piece of land in connection with the hospital, as follows:—

“One very practical piece of work was a demonstration of the manner of under-draining a piece of land. Part of the ground belonging to the Home was low and soggy, and refused utterly to grow a satisfactory crop. So the soldiers who had become so proficient in trench digging on the battlefields of France and Flanders went at the drainage trench for the humble purposes of peace, with all their old vim of shovelling to protect themselves from German Jack Johnsons, whizz-bangs, etc. They surveyed the ground, ran levels, and then a gradient for the ditch, and actually dug most of a 500-foot ditch, nearly five feet deep in some places. The drainage tiles were carefully laid, and the effect of this bit of underdraining the soil will be watched by the soldiers with keen interest.”

By arrangement with the Imperial authorities, the Commission has undertaken the provision of artificial limbs and vocational training for some disabled Jamaican soldiers who were retained in Halifax for treatment. The Halifax Branch of the Nova Scotia Red Cross Society has aided by equipping a large dwelling house which was placed at the Commission's disposal by W. J. Clayton, Esq., of Halifax. The men are being trained chiefly as tailors and shoemakers, but one or two are being trained in typewriting and shorthand and one as a tinsmith. The District Vocational Officer reports that the men are very happy and interested in their work and are making excellent progress.

This has proved the greatest difficulty which the committee has had to face. The most obvious source from which applications should have been obtained, namely, the Military Hospitals, was found to be of no practical use, although six such hospitals in London were approached under a very favourable introduction from Sir Alfred Keogh, the Director-General of the Army Medical Service. The stumbling block was the fear, widely prevalent amongst convalescent men, that any attempt to improve their earning capacity would injuriously affect the amount of their pension. The committee has been assured that this fear is unfounded, but until public assurances to the contrary are made by the proper authority and widely disseminated, this difficulty will have a paralysing effect on all attempts similar to that of the committee to help disabled sailors and soldiers by effectively increasing their earning capacity.

Another difficulty, which is now, it is believed, on the eve of being removed, is the absence of any Government grant during the period of training. It is understood that the War Pensions Committee will make a very satisfactory public announcement on this point at an early date, and that the grants necessary will be placed at the disposal of the local War Pensions Sub-Committees.

Under these circumstances the Joint Committee has had to depend almost entirely on the efforts of a voluntary body, the Disabled Soldiers' Aid Committee, of 40 Ebury Street, S.W. Without the assistance of this society and the indefatigable work of its honorary employment secretary, Mr. G. R. Buckley, the classes already held could not have been formed. Mr. Buckley was enabled by the special organization of his society to get into touch with suitable disabled men and to provide candidates in sufficient numbers for the consideration of the selection sub-committee.

The committee has also received promises of candidates for admission from amongst the men who had taken preliminary courses at Queen Mary's Auxiliary Hospital at Roehampton. One such candidate has passed through the course.

A sub-committee was appointed by the joint committee to deal with the two questions of the selection of candidates for the courses and the placing out of the approved students at the completion of each course. The sub-committee consists of one representative of the L.C.C., two representatives of Supply Undertakings, and one representative of the Northampton Institute.

In the selection of candidates it was an instruction to the sub-committee that the nature of the disablement should be carefully considered, and that candidates who were suffering from nervous breakdown or who had lost the use of more than one limb should be rejected. It had been ascertained by the Joint Committee that in certain cases disabled men free from these particular disabilities had been allowed to join the staffs of power stations by the insurance companies insuring against employers' liability, or similar legal obligations, without increase of premium.

Applicants for admission to the classes were required to attend a meeting of the sub-committee and were interviewed individually. In addition to the nature of the particular disablement, candidates were questioned as to their readiness to complete the course, and, if found suitable, to accept work, if recommended, as probationers, with prospects of advancement. They were also questioned as to their financial resources during the training period, a matter which is referred to in the next section. In addition, the position of each candidate as regards dependents, pension and probable pension, occupation before joining the Army, and other relevant matters was ascertained, and it is important to note that an engineer of one of the large London Electric Supply Companies rendered valuable service as a member of the committee with respect to the suitability of candidates for admission to the courses.

It was early apparent that this was an important part of the preliminary inquiry. No State maintenance was available except in the cases of men who were in receipt of some pension allowance, in many of the cases this being of a provisional character. In a number of cases where there was no such allowance the Disabled Soldiers' Aid Committee stepped into the breach and provided the necessary maintenance money for board and lodging. In addition, it was found necessary to provide most of the men, with the exception of a few who came from the hospitals, with travelling money and dinner money for the period, and in most cases this was also provided by the Disabled Soldiers' Aid Committee. There were a few cases of men sent by the Incorporated Soldiers' and Sailors' Society for the county of Berkshire in which the whole of the maintenance was provided by that society.

These important aspects of the work are intimately associated with the size of the classes. The training has to be intensive and almost individualistic, and large classes of 50 to 70 students cannot, therefore, be handled by the same teacher. The number of 20 students fixed by the committee was found to be a unit the size of which could not be substantially increased without danger to the efficiency of the work.

MINUTES OF PROCEEDINGS.

HOUSE OF COMMONS,

Room 301,

THURSDAY, March 1, 1917.

The secretary was instructed to read the minutes of the last meetings of the committee. Minutes adopted as read.

HOUSE OF COMMONS,

Room 301,

THURSDAY, February 22, 1917.

The Special Committee of the House of Commons on Returned Soldiers met at 10 o'clock, a.m., the chairman, Sir Herbert Ames, presiding.

Members present: On the part of the Commons:—

Sir Herbert Ames, chairman; Mr. Bennett (Calgary), Hon. Mr. Marcil, Mr. McCurdy, Mr. Middlebro, Hon. Mr. Murphy, Mr. Pardee, Mr. Ross (Middlesex), and Mr. Sutherland.

Members present: On the part of the Senate:—

The Hon. Senator Belcourt, the Hon. Senator Beaubien, Brigadier-General Mason, Senator, and the Hon. Senator James H. Ross.

The secretary was instructed to read the order passed by the House respecting the appointment of the committee and the subjects of investigation.

The minutes of the proceedings of Wednesday, 7th February, when the committee met for organization, were read and adopted.

The chairman then addressed the committee on the course which it might follow in the inquiry.

MOTION:

Mr. Middlebro moved, seconded by Mr. Bennett, that the evidence being taken in connection with the inquiry into the following subjects of investigation—

(a) The reception, treatment, care, training and re-education of the wounded, disabled and convalescent who have served in the Canadian Expeditionary Forces;

(b) The provision of employment for those who have been honourably discharged from the said forces and the training and re-education of those so discharged—be printed from day to day for the use of the committee, and that Rule 74, relating thereto, be suspended,—which was agreed to.

Colonel Sharples, Officer Commanding, Military Hospitals Commission Command, and Colonel Alfred Thompson, M.P., Medical Superintendent, were examined for evidence relating respectively to work at the disembarkation depot, and care of soldiers in hospital in Canada.

During the examination of Colonel Sharples certain data relating to 1st, 2nd, and 3rd classes of disabled soldiers at discharge depot, were requested, the same to be put in as appendix No. 1 to the report of the committee, also a map showing discharge depots, their location in each area of the distribution depot, and the location of all the hospitals.

During the examination of Colonel Thompson an Order in Council respecting the creation of the Military Hospital Commission was produced and ordered printed. Two other Orders in Council were subsequently produced which were also ordered printed.

It being one o'clock the chairman left the chair and the committee rose.

AFTERNOON SITTING.

On resuming at 2.30 o'clock, the Hon. Senator Belcourt in reply to the invitation extended to the members of the Senate Committee, by Sir Herbert Ames, stated, that the members of the Senate Committee would gladly co-operate with the Commons Committee, at least, until the return of the Hon. Sir James Loughheed.

The examination of Colonel Thompson was then continued.

General J. Lyons Biggar and Colonel Potter, Acting Director-General of Medical Service, were next called, sworn and examined.

MOTION :

Mr. Pardee moved, seconded by Mr. Ross (Middlesex), that Dr. Frederick W. Marlow, 417 Bloor street west, Toronto, be summoned as a witness to give evidence along the lines of his experience as Assistant Director of Medical Service in Military District No. 2,—which was agreed to.

On motion of Middlebro, seconded by Hon. Mr. Murphy, the committee adjourned until Friday, 23rd instant, at 10 o'clock, a.m.

MINUTES OF EVIDENCE.

HOUSE OF COMMONS,

COMMITTEE ROOM, No. 301, March 1, 1917.

The committee met at 10.35 o'clock, the chairman, Sir Herbert Ames, presiding.

The CHAIRMAN: Colonel Potter has handed in a voluminous report containing the statistics which were asked for, also the circular letter of instructions regarding the medical examination of recruits in Canada, a statement regarding the number of patients admitted to military hospitals in Canada covering the period of eight months from January 1, 1916, to October 31, 1916; also information about the medical condition of these patients; also the printed "Rules for the Inspection of Recruits, 1916," and of the rules that have replaced them, and the forms that are filled out in taking the medical history of a patient. Also there is a statement with reference to the Special Service Corps, showing the number of men in that service and their physical fitness for overseas service. If it is your pleasure these documents will be printed as part of the evidence.

Hon. Mr. MURPHY: Is this information in full compliance with the requests of the committee?

The CHAIRMAN: Yes. Colonel Potter has asked permission for a further delay to fill out one page that is incomplete. I will ask Colonel Potter if, with this exception, he has supplied all the information that we desired.

Col. POTTER: I think so, sir. There is one thing lacking, the examination at mobilization centres which I am getting more information about. (See Appendix herein.)

The CHAIRMAN: The Clerk of the Committee has asked that the following two resolutions be passed by the Committee:

Moved by Mr. Ross (Middlesex), and seconded by Mr. Sutherland, that the Chairman of the Committee or some other member thereof, on the re-assembling of Parliament, ask the House to authorize the Special Committee on Returned Soldiers to report from time to time.

Motion agreed to.

Moved by Mr. McCurdy, seconded by Hon. Mr. Murphy, that the following be the contents of the first report to be presented to the House by the Special Committee on Returned Soldiers:

1. That the House grant leave to the Committee to send for persons, papers and things;
2. That the Committee be authorized to print the evidence taken and the statements submitted in connection therewith from day to day for the use of the Committee;
3. That the Committee be granted leave to adjourn from place to place.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

Motion agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN: Our first witness this morning is Col. F. W. Marlow. Col. Marlow has written me a letter, which I think, should be read to the Committee. (Reads):

February 23rd, 1917.

From Colonel F. W. Marlow, A.M.C.,

To Sir Herbert Ames,

Chairman of the Parliamentary Committee on Returned Soldiers,
Ottawa.

SIR,—With reference to my report on the Medical Services of Canada which was completed on October 20, 1916, I have the honour to direct your attention to the fact that my report does not include a detailed report on the Convalescent Hospitals and Homes under the Military Hospitals Commission. Although I inspected practically all these institutions and have the information at hand, I did not consider it within my province to make a detailed report on them.

At the time of my inspection the institutions under the Hospitals Commission were as enumerated and described in the Military Hospitals Commission Bulletin No. 2, June 1916, with the exception that two or three of these were not then in use. No others had been added up to the time of my inspection except a small one at St. Catharines, Ont., which up to the present time has been used very little.

Although I did not report on these, as stated above, I may say that on October 25, 1916, following the transmission of a copy of my report to the Honourable the Minister of Militia, I wired him as follows:

"Strongly recommend conference with yourself, other cabinet representatives, hospital commission and medical service before commission takes over medical service to returned soldiers. Present state of problem demands urgent consideration."

The telegram clearly indicates that I did not consider the then state of dealing with returned soldiers from a medical point of view to be satisfactory.

I have the honour to be, sir,

Your obedient servant,

F. W. MARLOW,

Colonel, A.M.C.

Col. F. W. MARLOW Called, Sworn and Examined.

By the Chairman:

Q. Col. Marlow, will you kindly state the position you occupy and the duties you perform in respect of the Militia service in Canada?—A. I have been performing the duties of Assistant Director of Medical Services in Military District No. 2, with the headquarters at Toronto.

Q. How long did you occupy that position?—A. I was appointed Deputy Assistant Director of Medical Services on March 29, 1915, and I was appointed as Assistant Director of Medical Services on April 22, 1915.

Q. Do you occupy the position now?—A. Yes, I believe so, yet.

Q. What area do you exercise jurisdiction over?—A. The whole of Military District No. 2.

Q. Did your duties take you outside of Military District No. 2?—A. Not my regular duties.

Q. Were you at any time asked by the Minister to perform duties that required your going outside of District No. 2?—A. Yes, sir.

[Col. F. W. Marlow.]

Q. Will you explain what those duties were?—A. I was asked by the Hon. the Minister of Militia to make an inspection of the Medical Services of the whole of Canada, in respect of the Canadian Expeditionary Force, and for the purposes of making a report.

Q. Did you carry out that instruction?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What dates were covered by your inspection?—A. I think sir, August 14—the beginning of my report states the date.

Q. You received Headquarters instructions on August 14, 1916; how soon after receiving those instructions did you commence your inspection?—A. About a week or ten days. At that time my Deputy was absent on leave and I was delayed in beginning my inspection for a few days on account of his absence.

Q. When did you complete your tour of inspection?—A. That is stated on the front of my report, October—

Q. October 18, 1916, I believe, is the date given?—A. That is the date, sir.

Q. During that inspection did you visit all the provinces of Canada?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you visit all hospitals under the Army Medical Service?—A. Yes, with one exception, sir. One of the hospitals at Halifax I was unable to visit, really because of my train connections. I was there on Saturday and was anxious to get on to Aldershot Camp that evening to spend Sunday at the camp; and I omitted the inspection of one hospital at Halifax. The one at Rock Head is the one I did not see.

Q. Did you also inspect the convalescent hospitals under the control of the Military Hospitals Commission, both private and semi-private?—A. With one or two exceptions. I did not visit the Ross Home at Sydney, nor did I see the Sir Sanford Fleming Home at Ottawa, nor the Keefer Home at Port Arthur. I saw all other Homes in Canada.

Q. If I understand correctly, the results of your investigation are summarized in certain recommendations to be found on pp. 23, 24, 25, 26 and 27 of your typewritten report. Do these embody the gist of your conclusions after the inspection which you made?—A. Yes, sir, so far as I was able to make recommendations; but I may point out to you, as stated in paragraph 26, that pending further information on the future policy of the Canadian Medical Service overseas, further recommendations were withheld. I may say that this report was made at the time that the Medical Service overseas had been reported on, and it seemed obvious that a new policy was to be adopted in respect to sending home men. Therefore, at that particular time I did not consider it advisable to follow up these recommendations or, at least, to make any further recommendations with regard to the whole situation.

Q. Looking over these recommendations, which of them, in your judgment, have reference to the problem of the returned soldiers?—A. I should say that inasmuch as the medical service generally was, and is still, interested in the problem of dealing with returned soldiers, all of the general recommendations should be applicable. For example, Nos. 1, 2, 3, 4 and 5. My idea is that the general recommendations apply inasmuch as the Medical Service of Canada has never been relieved of the medical service in respect to returned soldiers.

Mr. MIDDLEBRO: What you say is quite true, but it seems to me that some of the matters dealt with are so indirect, that if we once enter upon a consideration of them we shall never be able to terminate this enquiry.

By the Chairman:

Q. I am prepared to admit that to a certain extent the causes which have made men returnable are pertinent to our enquiry, but would you be able to give us under Clauses 24, 25 and 26 the information which you desire to give and which your experience and your inspection have rendered you capable of giving in connection with this returned soldier problem?—A. I presume that I would, sir.

(Col. F. W. Marlow 1

Q. Then I will quote the clauses containing the recommendations and ask you to state what you have to say in respect to them (Reads):

24. Urgent consideration of the desirability of establishing other large military hospitals in Canada as has been done in Military District No. 2. Conclusions arrived at would materially affect any recommendations regarding military hospitals as they now exist.

Should it transpire that soldiers now overseas should be sent home to Canada in larger numbers and at a much earlier stage of their treatment, the establishment of such hospitals would be essential. They should be situated at strategic points, and would not necessarily be uniform in size. Points which would seem to demand special consideration from their geographical location and for other reasons as well are Halifax, Quebec, Montreal, Toronto, Winnipeg, Edmonton and Vancouver.

Pending consideration of this subject, recommendations regarding present military hospitals are withheld, though attention is directed to Appendix No. 3a, Report on Military Hospitals.

25. Close co-operation between the Military Hospitals Commission Command and the Militia Department, and particularly the Army Medical Corps, is urgently required, as the problem of returning soldiers is tremendous.

26. Should the problem be extended to the extent of having to provide large military hospitals to care for invalids requiring active treatment, and not yet in a stage of convalescence, it is urged that this is a duty for which the Army Medical Corps should be entirely responsible. Pending further information on the future policy of the Canadian Medical Service Overseas, further recommendations are withheld.

A. With respect to paragraph 24—"urgent desirability of establishing other large Military Hospitals in Canada, as has been done in Military District No. 2." The object of that, sir, was, that we had every reason to believe for a long time that a very large number of men requiring active treatment would be returned to Canada, and at the time of my inspection there was no Convalescent Hospital or home under the Military Hospitals Commission, with the exception of the first large one, the Bishop Strachan School, established in Toronto, where there were any facilities for treatment; that is to say, they were at that time simply Homes providing housing and lodging, and a certain amount of vocational training, but no facilities for treatment. In other words, there was no provision for treating the cases that needed active treatment. I may state that when we asked for the establishment of a Military Hospital in Toronto we had a very large number of men in training, and we naturally believed that when the number of men in training decreased, the hospital population with regard to them would decrease, but we also naturally believed that there would be a good many returned men requiring active treatment in hospitals such as would not be provided at the Convalescent Homes. I might refer you, in this connection, to a paragraph which is inserted in the letter from the General Officer Commanding the 2nd District to the Secretary of the Militia Council, dated February 4, 1916, in respect to the hospital accommodation of the 2nd division. I might explain that my letter deals with the reasons for wanting this large hospital.

Q. Would you like that letter filed as an exhibit?—A. Yes, sir, I would be glad to file that, but I might call your attention to one paragraph which reads: (Reads)—

Further, it will be necessary to provide hospital accommodation for many of the returned invalids who may require more active surgical or medical treatment than will be provided at the Military Convalescent Homes, and until demobilization is well advanced there will undoubtedly be an urgent need of such a hospital as is proposed.

[Col. F. W. Marlow.]

But the text of the letter is as follows: (Reads)

EXHIBITION CAMP,

February 4, 1916.

FROM—G.O.C., 2nd Division, Exhibition Camp, Ont.

TO—Secretary, Militia Council,
Ottawa, Ont.

HOSPITAL ACCOMMODATION, 2ND DIVISION.

SIR,—I have the honour to state that owing to the large number of troops in training in this division, it is considered necessary that action be taken at once to provide increased hospital accommodation and personnel.

The matter has been thoroughly discussed here, and it is considered advisable to recommend that a Base Hospital of a permanent nature should be established at Divisional Headquarters in Toronto, and that when summer camps are organized, casualty clearing stations with sufficient personnel to meet the requirements should be established at each camp from which casualties requiring anything more than a few days' treatment, could be cleared to the Base Hospital.

At the close of the present winter camp, it is estimated that there will be approximately from four to five hundred patients in hospital, and it is essential that a permanent hospital should be opened to receive them.

Further, it will be necessary to provide hospital accommodation for many of the returned invalids who may require more active surgical or medical treatment than will be provided by the Military Convalescent Homes, and until demobilization is well advanced, there will undoubtedly be an urgent need of such a hospital as is proposed.

There are also a very considerable number of cases being sent in from various places in the Division where there is either no hospital accommodation or where the equipment of such hospitals as do exist is insufficient to properly provide for such care as is demanded.

There is every reason to believe that the old General Hospital will be placed at our disposal by the city as soon as it is vacated by the troops occupying it at present. The alterations required to convert it into a hospital could be done in a short time and the expense would not be very great.

Should this building not be available there is little doubt that one of the large schools would be.

For the base hospital in Toronto, it is recommended that the establishment should be that of a general hospital of 1,040 beds, in accordance with attached copy.

Though it is possible that the requirements may not demand 1,040 beds in the immediate future, it is considered advisable that this scale should be adopted in order to provide sufficient elasticity in dealing with the situation so that all possible requirements may be met.

Should this recommendation meet with your approval, it is not proposed to take on a full complement of officers or nursing sisters unless the work to be carried on actually demands that such should be done. By maintaining the personnel of officers permanently employed below the authorized establishment, an opportunity would be afforded of taking on temporarily such medical officers as volunteer for active service and using them to assist in carrying on the work while undergoing training and waiting for an overseas appointment. It is considered that a fairly large number of medical officers are lost to the service by not taking them on at such times as they express their willingness to serve.

It is pointed out that should the occasion arise for organizing in this division, a general hospital for overseas service, the personnel of the proposed Base

[Col. F. W. Marlow.]

Hospital at Toronto might to a large extent be utilized for this purpose, as it is considered that when once thoroughly organized, the change in the personnel that would be necessitated by such action would not seriously impair the efficiency of the hospital, provided that sufficient notice could be given in order to allow a careful selection of replacing personnel.

It is further recommended that the Base Hospital, Toronto, should be commanded by Lieut.-Col. T. B. Richardson, the present commanding officer of the hospital at Exhibition Camp.

Recommendations as to the establishment of the casualty clearing stations for the summer camps will be submitted later.

As I consider this matter to be one of great importance and urgency, I would ask for your early consideration and approval, please.

(Sgd.) W. A. LOGIE,
Brigadier-General, G.O.C., M.D. No. 2.

By the Chairman:

Q. May I interrupt just a moment for clarification in my own mind? Do I understand that up to a certain time the authorities on the other side only sent out those cases that reached the convalescent stage?—A. I believe so.

Q. And that latterly they have been sending more active, as well as convalescent cases, because your idea was that we are not properly provided with hospital accommodation for active cases?—A. We were not at the time I made my inspection. The Military Hospital in Toronto and the smaller military hospitals throughout Canada were the only other places where there were any facilities for treating active cases.

Q. That was in September and October, 1916?—A. Yes, sir. This is the letter calling for—

Q. The letter of February 4, 1916?—A. Yes, calling attention to the need of a large military hospital in Toronto.

Q. Did you get it?—A. Yes, we got it after several months; it took some very considerable time to get it authorized, but it was authorized.

Q. And can you say, from your own knowledge, whether military hospitals have been authorized elsewhere, so that you can say whether the stricture made in your letter of February 4, 1916, could be made to-day?—A. So far as I am aware, sir, there are no large hospitals under the Militia Department that have been added; there have been some smaller ones.

Q. Under the command of the Militia Department?—A. No, no large ones.

Q. But there are under the Military Hospitals Commission, I understand?—A. No large ones that provide treatment for cases needing active treatment, that is to say, so far as I am aware at the present time. I presume that they have entered into arrangements for providing facilities for active treatment, but so far as I am aware at the present time those hospitals have not been established.

By Hon. Mr. Murphy:

Q. Where are cases requiring active treatment dealt with now?—A. As far as Military District No. 2 is concerned, cases requiring active treatment, such as the convalescent hospitals do not afford, have been sent largely by the officers of the Military Hospitals Commission to the civil hospitals. My orders to my officers were to send these cases to the Base Hospital, but, owing to the division in authority in the medical service, my orders have not been carried out, and the patients have been sent to the civil hospitals by the Military Hospitals Commission.

Q. Are you speaking now of District No. 2?—A. I am only speaking of my own district.

Q. You have no knowledge of other districts?—A. No, but, so far as the other districts are concerned, in many of them proper military hospital facilities do not exist.

[Col. F. W. Marlow.]

By Mr. Ross (Middlesex):

Q. In some cases they are sending them to the civil hospitals?—A. In some districts where there are no military hospitals.

Q. What is the advantage of that? Why should not they be sent to the civil hospitals? Is it more expensive?—A. No, I presume it is no more expensive, but, once they go to the civil hospitals, you, more or less, lose control; it is not always easy to obtain reports on them, or to determine the length of time they are going to be in the hospitals. But it is a military regulation that where military hospitals exist they should be taken advantage of, and that where they did not exist then we should take advantage of civil hospitals.

By Hon. Mr. Murphy:

Q. Was there accommodation in the Military Hospitals for patients that were sent to the civil hospitals?—A. There has been no time since the Base Hospital was established in Toronto that there has not been adequate accommodation in the military hospital for the cases requiring such active treatment as the convalescent hospitals did not afford.

Q. Then your recommendation in section 24, in reality concerned the other districts, rather than Military District No. 2?—A. Yes.

Q. Do you consider Military District No. 2 adequately supplied—either actually or in process of preparation—at the present time, and for some time to come, to take care of any treatment that the convalescent hospitals do not afford?—A. Yes.

Q. Your stricture was in effect that the other military districts were not so well provided as No. 2?—A. Yes.

Q. Do you know whether, since that criticism was made, steps have been taken to meet that lack of accommodation?—A. So far as I am aware there have not been any arrangements to establish large military hospitals such as this, but I would suggest that that question might be asked the Director-General of Medical Services, because I am not really informed as to what is in progress in the other districts at the present time.

Q. Then will you say that at the time of your inspection in September, there were not adequate facilities, in your judgment, in the other districts?—A. No, there were not.

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. Do I understand you to say you are not certain whether or not there is adequate provision in the districts other than No. 2?—A. Along the lines of active treatment?

Q. Yes?—A. I am not aware of any large hospital having been established in the other districts, but that is a matter which the Director-General of Medical Services can tell you. With regard to the second part of that paragraph you will see that this recommendation was made to anticipate the possibility of the Army Medical Corps being expected to take care of men returning, not in a convalescent state, but in a state where they required active treatment, and it was made in order to elaborate the whole system of dealing with the returned soldiers, and the places which I have mentioned as demanding special consideration were those where I thought this work could be carried on to the best advantage.

By the Chairman:

Q. Your recommendation is largely geographical?—A. Not so much geographical; partly geographical, but partly because I consider these the most strategical points. I also considered them the points at which professional service could be obtained with the least difficulty; places where men could be provided with good professional attendance and nursing, which is, of course, after all the main consideration.

[Col. F. W. Marlow.]

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. Then you thought that unless the other Military Districts were equipped the same as No. 2, if there should be any real heavy influx of soldiers, there would not be sufficient equipment to take care of them?—A. Certainly, not in the Military Hospitals; the civil hospitals would have to be used to a very large extent.

Q. In the military hospitals, there is not sufficient accommodation?—A. No, sir.

By Mr. Middlebro:

Q. You mean under the control of the Army Medical Corps?—A. Under the control of the Militia Department.

By Mr. Sutherland:

Q. You had no reference to the Military Hospitals Commission in that statement?—A. Do you mean, sir, as to providing treatment for active cases?

Q. Yes?—A. I have not the latest statement of the accommodation under the control of the Military Hospitals Commission at hand, and at the present time I am not aware of the Military Hospitals Commission having a hospital entirely under their command, that provides active surgical treatment.

Q. I do not mean entirely under their command. You say they have accommodation in some of the civil hospitals; are not those sections of the civil hospitals under the control of the Military Hospitals Commission?—A. You mean the accommodation which has been arranged for in the large civil hospitals?

Q. Yes?—A. I am sorry I cannot tell you what arrangements they have with the civil hospitals, as to whether they are entirely under their control or not.

By Mr. Ross (Middlesex):

Q. Do I understand that with regard to Military District No. 2, you contend that you have sufficient accommodation for active cases in the military hospitals there, that is in those hospitals under the Militia Department, and that in spite of that fact cases are being sent, not to the military hospital, but to the civil hospitals?—A. Yes.

Q. That being so are you not wasting the facilities which exist at the military hospital?—A. I may say, sir, that my instructions, which were issued regarding cases of that sort were to the effect that cases requiring active treatment should be sent to the military hospital as far as possible, but you understand my position was such that my medical officers, to a certain extent, ceased to realize their responsibility to me, although still under my command, and that at the request of the Military Hospitals Commission these men were being sent to the civil hospitals instead of to the military hospital. In that connection I may perhaps file a copy of an extract of a letter written by myself dated August 8, 1916, to the officer in charge of the Central Military Convalescent Hospital, Toronto, on the subject of hospital accounts, which reads as follows:

"It is noted that a very considerable number of accounts are being forwarded here from the Toronto General Hospital, for hospital maintenance of invalided soldiers, who have been sent there from the Central Military Convalescent Hospital.

"Regulations require that where a military hospital exists the civil hospitals are only to be made use of under very special or urgent circumstances.

"I have to direct that in future such cases as require hospital treatment, other than that afforded by the Central Military Convalescent Hospital, should be sent to the Base Hospital. It is my impression that too many cases are being sent to the civil hospital without sufficient justification. There is no reason whatever why some of the cases which have been sent to the civil hospital should not have been retained at the Central Military Convalescent Hospital as bed patients.

"Your careful attention to this matter is requested."

March 1, 1917.

[Col. F. W. Marlow.]

That was my order; I may say that that order has not been carried out because of the divided responsibility and the preference that the Military Hospitals Commission authorities have for having these men sent to the civil hospitals.

Q. Do you mean you had accommodation for these men, which was left idle, and that other accommodation was paid for in the civil hospitals?—A. Yes.

Q. To what extent did that exist?—A. I cannot tell you exactly to what extent, but I have reason to believe that at times there have been as many as twenty-patients probably in the civil hospital.

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. Twenty cases that should have gone into the military hospital?—A. Yes.

Q. Do they give you the reasons why they prefer the civil hospital to the military hospitals?—A. No.

Q. Do you know what is their actual reason?—A. Well, I cannot state their actual reason, but so far as I can make out in my own mind, it is that it was a continuation of the policy which they have manifested practically ever since the creation of the Commission, and more particularly since the creation of the Hospitals Commission Command: that is, an attempt to divorce themselves practically entirely from the Militia Department.

Q. That is, to divorce whom from the Militia Department?—A. The The Military Hospitals Commission Command, which involved all the returned soldiers.

Q. They want to divorce themselves, you think, from the Militia Department: that is, the medical end of it?—A. Not only the medical end of it, but the whole end of it—the administrative, as well as the medical end.

By the Chairman:

Q. In your judgment, there has been a tendency to confine the army medical service to the treatment of men going over, and to assign the care of men who return to the Military Hospitals Commission?—A. Yes.

By Hon. Mr. Murphy:

Q. What do you mean by the Military Hospital Commission Command?—A. The Military Hospitals Commission Command was formed by that Order in Council. I cannot tell you the number of it, but that is the command to which all the returned soldiers come, and some who have not proceeded overseas are taken; it is simply a unit of the Expeditionary Force, with its sub-units in the various military districts.

Q. And all come under the Military Hospitals Commission?—A. Yes.

By the Chairman:

Q. Col. Potter, in response to a request on behalf of this committee a week ago, has filed these circular letters of instructions re medical examination of recruits in Canada and other statistics. On page 55 there is given a list of the military hospitals in Canada, showing the accommodation and beds occupied at the end of December, a second list of the hospitals used for month of December, showing the accommodation and beds occupied at the end of the month, and a third list showing the civil hospitals that are occasionally used for treatment of military cases, number of beds reserved for military cases not stated. You might explain the differences of the three classes of hospitals that are mentioned there?—A. The first is military hospitals in Canada, showing the accommodation and beds occupied at the end of December, 1916.

[Col. F. W. Marlow.]

By Mr. Middlebro:

Q. I suppose a hospital under the Military Hospitals Commission is a military hospital in Canada? Does it include those?—A. This list includes those under the Militia Department.

By the Chairman:

Q. Those are exclusively the Military hospitals under the control, local and otherwise, of the Militia Department?—A. Yes, except in this regard: that some of the hospitals here, I take it, are not entirely military hospitals, but are hospitals in which accommodation has been arranged for by the Militia Department, particularly in respect to isolation cases.

Q. Give us the distinction between those three classes of hospitals, as to the work they do and the authority under which they act?—A. These military hospitals are hospitals established under the Militia Department by authority from headquarters, in the same way as the Base Hospital at Toronto has been established distinctly as a military hospital.

Q. What class of patients are in them? Are they men belonging to units still in Canada?—A. They are men belonging to units, all soldier patients, either men who have been taken ill or injured during training, or, as the case may be, any returned men may be taken there as well, provided they are allowed to be sent there.

By Mr. Ross (Middlesex):

Q. Venereal disease men go to the hospital?—A. Venereal disease cases in Military District No. 2 have been treated at the Base Hospital, irrespective of whether they have been overseas or not.

Q. That is the Military Hospital?—A. Yes.

By the Chairman:

Q. I would like to know how many beds there are in all those hospitals and what accommodation?—A. I may say, in looking over this list, it does not quite correspond with the list given in my report; there have been some few additions; the total accommodation put down is 2,388 beds.

Q. Of which how many were full?—A. 1,246 were at that time occupied.

Q. Now describe the second class of hospitals, what they are and what they do, and the class of patients they serve?—A. Might I direct your attention to the fact that in that first list considerably more than one-third of those beds are in Military District No. 2. The next list is hospitals used for month of December, showing accommodation and beds used during the month.

By Mr. Ross (Middlesex):

Q. That is a Military Commission Hospital?—A. No.

By Hon. Mr. McCurdy:

Q. Will you state for the record, what proportion the total enlistments in that district bear to the total enlistments in Canada?—A. I am afraid it would be impossible for me to give you the number of enlistments.

By Hon. Mr. Murphy:

Q. It is very large I suppose?—A. I may say that at the time of the establishment of the large military hospital there we had upwards of 40,000 troops in District No. 2 in training.

Q. Take the second list of hospitals?—A. These hospitals named in the second list are apparently civil hospitals in which certain accommodation is available for military patients.

[Col. F. W. Marlow.]

Q. And in these hospitals how many beds are available for military patients and how many occupied?—A. I do not know whether there is any definite arrangement with these hospitals as to the number of beds that are set apart for military patients. I presume Colonel Potter would be able to tell you that.

The CHAIRMAN: The Committee would like to have Colonel Potter answer that question now, if he will. (To Colonel Marlow): You do not know?

The WITNESS: The statement regarding second list is that there are apparently one of the civil hospitals in which there is certain accommodation put down and a certain number of beds occupied, I said I was not prepared to state whether the number of beds as shown here under accommodation have been definitely arranged for by the Militia Department as being available for military patients.

Colonel POTTER: I do not think any definite arrangement has been made for a definite number of beds, but every month we get the return showing what are available for our use in those hospitals.

The CHAIRMAN: How many you could have if you needed them?

Colonel POTTER: Yes.

The CHAIRMAN: And that represents the number you could have if you needed them at that time?

Colonel POTTER: According to the report.

The CHAIRMAN: If there should be an influx of civilian patients, you might have a smaller number of beds available for your use?

Colonel POTTER: Yes.

By the Chairman:

Q. Can you tell me, Col. Marlow, the number of beds available in that list number 2, at the time the figures were taken, and how many were occupied?—A. In Col. Potter's report submitted to the committee March 1, Class No. 2 hospitals used for month of December, 1916, the total accommodation is given at 3,372, and the number of beds occupied, 156. The third class is that of civil hospitals that are occasionally used for treatment of military cases, number of beds reserved for military cases not stated: that is an enumeration of various civil hospitals which I do not think requires any explanation. It does not show the number of beds or whether they are occupied or not.

Q. Have you anything more to say as to 24?—A. Except with regard to the last paragraph of 24, to call your attention to that and state that further recommendations regarding the present military hospitals are withheld, though attention is directed to appendix number 3, where I have given a report on the military hospitals. I may say that at this particular time that I made the report, the overseas matter was under active consideration, and also there was a very great deal of doubt as to who would be responsible for men returning who might need active treatment: that is as to whether they would be attended to by the Army Medical Corps or by the Military Hospital Commission. So that, pending further information on these subjects, I did not consider it necessary or desirable to put in recommendations, either with regard to the present military hospitals, or further recommendations, as to extension of military hospitals. I may state that after a conference with the Deputy Minister and with Col. Potter following my report, it was suggested by the Deputy Minister that when further information on these two matters was available that Col. Potter and myself might submit a further joint report. I may say that at that time Col. Potter secured estimates, I believe, as to the cost of establishing and equipping hospitals of various sizes in case the Militia Department should be called upon to do it; but the Hospitals Commission went ahead with the problem and no further recommendations on the matter were submitted.

[Col. F. W. Marlow.]

By the Chairman:

Q. Do you desire, Col. Marlow, that Appendix No. 3 which contains in detail your criticism of the several hospitals should be regarded as part of your evidence and printed?—A. That is the brief report on the hospitals, Appendix No. 3 and Appendix No. 3a.

By Hon. Mr. Murphy:

Q. You desire these appendices to form part of your evidence?—A. If one goes in the other should go in as well.

Remarks.—It will be noted that with the exception of M.D. No. 2 and No. 6 there is very little accommodation available in the military hospitals. In No. 2 the accommodation is considered adequate, while in No. 6, on account of its two important embarkation or disembarkation points, namely, Halifax and St. John, where troops are frequently "held over," the accommodation is scarcely adequate. In all other districts, except No. 2 and No. 6, the civil hospitals have to be used to a considerable extent, and especially when troops are in winter quarters and Camp Hospitals are not available.

APPENDIX No. 3a.

REPORT ON MILITARY HOSPITALS.

M.D. No. 1.—London, barracks hospital: Condition of building is fair. Equipment moderately good. Slight further alterations would increase accommodation considerably.

M.D. No. 2.—Toronto, barracks hospital: Seldom used for C.E.F. Fair accommodation for detained or mild cases. Not equipped for surgical cases.

Toronto, base hospital: Buildings of old Toronto General Hospital have been suitably fitted up and they are now quite suited for carrying on a large military hospital. Equipment good. Grounds afford room for expansion if necessary.

Toronto, officers' hospital: Situated at Jarvis and Wellesley Streets, and donated [Col. F. W. Marlow.]

and equipped by Mrs. H. D. Warren. Used chiefly for officers during convalescence and for returned invalided officers. Splendid building, beautifully situated and admirably adapted for its purposes.

Hamilton, military hospital: Three frame buildings paralleling each other. Constructed by the city of Hamilton on payment of a fixed sum by the Government. Now well equipped and admirably adapted for its purpose. Buildings require painting urgently.

M.D. No. 3.—Kingston, old military hospital: Building unsuitable. Should be closed. Poorly equipped and very inconvenient.

Kingston, new military hospital: Admirably situated in large grounds alongside the river. Well equipped.

M.D. No. 5.—Quebec, military hospital: Building old but in fair state of repair. Situation undesirable, as too much shut in. Extension impossible. Equipment fairly good.

M.D. No. 6.—Military hospital, Halifax: Building old but in fair state of repair. Situation good. Equipment fair. Requirements many. Church annex, conveniently situated. Observation building new and commendable.

Military hospital, Rock Head: Not inspected, on account of bad weather, and important train connections. Understood that equipment is only fair.

Military hospital, St. John, N.B.: Buildings very good, no grounds. Not well furnished, as beds are either old enamelled ones left by previous occupants, or barrack beds (not even beds, hospital, folding). Operating room and sterilizing room equipment is very poor. Was carried on as non-dieted hospital but quite unsatisfactorily. Understood that it has been changed to a dieted hospital recently.

M.D. No. 11.—Military hospital, Esquimalt barracks: Old frame building, in fair state of repair, and cleanly kept. No verandahs nor balconies. Heating arrangements inadequate even for mild winters. Kitchen inadequate, and flies abound, being hard to exclude. Refrigerator altogether too small. Will not even accommodate a day's milk, meat and butter supply. No proper store room for food supplies. Cellar damp. No proper place for packing stores, which are now kept in the same room as clean linen, blankets and other supplies, though these are on different walls and separated as far as possible in the small room. Floors require attention, especially that of operating room, which is cement and covered with a paint which is constantly clipping off so that strict asepsis is impossible. Small sterilizer for dressings does not permit of any pressure. Operating room is not very bright, and a much used road passes immediately under its windows, though it is situated on the upstairs flat. Equipment is scantily fair. The wards are well kept and, considering the condition under which the work is carried on, the hospital would seem to be well managed. It is stated by the staff that the building is infested with rats. Three nursing sisters were recently added to the staff.

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. In appendix No. 3a, you speak of conditions, for instance, in Military Districts No. 1 and No. 2. In your opinion should the Government immediately proceed to put these hospitals in a condition that would remedy the faults that you found? Do you think, as a medical man, that expenditure should be made and at once?—A. Well, one's answer to that would depend to some extent on the policy of the Hospitals Commission in respect to the establishing of hospitals. I understand that practically nothing of a permanent nature has as yet been put into effect by the Hospitals Commission. I am not sure of that; but I understand that they are erecting some hospitals—I think, one at Halifax. I may say that I cannot be positive of this. I do not know that they have as yet attempted anything of a permanent nature, and it is not reasonable to expect that they would because their work is temporary and will ultimately, no doubt, revert to the Militia Department.

Q. Quite so?—A. But, for a very long time to come there will be work for military hospitals which will demand considerably greater accommodation than is available in the existing military hospitals.

Q. Well, still you do not answer that question, Colonel Marlow. Would you then, under these circumstances,—you can regard the hospitals either as permanent or temporary—favour the expenditure being made to put these hospitals that you mention in appendices 3 and 3a in first-class condition?—A. Yes, sir, I would. But the accommodation provided by most of these places is not adequate to meet the demand.

Q. Very well. Would you suggest enlarging? For instance, you say regarding the Toronto Base Hospital: "Buildings of old Toronto General Hospital have been suitably fitted up and they are now quite suited for carrying on a large military hospital. Equipment, good. Grounds afford room for expansion if necessary." Would you recommend that expansion?—A. If the whole work of dealing with returned soldiers were to come under the Militia Department it would probably be necessary to expand; but I may say that there is a very large accommodation at that hospital, and it was my intention, had I been directing the affairs of the district unhampered by divided authorities, to have used this hospital for such cases as required active treatment and to provide accommodation for convalescent cases elsewhere. I am not prepared to say at the present time that I would consider it advisable to extend that institution, that is to put up further buildings. I am not prepared to say that.

Q. I want to get something concrete?—A. I may say, so far as that hospital is concerned, that I have put in subsequent recommendations with regard to it. It has been brought up to a certain state by the Militia Department and practically allowed to stand. It is not in a completed state to be used as a military hospital because it was brought up to a certain standard of accommodation, a certain amount of money was spent on it and since that time we have practically not been able to get a dollar to spend on it.

Q. Which hospital is that?—A. The Base Hospital at Toronto. I may say that I submitted further recommendations with regard to that hospital. I have been trying to get a definite policy adopted with respect to that hospital which might justify further expenditure on it.

Q. Now, then, take Military District No. 3, Kingston (reads): "Old Military Hospital: Building unsuitable. Should be closed. Fully equipped, and very inconvenient." Is that hospital still running?—A. I would have to ask Colonel Potter about that.

Mr. PARDEE: Colonel Potter, is that hospital still running?

Colonel POTTER: It is still running as a venereal hospital. We have a new hospital at Kingston, but continued to use the old one as we did not want to spend any more money than necessary.

The CHAIRMAN: As soon as the new hospital is able to take over the work, do you intend to close the old one?

Colonel POTTER: The old hospital is being used for venereal cases, but the lease of it will soon expire.

Mr. PARDEE: Are you going to close it then?

Colonel POTTER: In a short time.

The WITNESS: Referring to Mr. Pardee's question about expenditure at the Base Hospital, Toronto, I would like to submit a copy of a letter and some memoranda regarding this hospital which I put in under date of February 2, 1917. This was [Col. F. W. Marlow.]

submitted under cover of a letter from the General Officer Commanding, Military District No. 2, to the Militia Council, and the letter and memoranda reads as follows:—

EXHIBITION CAMP, FEBRUARY 2, 1917.

From The G. O. C., M.D., No. 2,
To the Secretary, Militia Council,
Ottawa, Ont.

Base Hospital,
Mil. Dis. No. 2,
Toronto, Ont.

SIR,—I have the honour to invite your attention to the marginally noted subject, and to submit for your consideration the following memoranda prepared by the A. D. M. S., and to recommend that a more definite policy in regard to this hospital should be adopted, so that if it is to be continued in use as a military hospital it may be maintained at a proper standard.

I have the honour to be, sir,

Your obedient servant,

(Signed) W. A. LOGIE,
Major-General,
G. O. C., M.D., No. 2.

MEMORANDA RE THE BASE HOSPITAL, TORONTO,
By the A. D. M. S., M.D. No. 2.

1. In the spring of 1915 with about 40,000 men in training in Military District No. 2, it was urgently necessary to find adequate hospital accommodation for the sick and injured.

2. The old Toronto General Hospital was secured from the Hospital Trust, and the city of Toronto undertook to pay the rent and to turn the buildings over to the Militia Department to be used as a military hospital. [This hospital is not costing the Department of Militia anything, as the city of Toronto is paying the rent.]

3. During the winter of 1915-1916 the buildings were used for barracks purposes by the 83rd and 92nd Overseas Battalions.

4. When vacated by these battalions a considerable sum of money was expended by the Militia Department in fitting up the buildings for use as a hospital.

5. Since the hospital was opened there have been upwards of seven hundred patients treated there at one time.

6. At the present time there are something more than four hundred patients there.

7. When the battalions now in training proceed overseas the number of patients in the hospital will be still further decreased.

8. When authority for establishing the hospital was requested, it was, as stated above, urgently necessary to secure the accommodation it would afford. Besides, it was very naturally considered that as the hospital requirements for men in training decreased there would be a corresponding increase in the hospital requirements for returned invalided soldiers.

9. Such a state now exists, and will soon be much more manifest, but owing to the fact that the Army Medical Corps have not been allowed to control the disposition of returned soldiers needing active hospital treatment, the facilities which the building afford are not being used to the greatest advantage, and unless they are used for returned invalids requiring such active hospital treatment as the convalescent hospitals do not afford, a state will soon be reached where it will scarcely be justifiable to continue the military hospital in the present large buildings, and with the present personnel.

10. Such facilities as the hospital offers, and from two to three hundred of its beds which have been held ready for returned invalids, have not been taken advantage of by the Military Hospitals Commission although that body is fully aware of their availability.

11. In the meantime, the Convalescent Hospitals under the Commission have been inadequate to meet the demands and there has been a considerable tendency to clogging of the machinery and a consequent delay in the final disposition and repatriation of the invalids.

12. The Commission prefer to send cases needing active surgical treatment, to the Toronto General Hospital (Civil).

13. For some time past it has been most difficult or impossible to improve the accommodation at the Base Hospital or even to carry out repairs which are urgent and necessary owing to inability to secure authorization for the necessary expenditure.

15. A comprehensive policy in respect to these buildings should be inaugurated, and it is recommended as follows:

(a) That further necessary expenditure to bring the buildings to a finished state for use as a military hospital and to provide more suitable dining room accommodation than now exists should be authorized.

(b) That necessary urgent repairs or replacements may be carried on by the Engineer Service without the usual delay incidental to the present policy of awaiting Headquarters' authority before proceeding.

(c) That advantage should be taken of the free use of these buildings to the fullest extent possible, and that the Hospital be duly recognized as the Military Hospital to which the sick and injured amongst those in training should be sent, and the institution in which returned invalided soldiers requiring active medical or surgical treatment such as is not now provided for in the Convalescent Hospitals should be cared for.

(d) Failing the above recommendations being met, the A.M.C. Training Depot should be absorbed by the Base Hospital. A part of the building should be maintained at hospital standard and the remainder as a barracks. In this case, the Base Hospital should be made a training school for all medical officers, nursing sisters, non-commissioned officers and men of the A.M.C., in this district or any such that might be sent from any other District.

(Signed) F. W. MARLOW, Colonel,
A.D.M.S., M.D. No. 2.

These are my further recommendations with regard to that hospital.

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. Now, Col. Marlow, referring to Appendix 3a. of your report regarding the hospitals at Esquimalt, in Military District No. 11, is that hospital still in use?—A. I believe so, but I think Col. Potter has seen that hospital since I saw it, and that perhaps something has been done in respect of it.

Witness retired.

Col. POTTER Recalled and further examined.

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. Col. Potter, when did you see the hospital at Esquimalt?—A. I think I was there the first week in January.

[Colonel Potter.]

Q. You have been there since Col. Marlow was there?—A. Yes.

Q. You saw Col. Marlow's report of that hospital as contained in Appendix 3a?
(Reads):

Old frame building, in fair state of repair, and cleanly kept. No verandahs, nor balconies. Heating arrangements inadequate even for mild winters. Kitchen inadequate, and flies abound being hard to exclude. Refrigerator altogether too small. Will not even accommodate a day's milk, meat and butter supply. No proper storeroom for food supplies. Cellar damp. No proper place for packing stores which are now kept in same room as clean linen, blankets and other supplies though these are on different walls and separated as far as possible in the small room. Floors require attention especially that of operating room which is cement and covered with a paint which is constantly chipping off so that strict asepsis is impossible. Small sterilizer for dressing does not permit of any pressure. Operating room is not very bright, and a much used road passes immediately under its windows though it is situated on the upstairs flat. Equipment is scantily fair. The wards are well kept and, considering the condition under which the work is carried on, the hospital would seem to be well managed. It is stated by the staff that the building is infested with rats. Three nursing sisters were recently added to the staff.

How much better is that hospital now than since that report was made?—A. I think that Hospital is now in much better condition. Some painting and minor repairs have been done, so that when I was there the Hospital looked clean and the patients appeared comfortable.

Q. Were the heating arrangements changed?—A. I did not inquire about the heating arrangements.

Q. Were the kitchen arrangements changed?—A. I did not see the kitchen accommodation before, but at the time I did, the arrangements were fairly good.

Q. Was the refrigerating apparatus in order?—A. I did not see it before.

Q. In what condition was the refrigeration accommodation when you did get there?

—A. As far as I recollect, I did not report on the refrigeration especially; the kitchen looked fairly adequate to meet the existing need.

By Mr. Middlebro:

Q. Did you receive any complaint?—A. I did not receive any complaint. The building is an old one and as a hospital should be done away with if possible, but it meets the needs of minor cases.

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. Only minor cases should be sent there?—A. Yes, sir. A new hospital, which should be fitted up by now, called the Irving Hospital, has been provided, and we are sending all our serious cases to the civil hospitals, of which there are two. We use the hospital in question as little as possible.

Q. How many patients does that Esquimalt hospital accommodate?

Colonel MARLOW: I think the actual number is 19 or 20 patients.

Colonel POTTER: It is a very old building, it was there before the war, and we simply use it as a makeshift. A new hospital will have to be built there some day. The estimate of expenditure for the new building, however, was very high, and it was not found possible to build it this year.

Witness retired.

[Colonel Potter.]

The examination of Colonel Marlow resumed.

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. You say in dealing with the Military Hospitals' accommodation:—

It will be noted that with the exception of M. D. No. 2 and No. 6, there is very little accommodation available in the Military Hospitals. In No. 2 the accommodation is considered adequate, while in No. 6, on account of its two important embarkation or disembarkation points, namely, Halifax and St. John, where troops are frequently 'held over,' the accommodation is scarcely adequate.

A. In Appendix No. 3 I show the approximate number of beds in both of these districts, and it will be noted, in comparison, that in some districts there are none.

Q. I notice that.—A. In other districts the number is very small. I may say that west of Military District No. 2, or rather, between that district and the Pacific, at the time I made my inspection there were not more than about 60 or 70 beds, whereas east of there, there were upwards of perhaps 500.

Q. Do you not think that at this stage of the war, when there are a large number of troops disembarking at Halifax and St. John, there should be sufficient hospital accommodation at those two points?—A. I do, sir. I think that at the disembarkation points the accommodation should be adequate.

Q. The accommodation should be very adequate?—A. It is very important, sir, that the accommodation should be adequate.

Q. Can you tell us whether that inadequacy has been remedied or not?—A. I believe, sir, that no action has been taken by the Militia Department in respect to that. Doubtless Colonel Potter could tell you positively. I understand, however, that the Military Hospitals Commission have undertaken to provide accommodation at the points of disembarkation.

Q. And has that organization provided sufficient accommodation, do you know?—

A. I cannot state that positively.

Q. Who could tell us that?—A. I suppose Colonel Thompson would be the proper officer to speak as to that.

By Mr. Middlebro:

Q. I suppose that as a matter of evolution you are improving the Military Hospitals accommodation as the war progresses?—A. As far as the area is concerned, for which I am responsible, I have been trying to keep ahead of the needs.

Q. And so far as your district is concerned, you have been improving the conditions from the commencement down to the present time?—A. Yes.

Q. And up to the time you made your report in October, 1916, so far as you know, there were no returned soldiers who could not, or did not, get hospital accommodation in Toronto or in your district? In other words, there were no returned soldiers who were not provided with accommodation up to the time you made your report?—A. At the time I made my report?

Q. Yes. There were no returned soldiers who were not accommodated either in the hospitals which were provided by the Military Hospitals Commission, or in the Military Hospitals proper?—A. At that time, I may say, there were probably a large number of "out" patients. You see when these central Convalescent Hospitals were established, in many cases they were inadequate to accommodate all the returned men, so that an "out" patient system was adopted whereby men did not live in the hospital but reported there for examination.

Q. And that is still the case?—A. That is still the case. But it was decided to have a different policy and under this, as far as the accommodation would provide, to make the men "in" patients and have only exceptional "out" patients, because it was considered that the men, being under close observation, usually progressed faster than if allowed to remain at their homes; but the hospital accommodation was not sufficient, either at that time or at any time since, to allow all the men to be retained as "in" patients.

Q. How many men could not be treated indoors because of lack of accommodation?
—A. I cannot answer that question because that work has largely been carried on under the Hospitals Commission.

Q. Do you know whether it was because the returned soldiers could not get accommodation indoors in the hospitals that they were made what you might call "out" patients, or was that course adopted as a matter of policy?—A. It would be really necessary to go back to the various stages in the development of the solution of this problem in order to answer your question intelligently.

Q. My question simply is this: was it a matter of policy to have the men at their own homes, or was it because there was not sufficient accommodation for them in the hospitals?—A. At first it was partly a question of policy, but later on it was not a question of policy, but was due to lack of accommodation.

Q. As I understand from the evidence given by Doctor Thompson, your report was made largely in consideration of the numbers of soldiers who were expected to be coming over. It was in anticipation of those large numbers that you reported there was not sufficient accommodation, that is right, is it not?—A. That is right, but at the same time, at the time I made my report, there were a considerable number of "out" patients, I cannot say how many.

Q. And you cannot say they were "out" patients, because of a policy adopted in that regard, or because of insufficient indoor accommodation.—A. I can only say with respect to number 2 district where our Homes have been larger than in any other district, that when the first central military convalescent hospital was opened up in November, 1915, that we had to treat a very considerable number of men as "out" patients because of lack of accommodation.

Q. And they would be men who were slightly indisposed?—A. Yes. At that time we had developed a regular "out" patient system, but immediately, on my recommendation, the Hospitals Commission set about to get further accommodation. With that object in view old Knox College was secured, and they set about putting it into shape. By the time that was ready, and even before that, I issued an order to my medical officers to gather up all the available "out" patients they had accommodation for and to bring them in, because I considered the "out" patient system was not working satisfactorily because of the difficulty of keeping in close touch with the men and not knowing what they were doing while they were out of the Homes.

By Hon. Mr. McCurdy:

Q. Are you referring now to returned soldiers?—A. Yes, to returned soldiers entirely.

Q. I understood you to say they were not under your command but under the command of the Military Hospitals Commission.—A. But up to that time, and even up to this time, we have never been relieved of the responsibility of looking after these men, although they have, in a way, been under the Hospitals Commission Command. You will understand that what I have spoken about up to the present time was prior to the time the Commission Command was formed. The Commission Command was not formed until June, 1916. Prior to that time they were entirely under our control; there was then no division of responsibility in the matter.

By Mr. Middlebro:

Q. What I mean by my recent questions to you is this: by a process of evolution, it was found necessary to have a Military Hospitals Commission. Such a Commission was established, under which these soldiers were really enlisted men under the control of the Department.

[Col. F. W. Marlow.]

Hon. Mr. MURPHY: That is not what Colonel Marlow says.

The WITNESS: With respect to the establishment of the Military Hospitals Commission Command? I am not prepared to admit that.

By Mr. Middlebro:

Q. At any rate the Government did that?—A. It was done by Order in Council.

Q. From that time on, as far as you know, hospital accommodation has been provided from time to time by the Military Hospitals Commission for the soldiers?—A. I direct your attention to the fact that the Bulletin issued in June, 1916, shows certain accommodation. At the time of my inspection and report, three or four months later, no additional accommodation had been added with the exception of a small place in St. Catharines, which was opened and which we, I may say, did not recommend should be opened.

Q. Are you in a position to say definitely that there was not sufficient accommodation provided by the Military Hospitals Commission for the actual cases in Canada at the time you made your report?—A. Yes, I would say that there was not sufficient accommodation for the men in Canada at that time to treat them as "in" patients.

Q. I am speaking now of returned soldiers.—A. And I am referring to returned soldiers.

Q. To what extent do you think there was no accommodation?—A. Without the figures before me it would be very difficult for me to say that, but in Military District No. 6 the great majority of the men returning at that time were "out" patients, they were scattered all over the district.

Q. Where is No. 6?—A. In the Eastern Provinces.

Q. You mean the Maritime Provinces?—A. Yes. We also had a considerable number of "out" patients in our district and that was the case throughout the whole of Canada—there was a considerable number of "out" patients.

Q. About what number was there in District No. 2?—A. I regret that I cannot give you the figures.

Q. You spoke of 20 as the number that had been sent to civil hospitals?—A. I stated that at times there were probably as many as 20 returned invalids in civil hospitals at one time under active treatment. I did not refer to any particular time, but I say there have been at times as many as that number undergoing active treatment.

Q. Would you agree with this statement by Colonel Thompson, to be found at page 57 of the printed evidence?—(Reads):

"Q. Is there in your opinion sufficient accommodation at the present time for Canadian wounded soldiers?—A. In Canada?

Q. Yes, if they should come back, or have come back?—A. We have ample accommodation for any active treatment cases when they come back. We have about 3,000 beds ready in Canada now for these active treatment cases, regarding which I have been attempting to tell you. We have ample accommodation for tubercular soldiers, of whom we have some seven hundred in our hospitals, and we have made arrangements for a number of beds to take care of almost any influx that may come."

Do you contradict that statement of Colonel Thompson's evidence in which he says they have ample accommodation for all returned soldiers in Canada requiring active treatment?—A. I am not acquainted with what arrangements they have made for active treatment cases in other districts.

Q. I refer now to page 58 of Colonel Thompson's evidence in which he was asked the following question:—

"Q. I am just talking about the convalescents that should come over, not the men who are so seriously injured that they cannot be moved. If these were [Col. F. W. Marlow.]

to come back now at the rate they have been coming would there be sufficient accommodation at the present time?—A. There would be for the active treatment cases and the tuberculars, but we might be short on convalescents, because they were being sent back very rapidly.

Q. Do you hope to have sufficient now?—A. Absolutely.

Then below on the same page:—

“Q. I want to be quite fair with you and the committee. I have a newspaper article here which apparently emanates from Dr. Marlow, but as to that I cannot say. However, the article says: ‘Thousands of disabled Canadian soldiers who are unfit for further service at the front, but who have sufficiently recovered from their wounds to permit of their return to Canada are being detained in Britain because the Military Hospitals Commission of Canada has failed to provide the necessary accommodation in the Dominion for the care of the wounded, and because adequate arrangements have not been made for the return of these men to civil life.’ I want you to make it clear to the committee to what extent that statement is true, because the public have a right to know the facts?—A. The statement is not at all true. We have arrangements on foot for the provision of 10,000 beds in Canada at this time. We have been in constant communication with Sir George Perley, and from time to time have been making preparations to furnish beds for these men when they return. Of course, you understand that a hospital is not like Jonah’s gourd, it does not grow up over night. It takes time to provide the necessary accommodation.

“Q. I understand. All I am trying to do is to ascertain what is true and what is not.—A. The answer is this: never at any time have we been short of beds for the men they sent from England.

“Q. You say that every man sent from England up to date has been taken care of?—A. Yes, he has been taken care of.”

Now, in the first place, Colonel Marlow, I suggest that statement is entirely at variance with the statement which you have made. I would like to know whether or not it is true that thousands of Canadian soldiers are being detained in England because the Military Hospitals Commission failed to provide the necessary accommodation for them. Do you know that as a fact?—A. With respect to that I may only draw your attention to the reports of the Medical Service overseas. One made by Colonel Bruce in which it was stated that there was a large number of men—

Q. Do you know that—is it of your own knowledge you make that statement, which is referred to in Col. Thompson’s evidence?—A. Certainly not, that is a newspaper report.

Q. And you are not responsible for that?—A. Certainly not.

Q. Do you know, of your own knowledge, now, that there are thousands of cases in Great Britain, active cases, that should come to Canada, but which cannot come because the Military Hospitals Commission cannot take care of them?—A. Pardon me, it is not possible for me to know of my own knowledge. I mentioned Colonel Bruce’s report I was going on to mention also the Babbie report, which states that there were, at that time, some thousands of men ready to be sent to Canada, but who could not be sent because there was not sufficient accommodation in Canada. That is the only knowledge I can have of conditions overseas.

Q. Dr. Thompson says that they are preparing to have accommodation in Canada to the extent of 10,000 beds. If that be so, would that, in your opinion, be sufficient?—A. I presume it would be, certainly.

Q. Then, do you know, that it has been the policy of the British Government to retain these men there, the active treatment cases until recently, when they have been sending more active treatment cases to Canada. That has been the policy of the British Government, has it not?—A. I presume so, yes.

[Col. F. W. Marlow.]

Q. So that, as far as the Military Hospitals Commission and the Army Medical Corps of Canada were concerned, they did not have the patients here to treat?—A. No, they did not, but they might have treated them if there had been accommodation to which the patients might have been sent.

Q. You have heard of Col. Thompson's statement that they had 3,000 beds at that time?—A. At what time?

Q. At the time he was before the Committee?—A. But had they that accommodation at the time the men were ready to be sent here?

Q. He says that at the time he gave his evidence there were 3,000 beds available, and there would be, in a very short time, 10,000 beds available.—A. He gave his evidence on February 22; the question of sending these 3,000 men home came up in November, 1916.

Q. Now, another question—you think the men suffer by being actively treated in England, instead of being sent to Canada for treatment?—A. In respect to their treatment, do you mean?

Q. Yes.—A. I do not suppose they do.

Q. As a matter of fact would they not get more efficient treatment over there?—A. In respect to treatment I will not say they actually suffer, but I will make this statement, that if these men were ready to be sent home, and were not sent home, either from lack of accommodation or from any other reason, these men are still on active service while they are retained in England, and until they arrive here and are finally disposed of they are on full pay and allowances. If they had been sent home it is possible that many of them may have been discharged either with or without pension as the case may be.

Q. Does it make any difference if the men are treated in England, or if they are treated here?—A. In some cases I should say it does.

Q. Why?—A. I think undoubtedly some of these men do progress more rapidly when nearer their homes.

Q. Why do you think so?—A. Because there is a very large psychic element in the diseases from which these men suffer.

Q. And you think that in many cases these men would recuperate more readily in a hospital in Canada than they would in a hospital in England?—A. In many cases, yes.

Q. Is that what you say with regard to the effect of these men being actively treated in England as compared with the effect of their treatment in Canada?—A. I may say further that I have come into contact with a great number of these men who have returned to Military District No. 2; our policy is when these men return to allow them a week or ten days' leave to go to their homes—

Q. But that is not the active treatment cases?—A. Perhaps not active treatment cases.

Q. Those would be convalescent cases where you give them leave?—A. I was going to say that we have not had many active treatment cases yet, but after they have spent their leave at home, they come back more contented and ready to go on with their treatment.

Q. My experience is that the men who have been treated in hospitals in England cannot speak too highly of the treatment they receive there; has not that been so in your experience?—A. I do not question that at all.

Q. Then it is no great hardship for some men to stay a little longer in the English hospitals, instead of coming to Canada?—A. No, sir, that may be so; but there is an aspect, a most important one to themselves and to this country also; this work is not merely one of medical attendance, it is one of restoring the men to a state of health where they will be able to earn a livelihood, or to reduce their disability, so that their pensions can be kept down. There is a large economic question involved.

Q. That comes down again to the question that a man progresses more rapidly in Canada than in England?—A. I would still maintain that a certain type of these cases would progress more rapidly if they were nearer their homes, where they could see their friends occasionally.

Q. That a man would be restored to health more rapidly if he were wounded? If he got a wooden leg, do you think the wound would heal more rapidly and that he would get along better?—A. I believe so, and I believe further that as far as the economic question is concerned, money would be saved by returning them as soon as possible to Canada, whether convalescent or active treatment cases.

By the Chairman:

In connection with this section 24, Colonel Potter has sent a memorandum of the 1st February, 1917, to the Adjutant-General in which, referring to that clause 24, he says:—

“The question of the establishment of more military hospitals to accommodate returned soldiers is one which is being dealt with by the Military Hospitals Commission, as the commission have assumed the responsibility of the care of all returned invalid soldiers. At the present time, the military hospital accommodation for troops actually on duty appears sufficient, and as the numbers of such troops will be expected to be growing less as units are sent overseas, the establishment of more military hospitals, under the Medical Services, such as in Military District No. 2, does not appear necessary at present.”

Do you concur in that?—A. I suppose that Colonel Potter had in mind at that time returned soldiers, and that they would be cared for by the Military Hospitals Commission, and not by the Army Medical Service. I fancy that if Colonel Potter thought that the Army Medical Service would have to look after the returned men he probably would have advocated something different with regard to military hospitals.

Q. He does. He says (reads):—

“If, however, the medical services are called upon to assist in caring for returned invalid soldiers, then there is necessity for immediate action. This has previously been reported upon by the A.D.G.M.S.”

Do you concur in that?—A. Yes.

By Mr. Ross (Middlesex):

Q. You were speaking of November, 1916, I presume, when you referred to the 3,000 soldiers being in England who might be returned to Canada. I have heard of that complaint in my own district, of men wanting to come back to Canada. Do you know, as a matter of fact, that the Militia Department prevented these men from coming back to Canada, on account of the lack of accommodation for their treatment here?—A. You said the “Militia Department?”

Q. Well, it might not be the Militia Department, but they were prevented in any case by some authority.—A. I have reason to believe that the Military Hospitals Commission did, to a considerable extent, control the rate at which the men were sent home.

Q. Why did they do so?—A. Do you want to know my reasons for saying so?

Q. Yes. Why did they control or limit it?—A. I might say that I was in close touch with the Hospitals Commission, following my report, and also with the Militia Department, and it was the general consensus of opinion that there was not sufficient accommodation to handle these men at the rate it had been suggested they should be sent home.

Q. Suggested by whom?—A. By the overseas authorities, I presume.

Q. And the authorities on this side said not to send them, because they had not accommodation?—A. I would not make that as a definite statement, but I think probably I could suggest where the information in that regard might be obtained.

[Col. F. W. Marlow.]

Q. Where? Because we want to know?—A. In answering, I would like it to be understood that I have been in very close touch with the Military Hospitals Commission, also the Militia Department, in respect of this whole subject, and in answer to that question I might suggest that if any definite information in regard to that matter is desired by the committee, that it might be well to ask for cables which passed between the Government and Sir George Perley with respect to the return of invalids during the month of November, 1916, when this problem was acute. I was in close touch with all the officials of the Hospitals Commission at this time, and was fully informed of the action that was being taken on the whole problem, and if the committee wish definite information on this matter, I stated that they might secure it by getting copies of the cablegrams which passed between Sir Robert Borden and Sir George Perley with respect to the return of those invalids.

By the Chairman:

Q. As to how many there were and how rapidly they should be brought back?—A. Yes.

The CHAIRMAN: Perhaps the Government could furnish that information.

Sir EDWARD KEMP: I could not speak for the Prime Minister. He has tremendous responsibility in this regard. You could cable Sir Robert Borden if you thought it was of sufficient importance.

Hon. Mr. MURPHY: Col. Marlow said these cables were sent by the Government to Sir George Perley—not necessarily by Sir Robert.

WITNESS: I merely state these matters because in the evidence given by Col. Thompson there are certain things with which my name is very closely connected, to which I take exception, and, as I have stated, I have been always in close touch with the officials of the Hospitals Commission, ever since the inception of this problem, and I am acquainted with the nature—not the exact nature, but with the probable nature—of the communications that passed with respect to the rate at which these men should be sent home, as to whether the accommodation existed or not. I cannot say what the character of the information is, because I do not know definitely myself, but I would suggest it might be well, if you want information on that subject, to refer to those communications.

By Hon. Mr. Murphy:

Q. Not necessarily coming from Sir Robert Borden personally, but from the Government?—A. I mean communications that passed on the subject of returning these men, following the report that there were some thousands of men to be sent home.

Q. Not necessarily from Sir Robert?—A. No; communications that will, I think, supply the information.

By Mr. Middlebro:

Q. You have said: "Not necessarily from Sir Robert"?—A. I mean the official channel of communication.

Q. Anyway they were sent to Sir George Perley?—A. I should think the official way would be from Sir Robert Borden to Sir George Perley.

By Hon. Mr. Murphy:

Q. And if that is not the way?—A. It may be from the Chairman of the Hospitals Commission; I mean communications with respect to that particular subject.

By the Chairman:

Q. In other words, you believe that communications passed between England and Canada, intimating the rate at which men should be sent back here, and that that [Col. F. W. Marlow.]

rate was governed by the amount of accommodation that was ready for them, and your inference is—?—A. I will change the wording of that and say I have reason to believe that communications passed with respect to the rate at which the men should be sent home.

Q. And you believe that if there had been ample accommodation here they would have been sent home in larger numbers than they have been?—A. Yes, I believe they would have been.

By Mr. Middlebro:

Q. Do you believe the communications resulted because of the change of policy of Great Britain to send active cases home to Canada to be treated, instead of treating the active cases in Great Britain?—A. Possibly so, but I presume the overseas authorities had always been in touch with the authorities here, that communications have been passing from time to time with respect to this subject all along, but at this particular time that has been mentioned, it was reported that the overseas policy would likely be changed in that respect, that the men would be sent home in greater numbers, but the source of the report was actually the report on the medical services overseas, and, as I have stated, the Babbie report stated that they were not sent home because it was understood there was lack of accommodation for them.

Q. If the Government over there changed their policy so as to send over three or four times as many as they have sent, would you attribute any neglect to the Hospitals Commission, after a radical change of that kind?—A. I would not attribute any neglect, but I would venture as my opinion that the accommodation provided by the Hospitals Commission has always been a little behind rather than anticipating the actual needs; I think it has been somewhat deficient.

Q. That is your opinion; on the other hand, we have the evidence of Dr. Thompson?—A. Yes, but you understand this evidence has been given on February 22; after there has been a great rush to secure accommodation.

Q. Because of the change of policy of Great Britain, and, as a matter of fact, you know those cases have not been sent out as they would have been, because of the submarine menace? (No answer.)

The CHAIRMAN: We are going to have Mr. Scammell before us. This matter was in the hands of the Hospitals Commission, and probably we can get this information from Mr. Scammell.

Hon. Mr. MURPHY: If we get those cables, we would not require to examine any further witnesses.

The CHAIRMAN: All we can do is to ask the Government if they will be good enough to furnish us with such cables as may have been sent.

WITNESS: I am merely suggesting where you can get the information.

Hon. Mr. MURPHY: That request will be made.

The CHAIRMAN: Yes.

By Hon. Mr. Murphy:

Q. You have just referred to some portions of Colonel Thompson's evidence to which you took exception; would you indicate what these are?—A. I take exception to this statement where he says: "This newspaper report apparently emanates from Dr. Marlow."

Q. I do not think that was Dr. Thompson's statement. I think that was a question that was asked Dr. Thompson; that was in the question?—A. I take exception to that being put in that way.

Q. What else do you take exception to?—A. Further up on page 58, Colonel Thompson states, in reply to a question "In your work you are thrown in contact with a Colonel Marlow? You have read the statements he has made"? And Dr. Thompson answers "I know him, I have read some of his statements." I take exception to both the question and the answer.

By the Chairman:

Q. What is wrong with the question?—A. The question is "You have read the statements he has made"? Where are those statements I have made? Colonel Thompson says "I have read some of his statements". That is to say, they have suggested that I was responsible for all these newspaper reports.

Q. And that is not the fact?—A. No, that is not the fact.

By Hon. Mr. Murphy:

Q. Is there anything else you take exception to?—A. The question is "You have read the statements he has made"? And the answer "I know him; I have read some of his statements". I take exception to that.

Q. Is there anything else to which you take exception?—A. Well, I am sorry to say that I did not get this copy until just before I began to give evidence.

Q. You can read it over during adjournment?—A. Yes.

Witness retired.

Committee adjourned.

The Committee resumed at 2.30 p.m.

The examination of Colonel F. W. MARLOW resumed.

THE CHAIRMAN: Is there anything further the Committee want to ask Colonel Marlow with reference to Recommendation No. 24.

THE WITNESS: Pardon me. I think when we left off at noon that some one was asking me with regard to exceptions I might have to statements made in the evidence of Colonel Thompson. I have had an opportunity of looking over his evidence a little bit further, and I would like to draw your attention to pages 59 and 61 to the questions put by Brigadier-General Mason.

By the Chairman:

Q. If you have any exception to take to the evidence of Colonel Thompson where it relates to you, you are certainly at liberty to do it?—A. These questions and answers are with regard to the conditions in District No. 2, the relation between the Army Medical Corps and the Hospitals Commission.

By Hon. Mr. Murphy:

Q. What have you to say about that?—A. Brigadier-General Mason asked (reads):—

Q. Why was the distinction made in the case of the Toronto District? Other districts were furnished with medical officers by the Hospitals Commission, Colonel Marlow himself speaks of it. The statement is made that the Army Medical Corps furnishes officers for the Hospitals Commission?—A. Yes.

Q. Except in the case of the 2nd District?—A. I did not make myself clear on that point. Generally speaking they do furnish the officers, but in some instances they did not.

Q. Not in No. 2 District. They did not second the Doctors that were attending those hospitals, I wonder why?—A. The answer we got was that they were needed for other duties.

On p. 61, Brig.-Gen. Mason goes on:

Q. While on the subject of Colonel Marlow's report, a difficulty has arisen partly, I think from what Colonel Thompson has said, from the fact that the medical officers in charge of the hospitals, the convalescent hospitals, have not been seconded, that they are still under the jurisdiction of Colonel Marlow, while those that are seconded are under your jurisdiction?—A. If they were seconded they are under my jurisdiction.

Q. But those in the Toronto hospitals are not seconded?—A. The man in charge of the hospitals up there, Major Munn, has never been seconded to the Hospitals Commission.

Q. That is the cause of the difficulty that Colonel Marlow claims authority over him, is that it?—A. I do not understand what it is that Colonel Marlow complains of.

Those two sets of questions and answers would appear to suggest to me that it might have been in the mind of Colonel Thompson that there was some obstruction put in the way of seconding the officers in Military District No. 2. I would like it distinctly understood that such was not the case, and that we did everything in our power at all times to further the work of the Hospitals Commission, realizing that they were ultimately going to take over the medical services. And in reply to this particular point, so far as I am aware at the present time—Colonel Potter might be able to correct me—only one officer in Military District No. 2 has been seconded to the Commission Command, that is an officer at Hamilton. I remember distinctly that a request came, by telegram I think from Ottawa, from Colonel Potter suggesting the names of certain medical officers who were detailed by me at the convalescent hospitals, asking if they could be spared to be seconded to the Hospitals Commission Command. A reply was sent to the effect that, in respect to certain of those who were on the list, we could spare them. We took exception to only two cases, one in the case of a man in the A.M.C., C.E.F. who had been for some time working in the convalescent hospitals.

By the Chairman:

Q. What was his name?—A. Captain Ley, he has since gone overseas. We took exception to his case, he was on the C.E.F. overseas unit. We also withheld information regarding this doctor at Hamilton, as at that time we did not know whether he was available for overseas service or not. He has since been operated upon and is not fit for overseas, and he has been seconded to the Commission Command. The method by which this was done, I understand, was that Colonel Thompson, in communication with Major Munn, my medical officer in charge of the convalescent hospitals, arranged a list, and I believe that list was taken up with Colonel Potter by Colonel Thompson, and then a communication was sent to the district asking if these men could be spared. As I say, in any instance where such a request has come forward we have offered to spare the men to the Commission Command with those two exceptions, which were not exceptions, but which were only held up pending further information regarding them.

Q. Is there anything further, gentlemen, regarding that matter? Please go on to Recommendation No. 25 then, which is as follows:—

Close co-operation between the Military Hospitals Commission Command and the Militia Department and particularly the Army Medical Corps is urgently required, as the problem of returning soldiers is tremendous.

Have you covered the recommendation in what you have already said, or do you wish to say anything more?—A. Simply to draw attention to the reason for such a recommendation. I found that in every district in Canada the administrative medical officers were experiencing the same trouble as I was, but perhaps not to so great a degree, because I had a greater number of invalids than the others had. As I have already said in my evidence, there appeared to be a very distinct attempt on the part of the Hospitals Commission to entirely divorce themselves from the Militia Department, and that was one of the things that, to my mind, gave rise to a very considerable amount of trouble. It was something to me that seemed impossible. I think it was a lack of co-operation between the Commission Command and the Militia Department that gave rise to a very considerable amount of trouble. For instance, I might say this, that in respect to the Command, we were notified in Military District No. 2 from Headquarters that the Military Hospitals Commission Command would take over the whole problem by arrangement between the officers under the Commission and the General Officer Commanding the District. In spite of that notification the Hospitals Commission came into our District and began taking over the work without in any way consulting further the Commanding Officer of the District, and even up to the present time the Commanding Officer of the District scarcely knows what his position in the matter is. A recent communication was sent from Headquarters to elucidate the condition. Matters went on for several months without the Officer Commanding that District being informed that the Commission was assuming this work. The Officer Commanding the District also tried to find out what his responsibility was in regard to providing the Medical Services for the Commission Command, and in spite of repeated letters, or following up letters, to Headquarters, that information was not sent until very recently a letter came, or at least a telegram, suggesting some compromise in the work between the Hospitals Commission and the Army Medical Corps, by which the men would be under the Hospitals Commission Command up until the time that their treatment was completed and they were ready for a Medical Board. Then it was proposed to turn them back to the Army Medical Corps, and make that Corps responsible for the Boards and the official reports which would determine the disposition of the men. That apparently was the compromise arrived at by the Militia Department and the Hospitals Commission, and which left, of course, a divided responsibility in dealing with these men so far as the Medical Services were concerned.

By Mr. Ross (Middlesex):

Q. The Army Medical Service also have to see that these men get home safely?—

A. I presume the Army Medical Corps takes charge of them until they reach the discharge depot. It was the intention of the Hospitals Commission to take over the whole work, but something occurred, I fancy in December, whereby the Militia Department refused to second the medical officers, which prevented the Military Hospitals Commission Command establishing the Medical Services in accordance with the Order in Council. It was generally felt by medical officers that the medical work should have been retained in the Army Medical Corps, and that the Corps should have been responsible for it. But the Commission had so delayed taking over the work, and it had grown to so great an extent and was being carried on by officers of the Army Medical Corps that, I believe, it was the general feeling in the Militia Department that, as that was the case, the Army Medical Corps should go on and do the medical work in connection with the whole problem.

By the Chairman:

Q. That is practically your recommendation in Clause 26.

(Reads):

“26. Should the problem be extended to the extent of having to provide large military hospitals to care for invalids requiring active treatment, and not yet in a state of convalescence, it is urged that this is a duty for which the Army Medical Corps should be entirely responsible. Pending further information on the future policy of the Canadian Medical Service Overseas, further recommendations are withheld.”

A. Not exactly, sir.

Q. But you recommend here that “the Army Medical Corps should be entirely responsible”?—A. That was not intended. I recognized the force of the Order in Council, and that was not intended to apply to convalescents. The Military Hospitals Commission, I take it, were appointed in the first place to look after convalescents, and the fact of its being suggested by the overseas authorities that they were sending men home in a stage where they required active treatment, it might have been a change of policy which did not necessarily affect the Hospitals Commission.

[Col. F. W. Marlow.]

Q. When did you first hear of that change of policy?—A. Only through the reports from the Overseas Services.

Q. In the fall of 1916?—A. The fall of 1916, I presume it was in November—no, October.

Q. Prior to that time it was not intended to look after active cases in Canada?—A. They were only sending back convalescents, and the Hospitals Commission was created particularly to deal with men in this stage, and I had talked the matter over with Col. Thompson and also with Col. Sharples in Toronto, discussing the further arrangements in case men were sent home requiring active treatment, and it was the opinion of both of these officers at that time that they should go to the Army Medical Corps.

Q. Up to the fall of 1916 the only medical problem you had was the problem of convalescents, and that had been assumed by the Military Hospitals Commission, and when you heard that your problem was likely to be increased by the addition of active cases, you contended that they should come under the Army Medical Corps and not under the Hospitals Commission?—A. Certainly. The question immediately arose: Who is to look after the extended work; and I understand the matter was taken up by the Militia Department, and a decision was not definitely arrived at. At the same time the Commission went ahead making their arrangements to take over the whole work without further consultation with the Militia Department.

Q. In the Journal-Press of February 27, there appeared an interview—I take it, an official interview—with the Minister of Militia, the first two paragraphs of which read as follows:—

“It is intended to create a new office in connection with the C.A.M.C. to be known as the Director of Medical Service invalids,” said Sir Edward Kemp, Minister of Militia last evening. The officer who will be selected to fill this responsible post will have full responsibility in dealing with and administering medical and surgical work in connection with returned soldiers, and his activities will be directed from Ottawa. It will be his duty to strengthen the personnel of the Canadian Army Medical Corps sufficiently to meet all the necessities of the case, by enlisting those experienced doctors who are willing to volunteer for this service.

“In the meantime, and until arrangements are completed, the work is being carried on by the Military Hospitals Commission in conjunction with and under the advice of the medical officers of the C.A.M.C., Department of Militia and Defence.”

Is that action in accordance with the recommendation that you have been making?—A. Well, sir, such a recommendation is not contained in my report, except as in paragraph 26 I have urged that that was a duty for which the Army Medical Corps should be entirely responsible; and I may say that ever since this problem became a problem I have always contended that there should never have been any question as to this responsibility. The Army Medical Corps has been in existence for seventeen years, and looks after the work in Canada, and in England, and why should it be deprived of the work when the men come back. I have always maintained that the work should have been kept under the Army Medical Corps.

Q. Your contention would be then that there was really no necessity for the creation of the Hospitals Commission at all?—A. Under certain conditions. So far as that goes, sir, I would refer you to pages 17, 18 and 19 of my report.

Q. What do you recommend in pages 17, 18 and 19 of your report?—A. I simply discuss the matter there and state at page 17 (reads):

“As all changes and dispositions of invalided soldiers depend upon the recommendations of medical officers or medical boards, the problem of dealing with returned invalided soldiers is very largely a medical one.”

I would like to impress upon the Committee just here that this problem has been treated to a very large extent as a civilian and not a medical problem, and I think that is where a great deal of the difficulty has arisen. Then I have drawn attention to the appointment of Voluntary Aid Committees by the Militia Department in the Military Districts to assist the local military authorities in dealing with the men returning to their districts, and I have said such an arrangement would have worked admirably as a whole. I still maintain that had that arrangement proceeded—for instance in Military District No. 2, where we had a strong Voluntary Aid Committee who had signified their willingness to co-operate with us in every way—I still maintain that had that part of the Militia Department been left with its own problem it would have met all the conditions quite satisfactorily.

Q. Do you desire to have pages 17, 18 and 19 of your report placed on record?—A. I would like to submit pages 17, 18 and 19 as evidence.

Q. That is, you would like pages 17, 18 and 19 of your report, where it deals with the disposition and treatment of invalided soldiers, to be added to your evidence?

—A. Yes. They are to the following effect:—

“DISPOSITION AND TREATMENT OF INVALID SOLDIERS.

As all changes in the disposition of invalided soldiers depend upon the recommendation of medical officers or medical boards, the problem of dealing with returned invalided soldiers is very largely a medical one.

It was first provided by the Honourable the Minister of Militia, that a Voluntary Aid Committee appointed by him in each military district, should assist the local military authorities in dealing with the men returning to their districts. Such an arrangement would have worked admirably had it not been for the incomplete state of organization of the medical service, as a whole.

As it was, the problem appeared to be such a large one that the appointment of the Military Hospitals Commission with control over the whole matter was brought about. It is not clear whether it was intended in the Order in Council creating the Commission that it should relieve the Army Medical Corps of the medical side of the problem. Apparently it was not, as the original commission was constituted by laymen with the exception of Dr. Walker, St. John, N.B., and the acting Director-General of Medical Services.

A year went by and the Commission learned a lot about the medical side of the problem, and made some progress in the vocational and economic aspects. Then thinking that the Militia Department was not capable, while devoting so much time to recruiting and training men, of efficiently looking after the invalids, the commission secured another Order in Council creating the Military Hospitals Commission Command in order that they might take entire charge of the problem and so exercise all the powers conferred upon them by the original Order in Council. Provision was made for assuming control of the medical side of the work, a medical superintendent, in the person of Dr. Thompson, M.P., with the rank of Lieut.-Colonel, was appointed, and the command was given expeditionary force standing, with authority to employ civilian medical practitioners, or medical officers on being seconded to their command and at rates of pay mutually arranged as the occasion seems to demand. Previous to this no serious attempt was made to bring the Army Medical Corps up to the standard of organization to meet the requirements, as the problem developed.

Their organization is progressing and in a very short time they expect to be able to take over the whole of the medical work, and so this semi-military organization will relieve the Army Medical Corps of the greatest military medical problem with which it has ever been confronted.

To meet the requirements of this important work in Military District No. 2, in February, 1916, a casualty department was organized at District Headquarters. This combined the administrative, medical, pay and record side of the work and proved to be a very efficient method of dealing with it. Had a similar arrangement been put into effect in other districts it would scarcely have appeared necessary for the Military Hospitals Commission to so completely separate themselves from the Militia Department.

It seems obvious, then, that the medical service was regarded as being incapable of dealing with this problem which should have been its own. As it now is much duplication of "machinery" will be necessary and much expense will be added to the government to maintain a separate and distinct organization to carry on work which should ordinarily have been performed by the Militia Department had the medical service demonstrated its capability of properly preparing the soldiers' disposition for the administrative authorities to take the necessary action."

I would like, sir, to draw your particular attention to the first complete paragraph on page 19. But previous to that the preceding paragraph at the bottom of page 18 says, referring to the Hospitals Commission Command (reads):—

"Their organization is progressing, and in a very short time they expect to be able to take over the whole of the medical work, and so this semi-military organization will relieve the Army Medical Corps of the greatest military medical problem with which it has ever been confronted."

Then in the next paragraph on page 19 of my report I say (reads):—

"To meet the requirements of this important work, in Military District No. 2, in February, 1916, a casualty department was organized at District Headquarters. This combined the administrative medical, pay and record side of the work, and proved to be a very efficient method of dealing with it. Had a similar arrangement been put into effect in other districts it would scarcely have appeared necessary for the Military Hospitals Commission to so completely separate themselves from the Militia Department."

I may say, sir, that that is the organization on which the Military Commission Command is practically built up. We had formed this casualty department in our district in February, 1916, to carry on this work. It was simply a sub-department, responsible to the officer in charge of administration, and was very satisfactory in carrying on the work. The latter part of the last paragraph quoted from, I would ask to have eliminated from the evidence—that is, that in Ontario administration and discipline was much handicapped by the delay in starting vocational training. The delay in starting vocational training did handicap the work to a considerable extent because the training was not begun. That is to say, no vocational training was started in Ontario until October, 1916.

By Mr. Ross (Middlesex):

Q. On account of the constitutional or technical objections?—A. On account of the difficulty of the province coming to an agreement with the Commission in respect to any form of education. That is to say, it took them a year to actually come to an agreement whereby, as Mr. Kidner stated, the Ontario Government provides the education and the Hospitals Commission pays for it.

By Mr. Middlebro:

Q. Was Ontario the only province that took that stand?—A. Yes. Then the last paragraph on page 19 of my report says (reads):—

"It seems obvious, then, that the medical service was regarded as being incapable of dealing with this problem which should have been its own. As it now is, much duplication of "machinery" would be necessary, and much expense will be added to the Government to maintain a separate and distinct organization to carry on work which should ordinarily have been performed by the Militia Department had the Medical Service demonstrated its capability of properly preparing the soldiers' disposition for the administrative authorities to take the necessary action."

Q. It comes down to this, then: You thought that the medical work now performed by the Military Hospitals Commission could better have been administered by the Army Medical Corps?—A. I would like to state again that this problem has been dealt with as a lay and not as a medical problem—

Q. I want to get your answer in evidence: is it your opinion now that the medical end of the work at present performed by the Military Hospitals Commission could have been better administered by the Army Medical Corps?—A. I would say, without any qualification or hesitation, yes; and I may add that the reason things are not working smoothly is because of the lack of having the responsibility fixed. Things have been simply going on, there has been dual authority, and there has been no fixation of the authority over this very important matter, and to me, at the end of two and one half years, to think we are still wondering who is to be responsible for the medical service in respect to invalids, does not seem just what it ought to be.

Q. There is no doubt as to who has been responsible since the Military Hospitals Commission has been in existence, but there does seem to be some doubt as to who should be responsible?—A. Of course we recognize the force of the Order in Council, and in our District after establishing this casualty unit and carrying it on as such, we were prepared to hand that unit over to the Hospitals Commission at any time they were ready to take control. It was completely organized, and it is being carried on at the present time as a unit of the Hospitals Commission Command without any change whatever, except that Major Wilson was chosen Commanding Officer of the Unit. With that exception it is still being carried on in exactly the same way that it was carried on under the Militia Department.

Q. Is it true that the efficiency of the Army Medical Corps has been decreased by reason of the number of men who have volunteered and gone overseas?—A. Of course the Army Medical Corps as it existed at the outbreak of the war, had a comparatively limited number of officers on its list. The majority of the officers who were attached to units of that corps proceeded overseas, and those who did not are practically all employed on duty in Canada; but since that time a very great number, I should judge upwards of 2,000 men, including many of the best medical practitioners throughout Canada, have been added to the Militia list.

Q. I think one of the complaints you make in your report is that the Army Medical Corps is not as efficient as it would have been, had not such a number of its officers gone overseas, and that they should have been kept at home?—A. No, I do not think I made that statement.

Q. My recollection is that you do; in fact you go so far as to recommend, I think, that some of them be brought back again?—A. That is in respect to the officers of the permanent Army Medical Corps. That is where I deal with the lack of permanency. I deal with the question of obtaining stability and permanency because of the difficulty of getting medical officers to serve on the medical staffs. For instance, there is very little inducement for a man to leave his practice to go into an administrative office to serve at a rate of pay of probably $3.75 a day, or very little in excess of that. It is extremely difficult to get men to come in at the present rates of pay because they have no standing in the Expeditionary Force in any way.

Q. That is one of the reasons why the Army Medical Corps is not as efficient as it should be, they are not properly paid. On the other hand, the Military Hospitals Commission has power to pay larger salaries?—A. That is quite true, but that is another thing which upset our organization. As soon as the Commission went into different parts of the country and started to pay larger salaries, it caused us greater difficulties than we had before.

Q. I am not saying who is to blame for this, but for that reason the Army Medical Corps is not as efficient as it should have been?—A. I will not admit that it was merely a question of pay so far as any district in Canada is concerned.

Q. Well, it was one of the reasons?—A. What I say is that it is very difficult under the present rates of pay to get permanent staffs, and the reason I suggested this recommendation regarding the possibility of returning permanent officers from overseas is, that permanent officers are officers on permanent duty, they are getting a certain rate of pay on the permanent force, their position is not the same as that of an officer of the active militia. For instance, the permanent officers who are overseas, who were the administrative officers of the various districts in Canada, are still the administrative officers of those districts; their position is being held open for them by an acting administrative officer of the active militia who has given up his medical practice to carry on that work temporarily.

By Mr. Ross (Middlesex):

Q. And the acting man will have to go into civil life on the other officer's return?—A. He will have to revert to civil life as soon as the other man is spared from overseas.

Q. And he only receives active militia pay while on militia duty?—A. He only gets militia pay, he has no standing whatever. He goes in to help the Canadian Expeditionary Force but has no standing in respect to that at all. He is engaged in doing active militia duty, but doing it in Canada.

By Mr. Middlebro:

Q. Do all these things militate against the efficiency of the Army Medical Corps?—A. No doubt in the early stages they did.

Q. That is the point I want to make: There is no impediment as to pay through the Military Hospitals Commission?—A. I would say it is not altogether a matter of pay, although I do claim that a good many medical officers could not possibly afford to give up their time and practice to go in and do military work at the present rates of militia pay, and with no expeditionary force standing, simply to carry on for expeditionary force men. They have no relation to the expeditionary force except that they are permitted to carry on this work. Hence, it is difficult to secure their services. But the Hospitals Commission can give any rates of pay—it has no established rates. Look what it has done in one particular place I know of. There it has gone in and taken a civilian doctor beyond the military age, and paid him, for carrying on work respecting returned soldiers, twice as much salary as the A.D.M.S. was getting.

By Hon. Mr. Murphy:

Q. The Military Hospitals Commission has done that?—A. Yes.

[Col. F. W. Marlow.]

By Mr. Middlebro:

Q. If the increases in salary which you recommend are given to the Army Medical Corps for doing work now performed by the Military Hospitals Commission, do you think the former would perform that work as efficiently as it has been done by the latter?—A. I don't think there is any doubt about that at all. You must understand the Military Hospitals Commission have not been doing all of that work.

Q. Is that not along the line you have recommended?—A. I have recommended a general increase of pay for the Medical Service.

Q. Also that the work of the Military Hospitals Commission should be taken over by the Army Medical Corps?—A. Certainly.

Q. Is not that what has been done by the Minister?—A. That, of course, is only twenty-four hours old. So far as that particular article is concerned, I do not know whether I am at liberty to submit without objection a further recommendation which I made to the Minister. It was made under cover of a personal letter which the Minister later on asked me if he might use, and the confidential character of it was released. I do not suppose he would object to its being used here.

The CHAIRMAN: It might be placed on the record if the Minister has no objection, but, being of a confidential character, the consent of both parties would be necessary.

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. They are only recommendations which you made to the Minister?—A. I submitted it at the Minister's request, following a conference with him. I may say this followed an attempt of the Military Hospitals Commission and the Militia Department to get together, with the result that the Militia Department refused, as I take it, to second the Medical Officers to the Commission Command; this made it impossible for the Commission to establish a Medical Service of their own without an Order in Council giving them authority. It placed them in the position that they could not get any Medical Officer returning from overseas or on duty in Canada, and they would have to create a medical service of their own, entirely apart from the Medical Service. So, realizing that difficulty, the Minister asked me to submit recommendations as to how I thought the difficulty could best be overcome.

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. Have those recommendations been followed?

The CHAIRMAN: I think that as those are recommendations that have been exchanged between the Minister and Colonel Marlow, they should not be put into the records until the Minister has given his consent, although I do not suppose the Minister will have any objection.

By Mr. Ross (Middlesex):

Q. The Minister asked for those recommendations?—A. They were submitted first to the Minister under cover of a private letter, but, a week later, the Minister asked me if I had any objection to his using them. I stated that I had not, and, feeling that the confidential character of the recommendations had been released, I then informed Colonel Thompson what my recommendations were, in order that they might endeavour to find a common ground upon which the Military Hospitals Commission and the Militia Department might meet.

By Hon. Mr. Murphy:

Q. What are the dates of those communications?—A. Dec. 28th, 1916.

Q. Were they both of the same date?—A. This is the memorandum under cover of the letter of December 28th.

By Mr. Ross (Middlesex):

Q. Why did the Militia Department refuse to allow the officers of the Army Medical Corps to be seconded to the Military Hospitals Commission? What was their [Col. F. W. Marlow.]

object in refusing that reasonable request when they were both working towards the same end?—A. I suppose it is a matter of ultimate policy. It simply meant that the Army Medical Corps was being relieved of one of the biggest medical problems by which the country has ever been confronted. That very thing was, beyond a doubt, strangling the Army Medical Corps.

Q. They were strangling their own child?—A. Their own child that had been growing up for the past seventeen years and that has provided all the Medical Service and personnel for the Medical Service Overseas, and they were going to strangle the remainder of it in Canada.

By Mr. Sutherland:

Q. You did not wish to strengthen the Military Hospitals Commission by having these men attached to it?—A. As far as I am concerned, we had in every way organized the casualty service in our district and were ready at any moment to turn it over to them.

Q. Have you had any complaint from the returned soldiers as to the lack of proper attention on the part of the Military Hospitals Commission?—A. No, I do not think so; I think that ordinarily the men are getting good attention and good service.

By Mr. Middlebro:

Q. It is the divided authority that you object to?—A. Of course.

By Mr. Sutherland:

Q. I have a letter here from the Secretary of the Oxford Returned Soldiers Association, in which he says:—

"I may state that as far as the Military Hospitals Commission is concerned, that I have never heard one returned man complain of his treatment while under the care of that body. I have taken up several matters with them and have always received prompt attention and consideration."

Is that, do you suppose, the general opinion of the returned soldiers, with regard to the working conditions under the Commission?—A. I suppose so, but you must remember that the Medical Service is being carried on by the Army Medical Corps, there has never been a period when the Military Hospitals Commission has assumed responsibility for the Medical Service.

By Mr. Middlebro:

Q. Are you treating patients in the Commission Hospitals?—A. We have been treating them, they are treated by men who are detailed by the Army Medical Officer, that is, in my own district, and I think in many districts in Canada the Medical Officers on duty are detailed there by the Administrative Medical Officer of the District; they are not definitely appointed, because we have been notified by headquarters, months and months ago, not to make any definite appointments for these hospitals, as the Commission would "take over." They are applying to me now for men and I cannot give them a definite appointment because I have not any definite authority to make the appointment by reason of the divided responsibility.

By Mr. Ross (Middlesex):

Q. You say in your report:

"Provision was made for assuming control of the medical side of the work, a medical superintendent, in the person of Dr. Thompson, M.P., with the rank of Lieut.-Colonel, was appointed, and the command was given expeditionary forces standing, with authority to employ civilian medical practitioners, or medical officers on being seconded to their command and at rates of pay mutually arranged as the occasion seems to demand."

[Col. F. W. Marlow.]

Does that mean that there are more medical men employed than necessary?—A. I will not say that.

Q. Then what does it mean? Are these civilian medical practitioners in the Hospital getting larger pay than would have been received by the officers of the Army Medical Corps had they been conducting that work?—A. In some instances, yes.

Q. What is the general rule?—A. I may say that when I made my inspection in some districts they had civilian Boards selected by the Commission; I think in Military District No. 1 at London, they had a Medical Board which was entirely composed of civilians, and in Military District, No. 11, Victoria, they had a Board which was entirely composed of civilians.

Q. What about the rates of pay?—A. I cannot say what the rates of pay were for the Boards.

Q. You cited an instance a little while ago?—A. That was one instance in one district only. The returned soldier work was taken out of the hands of the A.D.M.S. and placed in the hands of a civilian doctor, above the military age, and I understand he was to be given a rate of pay probably twice as much as the A.D.M.S. was drawing, and somewhat more, as a matter of fact, than even I was drawing myself.

Q. Was it unusually onerous work that he was given?—A. Nothing special; I may say it was a district where there were not yet a great many invalids home.

By the Chairman:

Q. What district was it?—A. It was District No. 11, at Victoria.

By Hon. Mr. Murphy:

Q. In the extract that Mr. Ross has just read, the words occur, "At rates of pay mutually arranged as the occasion seems to demand." It seems to read as if, while there is a fixed rate of pay in the case of the Army Medical Corps, that is not the case with regard to the Military Hospitals Commission?—A. There is an Order in Council which gives them authority to establish rates of pay. I know they have not adhered to the military rates of pay, and that when they have employed a man they have generally given him a salary in excess of what he would have drawn at the military rate.

Q. In no case that you know of have they paid him less?—A. Not that I am aware of.

By Mr. Middlebro:

Q. In regard to the question of payment of a larger salary to men employed by the Military Hospitals Commission, you are now recommending that the other fellows should be paid larger salaries too?—A. But I recommend that it should be done on an equitable basis, that it will simply be an increase in the pay of their rank.

By Hon. Mr. Murphy:

Q. Not in the case of the individual?—A. No, it is merely a matter of increasing the pay of their rank.

By Mr. Middlebro:

Q. But the result is that it will give the army medical man larger pay than he received before?—A. That recommendation is not made along the line of what the Military Hospitals Commission is doing at all. That recommendation for increase of pay was made in favour of all medical officers proceeding overseas or working in Canada.

Q. It was for more pay for the medical men, and you say that he deserves the increase?—A. I do; it has been done in the case of medical officers who hold the rank of lieutenant. They are getting now the pay of the rank of captain.

Q. Would not these men, if they got the increase of pay, be on a par with the men under the Military Hospitals Commission?—A. I cannot say that, because the Military Hospitals Commission have not any definite rates of pay.

[Col. F. W. Marlow.]

By the Chairman:

Q. The difference is that the Army Medical Corps pays according to rank; you may have two doctors, both of whom are captains, but one is a much better doctor than the other, yet they would both get the same pay. With the commission they pay men according to their ability and professional standing?—A. I may say this, that the medical officer detailed to this work by myself, and who carried on the Casualty Department, and is now carrying on that work, is paid by the commission, and his rate of pay is greater than mine, as Assistant Director of the Medical Services for the district.

By Mr. Ross (Middlesex):

Q. That he is under you, and is paid more than you are?—A. He is paid more money, but he is certainly worth it.

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. Do you think that with a divided responsibility and authority the soldier is as well looked after as he would be provided the work was placed under one authority?—A. I may say that it is a much more difficult thing to look after a soldier with divided authority, and if the soldier is being looked after well, it would certainly be easier in the matter of administration to have the responsibility absolutely fixed.

Q. But would the soldier be looked after better?—A. I think certainly the whole system would be improved, and the soldier ought to benefit by the general improvement of the system.

By Mr. Ross (Middlesex):

Q. More economically?—A. More economically, certainly, I think so. I felt so strongly that there should be no division of responsibility that I was forced to take drastic action with respect to my own position.

By Mr. Sutherland:

Q. Yet you complain the rate of pay is not sufficient to secure men who are eminent in the profession—I mean the rate of pay in the Army Medical Corps?—A. I claim there should be a general increase of pay for these men for the reason set forth in my report.

Q. And the Hospital Commission can secure the services of men eminent in the profession not connected with the Militia: they are doing that, are they not?—A. The difficulty about doing it under present arrangements is that there are so many of the best men in Canada who are officers of the Army Medical Corps, that they cannot employ them in their military capacity unless they resign. They have to resign from the Army Medical Corps before they can be appointed under the arrangement.

Q. Yet there are lots of men eminent in the profession who are not in the Army Medical Corps?—A. I suppose there are a good many, but in Toronto the majority of the best men are in the Army Medical Corps and they have come on since the war began.

By Hon. Mr. Murphy:

Q. There are frequent references to the officers. Have you anything to say about their status, or their treatment or accommodation for officers who may be wounded, or anything on that score?—A. Well, I may say that there has been a good deal of difficulty in respect of the officers. In the Order in Council creating the commission I think officers are named with non-commissioned officers and men, but up to the present time the Hospitals Commission have made practically no arrangement for officers.

[Col. F. W. Marlow.]

By the Chairman:

Q. That is soldiers returned, wounded, from the front?—A. Yes, but I may say in respect of that, that officers have been returned under different conditions, generally speaking: The officers have seldom been invalided back the way non-commissioned officers and men are, but they have simply been given leave to return to Canada for further medical treatment, and as they are only home on leave, whether it be sick leave, or something else, they do not come under the Hospitals Commission, but rather they come under the administrative officers of the various districts, so that it has been necessary for the Army Medical Corps, or the administrative medical officers of the district to make the necessary arrangements for the officers: so that that has given rise to a considerable amount of difficulty, and it so happens that adequate arrangements for officers have not been made either by the Army Medical Corps, or by the Hospital Commission.

By Mr. Ross (Middlesex):

Q. They look after themselves, apparently?—A. Well, they are not able to look after themselves, in this way: that officers home on sick leave are only granted a subsistence allowance of $1.50 a day, which is absolutely insufficient, if they require hospital treatment, to pay for their hospital maintenance and medical attendance.

Q. Does their pay not continue?—A. Their pay continues, but I mean their subsistence allowance. In England, for instance, while they are in the hospital their pay continues, and they are not subjected to any expense in the way of hospital maintenance, but when they return here they frequently are, because of the lack of adequate provision for them. It is true, if there is no room in the Military Hospital, or a Military Hospital is not available, and an officer is sent to the civil hospital, it is true we can probably get his hospital maintenance authorized, and special nursing may be authorized if required. If he is in the hospital at Government expense, he will not draw his subsistence allowance at that time. We can probably get the accounts authorized, but every case has to be considered by itself, and it means a whole lot of correspondence: accounts are frequently sent on and sent back; that is to say, there is no definite hospital rate of maintenance fixed.

By Hon. Mr. Murphy:

Q. Do I understand you to say no provision has been made for officers of that class by the Military Hospitals Commission—returned wounded officers?—A. None by the Military Hospitals' Commission.

By Hon. Mr. McCurdy:

Q. They should be entitled to the same consideration as the men, should they not?—A. I think sick officers are entitled to it and should not be put to expense to get it.

Q. Are they not further entitled to take advantage of the same arrangements as made for the men and N.C.O.s.?—A. There is no accommodation for them. Where there is a military hospital they may go in and be looked after free, but where there is not a military hospital they have to go into the civil hospital.

By the Chairman:

Q. At the expense of the city?—A. Frequently at the expense of themselves, because it is a difficult matter to get their expenses authorized in some cases. Each case has to be taken up separately. I recently took steps to see if anything could be done towards getting a flat rate which might apply throughout the whole of Canada and I have found that in my own district, number 2, practically all the general hospitals there would be willing to accept a flat rate of $3.50 per day for private wards for the officers' maintenance. I fancy that might be extended to apply throughout the whole of Canada and probably would make a very good arrangement.

[Col. F. W. Marlow.]

By Mr. Ross (Middlesex):

Q. You spoke in rather a disparaging way of the hospital at St. Catharines: what is wrong there?—A. There is a small hospital at St. Catharines which was opened up by the Hospitals Commission. It has been used very little. It is very difficult to get an efficient medical staff there.

Q. There is one there, is there not?—A. I really cannot tell you what sort of staff is there at present, but the place was opened up distinctly against our recommendations in the matter: in fact, I recommended it should not be opened up at the time it was opened up. They insisted it should be opened.

Q. Why should it not be opened?—A. Because it was not necessary. We did not need a hospital in the place. That was the main reason. At the time they wanted it opened there was only one returned soldier in the whole Niagara District, and the communication was sent to the General Officer Commanding in respect of opening it, and he referred the matter to me, and we advised very strongly against opening it, as we did not consider it necessary, and telegrams passed between the office and headquarters with regard to it, but they insisted it should be opened: in fact the General Officer Commanding advised against opening it. They ceased to correspond with him and opened it themselves, and it has been maintained practically with no patients in it. At the present time I think there are thirteen.

Q. With a whole staff?—A. Not much of a staff: a housekeeper—

Q. And doctor?—A. No doctor there; any medical attendance is done by a doctor simply calling in; but it is another one of those small homes a long distance from the main centre which has proven to be very little use, because the idea is to get away from the small outlying places which do not provide any facilities for treatment.

By Hon. Mr. Murphy:

Q. When you say they opened it themselves contrary to the advice of some one—whom do you mean?—A. The Military Hospitals Commission, distinctly against the advice of the Officer Commanding; he stated that it was not necessary.

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. On page 5 you say:—

“A great many medically unfit men were enlisted during the past year, and many of them were carried on the strength for several months. Careless examination by medical officers or civilian practitioners, undue pressure on the part of commanding or recruiting officers anxious to increase the number of their units, attestation without further medical examination, and retention of men at small billets were the chief features responsible for this.”

Have you any idea how many men have gone overseas who were unfit and are returned, or are still in England, having been rejected?—A. I am afraid I have not looked up the figures.

Q. I am going to read an extract from Toronto Saturday Night, February 3, which reads as follows:—

“According to Sir Robert Borden’s figures, given out the other day in the House, Canada has actually sent 310,000 men overseas. But he does not tell us how many of this number were eventually turned down in England as being medically unfit. We are creditably informed that the number is astonishingly large, running into thousands. Nor are we told how many of this 310,000 have been, and still are, occupying safety first jobs in the Canadian Records office and in the whatnot of semi-military life in London. A short time ago there were somewhere around 4,000 in the Record offices alone, whereas the same work is done for an equally large, if not larger, force contributed by Australia and New Zealand by one-sixteenth of 4,000.

[Col. F. W. Marlow.]

"Upon the fearful waste which has been and is still taking place in the various arms of the service, there is no need to dwell, any more than to mention one item alone, that of medical unfits, who, through gross laxness, were allowed to enlist and go overseas. It is estimated in London by those who should know that it has cost Canada up to date no less than $25,000,000 for the training, equipment, maintenance, transportation, etc., of our unfit soldiers."

What would you say as to that, having in view this section of your report?—A. Well, I would not like to express any opinion about the figures as set down there. I think undoubtedly that a very great number of men have gone overseas who should not have gone over.

Q. Who never should have been accepted?—A. But I have not the remotest idea of the proportion.

Q. You have not any idea at all?—A. No.

Q. Then you speak of laxness of medical officers: what do you mean by that?—A. I think I may say that medical officers, and particularly those of very little experience, and also civilian practitioners, failed to realize their responsibility in this whole matter: that is to say, they probably did not realize that if they passed a man who had a condition that was likely to be aggravated by service, that man might become a charge upon the country until his death, or the death of his widow, or until the children came of age. They probably did not realize the responsibility in this matter was largely theirs. Then, in addition to that, this work was entirely new to many of these men, and not only that, but conditions were imposed upon them and the medical service in general, which made it extremely difficult to check this whole matter up and keep it checked up. I admit the medical service was to blame to a considerable extent, but I think the system of recruiting and other things in connection with recruiting had a very great deal to do with this matter.

Q. When you say that, do you refer to the sentence used here "Undue pressure on the part of commanding officers?"—A. Yes, I mean that: for instance, to amplify that, one might say that there was extreme competition for recruits, but recruits were not particularly easy to get, and the units were forced to expend a certain amount of money, and in some instances a very considerable amount of money, getting recruits. There were a great many units in the field at once, recruiting at the same time, and it was put up to the commanding officers and the commanding officers put it up to their recruiting officers, "We have got to get our unit formed; first of all, we have got to get a nucleus, and when once they get the nucleus they distribute these men, and try to bring in more recruits. And they are scattered all over. Then they are instructed from headquarters they must get up to a certain strength before they can go to camp. They are further instructed from headquarters that they must maintain a certain number of men in their unit, or they won't go overseas as a unit, but will be broken up into drafts, and all of these circumstances tend to bring about an undue pressure upon the medical officer, especially the inexperienced one, who, perhaps, cannot stand up against the pressure, and I have not any hesitation in saying that a very great many recruits were taken on in that way.

Q. Would there be any responsibility rest upon your branch of the service for that?—A. Yes, inasmuch as the medical service is responsible for the examination of recruits.

Q. Were the boards that were appointed to examine these various recruits appointed by the Medical Army Corps?—A. At this particular time they were not examined by the Medical Board. During the fall of 1915 and the winter and spring of 1916, they were examined only by one medical officer or civilian practitioner and attended.

Q. The medical officer was a member of your Army Medical Corps?—A. Yes, or a civil practitioner. His appointment was approved by the A.D.M.S.

[Col. F. W. Marlow.]

Q. But the examination was wholly under the control of the Army Medical Corps?—A. Yes. I may say that just previous to this time the second examination which was ordinarily required before attestation had been withdrawn. In the early stages of the war, when a man was examined locally, he was sent up to his unit headquarters, his battalion medical officer re-examined him, and if he was not satisfied with the man he rejected him without further procedure. That second examination was cut out.

By Mr. Ross (Middlesex):

Q. Why?—A. I do not know why.

Q. By whom?—A. It was an order from headquarters. I do not know who was responsible for it.

By the Chairman:

Q. At what time?—A. I cannot tell you the exact time, but late in the fall of 1915. So that the men were accepted on the one examination and attested immediately.

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. There was then no further examination until such time as they got to England?—A. Oh, yes.

Q. What was it?—A. Of course, in the winter of 1915-16, and in the spring of 1916, for instance in Military District No. 2, we had 40,000 men who were scattered all over the district. There was scarcely a village in the district that did not have its quota of 25 or more men, and they remained there until they went to camp. During the winter instructions came from headquarters to have a so-called travelling medical board go to the various places in the district to check them up.

Q. Was that in the winter of 1916?—A. The winter of 1915-16. I inquired carefully throughout my inspection trip as to the success of these medical boards, and in no instance in Canada did I find that they worked out successfully. The boards were unable, on account of the large areas to be covered, and of the men being scattered all over the districts,—the boards found it extremely difficult to get in touch with these men, to have them thoroughly checked over, because at that time it was so very easy—a commanding officer often knows who his unfit men are, and he has a peculiar way of getting them out of reach when the medical board comes around. It sometimes happened that some of these men had never been seen by a medical board.

By Hon. Mr. Murphy:

Q. In other words, a commanding officer will deliberately conceal a man who has defects and get him sent overseas?—A. There are, no doubt, cases where that has been deliberately done, to my mind.

By Mr. Ross (Middlesex):

Q. The medical officer of the battalion in such a case must surely connive because an unfit man could not escape the civil practitioner and the medical officer both?—A. It has sometimes happened. Under the system adopted last year of county battalions, in our district practically every county battalion had, as medical officer, one who was practising in the county.

Q. He should have caught these men?—A. Well, he should have. But, as I say, it is just possible that he wanted to help maintain the strength too. I do not say that is the case. In one instance I know of, the medical officer did overlook many unfits until the final board.

By Mr. Sutherland:

Q. Were his services dispensed with?—A. That condition was not discovered until the day the battalion was leaving for overseas.

[Col. F. W. Marlow.]

By Mr. Middlebro:

Q. Were his services dispensed with then?—A. No, they were not.

By Mr. Ross (Middlesex):

Q. In what district did that occur?—A. In Military District No. 2.

Q. Whose duty was it to dismiss that man?—A. It was our duty to relieve him of his duty had we known of this actual condition in time, but before we had time to learn of this he had gone overseas.

By the Chairman:

Q. When you did know, did you relieve him?—A. No, he was gone, because the final warning came and they went. The Medical Board proceedings did not come in to District Headquarters until after they were gone.

Q. How many men did the Board leave behind?—A. In that instance about a hundred.

Q. Out of how many?—A. Out of a battalion nearly up to strength, approximately a thousand.

By Mr. Middlebro:

Q. What was the number of the battalion?—A. It was the 116th, I think. It was an Ontario county battalion.

By Mr. Sutherland:

Q. Did you take any precaution to see that men who had been rejected did not enlist in other battalions, have you any checking of such men?—A. It was extremely difficult to do that under the county system. We repeatedly found that after a medical board struck a man off he would turn up at some place in another unit. That very frequently happened.

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. Then it was a very frequent occurrence?—A. Yes. After the proceedings of a medical board came in it was very frequently brought out by reference to our file, that a certain man had been discharged once, twice, even three or four times before.

By Mr. Ross (Middlesex):

Q. I want to ask a few questions regarding the 118th Battalion. You were President of the Court in that case?—A. Yes.

Q. I am looking at Major Martin's evidence, who was examined by yourself?—A. Yes.

Q. Major Martin testified that the battalion was organized in November, 1915, and I quote his evidence as follows:—

We reached here——

That is London.

——on May 22nd. During that time 725 men were recruited.

You remember this evidence?—A. Yes.

Q. It is undoubtedly true. The following questions were asked:

Q. The Battalion had gradually dwindled down to 540 through desertions and medical unfitness?—A. There were quite a few desertions at Borden——

Q. Do you recall how many men you had on the strength of the unit when it was paraded before the Medical Board?—A. About 540 or 550. There were 251 officers, non-commissioned officers and men who were found medically fit.

Q. Have you any idea how many were found unfit?—A. About 255.

[Col. F. W. Marlow.]

Mr. Ross: In this case you have a total of 540 or 550 men, and of this number 255 men were found unfit.

The CHAIRMAN: I understand the regiment started at 725 and went down to 540.

Mr. Ross (Middlesex): Apparently, from the evidence.

The CHAIRMAN: And eventually it had 255 men out of 540 rejected, reducing it to about 300 men who went overseas.

Mr. Ross (Middlesex): I will read the evidence again so that you will have, not my statement, but that of the officer under examination:

We reached here (London) on May 22nd. During that time 725 men were recruited——

Q. The Battalion gradually dwindled down to 540 through desertions and medical unfitness?—A. There were quite a few desertions at Borden——

Q. Do you recall how many men you had on the strength of the unit when paraded before the Medical Board?

By Mr. Ross (Middlesex):

Q. I suppose this was a Board at London?—A. At London, I presume, the final Board.

Mr. Ross (Reads):

A. About 540 or 550. There were 251 officers, non-commissioned officers and men who were found medically fit.

Q. Have you any idea how many were found unfit?—A. About 255.

Mr. MIDDLEBRO: Is that 255 out of a total of 725?

Mr. Ross (Middlesex): Out of 540.

The CHAIRMAN: The regiment at one time had 725 men and was finally reduced to 251.

Hon. Mr. McCURDY: Medical unfitness does not account for the whole of that difference.

Mr. Ross (Middlesex): A great many had been found unfit at London.

Hon. Mr. McCURDY: The 540 he speaks of are accounted for by the fit and the unfit.

Mr. Ross (Middlesex): He says that out of 540 or 550 there were 251 fit.

Hon. Mr. McCURDY: It amounts to about 500.

Mr. Ross (Middlesex): It mentions 540 or 550.

The CHAIRMAN: About 300 went overseas.

Mr. Ross (Middlesex): The evidence says 250 were fit to proceed overseas. The medical examination of these men is contained in a detailed statement in Appendix 1 which I have not the time to work out accurately, but it would seem to me from looking at the individual cases that far more than 50 per cent of these 251 men——

The CHAIRMAN: Do you want to know what they are suffering from?

Mr. Ross (Middlesex): Out of these 255 men found unfit, I should judge about 50 per cent were found unfit on account of flat feet. Is there any reason under heaven why a medical officer, a commanding officer, or anybody else should not discover a flat foot?

The WITNESS: Probably not. If a careful examination is made they ought to be able to discover flat feet.

By Mr. Ross (Middlesex):

Q. How can you possibly account for such a state of affairs as existed in the 118th Battalion?—A. With respect to flat feet it is possible that in a considerable number of those who are finally rejected for flat feet the condition may have been exaggerated somewhat during their long period of training. I may say that at the time this battalion was organized the regulations in respect to flat feet were not as rigidly followed out as they have been at a later date.

[Col. F. W. Marlow.]

By Hon. Mr. McCurdy:

Q. Is there any difference of opinion in the medical profession as to the service-ability of men with flat feet?—A. There is a very great difference of opinion, and personally I am inclined to believe too much stress has been put upon the effects of flat feet.

By Mr. Ross (Middlesex):

Q. The regulations forbid men with flat feet being enlisted?—A. Yes, for general service in the infantry. Flat feet cases are admitted to some other units.

By Mr. Middlebro:

Q. What, for instance, are those other units?—A. The forestry and construction battalions, if the degree is moderate.

Q. Are men with flat feet as good as able-bodied men for these battalions?—A. Just as good. You see, complaints regarding flat feet have been so numerous from the overseas authorities. Mind you, so much stress has been put upon the effect of flat feet that there is a certain proportion of men who recognize in flat feet a cause for funk.

By Mr. Ross (Middlesex):

Q. They pretend that they have flat feet?—A. They may pretend they have trouble with their flat feet, and no medical officer can tell from the contour of the foot what trouble the man is having. He cannot tell by the contour of the feet. If the man says he has a pain and is suffering from that you cannot controvert his statement.

By the Chairman:

Q. I suppose it is possible for a man to enlist and pass the medical board with the declaration that he has never had any trouble in his life?—A. Certainly.

Q. He may enter the service and then five months afterwards claim that he has flat feet and cannot walk upon them?—A. I may say in respect to the majority of these men rejected or held back that they were not finally rejected, but transferred to other units later. At any rate the majority of the men so held back on account of flat feet have been able to route march during their period of training, which extended over a year, practically, and most of them have never fallen out on route marches covering a distance of fifteen to eighteen and twenty miles.

Q. To what extent does the recommendation that the man be released from military service affect the judgment of an examining board of that kind?—A. In that instance, practically none at all. You see this medical board held these men back for further examination, they did not actually reject them but held them back, and after further examination they were classified and the majority of them transferred to other units, such as the construction battalion. A certain number were discharged, but only those who were considered to be medically unfit for any branch of the service.

Mr. Ross (Middlesex):

Q. But this report says (reads):—

“Fit for general service, 18; fit for construction battalion, 81; fit for special service, 68; fit for Army Medical Corps, 1; fit for discharge, 45; for hospital observation, 10; for reconsideration, 10; sick at home and not re-boarded, 2; absentees not re-boarded, 3.

That is the whole list and it makes a total of 238. Take valvular disease of the heart. No medical officer could mistake that, could he?—A. Yes, he could.

By Mr. Middlebro:

Q. Although a candidate for enlistment admits that he has flat feet, if he says they never bother him he can be enlisted. After his enlistment, if he says his flat feet bother him, he can obtain his discharge?—A. I presume that is the reason the authorities overseas have become so strict in the matter. The main reason why so many of these men were kept behind was because of the strict interpretation of the medical regulations by the Medical Examining Board. That is to say, they had no respect for the cases of flat feet, they did not use their own judgment in the matter as to whether they thought those men were fit for service or not, but they adhered to the regulations. Many of these men had been boarded at Kitchener before going into camp and they had been boarded again at Camp Borden where an inquiry was made into their history as to how they had been standing up. A man comes along with a moderate degree of flat feet, and the Board enquires into how he has done when out route marching. If he has done well, the Medical Officer feels disposed to let him remain instead of turning him down. At that time there were no other units into which he could go. If a man were turned down then he was forbidden the service entirely. Consequently, that was the reason why those men were kept until so late a date. Then on account of the numerous reports from overseas and the orders sent out from headquarters, the Medical Board adhered absolutely to the letter of the regulations, consequently a greater number of men are kept back.

By the Chairman:

Q. The word that came from England resulted in the medical inspection, particularly in the matter of flat feet, becoming very much stricter in the fall of 1916, did it not?—A. Yes. There were different orders sent out from Headquarters, some being special orders with respect to flat feet.

Q. So the boarding of recruits in the latter part of the fall of 1916 was much more severe than at an earlier period?—A. Yes, sir, I would say so.

Q. At the present time, I understand, you will correct me if I am wrong in my understanding, the Government are endeavouring to follow as closely as possible the practice of having the recruit medically examined at the place where he first presents himself?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. First, there is the preliminary medical examination of the recruit by the local examiner. The recruit is then sent to the nearest "Mobilization Center", there to be examined by a Medical Examining Board. He then, if fit, may report to his unit. The recruit is again examined on arrival by the Medical Officer of the unit to which he is assigned. Only after he has passed this triple examination is clothing or equipment issued to him, is that correct?—A. Yes, sir, at the present time.

Q. And the Mobilization Boards are to be found at most of the principal points throughout Canada?—A. I believe at the present time they are organized throughout the most of Canada.

Q. Do you think this new system will have the desired effect of preventing the enlistment of unfit men who would be subsequently rejected in England?—A. It depends largely on how the system is carried out. Unless the recruiting and the attestation and administrative end of it is carried out thoroughly, the system will fall down.

Q. Have you not confidence in the Army Medical Corps that these safeguards will be carried out?—A. It is not in respect to the medical examination. I may say we were rather slow in putting these into effect in Military District No. 2 on account of certain difficulties there, but since it has gone into effect very definite arrangements in the matter of attestations were made, and other arrangements also. For instance, the order as sent out from Headquarters, in regard to mobilization centres, is not clear as to where the man shall be attested. What has happened in some places was that the man was sent up to the mobilization centre for re-examination only. Then he was returned to his unit with the statement either that he was fit or unfit; and it has happened that he was attested by his unit whether he was fit or unfit. What has been done with Military district No. 2 in connection with those mobilization centres is that the Assistant Adjutant General has issued an order that no man shall be attested into any unit except at these mobilization centres for re-examination. That is to say, the men go there for re-examination and attestation, and no man can be attested anywhere else in the district except at these three places.

By the Chairman:

Q. Further than that, the attestation paper has had added to it several precautionary questions in addition to those that were in the original. Is not that the case?—A. I am not prepared to answer that, because I have not seen the attestation paper recently.

Q. The questions to which I refer are printed in red on the side of the paper?—A. It was suggested some time ago that some additional questions should be added, but I have not seen the document since.

The CHAIRMAN: I may say as a fact that three questions have been added to the attestation paper. I will now file a copy of the attestation paper to go on the record.

By Mr. Ross (Middlesex):

Q. Then new instructions have been issued from the Adjutant General's Department since the war began in place of the old system which operated so disastrously in the case of the 118th Regiment?—A. In the early stage of the war a second medical examination was required. Afterwards that second examination was removed. Now it is reimposed in a more rigorous form.

Q. When was the first system changed?—A. I think in the fall of 1915, as I stated before.

Q. In the fall of 1915, and September, 1916, a new system was adopted all over Canada?—A. Yes, but you understand there are many other considerations. In explaining a wastage of that kind, there are general considerations, and particularly in respect to that battalion, the 118th. Of course, I believe on account of the length of time that the battalion, under this system, was retained here in training there was naturally a very considerable wastage. Another cause of wastage in the case of men being rejected on arrival overseas is the fact that they continue to enlist "new" men into "old" battalions up till the time they leave this country. These young men have no chance to get proper physical training and they will fall down as a result.

By Hon. Mr. McCurdy:

Q. Do you have any difficulty because of men who are either under or over age enlisting?—A. A great many men have been enlisted who are either over or under age.

Q. What do the papers call for with respect to age, an affidavit?—A. No, they are attested within the proper age limit; of course, that is a case of false attestation on the part of the man.

[Col. F. W. Marlow.]

Q. Does that not account for a considerable percentage of men who are afterwards found unfit for service? Is not that the explanation of it?—A. There are a good many men rejected because of being either under or over age.

By the Chairman:

Q. What are the conditions with respect to the enlistment in special service battalions?—A. These men are used to supply various details throughout the camps and at headquarters.

Q. What do they do in winter?—A. For instance, at the present time, at Toronto, the special service unit has been detailed for duties such as fixing up a great many of the buildings which have to be heated; the fires have to be kept going, and police duties have to be performed.

Q. What kind of police duties?—A. About the camp.

Q. But there is no camp now?—A. There is a camp at Toronto, the exhibition camp; there is also a camp at Hamilton. There are all sorts of special duties for these special service men, otherwise men of the regular units would have to be taken from their training, from their regular duties, in order to perform those duties which the special service unit is called upon to do.

Q. How many men, for instance, are there in No. 2 District in special service companies?—A. I am sorry I cannot tell you how many there are.

Q. In your opinion, how many of these men are only temporarily unfit and expect to be transferred overseas?—A. I would say that the vast majority of them are not fit for overseas, and will never be fit for overseas service, because they have been culled out, they have been gone over, but in certain instances where men have been transferred to the special service unit, they are men who are under age, by a few months, but ultimately will become of age and when they do they will be taken out and will be put into other units if found fit for general service.

By Mr. Middlebro:

Q. Does that apply to the Forestry and Construction Battalions?—A. There is quite a different standard for the Construction and Forestry Battalions.

By the Chairman:

Q. These men get special overseas allowances, although they never go overseas.—A. If they are enlisted for overseas they do.

Q. Supposing a man who has enlisted for overseas wants to be released, what is the rule then? Do you release him?—A. We did release them some time ago, but at present they are not released.

Q. If a man has enlisted in good faith and wanted to go over to fight, and if you afterwards say to him: 'You have to stay here and do general work' do you think you have the right morally to retain the man here when he enlisted for overseas service?—A. Probably not, that is a matter for the Department, it is not a medical matter at all. But in certain instances men have been allowed to go if they were anxious to get out of the service; but in many other instances they have not been allowed to go, but are simply transferred to special service units.

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. On page 11, if you will look at your report, you go on to say (reads):—

"As yet their hospitals, with the exception of M.D. No. 2, do not contain adequate facilities for treatment, though such are being provided. Rapid extension of their available accommodation and especially in dealing with their tuberculosis invalids is urgent."

Will you give us a synopsis of what the tuberculosis situation is?—A. At the present time, I understand, it is claimed that there is a sufficient amount of accommodation for tuberculosis patients, that the Commission have entered into arrangements with various sanatoria throughout the country. In some instances they have taken them over entirely, and in other instances they have arranged to supply additions to existing sanatoria, in order to provide the necessary accommodation. The reason of this statement in my report no doubt is that at that particular time conditions were very different. At one particular time there was the most urgent need for accommodation for tuberculosis invalids, and there had been for a very considerable time. And at this time most particularly because throughout the whole of Canada, at all the camps, in every district, there were tuberculosis patients that could not be accommodated in the existing sanatoria, and it was most urgent that the accommodation should be provided.

Q. Were these men returned soldiers from overseas, or were they men who had contracted the disease in the camp?—A. In a great many instances they were men who had not been Overseas, and in some instances they were men who had returned, both classes of men.

Q. Where, at that time, were these men treated?—A. The men were sent wherever they could possibly find a bed for them, they were being sent from one district to another. In our own district we were not able to get sufficient accommodation.

Q. Was Gravenhurst included amongst the sanatoria to which you were sending them?—A. Yes.

Q. Did you have sufficient accommodation for them?—A. Yes and no.

Q. What does that mean?—A. It means that the accommodation which might have been obtained without very much difficulty was not made use of; at least the facilities were not made proper use of, and such accommodation as was made use of was exceeded by twice too many, and so was very unsatisfactory. I may say in respect to tuberculosis invalids, whether they are from overseas or training, that as soon as a man is "boarded" out as being tubercular, he is transferred to the Military Hospitals Commission at once, so that all these cases come under the Military Hospitals Commission, so that they have virtually had charge of all the tuberculosis cases that were in sanatoria.

Q. They were not dealt with in the Military Hospitals?—A. They were not, practically.

Q. The opinion was expressed the other day, by Dr. Thompson, that the number of tubercular cases among the C.E.F. was not more than the average of civil life. Can you say anything as to that?—A. I would not like to make a statement of that kind without investigating it, either one way or the other.

Q. Do you know what is the percentage in civil life?—A. I am not prepared to give figures. There was a statement made by Col. Thompson in respect to the treatment of gas cases, which might be taken exception to, where he stated that many of these gas cases ultimately went into tuberculosis sanatoria. That probably is not in accordance with the facts. Nor do I think they should go into those sanatoria, because there is a very decided objection to putting non-tuberculous chest cases in tuberculosis institutions with tuberculous cases.

By Mr. Ross (Middlesex):

Q. To what sanatoria were these men in my district being sent by the Military Hospitals Commission?—A. What is your district?

Q. No. 1.—A. The sanatoria accommodation was very limited and men were being sent partly to the Minnewaska Sanatorium, that is up to the limit of their accommodation, and many of them were kept in the London district, as they were all over the country, because of lack of accommodation for them. There is the Muskoka Free Sanatorium under the National Sanatorium Association, and the other, The Minnewaska Institution, is run by a Joint Stock Company.

Q. Why were they not sent to the National Free Institution? Is it not the best in the country?—A. In the first instance, and at an early period accommodation was arranged for these up to a certain number, I think, fifty at first, and later up to 100.

[Col. F. W. Marlow.]

Q. Could not the Hospitals Commission have obtained accommodation for a large number at that Institution —A. Yes, with additional pavilion and dining-rooms they could have taken a very much larger number.

Q. Did they try to do so?—A. I believe they did.

Q. Why was not that accepted?—A. There was an agreement between the Military Hospitals Commission and the National Sanatorium Association to provide a certain amount of accommodation if we had the tubercular patients but the difficulty arose when the Commission started to arrange with the other private sanatorium. As soon as they began their arrangements with that private sanatorium, the big free institution refused to reserve beds for us.

Q. Who was running the private sanatorium, the Minnewaska?—A. The Minnewaska Sanatorium Company, Limited.

Q. On what basis did they arrange for the use of that institution? Was it a suitable place? Do you inspect these places?—A. Yes, I have at different times.

Q. Was this Minnewaska a proper sanatorium to send soldiers to?—A. In my opinion, no, it never was and it never will be, without radical changes.

Q. What would you recommend with reference to it?—A. The accommodation there is inadequate, it is a ramshackle old place, except for the new wing, it is unsanitary, and the kitchen arrangements are very bad, the men could not be properly fed, and there are no proper laboratory facilities; in fact the whole institution was not a fit place to which tuberculous invalids should be sent.

Q. Was there proper medical attendance?—A. That was very difficult to arrange and the attendance was not suitable in the first instance, until an officer of the Army Medical Corps was sent there, and then through the summer I sent a specialist there whom I asked to make a weekly report on the place.

Q. Did you condemn it?—A. Yes, I condemned it very strongly.

Q. What is the date of your report?—A. I do not know, but I can find it.

Q. Did the men object to staying there?—A. The men objected very considerably at different times. If I had the file which is in the District Office, there is a letter in it which was written by a number of men raising very strenuous objections to being kept there. In fact a copy of the letter was sent to me by the Secretary of the Military Hospitals Commission, who, no doubt, has a copy of it which he can produce.

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. Were they kept there after that protest?—A. They were, for a very considerable time, because there was no other place to send them.

Mr. Ross (Middlesex):

Q. They could have sent them to the National Free Sanatorium?—A. Accommodation could, no doubt, have been provided for them there, but at that time the Commission did not seem willing to take advantage of the accommodation provided at the Muskoka Free Hospital.

Q. Why not, is that not a first-class institution?—A. Yes, it is always recognized as one of the best in the country.

Q. What was the Commission paying for the accommodation of these men at the Minnewaska?—A. I think they paid at first the ordinary rate of $7 per week, but later they had to bring it up to $10, because the institution could not obtain the ordinary Government allowance, which is granted to those hospitals usually.

Q. Who grants that allowance?—A. You mean the $3 per week?

Q. Yes?—A. The $3 per week is I think allowed by the Provincial Government.

Q. You mean that the Province would not grant it because it was not efficient or suitable?—A. Because it was not "approved" by the Ontario Government.

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. And yet the Military Hospitals Commission went on using it?—A. Yes.
[Col. F. W. Marlow.]

By Mr. Middlebro:

Q. How many patients would it accommodate?—A. It had roughly, accommodation for 40 men, but they had as many as 80 there at one time.

By Mr. Ross (Middlesex):

Q. I think we should have the report on that Institution on the record?—A. I have the report by my Deputy which was made in my absence, at the time I was making my inspection. But previous to that, I may say, I felt obliged to call a halt in sending men there.

Mr. Ross (Middlesex): I think we should also have the letter of those soldiers complaining about being kept there.

WITNESS: I have my letter to the Secretary of the Military Hospitals Commission with regard to the Minnewaska Sanatorium, and I sent a copy of that letter to the Director General of Medical Services.

The CHAIRMAN: You might read that letter?—A. (Reads):

CASUALTY DEPT. M.D. No. 2,
215 Simcoe St., AUGUST 8, 1916.

From A.D.M.S., M.D. No. 2,

To Secretary, Military Hospitals Commission,
Ottawa.

Disposal of Tuberculous Invalids, C.E.F., M.D., No. 2.

SIR,—I have the honour to direct your attention to the subject marginally noted, and to state that in my opinion the matter has not been solved with any degree of satisfaction.

The Minnewaska sanatorium never has been, is not now, and in my opinion, under the present management never will be a suitable place for caring for and treating tuberculous invalided soldiers.

So far am I convinced of this fact that I have given orders that from now on, no further patients are to be sent there until its suitability is determined.

The arrangement entered into by the Commission with this sanitarium management, the accommodation provided by them (utterly unsuitable, except in the new wing), the inadequacy of laboratory facilities and appliances for special treatment, the household management which does not permit the medical officer in charge to determine the suitability or sufficiency of the diets, are some of many matters which require investigation and re-arrangement and will unless put right furnish adequate and interesting material for a public scandal.

The whole problem might as well be looked at fairly. Personally, I would have nothing to do with any "Joint Stock Co., Ltd.," in any such matter as this. There are but few solutions of the difficulty.

Either the Commission must have an institution of their own, and run it, or they should strive to make satisfactory arrangements with the only institution that has all the necessary plant for taking care of an unlimited number requiring only the addition of extra wards and dining rooms. I do not think there is any question as to the capabilities of the Muskoka Free Sanitarium in this regard.

The Minnewaska Sanitarium building in its present state is not worth taking over. It would hardly be considered a suitable or acceptable gift.

To establish an institution of their own would require considerable time, and much expense to the Hospital Commission, though perhaps it may be the best solution. If considered so, action should be taken immediately.

Failing this, I would advise that steps should be taken immediately to arrange for all necessary accommodation for patients sent to Muskoka at the "Muskoka Free Institution."

[Col. F. W. Marlow.]

Had the same amount of energy been spent in perfecting arrangements with that institution as has been spent in dickering with the Minnewaska Joint Stock Co., Ltd., I do not hesitate to say that at present everything would have been running smoothly, and adequate accommodation, care and treatment would be available.

I have the honour to be, sir,

Your obedient servant,

(Sgd.) F. W. MARLOW, Colonel,
A.D.M.S., M.D., No. 2.

P.S.—The medical officer at the Minnewaska Sanitarium has been communicated with on this subject and has been asked to take the matter up with the management. He has been advised that laboratory and special treatment facilities and accommodation suitable to me must be provided, and arrangements must be made whereby the medical officer will be able to satisfy himself that the diets are suitable and sufficient, and that he may exercise control of all matters pertaining to the physical welfare of the patients.

He has been instructed to report to me as to when the place will be ready for my inspection prior to other patients being sent there.

(Sgd.) F. W. MARLOW, Colonel.

Following that report, no further men were sent to that institution for some considerable time.

By the Chairman:

Q. How many are there now?—A. There are none there now, because, following that report, I may say, the Secretary of the Hospital Commission, and some other members of the Commission, came to Toronto a few days afterwards, and then the matter of extension for tubercular patients was taken up very seriously. Up to that time the accommodation had been inadequate. Following that the matter was taken up very seriously, and they had a conference with me a few days later, and they agreed that the Minnewaska Sanitarium should be cleared as soon as possible, and I may say that following that, on September 8, the Commission met in Toronto, and the subject of extension of tuberculosis accommodation was then discussed. Since that time, by strenuous efforts they have managed to catch up to the immediate requirements, by taking over some of the sanatoria, by making additions to others, but they have practically forsaken Muskoka altogether, and the Minnewaska was cleared, I think, about November 22, I am not sure, but about that time.

By the Chairman:

Q. So that there are no returned soldiers there now?—A. No. Some of these patients were sent to the Mowat Sanatorium in Kingston, taken there by the Medical Officer, Major Munn.

By Mr. Ross (Middlesex):

Q. Did they stay there?—A. No. I see by Jack Canuck they escorted him back: they would not stay.

By the Chairman:

Q. Why would they not stay?—A. They simply refused to stay so far away from home; and the remainder of the men were taken to a sanitarium at Freeport, near Kitchener, I think, which was opened up for them, but, unfortunately, I am afraid the conditions at Freeport are not much better than Minnewaska.

[Col. F. W. Marlow.]

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. Have you seen the Freeport Hospital recently?—A. No.

Q. How long since you have seen it?—A. I have never seen it.

Q. It is not in your district?—A. No, but it is being administered from the Toronto unit of the Hospitals Commission.

By Mr. Ross (Middlesex):

Q. Why do you say it is so bad?—A. I do not say it is as bad as the other place, but I have heard a great deal about it that does not commend it to me. I have heard that the proper facilities for treatment and examination of sputum are absent, the same as at the other place.

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. No proper appliances, as I understand it, at Freeport?—A. No. One thing I do consider is wrong in connection with the management of that place, and that is that they have a doctor there attending them who is an open case of tuberculosis. I do not think this is a desirable arrangement.

By Mr. Middlebro:

Q. How many people will it accommodate?—A. I will have to refer to the list given out by the Military Hospitals Commission to get that number.

Q. Large or small? One hundred?—A. Oh, no, less than one hundred.

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. Tuberculosis patients require particular treatment?—A. Yes, they do.

Q. And everything must be just as it ought to be for successful treatment?—A. Certainly: it requires good accommodation, good equipment and careful medical attendance, and nursing.

By Mr. Ross:

Q. The tuberculosis cases are most numerous among the returned soldiers?—A. I would not say most numerous, but a great number of the tuberculosis cases have not been overseas: I think slightly over 50 per cent of them have not been overseas. But the whole problem of dealing with tuberculosis is a most serious one and demands a great deal of attention.

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. They would come under what you say on page 12 of your report: that "Administration of districts has been carried out in many instances by officers of little experience, and many such have not had the advantage of completed staffs while trying to keep pace with the rapidly increasing demands of the service. Efficient assistance with any degree of permanency has been difficult or impossible to obtain. The service has not been up to a proper standard?"—A. There are a great many phases of tuberculosis which would take a great deal of time to go into. There is one point in connection with it which I would like to call your attention to. It is an arrangement that ought to be dispensed with immediately: that is to say, a regulation whereby a man's discharge is carried out at the end of six months' sanitarium treatment: that is to say, his discharge is brought about. He may be retained in the sanitarium as a free patient on pension instead of getting his ordinary pay and allowance. In the case of a single man his pension is probably more than his pay. In the case of a married man it does not work out to such advantage, but that is a matter of administration really which ought to be adjusted.

By the Chairman:

Q. The Patriotic Fund will adjust it?—A. It is not so much that, but it could be properly adjusted in another way. So long as he is improving under treatment there is no reason why his discharge should be carried out at six months at all, so far as I can see.

[Col. F. W. Marlow.]

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. You think he has a right to stay there till he is cured?—A. Yes. In that connection, if you are interested in that, I would like to submit copies of a letter which I have sent on officially, sent to me by Major Munn, the Medical Officer in charge of the Toronto Hospitals and also a letter from Dr. J. H. Elliott, a tuberculosis specialist, in regard to that particular problem. If it is your wish, I would submit copies of those.

SIR,—I have the honour to direct your attention to H.Q. 60-4-8 of May 25, 1916, whereby a man is discharged after six months’ sanitarium treatment, usually to pension. The absurdity of this regulation is very pronounced, and although there has been a very considerable amount of discussion in regard to it, there seems to have been no method of having it rescinded.

I would point out some of the objections: First, the pay of a single man is increased, whereas that of a married man is decreased about $13 a month and he also loses his allowance from the Patriotic Fund. Second, the man is a civilian and not subject to discipline, one consequence being that he may come and go as he pleases, and may act as he pleases. There is only one punishment, viz., discharge, which I personally look on as a lamentable expression of our own failure. Third, the man is a civilian, and should not be clothed at public expense, yet we are forced to clothe him.

It seems that while these cases are usually granted total disability pension, sometimes they are granted part pension and at other times are discharged without pension at all.

Surely these men ought to be dealt with the same as our other cases. Whereas a man is supposed to be entitled to treatment for as long as treatment will benefit his condition, these cases are discharged without any regard to the man’s condition as to whether he is going to die within a week, or is on the high road to recovery.

There can be no claim to economy in this regulation. Broadly speaking, if one married man drops from $53 to $40 per month, two single men are raised from $33 to $40 per month. One of the absurdities is that a single man who has already been getting more money than he required is given even more money and has practically all disciplinary authority removed from him.

A lamentable condition of affairs exists when a married man is on the high road to recovery, but states that if he is put on pension that he cannot let his wife and children starve, and that he will have to go to work. Another three or six months’ treatment might have so established his cure that he would permanently remain cured. By leaving the institution at too early a period, the expected result is that he will break down and return to us for further treatment later on.

[Col. F. W. Marlow.]

When one gets in touch with these men themselves, as I have by visiting the sanatoria, one gets an idea of what a tremendous effect some apparently trifling regulation may have on the whole future of many of these men.

I am informed that the only argument in favour of this regulation is that a card system has been established at Militia Headquarters, and it is insisted that this card must be terminated sometime, and this without any regard whatever for the physical condition of the individual. The time given in tuberculosis cases is six months, and as far as the Militia Department is concerned, this man's case is then closed—his further treatment depending upon a regulation of the Military Hospitals Commission.

May I suggest that there is only one proper basis on which these cases should be dealt with, viz.: that as long as a man remains in a sanitarium that he has a total disability, and that he should be kept on pay and allowances and under discipline. When a man is discharged from an institution, and not before that he should then have his disability in the general labour market estimated, and then be pensioned for the proportion of his disability which is due to service.

This matter has given me a very considerable amount of thought for many months past, and I can see no other equitable basis on which these cases may be dealt with.

As this is a very very serious matter, I beg to urge your co-operation in order that an immediate solution may be found to this tremendous difficulty as I feel that it is absolutely criminal to permit this state of affairs to persist.

I have the honour to be, sir,

Your obedient servant,

(Signed.) F. J. MUNN, Major.

Extract from a letter of Dr. J. H. Elliott, to A.D.M.S., M.D. No. 2, making weekly report re Minnewaska Sanatorium.

"Experience in sanatorium work has proven the wisdom of using 'improved' and 'disease arrested' cases for light hospital duties and this should be adopted for certain patients from Minnewaska and other sanatoria.

"I feel some revision must be made calling for discharge of all patients at end of six months in a Canadian sanatorium. The single men may elect to remain on under treatment, and under total disability pension will receive $40 per month instead of $1.10 per day. Again others at end of six months require further treatment but many will not elect to take it. Many of these will break down in a few months at home and will be seeking re-admission in a more hopeless condition, and many of those leaving at the end of six months still having bacilli in their sputum will be careless at home and be grave sources of infection to their household particularly when there are children present and these later will be a charge on the community, perhaps upon the pensions board as being dependents of pensioned soldiers. It is a matter which requires consideration.

"The Canadian association for prevention of tuberculosis has recommended to the Hospitals Commission that the order apply only to 'closed' cases (with no bacilli in the sputum) and to those who in the opinion of the medical officer of the sanatorium may wisely be allowed to return home, but that otherwise it shall not apply, for instance, 1. To the man known to be careless in his habits 2. To the man who has shown that he will not continue to live along sanatorium lines after discharge, or 3. To the patient who requires further treatment and gives promise of arrest or recovery if continued in this sanatorium."

Dated September 11, 1916."

[Col. F. W. Marlow.]

In speaking of the whole problem of tuberculosis in general, I think the present situation affords opportunity to the Government to do a very great deal towards the elimination of tuberculosis as a disease, if they will follow this matter up.

Q. If they will enlist—A. If they will enlist all the men who have tuberculosis, and put them under Government pay—but, seriously, there is something that should be taken up in connection with that: that is the question of establishing tuberculosis colonies, the segregation of tuberculosis cases, and if the committee is interested in that, I would like to refer to some suggestions that have been made in that problem by Major Munn, my Medical Officer of the M.H.C. unit. I have talked the matter over with him on numerous occasions, and if this is of any interest to the committee at the present time, I would like to submit this letter for further consideration later.

By the Chairman:

Q. Many of these men would be returned soldiers?—A. Yes: it deals with the colonization of tuberculosis soldiers. In your colony you would have your sanatoria, and of course it is something to look forward to, and it would provide, perhaps, a means of solving the tubercular situation in the whole of Canada, not only from a military, but a civil point of view. I think the present affords an opportunity where a great deal might be done in connection with the returned soldier patients. Where there are bacilli in the sputum we can and should insist upon their having treatment; and we should do the same thing with the civil population, so long as there are bacilli in the sputum, and we should insist on their taking treatment.

Q. I am afraid that is out of our sphere?—A. Yes, but it is wide enough to submit this, if you care to have it.

MEMORANDA submitted by Major F. J. Munn, A.M.C. to Colonel Marlow under letter dated January 30, 1917.

TUBERCULOSIS.

In this war which has convulsed the civilized nations of the earth, it is earnestly felt that one bright spot may be developed by a strong, progressive policy towards the treatment of tuberculosis. With the backing of the Federal Government, the treatment of tuberculosis may be placed on a basis which in peace times would be impossible. This condition is a result of the considerable number of cases for which the Dominion Government is responsible. These must be treated not only by the usual rest cure methods, but they must be carried on under treatment until, through graduated exercise and vocational training, their earning power is restored as far as may be possible.

Two groups of cases will develop. In one group they will be enabled to undertake a position in the competitive labour market, and thus be restored to a sound economic position in the State. In the second group (comprising the incurable cases) a scheme of Tuberculosis Colonies should be evolved where the man may become as self-supporting as his physical condition will permit, the balance of his support will be determined by medical examination and estimation of disability with consequent pension and possibly free land and house.

The broad basis on which this scheme is built lies in the fact that it is necessary for the Dominion not only to give the usual rest cure treatment, but to carry our cases through an elaborate and lengthy course of graduated exercise in order that when a case leaves our institution as cured, there may be the smallest possibility of a break down with its consequent return to us for further sanitarium treatment. It is taken for granted that the State is responsible for any disability which may develop as a result of his service and for any increase or exacerbation of his disability during his lifetime which may fairly be attributed to service.

[Col. F. W. Marlow.]

This course of treatment will develop two definite types of case:—

1. The cases which become closed and are able to a greater or less extent to undergo competitive labour, assisted by pension. This is estimated at one-half to two-thirds.

2. The balance of the cases who will always require medical care and supervision, but who under proper supervision would be able to undertake some portion of their maintenance.

The first group of cases would be included in this co-operative scheme for as long as their condition necessitated their remaining under observation and treatment. On the other hand the scheme is primarily intended as a co-operative one for the purpose of enabling each individual of the second group to become as self-supporting as his physical condition will permit.

The economic aspect of this will appeal to every one. The man himself will have a freedom and earning capacity which would not be possible unless he were properly directed. The country as a whole will be saved a tremendous amount through proper direction of the men who are only able to work a few hours per day and through prevention of the spread of tuberculosis.

Let us then consider the details and possibilities of a scheme such as outlined above.

Let us lay down in the first place that the sanitarium shall accommodate say 500 men. (It may be added that there are in the province of Ontario several thousand cases who could, with benefit to the State, be dealt with in like fashion. The Military Hospitals Commission is providing accommodation at present for approximately 500 cases in Ontario and this number will undoubtedly be largely increased.)

Besides the sanitarium proper, additional accommodation for probably another 500 should be provided as a tuberculosis colony.

There are two broad requisites: 1. Farm and accessories. 2. Workshops.

1. The first requisite would be a large tract of cultivated and arable land, probably 2,500 acres—allowing from 3 to 5 acres for each of the cases in the colony, with a fairly large piece of land for the sanitarium cases. It is presumed that truck farming would be carried on, and there is no doubt that instructors from the Ontario Agricultural College could be obtained to advise as to the best means of laying out, planting and cultivating the land and marketing the produce.

In the sanitarium group, this would provide a means of developing the graduated exercise for its therapeutic value, by laying down a schedule of from half an hour to two hours twice daily of work in the garden. This exercise would, of course, be prescribed by the medical officer.

In the colony group it is presumed that, with proper co-operative business management, the individuals could become largely self-sustaining, each according to his own efforts.

It is noted by the way, that each of these cases would probably be drawing a pension. One man under medical supervision might be considered fit to work six hours daily and would only draw a moderate pension, either in the form of money or as free land and rent and possibly other privileges. Another man might be considered fit to undergo four hours work daily; he would draw a larger pension than the first man and so would not be compelled to exercise as much effort.

In other words a man able to undergo two hours daily work might be considered as having four-fifths disability and the consequent pension for his disability. A man able to do four hours daily work as having three-fifths disability, and a man able to do six hours daily work as having two-fifths disability each would draw his pension and the balance of his income would depend upon his own efforts.

On these farms would also be developed, and on the best advice, up-to-date beekeeping and henneries and any other suitable occupations.

These methods would provide work for approximately six months in the year, mostly summer work, with a small amount of work in the henneries for the winter.

[Col. F. W. Marlow.]

Cows would also be kept for the colony and sanitarium, the milk being handled only by closed cases.

2. The second requisite is therefore the provision of suitable co-operative open-air workshops on the same basis of work as outlined above for the hours on the farm. This would require keen business management in order to undertake not only work which would be suitable for the cases to work on, but also in order that work be undertaken for which a lucrative market may be found.

This work would be limited in several ways, as the atmosphere must not be contaminated, nor may dust be permitted. The manufacture of articles which might be considered as carrying infection could not be undertaken. However, it is not considered that there would be any difficulty in undertaking such as wicker-work, light furniture or wood work, light metal work, and possibly some varieties of machine work.

The internal economy of the sanitarium would be carried on in the same manner as that in which sanatoria are now administered. Broadly speaking, the rest cure and some graduated exercise is carried on until the case reaches a stage where the condition is arrested and "closed" (non-infective) and the man is considered fit to undergo work to the extent of, say, two hours twice daily.

He then becomes eligible for the tuberculosis colony.

The colony would be laid down on a co-operative basis, with a centre, where are congregated the various shops, warehouses, factories, church, school, etc. Around this centre would be grouped the various little truck-farms. These truck-farms would be graduated in size according to the man's ability to work. On each farm would be constructed a cottage for himself and family, if married. Each cottage to have open air sleeping porches for the patient and probably also for the rest of the family. There would also be provided community houses for the single men.

The advantages of having a colony of this sort are fairly obvious. In the first place, the patient is living under good conditions with a certain amount of constant medical supervision. He is much more likely to remain a "cure" than if permitted to go back to city life. The possibility of infection of others in the family will not be nearly so great as it would were he living in an ordinary city house. The fact that man is a social animal determines the necessity of establishing a centre where social intercourse may be carried on.

The cost of maintaining the sanitarium would probably be less than the cost of maintaining an equal number of cases under present arrangements where the cost runs into $10 or $12 per week. It is anticipated that outside of the capital cost of the tuberculosis colony and the pensions, that it would be practically self-sustaining.

The capital cost is, therefore, the only obstacle. It is estimated that this would probably approximate one million dollars.

The saving to the state through prevention cannot be estimated, but would many times cover the initial cost.

It is felt that some such solution is the only logical one which presents a permanent basis for a considerable proportion of our returned soldiers who have contracted tuberculosis. These will require permanent direction, and this scheme would render them largely self-supporting and thus be of great economic importance to the country.

This scheme provides a permanent solution for this question of a home for incurables insofar as tuberculosis is concerned.

Let us recapitulate:

1. That the Federal Government must bear the responsibility for disability or exacerbation of same due to service both in treatment during the curative stage, and pension for the permanent portion of disability.

2. That board lines of treatment are necessary through rest cure and graduated exercise to a sound economic basis in the competitive labour market.

[Col. F. W. Marlow.]

3. That truck-farms, co-operative open-air workshops, factories bee-keeping, henneries, etc., are required.

We might bear in mind the possibility of so developing public opinion that compulsory treatment of open cases may become the law (just as compulsory registration is now the law).

The conclusion arrived at is that the various municipalities, counties, provincial governments and federal government should determine that such a policy is both necessary and wise, and that if the scheme cannot or will not be financed by them, that public benefaction should be appealed to in order that under such auspicious circumstances, and under such pressing necessity, we may at once arrive at such a desirable solution of so urgent a problem.

The amendment follows:

Tuberculosis.

SIR,—I have the honour to inform you that I have slightly modified the scheme laid down in my recent memorandum to you in regard to the treatment of tuberculosis.

I have now come to the conclusion that the farm colony should be worked out on a strictly co-operative basis, just as I had planned for the workshops, for these two following reasons:—

1. If one patient were responsible for one small farm, his place would suffer very much in the case of a relapse or an intermittent illness.

2. Some of the cases might be inclined to do more work than they are physically able to do, whereas in a co-operative scheme a man would only draw a remuneration for the number of hours which the physician laid down for him.

I might say that this scheme is receiving approbation from all sides, including Major J. L. Todd of the Board of Pension Commissioners.

I expect shortly to have a detailed town plan which will present some of the ideas in a more tangible form.

I have the honour to be, sir,

Your obedient servant,

F. J. MUNN, Major.
 M.O. "D" Unit, M.H.C. Command, C.E.F.

There is one other subject I would like to direct your attention to briefly, and that is the question of venereal disease, and simply to state that some very drastic action will have to be taken in the matter of treatment of venereal diseases and the matter of detecting venereal diseases amongst returned soldiers, because when the venereal cases begin to come home that are not properly cured, unless proper supervision of these cases is carried out and proper treatment afforded, you can imagine what the result is going to be in the country, and that ought to be taken up immediately.

By Mr. Middlebro:

Q. Have you any suggestions to make?—A. I have none that are really fit to be put in. But that is a matter that ought to be taken up for consideration, and I would be glad to put my suggestions in at a subsequent time if you wish to have them.

By Hon. Mr. McCurdy:

Q. Most assuredly we would. You might draft a memo, Colonel to be put in as an exhibit?—A. I think it is a problem that really must be taken up very seriously, because it is going to be a most serious problem and we cannot afford to get behind in it. We ought to take it in hand immediately.

By the Chairman:

Q. For your information, Colonel Marlow, I would say that pages 52, 53 and 54 of the Memoranda that Colonel Potter supplied us with to-day give statistics regarding these cases?—A. We know that there are a great many of those cases overseas, and it is a notable fact that these men come out of hospital before their treatment is finished, a great many of them do, and so long as there is any sign of trouble these men are undoubtedly a menace to the country, and their treatment must be finished beyond the shadow of a doubt. There were one or two other matters which I was going to discuss with you with respect to certain things that were introduced by the Commission in regard to nursing, and also in respect to massage; but if it is true that the medical work is to be restored to the Medical Services probably these difficulties will be removed. In respect to nursing, I may say the Commission sent out an order by which they refused to recognize the rank of our nursing sisters, and their intention, I believe, was to create a nursing service of their own, the Military Hospitals Commission Nursing Service, along some other lines than the Army Medical Corps. If that service is coming back to our Corps, that difficulty will not continue, but it would have been, to my mind, a most serious difficulty. We have constantly maintained that the nurses who are nursing in the convalescent homes should be nursing sisters of the Army Medical Corps; that is to say we thought—some members of the Commission did not agree—that these nurses should have their rank of nursing sister, the same as they have overseas, because it is the greatest help in carrying on in the hospital in the matter of discipline. I might say that I have had a great deal of experience in that line, because I was the first medical officer to take nursing sisters into camp in 1910, and have had them in every year since, and I have found them most useful in the hospitals. I am personally satisfied that it is most desirable that nursing sisters should have rank. Some dispute that; but our nurses in Canada are probably of a higher standing than nurses anywhere, not only throughout this Continent but probably in the world, and I do think that they are deserving of commissioned rank for the work they carry on; not only that, but it is the greatest source of protection to the nurses themselves to wear the uniform and to have the rank which, I think, is materially useful in the discipline of the homes. The other matter, sir, was the matter of massage which plays a very great part in the treatment of many of the invalids, and is one of our most effective measures in restoring arms, legs, fixed—joints, and so on. I want to mention that the arrangement that we have entered into recently, or had entered into with the consent of the Medical Superintendent of the Hospitals Commission, was to have a class started for the training of certain people, who would be carefully selected, in giving massage, and these arrangements were entered into, as I say, with the consent of Colonel Thompson to Major Munn, and it was agreed that they were to receive a certain remuneration; certificated masseuses were to receive, I think, $45 a month, and assistants who were not certificated were to receive $30. Arrangements were made with the Toronto Society of Trained Masseuses to have a class to train them. Subsequently, without any warning, they took this massage, entirely a medical matter, and put it into the hands of a Sergeant-Major Kendall, who has charge of their physical training. They linked up massage with physical training.

[Col. F. W. Marlow.]

By Hon. Mr. Murphy:

Q. Who did?—A. The Hospitals Commission and under the arrangements that have now been made in our district instead of this other work going on, they selected a number of girls and put them in charge of Sergeant-Major Kendall and sent them down to the Whitby institution to take a three months course in massage. While they are getting this training they are to be paid $15 a month, and if they pass the examination they are to be employed in the convalescent hospitals at a salary of, I think, $55 a month. The reason I mention this is that I certainly do express a decided objection to carrying on any such class as that at an institution of that kind. Probably that will readjust itself under any new rearrangements that may be made.

By the Chairman:

Q. I have always felt that returned soldiers, particularly blinded men, should be taught massage. In Japan it is a government monopoly. Every blind man there is taught massage and no one is allowed to practice massage except blind men?—A. If I may just refer to one other point, because Mr. Middlebro stated this morning in asking me a question, that the Government had found it necessary to create the Military Hospitals Commission Command. In the last paragraph of p. 19 I have said something which applies not only to the medical services but to the Military Hospitals Commission Command as referred to in p. 18 where I have said:—

It seems obvious, then, that the medical service was regarded as being incapable of dealing with this problem which should have been its own. As it now is much duplication of "machinery" will be necessary and much expense will be added to the Government to maintain a separate and distinct organization to carry on work which should ordinarily have been performed by the Militia Department, had the medical service demonstrated its capability of properly preparing the soldiers' disposition for the administrative authorities to take the necessary action.

The reason for that statement is that I considered that this work is largely medical work, and with regard to the disposition of a man, as soon as you get his medical reports or board completed his disposition is comparatively a small thing, so that I would state in reference to this paragraph that the machinery for doing all of this work that is being done by the Hospitals Commission Command was already in existence in the Militia Department, and, in accordance with the arrangements that we were carrying on in Military District No. 2 with our own casualty department, we thought that the whole work might just as well have been carried on by the Militia Department without any duplication of machinery at all, and with, probably, a great deal less confusion than under the present arrangement.

By Mr. Middlebro:

Q. Can you suggest any reason why the Military Hospitals Commission was created if the work could be better carried on by the Army Medical Corps? Somebody must have thought the commission necessary?—A. Well, I could suggest a reason. I do not know how far it is true, but the one that appeals to me more than anything else is that it was a matter of unloading at the time.

Q. Unloading what?—A. Unloading work from the Militia Department which it should ordinarily have done, but because at that time it was particularly busy with many other matters that were pressing, the idea of a Commission was conceived, and the matter was unloaded.

Q. You are of the opinion that, owing to the amount of work in the Militia Department, they thought it was necessary to give the work to the Military Hospitals Commission?—A. To create something else to handle this big problem.

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. They did not think it worth while to give it to the A.M.C.?—A. Up to this time they did nothing about that. But with regard to the Hospitals Commission Command, as I have said, in my report, all machinery for carrying out this work already existed in the Militia Department, and I maintain that the duplication of the machinery to carry on these units in the different districts was unnecessary and an unjustifiable expense; because had they been carried on in accordance with our plan of carrying on the casualty department—the same thing could have been done in every district—it then could have been carried on as a unit of the C.E.F., and in each district it would be responsible to the District Officer Commanding, which, in some respects, it is now. It is a most anomalous organization, and, as I say, did not need to have been brought into existence.

By the Chairman:

Q. Was it not created on the supposition that the A.M.C. was insufficient to handle the problem?—A. You mean the Command?

Q. No, the Military Hospitals Commission.—A. Well, as I stated in my report, it seems obvious that that was the case.

Q. The Corps had been depleted by men going overseas?—A. Well, I have stated it seems obvious that that was their opinion, and I do not say that it was mine. But I had reference to the Command. The Military Hospitals Commission was created, I take it, primarily for the establishing, equipping, maintaining and supplying of institutions for the returned soldiers. I further maintain that had its work been confined to that which is a tremendous problem in itself, together with the vocational training and repatriation, and had the military work in connection with the whole problem been left under the Militia Department, the present difficulties would not have arisen.

By the Chairman:

Q. Do you think the field is large enough to afford ample scope for both organizations?—A. Absolutely. I think if the Hospitals Commission were to confine its work to the non-military side—that is to the providing of accommodation, the housing and feeding problem, and also to the vocational training and the repatriation problem at the other end when the medical service is finished with the men, it would then have a much bigger job than the Medical Service would have in looking after the treatment of the men, and medical reports because I think that vocational training and repatriation, will be one of the most serious problems we have to deal with. I think there would be no difficulty whatever in working along those lines if a proper parallel division were created.

Q. You have read the interview with the Minister of the Militia, which I handed to you. Does not that seem to be along the lines you have mentioned?—A. May I ask the minister if he will allow me to put in these recommendations and that they be taken as an answer to your question?

The CHAIRMAN: We will ask the minister if he has any objections to these recommendations going in.

Later, in a personal interview with the honourable the minister, Colonel Marlow was granted permission to enter his special recommendations which were submitted on December 28, 1916, and are as follows:—

MEDICAL SERVICE, INVALIDS.

Under present circumstances it is imperative that the work of the Army Medical Corps and the Military Hospitals Commission, in respect to the medical service to invalids should be co-ordinated in order to fix responsibility for the service and to attain for it a proper standard.

2. The medical service of the Militia Department has so many and so varied duties to perform in respect to recruits and soldiers in training, and supply of medical units and reinforcements for overseas service that in order to secure the proper degree of efficiency in the Medical Service to Invalids, it is advisable to organize and maintain until such time as the whole medical work can be consistently relegated to the general medical service, a branch of the service to be known as the Medical Service Invalids, such service to be carried on as a part of the Army Medical Corps work in Canada and to be administered apart from the general medical service.

3. The Medical Service, Invalids, should be allowed to draw upon the Army Medical Corps through its administration for such officers and other A.M.C. personnel as are available for this special service. Such officers and others while so employed should be detached from the general service for duty with the special branch, and should be subject to return to the general service only by arrangement between the D. G. M. S. and the Director of Medical Services, Invalids.

4. It should be understood that, when in the interest of the Medical Services Invalids, it is considered desirable to have commissions, temporary or otherwise as recommended, granted to medical practitioners whose services are needed, such action will be facilitated by the Army Medical Corps and immediate detachment for duty with the special branch permitted.

5. It should also be understood that if it is considered by the Director of Medical Services Invalids, in the interest of the special service to employ civilian practitioners or nurses where suitable militia medical officers or nursing sisters are not available, such action may be taken.

6. The Medical Service Invalids, should be administered by a D.M.S. Invalids (Director of Medical Services Invalids).

7. There should also be appointed an A.D.M.S. Invalids (Assistant Director of Medical Services Invalids) to assist the D.M.S. Invalids.

8. In each Military District there should be appointed a D.A.D.M.S. Invalids (Deputy Assistant Director of Medical Services Invalids) such officers to be responsible to the D.M.S. Invalids for the administration of the Medical Service Invalids in the various districts.

9. The Medical Service, invalids should be accorded the medical work of the Military Hospitals Commission Command. It should co-operate to the fullest extent with the Medical Superintendent of the Military Hospitals Commission in arranging an adequate and efficient service to meet all requirements.

10. It is suggested that it would be advantageous if arrangements could be made to have the D. M. S. invalids an ex-officio member of the Military Hospitals Commission.

11. It is further suggested that the Medical Service Invalids might co-operate with the Pensions Commission in the matter of the re-examination of pensioners.

12. In respect to this service, as in respect to the medical service generally, a revision of the rates of pay and allowance should be considered.

NOTES.

The accompanying charts from which much detail is omitted serve to illustrate such a service as outlined above and the disposition of invalids throughout the period of their convalescence and repatriation.

2. As an alternative to this plan it might be arranged to have the medical superintendent of the Military Hospitals Commission appointed A.D.M.S. Invalids with authority to administer the Medical Service Invalids as outlined above and in the accompanying charts. In view of the large amount of time taken up by his duties under the Military Hospitals Commission in connection with providing and maintaining adequate and suitable accommodation for invalids and superintending all other medical matters relative to invalids, other than the medical service in respect to their treatment and disposition, it is doubtful if such an arrangement would be satisfactory. It is considered, however, that such a plan would be more satisfactory than any in effect up to the present time.

3. While it is no doubt possible that a medical service, invalids might be organized along civilian lines, it is considered most inadvisable to resort to such a procedure, and for reasons which are so obvious that they do not need to be detailed.

(Copies of charts referred to are not attached as they were not copied.)

By Hon. Mr. Murphy:

Q. Did I understand you to say that in your opinion vocational training should be continued by the Military Hospitals Commission, or by some other body?—A. I should say it should be done by the Hospitals Commission. In my opinion the Medical Service would be very glad to be relieved of the housing and feeding problem, that is not a medical matter. My idea is that the medical services in respect to these men should be confined to distinctly medical work—to treatment, medical reports and disposition by medical boards—and that the housing and feeding problem should be attended to by the Hospitals Commission.

Q. You have made frequent references to the Hospitals Commission Command. How many men compose that?—A. I could not say how many men are in it at present, but all the men in Canada at the present time who are in class 2, that is to say, in the convalescent class, are on the strength of the Military Hospitals Commission Command. As soon as they are discharged into class 1, without pension, or into class 3, with pension, they are immediately struck off the strength of the Hospitals Commission Command.

Witness retired.

The CHAIRMAN: Colonel Marlow has concluded his testimony, and I will ask Colonel Potter if, after listening to Colonel Marlow's evidence, he desires to say anything with respect to it.

Colonel POTTER: It is difficult to remember everything that has been said to-day. Perhaps if the opportunity is afforded me of reading the printed testimony something may suggest itself to me.

The CHAIRMAN: Does any member of the committee wish to ask Colonel Potter any further questions?

By Mr. Ross (Middlesex):

Q. I would like to understand how the members of these medical boards which have passed so many unfit men, were appointed? Did the medical officer of the district appoint them? or were they appointed direct by the Minister of Militia over the head of your office?—A. As a general principle I think the local—

Q. I know what the general principle should be, but what is the practice?—A. The local practice was perhaps for the district officers to secure men at convenient points.

Q. Was that the universal practice?—A. As far as I am aware it is the universal practice for the district officer to arrange to get the medical officers.

[Colonel Porter.]

By the Chairman:

Q. What explanation do you give for the very large number of men who apparently were taken in and kept for a considerable period and then discharged as being medically unfit, both here and across the water?—A. I do not think of any more reasons than those that have already been mentioned by Colonel Marlow.

Q. Do you agree with the answers that Colonel Marlow gave?—A. I cannot remember all the reasons Colonel Marlow assigned, but as far as I can remember, I have nothing to add to them.

By Mr. Ross (Middlesex):

Q. Let us get down to the actual point. As a matter of fact in some cases local men were appointed as medical examiners, who were not recommended by the medical officers of the district, but from headquarters and not from any regular routine source?—A. I did not catch your question, will you repeat it, please?

Q. Were any medical officers appointed as examiners from headquarters without the recommendation of the District Medical Officer?—A. I think there were a few, but that is entirely a matter of memory.

Q. You cannot tell me how many?—A. No, I could not tell you.

Q. You could not tell me by looking up the files?—A. I hardly think I could, sir.

Witness retired.

Mr. ERNEST HENRY SCAMMELL called, sworn and examined:

By the Chairman:

Q. At what date, speaking approximately, were you appointed to your present position?—A. My appointment was not made until some considerable time after I had commenced the duties of secretary of the Military Hospitals Commission. I commenced to act as secretary of the Commission immediately it was formed, which was by Order in Council on June 30, 1915.

Q. Then the Military Hospitals Commission was created on June 30, 1915?—A. It was created as the Hospital Commission, and the Order in Council creating it was somewhat limited in its scope.

Q. You might tell us, because I understand you have been with this organization from the beginning, and even earlier, what were the conditions which led to the creation of the Military Hospitals Commission? Why was it created and why were its powers enlarged?—A. I cannot say, sir, what was at the back of the mind of the Prime Minister and all others interested in the discussions which led up to the formation of the Commission.

By Hon. Mr. Murphy:

Q. With whom did those discussions take place?—A. They took place presumably in Council.

Q. You are not referring to interviews that people had with the Government?—A. No. I knew nothing about the matter until the Commission was formed, but it was realized that we were approaching a very large problem. It was also realized that the Militia Department, with its medical service, was fully occupied in sending troops overseas.

Q. You say it was realized. Who realized that?—A. All those in charge, sir.

Q. You are assuming that those were the reasons which led up to the formation of the Commission?—A. Exactly, sir. As I stated, I had nothing to do with the preliminary organization of the Commission. The first Order in Council merely authorized the Commission to organize Convalescent Homes for the returned soldiers of the Canadian Expeditionary Force.

[Mr. E. H. Scammell.]

By the Chairman:

Q. At that time there was no question of any active cases coming back?—A. No, nor of any camp cases requiring treatment, that is, men invalided while in Canada. It was very soon recognized that the first Order in Council of 30th June, 1915, was too limited. First of all, as to the classes with whom we were in a position to deal, and second as to the scope of the Order in Council. Therefore, a new draft was made, under which the name of the Commission was changed to that of Military Hospitals Commission, as it stands today.

By Hon. Mr. Murphy:

Q. What was it called first?—A. The Hospital Commission first. Its full title now is the Military Hospitals and Convalescent Homes Commission. The new Order in Council was passed dated 14th of October, and power was taken to deal not only with officers, non-commissioned officers and men of the Canadian Expeditionary Force who returned invalided from the front, but also with those who were invalided on active service in Canada, Bermuda or elsewhere. Power was also taken to do something towards the question of employment, which was not included in the previous Order in Council. Perhaps, sir, I might give you a brief summary of the steps which have been taken.

The first task before the Commission was the provision of Convalescent Homes. The Department of Militia and Defence had previously created a Committee which had arranged for three or four small Convalescent Homes. These were taken over by the Commission from that Committee, and steps taken to open more Homes as they might be required. The earlier Homes were, one in Nova Scotia, one in Quebec city, one in Montreal, I think that was all. We endeavoured to keep the provision of these Convalescent Homes ahead of the returning men. During the autumn of 1915, comparatively few men were returned to us, not more on an average than about 100 a week, and very often less than that number. In the middle of November we suddenly had a big shipment.

Q. That was on November 15?—A. That was the Metagama shipment. We had no notification that that shipment was coming until the boat was four days at sea; neither Military Hospitals Commission nor the Militia Department. That ship had 620 convalescent men. The matter was dealt with, but it gave us a good deal of trouble.

By the Chairman:

Q. What became of that shipment of 620 men? I believe they were all Canadians, but many of them had never been at the front?—A. A great many of them. Happily we had made arrangements a little while previously to open our largest Convalescent Home in Toronto, and finding that this shipment was on the way, we rushed the opening of that institution, which was ready the day before the men arrived in Toronto. We also at that time had a Convalescent Home in Winnipeg, and another in Calgary.

Q. Did you distribute these men on arrival, at the various places?—A. Yes, we distributed them and then we gradually increased our accommodation, always keeping ahead of the number of men that were returning.

Q. Was there any time that you had less accommodation, at any point, than you had men?—A. Yes, but I will come to that in a moment or so. That was the misfortune and not the fault of the Commission. We had a number of Homes empty, or practically empty, with perhaps 20 men where we had room for 100; some of the smaller Homes were quite empty, but we were learning here, what they are learning in England, that the smaller Home is unsatisfactory and also that a Convalescent Home is not what is wanted. We started to prepare for Convalescent Homes or rest-places for recuperation.

Q. Where kindly individuals would donate their homes and make everything lovely for a few soldiers?—A. Exactly, that was our idea at the beginning; an idea which we have had to unlearn. We have found a larger institution under proper discipline, and under expert management, is far better adapted to the welfare of the soldier, than the smaller institution.

Q. Under more efficient management?—A. Yes, sir.

By Hon. Mr. Murphy:

Q. The larger the home the better?—A. The bigger the unit the more efficient is the management. We have always had a difficulty in forecasting the number of men about to return, a difficulty which has been partly occasioned by the conditions in England, and also by the conditions at the front. They cannot tell us very far ahead how many men we may expect, and the Commission has felt that it should not spend too much of the country's money in preparing and equipping homes, and in employing staffs where these homes will not be kept almost full, and the staff fully employed. Consequently, we may not in some directions have gone ahead and spent as much money as we might have done had we known exactly how the shipments would arrive.

Q. How much have you spent to date?—A. The total expenditure of the Commission to date is $843,849. I think it would be well for me to give you a list of the various institutions that we have at the present moment, in order that you may see how the work has developed. Starting in the East, we have a small Home in Halifax, and a small Home in Sydney, and another small Home in St. John.

By the Chairman:

Q. Are you satisfied you have sufficient accommodation in the Maritime Provinces?—A. No, sir, we have not.

Q. Will you tell us what places you are taking over in the Maritime provinces to increase your accommodation there?—A. In Halifax we have just taken over a part of the buildings and grounds of the Dalhousie University. We shall probably, next week, let a contract for putting up temporary buildings on those grounds. It is necessary for us to centralize in Halifax, because we can get better medical service there, and further, because it is one of the ports of disembarkation. It is also the capital of the province, consequently we have made that arrangement with the Dalhousie University. Shortly we will have sufficient accommodation in Nova Scotia to take care of all the Nova Scotia men.

By Mr. Ross (Middlesex):

Q. What will Dalhousie do?—A. Dalhousie will use a part of the present buildings and they have another building in the city. The total accommodation which we will have in Halifax will be about 350.

By the Chairman:

Q. Will that be sufficient there?—A. That will be for some time to come. In addition we have just erected at Pier No. 2, at Halifax, a receiving Hospital, with 550 beds of which 450 are for general cases and 100 for T.B's and isolation cases. That Hospital should be ready to receive patients this week, the beds and everything will be ready, and everything is complete. That will be a receiving hospital only, although it will be possible, if we wish, to keep them there for a week or two.

Proceeding to New Brunswick very shortly we shall be getting the old Government House at Fredericton which, with a small home we have at St. John, will give us all the accommodation we are likely to require for many months to come for convalescents in that province. For active cases we have taken over and altered the Armoury at St. John which will give us room for about 500 beds.

Q. What will the Government building accommodate at Fredericton?—A. Only about 200.

At Quebec we have the Savard Park Hospital, owned by the Department of the Interior, which has been handed over to us with its staff. The staff is paid by the Department of the Interior. The building is in good condition and it is a most excellent hospital, with accommodation for 150.

[Mr. E. H. Scammell.]

Q. What was it used for before it was handed over to your Commission?—A. It was used as an Immigration Hospital, and we have used it as a Convalescent Hospital for the past eighteen months. The Medical Officer in charge is Dr. Pagé, who is an officer of the Department of the Interior at Quebec city.

By the Chairman:

Q. Suppose what Dr. Marlow has been advocating should come to pass, namely that all the Medical Service should come under the A.M.C., what would be Dr. Pagé's position?—A. He is an officer of the A.M.C.

Q. Although he is also an officer of the Interior Department?—A. He is not paid by the A.M.C., he holds an honorary commission in that Corps.

Q. He has qualifications sufficient to meet the requirements of the Militia Department?—A. Absolutely, and that also applies to his two assistants at Quebec.

By Mr. Ross (Middlesex):

Q. Is Dr. Pagé receiving C.E.F. pay or is he on the Hospital Commission Staff?—A. Neither, he is getting pay as an officer of the Interior Department, he is drawing his usual salary; we are not paying him at all. I think if this Committee is going to Montreal, it should try to go down to Quebec, to see our facilities at that port for receiving the men, and the work which is being done there. There are facilities at the Recruiting Depot, for sleeping them, for feeding them, there is a recreation room, they have the run of the building, and the staff there not only looks after their medical comfort and pay every possible attention to them, but also deals with another aspect of the case, and questions them respecting their previous employment, and their families, and furnishes certain information which will be helpful towards getting them employment later on.

Q. I have heard it alleged, although I could not understand how it could possibly be done by Canadian officers, particularly, that these men at the Disembarkation Depot treated the returned soldiers very Prussian-like, that they were very irritable, and very boorish?—A. There is nothing at all of that nature.

Q. Have you been there yourself?—A. Many, many times.

Q. And you say that statement is unfounded?—A. Absolutely. I have no hesitation in giving that statement a most unqualified denial. The Military Hospitals Commission would not stand for anything of that kind for a moment, nor would the Militia Department. This Receiving and Discharge Depot is operated partly by the Militia Department and partly by the Military Hospitals Commission, although we have the privilege of paying the salaries. We have no other convalescent home in Quebec. The next is in Montreal, where our principal home is in the Grey Nuns Hospital. There we have accommodation for 300, part of a wing in that hospital having been made over to us; it is entirely operated by us, and by the Army Medical Corps; that is, the commission is in charge, and the Army Medical Corps looks after the medical side of the work there.

Q. On what basis? So much a day for each man?—A. We pay the Grey Nuns 75 cents a day per man, and they provide us with the hospital, with the beds, with the linen, and the food. We pay them monthly their accounts at that rate. We have a similar arrangement with the Khaki League at Montreal. They have two homes, one at Belmont Park and one on McTavish street, the total accommodation of those two homes being 99.

By the Chairman:

Q. What arrangement have you with them?—A. We pay them 75 cents a day.

Q. Who supplies the medical services?—A. The Army Medical Corps officers. We also supply the necessary orderlies and guards and so on.

Q. How is the discipline maintained?—A. Maintained by our officers; the officers of A unit Military Hospitals Commission command at all these places. All these homes in Montreal are under the officer commanding A unit, and the staff is employed by him, and is paid from the head office here. In Montreal we are making an extension. We have taken the old Loyola College on Drummond street, and are converting it into a convalescent home.

Q. By building an extension?—A. No, by renovating the whole place throughout. It will give us room for 250 patients.

By Mr. Ross (Middlesex):

Q. Are you renting the building?—A. Yes.

Q. From whom?—A. I am afraid I cannot tell you offhand. It was sold as a real estate proposition. It was some organization that bought it.

By Hon. Mr. Murphy:

Q. Realities Limited?—A. Some name like that.

By Mr. Ross (Middlesex):

Q. What rent are you paying?—A. The rent of the building is the interest on a $75,000 mortgage, and any other fixed charges, amounting to a sum of six or seven thousand dollars a year. That building will be ready for use, I hope, in two weeks. There has been a little delay in getting some equipment, otherwise it would have been ready now. That will be used mainly for convalescents, I expect, but we are in a position now in Montreal that we can either use the Grey Nun accommodation for convalescents, or we can use it for accommodation of hospital cases. The same will apply to this old Loyola Building or we can use either as active treatment hospitals.

Q. Where have you been carrying on your vocational training in Montreal?—A. In some of the rooms in the basement of the Grey Nunnery. Unfortunately the accommodation is not enough, and we shall have to make an extension in that direction. It may be we shall make an extension by utilizing one of the technical schools, but that matter has not yet been finally decided; but I was going to interpolate here, in view of a remark by Colonel Marlow, that we have now thoroughly up-to-date and complete equipment in the Grey Nuns hospital for medical work. The equipment has been put in under the direction of our medical officer there, and is considered to be what will be required, if that place is used as an active treatment hospital.

By the Chairman:

Q. Is Dr. Dunston Grey your medical officer?—A. No, sir, Dr. Grey is working in the hospital. Dr. Colonel Mackenzie Forbes is our officer in Montreal.

By Mr. Ross (Middlesex):

Q. How is he paid?—A. I do not think Colonel Forbes has been transferred to us; if not, he is paid by the Army Medical Corps.

By the Chairman:

Q. What is Colonel Forbes' title, as far as you are concerned?—A. Medical officer, A unit. The next Convalescent Home is the one in Ottawa, Sir Sandford Fleming.

Q. Supposing you tell us about the other homes in that district: for instance, the Tuberculosis—A. I would rather take the tuberculosis subject separately if I may. The accommodation of the Sir Sandford Fleming Home with the adjoining house is 90.

Q. What is the address of that home?—A. Chapel street.

Q. Do you know the number?—A. I think it is 213, just above Rideau street.

Q. Under what terms is this property given to the commission?—A. The old Sir Sandford Fleming house is loaned to us by the executors.

Q. What about the adjoining house?—A. We pay rent, $75 a month for it. The two houses are joined together, so that they are one. The next point is Kingston, where we have the Elmhurst Home, accommodation 42, and the Richardson, accommodation 27. The Elmhurst Home is rented by us at $700 a year, and the Richardson home is loaned to us. At Kingston, as was stated in Colonel Thompson's evidence, we are taking over two of the buildings at the Queen's University, and are putting up an additional building for kitchen purposes, and so forth. The work is well in hand. We shall then have room in Kingston for 550 patients.

[Mr. E. H. Scammell.]

Q. In the light of your present experience, are those two small hospitals you mentioned in Kingston desirable?—A. No; they will be useful, very probably, for annexes. The Richardson Home we shall probably use as a sleeping place for our orderlies.

Q. You are likely to centralize your work on the new hospital on the College grounds?—A. Yes.

Q. Then where next?—A. Then there is the institution at Whitby, a photograph of which is in this room, which will give accommodation for 1,100 or 1,200. I was in Toronto on Tuesday and they told me they were ready for about 450. Already we have sent about 100. That will be one of the most ideal places we have in Canada.

By Mr. Ross (Middlesex):

Q. Any particular class of patient?—A. We shall simply send general convalescents.

By the Chairman:

Q. How many will it accommodate?—A. 1,100 or 1,200.

By Mr. Middlebro:

Q. Lots of fresh air?—A. Yes, all that is wanted.

By Mr. Ross (Middlesex):

Q. It is at Whitby?—A. Yes; it is the new Ontario Government Hospital for the Insane.

By the Chairman:

Q. Under what terms do you get the use of it?—A. We are paying the Ontario Government for that institution, and also their institution at Guelph, $50,000 a year plus the interest on the money, which would be paid to them next September by the Grand Trunk for the institution on Queen street, Toronto, making a total of about $70,000 a year.

Q. For the two?—A. Yes. That is probably a little less than the interest on the capital involved.

By Hon. Mr. Murphy:

Q. How is the Grand Trunk connected with the matter?—A. The Ontario Government had a hospital for the insane on Queen street, Toronto: they have done very little to that probably for some years, because they were building their new institution at Whitby. They sold that property to the Grand Trunk, and the Grand Trunk is due to pay for it next September. Now, in order to give us Whitby they have had to get the Grand Trunk to hold off paying for this property until such time as it is ready for delivery.

By Mr. Ross (Middlesex):

Q. So they are losing the interest on the money?—A. They are losing interest on the money, which is four per cent on about $480,000, and of course we have to recoup them what they are losing. We have also to pay for the improvements and alterations which will be necessary in that place in order that they may continue to use it.

Q. They are continuing to use it as an asylum?—A. Yes, all we have had to do is to indemnify, as far as possible, the Government of Ontario, and they are handing us over these two institutions at Whitby and Guelph. Then we have also the institution loaned to us by the Government of Ontario at Cobourg, to which we are sending nerve cases, nearly all of which are more or less cases of insanity.

Q. Do you include cases of shell shock?—A. Yes, if they are bad. Insane cases, unless very badly insane, we send to Cobourg, so that they may be observed and looked after for a month or two, to determine whether they really are asylum cases or not. The equipment in Cobourg is up-to-date, two first-class alienists are there. This is another institution which I should like you gentlemen to visit, if you have an opportunity to do so, especially in view of some attacks which have been made on it recently.

Q. That is the Cobourg one?—A. Yes.

Q. What do you say is wrong with it?—A. Our friend "Jack Canuck" has something to say.

Q. I do not read that paper; is he telling the truth?—A. No, there is no truth in the charges at all. Now, at Toronto, there is the Central Military Convalescent Hospital on College Street, which is the old Bishop Strachan school, with a normal accommodation of 130; but we can squeeze more than that into it if necessary. There is also the Spadina Hospital, which is the old Knox College, where we have accommodation for 275; at the present time we have had to put some more in there.

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. It is overcrowded?—A. The Spadina Hospital is overcrowded at present, although we took a hundred patients out to Whitby the other day. We have a small hospital in one of the outskirts of Toronto, Longwood, a home belonging to Mrs. Beattie, which was furnished and handed over to us free of charge, and where we have room for 25, and we have used that for a rest home. It is the one small home that is really valuable to us, because we can send there for two or three weeks men who want to get away from the noise of the city. At Hamilton we have one place similarly fixed up for us, known as the Victoria Convalescent Home, with room for 35. Also Mrs. Crerar has devoted part of her house, "Dunedin," for returned soldiers, and she has room for 10. These places are uniformly kept filled, though, for a time, we had no patients for them. At St. Catharines is the home Colonel Marlow takes exception to, which was loaned to us by Miss Catharine Merritt. It is intended primarily for rheumatic cases. We were advised from England to anticipate a large number of rheumatic cases, which have not materialized—I think we were to have as many as fifteen hundred. This place at St. Catharines is quite close to the Welland Hotel with its baths, which would be specially valuable to this class of case. True, it is only a small home with room for 25 patients, and normally we keep about 15 there. But it is one of the homes that does not cost us very much to run. We do not send men there who require constant medical treatment other than bathing or something of that kind. Then in London we had loaned to us by Colonel Smith, his house, "Belvidere," which had room in it for 40 or 45 men. We used it for some months, but found it was too small, so closed it. We made arrangements with the Victoria Hospital in London that they should give us the two central wings, and are building for them a wooden building outside in the grounds for their isolation cases and putting up a kitchen, etc., for ourselves. We have room there for 130 patients, and can use that hospital either for convalescents or for active treatment cases, as we decide. At the present time we are using it for convalescents, and it is doing the work splendidly. At Port Arthur we have a small place that has been loaned to us by Mr. Frank Keefer, K.C., where there is room for 25. It is usually occupied about full. There has been a considerable enlistment from Thunder Bay district. At Winnipeg we have the Deer Lodge Hotel, which has been loaned by Mr. Rod Mackenzie. That hotel was supposed to accommodate a hundred, but it does not. It probably will take about 60, perhaps a few less, because we have had to take up so much room for our classes. We have taken temporarily a hotel in Winnipeg, which brings the accommodation up to a hundred or more. In addition to that, the I.O.D.E. have, for a considerable time, operated a convalescent home, and we have with them a somewhat similar arrangement to that with the Khaki League, except that we provide the building for the former.

By the Chairman:

Q. Do you find that these arrangements with independent philanthropic bodies work out satisfactorily?—A. Not generally speaking.

By Mr. Ross (Middlesex):

Q. Why do you make them then?

The CHAIRMAN: In some cases they were in existence in the early stage of the game.

The WITNESS: They were in existence before we began our work, and there is a great deal of feeling on the part of people in different localities—they want to help.

By Mr. Ross (Middlesex):

Q. I suppose they helped you over the time until you got your institutions started?—A. We will go a long way and put up with some inconvenience in our administration rather than offend some of these people who are anxious to help us.

By the Chairman:

Q. They were in the field before the Hospitals Commission in many cases, and helped when there was nobody else to help.—A. The I.O.D.E. have done a most excellent work among the men who have not gone overseas. We pay them 60 cents a day per man, and we give them quarters in the Immigration Building at Winnipeg, where we also have a clearing depot.

Q. What do they give for the 60 cents a day?—A. They feed the men.

Q. You supply the building?—A. Yes, and the orderlies, etc.

By Mr. Ross (Middlesex):

Q. And beds?—A. They supply the beds, which were all given as a matter of fact. Perhaps I had better say that at Winnipeg where we have a considerable number of out patients, we shall soon have magnificent accommodation in the Old Agricultural College that is being made over to us by the Manitoba Government free.

By the Chairman:

Q. What number will you be able to accommodate there?—A. Practically any number we want according to what buildings we put up there. To begin with, I suppose, it will give us 600.

Q. Ample for all your needs?—A. Oh, yes, and for a long time ahead. Then in Regina we have a college which has been loaned to us by the Synod of Qu'Appelle, the St. Chad's College. It has room, or had room according to my measurement of the building, for 70 patients. But owing to the fact that a good deal of space has had to be taken up for the administration of our unit and for vocational purposes, we are only able now to get 45 men in.

Q. For sleeping?—A. Yes. But we are making arrangements to take over another place in Regina. We have recently taken over the Y.M.C.A. building in Saskatoon which will give us accommodation for 150.

Q. That is a modern building?—A. Oh, yes, absolutely a modern building. Then the next step is to Calgary, where we have a hotel at Ogden. This hotel was loaned by the Calgary Malting and Brewing Company to the Alberta Red Cross Society, and by them fixed up as a convalescent hospital. Up to recently we had a similar arrangement with that society in the operation of these buildings, as we have with some of these other organizations, but we have recently had to change that, and to-day they are helping us by turning over to us the supplies that are given to them, and also by making certain purchases. We reimburse them for their outlay, whatever their actual out-of-pocket expenses are. We have found that arrangement is working very satisfactorily.

[Mr. E. H. Scammell.]

By Mr. Ross (Middlesex):

Q. What would that cost be per man?—A. Do you mean the total cost including the medical service?

Q. I mean the total cost. You are paying 75 cents to the Grey Nuns, Montreal, and 60 cents at another place. How much does this housing scheme cost you?—A. It costs us about $1.10.

Q. Per man?—A. Yes.

By the Chairman:

Q. You do not have to supply orderlies and beds, do you?—A. We supply orderlies.

Q. Do you pay $1.10 for what costs you in Montreal 75 cents?—A. It costs us that amount by the time we reckon our medical service, nurses, orderlies, and so forth.

By Mr. Ross (Middlesex):

Q. And what are you paying the Khaki League?—A. To the Khaki League we are paying 75 cents, plus these extra charges. In paying 75 cents a day it costs us more to feed the men than if we were feeding them ourselves; we can feed the men for less than that amount. In the case of the Calgary Red Cross Society we were paying them originally 90 cents a day, and they were employing all the help necessary. We reduced the payment to 75 cents and then found it was too much. The cost of feeding a man varies from month to month. It varies according to locality and it also varies somewhat according to the condition of the men who are in the home at the time. The sum of 33 to 40 cents per day covers all our cost for food.

By Mr. Ross (Middlesex):

Q. Why are you paying these people at Ogden $1.10?—A. That is the total cost, which includes coal and salaries of medical men, nurses, orderlies and so on. All the expenses that go to the running of the institution work out at about that sum a month.

By the Chairman:

Q. Will you now proceed with your statement? You have got as far as Ogden?—A. At Calgary also we have taken over the Immigration Building, which we use as a clearing depot, and as sleeping quarters for any men who require to sleep at Calgary.

At Edmonton we have taken over the hospital at South Edmonton, known as the Strathcona Hospital. I made a note when Colonel Marlow was speaking, that he said there were no active treatment hospitals in Canada under the Commission, that we have not a proper active treatment hospital. We have taken over this hospital lock, stock and barrel. We have a complete staff there.

By Mr. Ross (Middlesex):

Q. Is not that an awful distance to send men from the coast to Strathcona Hospital?—A. It is only for Western men and has accommodation for 150 men. At Esquimalt, we have the old Naval Hospital, which is probably our most suitable convalescent home, with room for 110; we have recently taken another place, a few miles from Victoria, known as Resthaven, Sidney, with accommodation for 160. It was a very fine week-end hotel, which was put up in the boomtime, is elegantly furnished, but it has been a dead loss to the owners, and they have let us have it for $250 per month.

Q. Is this Esquimalt Hospital that you spoke of the old Military Hospital?—A. No, sir, it is the old Naval Hospital, which had not been used for some years; we took the building and have made an ideal place of it.

[Mr. E. H. Scammell.]

Q. How long have you had this?—A. The old Naval Hospital was opened in November, 1915.

By the Chairman:

Q. You have nothing to do with the old Military Hospital, mentioned in Dr. Marlow's report?—A. No, nothing at all.

Witness retired.

The Committee adjourned.

Medical Inspection of Recruits.

SIR,—I have the honour, by direction, to state that it is desirable not only that special care should be taken at the time of the Medical Inspection, prior to enlistment, that men who are not physically fit should not be enlisted, but also, that subsequent steps should be taken from time to time so that men, who have been enlisted, but who are not in fact medically fit, may not be retained in the service for any extended period, but should be discharged without delay.

2. It is, therefore, directed, that a Medical Board of two Officers in each Division and District shall inspect all recruits at stated intervals.

3. Such Medical Board shall inspect recruits either at central points at which they may be concentrated in certain Divisions and Districts, or shall visit the different places at which the men have been recruited, and are being billeted, and inspections are to be made by such Board at least three times during the winter months.

4. In each case, where a recruit is found physically unfit, the proceedings of M.F.N. 227 will be placed on file at Divisional or District Headquarters, and the discharge will be carried out under paragraph 322 (2), (c) K.R., & O.C.M., 1910.

5. The proceedings of such Medical Boards need not be sent to Headquarters, Ottawa, but can be retained at Divisional or District Headquarters.

6. A list of discharges so carried out should be forwarded to the Secretary, Militia Council, Ottawa, after each of such inspections, stating the nature of the physical disability of each man so discharged, the name of the Medical Officer by whom he was passed on enlistment and the name of the Medical Officer of the Battalion.

7. The attention of the Medical Examiners of recruits should be called to the Regulations applicable to careless examination.

Medical Examination of Recruits.

I have to invite your attention to the subject marginally noted.

It has been brought to attention that Medical Examiners of recruits from time to time pass men as fit, who are suffering from disabilities which it is expected will be corrected by surgical treatment carried out by the Military authorities after the men have been enlisted.

In order that there may be no misunderstanding on this point, action should be taken to inform all Medical Examiners of recruits (Div. and Dis.) men are not to be passed as fit with the intention that disabilities, such as referred to, will be corrected by operation after the men have been enlisted.

This matter is brought particularly to your attention as there are numbers of men being passed as "fit" who are, after enlistment, found to be suffering from Hernia, Varicocele, Varicose Veins, etc., and who obviously should never have been enlisted.

The enlistment of this class of recruits has resulted in much waste of public money, which every effort should be made to prevent.

Kindly forward a copy of the letter of instructions sent out in this connection.

PHYSICAL STANDARD FOR RECRUITS, C.E.F.

SIR,—I have the honour, by direction, to invite your further attention to the subject marginally noted.

It is considered desirable that all men physically fit now employed on Guard duties, etc., in Canada be given an opportunity to proceed on Overseas Service and to replace them as far as possible by men who are considered as unfit for Overseas Service but who are not by their disability prohibited from performing such duties as they may be detailed for on Home Service in Canada.

The usual Standards of physical fitness.

- (1) For those returned from Overseas or unfit for further service abroad, or
- (2) For those who have on presenting themselves in Canada been found physically unfit on account of a minor disability may be relaxed to the following extent.

Men unfit for Service "Overseas" may be considered as "fit" for Home Service.

- (1) If suffering from a disability which does not prevent efficiency for the special duty on which to be employed.
- (2) If duty on which to be employed is not considered as likely to aggravate the disability on account of which the previous finding "Unfit" was made.
- (3) If the disability is not expected to progressively become worse.
- (4) If previous findings of "Unfit" was not on account of the following disabilities.

Epilepsy.
Insanity.
Tuberculosis.
Chronic Nephritis.

Physical Examination of Recruits.

SIR,—I have the honour, by direction, to invite your attention to the subject marginally noted, with special reference to cases of pulmonáry tuberculosis which have developed from time to time amongst the newly enlisted recruits.

It is requested that the attention of all concerned be drawn to the need of the very careful examination of the lungs at the time the recruits are being passed as fit for overseas service.

A large number of cases of pulmonary tuberculosis have developed amongst those enlisted in the overseas forces, and having regard to the short time which elapsed between enlistment and the date when the disease was detected, it would appear that there is good ground for suspecting that a number of the men have been enlisted in the Canadian Expeditionary Force, who, at the time of enlistment, were suffering from pulmonary tuberculosis, the result being that, after a short period of service, the men have to be sent to a sanatorium and maintained at the public expense for more or less extended periods.

Kindly give this matter your immediate attention, and notify Headquarters, Ottawa, of the action which is being taken to bring this matter to the attention of all concerned.

SIR,—I have the honour, by direction, to forward herewith copy of a communication received from the General Officer Commanding Canadians, Shorncliffe Camp, England.

It is requested that you will kindly have the matter brought to the attention of the Medical Officers who carried out the examination and inform them that they must, in future, be more careful in carrying out the medical examination of recruits. It should be impressed upon all Medical Examiners of Recruits in the District that the careless medical examination of recruits results in much waste of public funds and causes great inconvenience to the various units in which the men have enlisted. If possible, some explanation should be secured from the Medical Officers concerned as to why the men, particularly referred to in the attached list, have been passed as fit.

The Special Inspection of Troops for Venereal Disease before Embarkation for Overseas.

SIR,—I have the honour, by direction, to forward for your earnest consideration a copy of a letter from the Assistant Director of Medical Services, Canadians, Shorncliffe, England, who has reported the large number of cases of venereal disease occurring amongst the Canadian troops before their arrival in England. It is requested that careful attention be given this report and that early action be taken to prevent recurrence of the condition reported.

Careless medical inspection of troops prior to departure for overseas is responsible for many men having to enter hospital there immediately upon their arrival; hence accommodation needed for casualties from the front is filled by cases that should have been treated in Canada.

When at the final inspection of troops before proceeding overseas, (and such inspection should be made at the latest possible date) cases of venereal disease are found, they are not to be permitted to proceed but are to be sent to the nearest Military Hospital for treatment.

Commanding Officers of Units or Drafts will be held responsible that the Medical Officer has made a thorough physical examination of the personnel of the Unit or Draft about to proceed overseas and will furnish a certificate signed by the Medical Officer of the unit or such other Medical Officer as may be detailed for this work to the effect that there are no cases of venereal disease amongst the personnel under his command.

The attention of all concerned should be drawn to paragraph 418 K. R. and O. Canada 1910.

SIR,—I have the honour, by direction, to inform you that where men in forestry battalions are to be employed as labourers only, and are not to be considered as enlisted for general service overseas, the ordinary standards may be relaxed as follows:—

- (1) Standard of vision to be the same as for C.A.S.C., C.A.M.C., or C.O.C., i.e., if he can read D-80 at 20 feet, with the left eye, without glasses, and not less than D-100, with the right eye, at the same distance, without glasses, he will be considered "Fit."
- (2) The absence of a finger on either or both hands, provided it is not the thumb or forefinger which is missing, will not be a cause for rejection.
- (3) Absence of one or two toes on either or both feet, provided it be not the great toe, will not be a cause for rejection.
- (4) Age limit to be 48 years, provided such men are specially qualified as millwrights, saw filers, etc.

Defective Vision. Inspection of Recruits.

SIR,—I have the honour, by direction, to invite your attention to the subject marginally noted, with special reference to those cases which might ordinarily be discharged under H.Q. 16-1-29, dated August 10, 1915.

When men have been issued uniforms, and have had the benefit of more or less extended periods of training, it is desirable, where possible, to retain them in the service; therefore, a soldier will not be discharged for defective vision, unless the defect is due to—

- (a) Squint; or
- (b) Some morbid condition of the eyes or lids of either eye, liable to aggravation or recurrence.

The defect of vision, however, must not be such that it cannot be corrected, by the aid of glasses, up to the standard required for recruits on enlistment.

In cases such as above referred to, glasses may be provided, and will be replaced when necessary (provided loss or breakage is not due to negligence) at the public expense.

NOTES ON THE EXAMINATION OF RECRUITS FOR SPECIAL SERVICE.

Men for Special Service in Canada, in addition to those who pass Standard Requirements, may be taken from two other general classes:—

(1) Men Invalided (from Overseas or Canada) who have a slight disability which unfits them for Overseas Service, but whose disability will not render them unfit for some form of Spécial Service.

(2) New Recruits who have some slight physical defect or disability which, while it leaves them below the standard required for Overseas Service, does not render them unfit for less strenuous Special Service.

These two classes of men may be used to replace soldiers who are willing to proceed overseas, and who are at present employed on garrison or guard duty, as military police, or on clerical or other work.

Owing to the constant demand for men for overseas service, it is considered expedient to substitute, as far as is consistent with efficiency, "Home Service" for "Overseas Service" men.

It is impossible to establish definite rules applicable to all cases, as to how far the usual standards of physical fitness may be relaxed. Each case must be decided upon its own merits.

In the case of recruits who may have been rejected for overseas service by the local medical examiner, on account of some slight physical defects or disabilities, but whose disabilities are not sufficiently serious to render them unfit for special service, a Medical Examining Board of three members will be assembled by the A.D.M.S. of the military district concerned, for the purpose of making a supplementary medical examination. In any area where it is impossible to assemble a Medical Examining Board, the report of the local medical examiner will be accepted.

Classification of Men for Special Service.

- (a) Fit for general duty on special service in Canada.
- (b) Fit for garrison duty on special service in Canada.
- (c) Fit for labour purposes on special service in Canada.
- (d) Fit for sedentary work, as clerks, etc., on special service in Canada.

It must be borne in mind by the Medical Examining Board that a recruit who is not physically fit for any branch of the service, in Canada or overseas, is liable to become, at a future date, a charge upon the public. Hence, while the standard for special service may be slightly lower or different from that for overseas service, it is necessary to be exceedingly careful lest too great laxity be shown in passing candidates.

There will necessarily be many distinctions between the two standards of fitness, but a few general rules may be laid down:

General Rules.

1. He must be physically fit for the duty on which it is proposed to employ him; and the Report must state any duty on which he should not be employed.
2. He must not be suffering from any disability which is liable to be progressive in character.
3. If he has some disability, it must be of such a character that it will not be aggravated by the work of the branch of the service in which it is proposed to employ him.

4. In each case there shall be no disability other than the one or more specified and passed by the Examining Medical Board.

5. He must have no organic disease; and he must sign a statement to the effect that he has never suffered from insanity, tuberculosis, epilepsy or fits.

Special Rules.

Modifications of the ordinary standard of fitness, which may be noted with reference to the examination of men for Home Service only, in Canada. The following may be accepted:

1. Standard of height; minimum 4' 10".

2. Age. Men between 45 and 48 years of age, provided they are otherwise physically fit according to the Overseas standard.

3. Chest Measurement; minimum 31"; but the lungs must be normal, and family history free from tuberculosis. (In case of doubt, a certificate from the family physician should be secured.)

4. Vision, (a) Any man whose vision may be brought up to normal, in both eyes, by the aid of glasses, provided the visual defect is not due to existing disease.

(b) Men who have lost one eye, or the sight thereof, but whose vision, without a glass, in the remaining eye is normal, (provided the normal eye is the "shooting" eye, left or right).

(Squint, or any morbid condition of the eyes or lids of either eye, liable to the risk of aggravation or recurrence, will cause the rejection of the candidate.)

N.B.—Glasses will be provided free and replaced, if required, at public expense once every twelve months.

5. Varicocoele or Varicose Veins, not of a degree to render unfit for sedentary occupations.

6. Flat Feet, of slight or moderate degree, not sufficiently marked to render unfit for office work.

The following will not constitute unfitness.

1. Loss of one or two fingers on either hand, excepting thumb or forefinger, provided such loss does not interfere with his ability to do the work at which it is proposed to employ him.

2. Loss of any toe or toes, except the great toe.

3. Loss of one foot or leg, in invalided soldiers, who can wear and use an artificial limb. (These men may be accepted for clerical or other suitable duty.)

Acceptance will be subject in all cases to the Medical Records which may be on file at Militia Headquarters, coinciding with, or supporting, the decision of the Medical Examining Board as to the desirability of suggested employment.

The general grounds for rejection (with the exceptions above mentioned) as given in "Rules for Inspection of Recruits, 1916", shall also apply to men for Home Service in Canada.

The Medical Examining Board will be permitted to use discretionary powers in the approval of any slightly disabled men, who, in their opinion, may be utilized for some branch of the Special Service, but whose disability is not specifically mentioned in the foregoing paragraphs.

N.B.—The Attestation Papers and other Documents relating to men employed on Special Service, who are not up to Overseas Standard, are to be marked in red with the word "Special."

H.Q. 54-21-51-9.
26-8-16.

From the Adjutant General, Canadian Militia,

To Officers Commanding Military Districts and Camps, and Inspector Generals, E. and W. Canada.

Instructions re Medical Inspection of Troops, and Reports to be rendered regarding same.

SIR,—I have the honour, by direction, to invite your attention to a report which has been received from the General Officer Commanding Canadians, in connection with the subject marginally noted, and which brings to attention a serious condition of affairs with regard to “unfits” amongst the troops sent overseas.

The following classes are especially noted:—

- (1) The large number of men over age.
- (2) Physically unfit from various causes which should be easily detected prior to embarkation, such as hernia, heart disease, etc.
- (3) Active venereal diseases at the time of leaving Canada.
- (4) Developing cases of infectious diseases.

In order that a detailed report may be furnished, complete copies of the overseas report are being prepared and will be forwarded as soon as possible with covering letter of instructions.

It is requested that the physical and medical examinations of the soldiers in mobilization camps, billets, camps of instruction, etc., be given very special and immediate attention as it is quite as important as the medical examination of the recruit.

These examinations of troops must be frequently and regularly conducted in order to safeguard the health of the individual, and the proper sanitation of the army. The following points are to be observed.

All troops, as soon as possible after mobilization, should be subjected to a thorough medical examination by the M.O. of each unit concerned.

This examination has three objects:—

- (a) To discover any physical or mental defects, disease or disabilities which may have been overlooked by the M.O. on his examination of the recruit.
- (b) To detect any disease which may have supervened since enlistment.
- (c) To see that recruits are not under or over the age limit as laid down in previous instructions.

N.B.—Experience indicates that the statement of a recruit as to his age is not always to be accepted without question. The examining medical officer must be guided in his decision by the “apparent” rather than the “stated” age. If on physical examination, the recruit is evidently past the age limit, e.g., by the state of his arteries or eyes, as evidenced by the arcus senilis, etc., even though his actual age by years is within the limit, he should be rejected.

A report of such examination, including a nominal roll of unfits, will be furnished by the M.O. to the A.D.M.S. of that Military District or Camp concerned, who will take such action as may be indicated to have the cases of unfits properly dealt with.

In this preliminary examination the “Rules for Examination of Recruits, 1916,” and “Notes on Examination of Recruits for Special Service” will be taken into consideration, and decisions made accordingly.

A weekly examination of all units should also be made for the purpose of discovering venereal, contagious or parasitic diseases, and for the purpose also of treating and controlling the same.

It should be impressed upon the regimental or examining M.O. that the importance of thoroughness cannot be overestimated. Epidemics of various kinds may thus be prevented, and the mistake of sending unfits overseas reduced to a minimum.

For medical examination, men should be stripped, and particular attention is to be paid to the following points:—

- (1) All skin parasites, such as head or body lice, itch mites, etc.
- (2) Rashes of contagious diseases, such as: Measles, German Measles, Scarletina; Small Pox, Chicken Pox, etc.
- (3) Venereal Diseases: Syphilis, Gonorrhea, Soft Chancre, etc. The foreskin should be well retracted during this examination.

The examining M.O. will furnish the A.D.M.S. of the District or Camp weekly with a Venereal Disease Report, and a Contagious Disease Report, showing the number and character of the cases discharged in the unit during the week, together with a Nominal Roll of such cases.

Summaries of these reports (but not the individual names) will be forwarded monthly to the O.C. of the Military Dsitriect concerned, for transmission to the Secretary of the Militia Council.

As near the date of embarkation as possible, a careful medical inspection must be made of all Officers, Warrant Officers, N.C.O.'s and Men for overseas service; arrangements to be made by the A.D.M.S. of the District or Camp concerned.

Officers Commanding units or drafts will be responsible that every opportunity is given for such medical inspections, and will prepare a certificate in triplicate to the effect that such inspection has been carried out prior to the departure of the troops concerned. The three copies of this certificate will be disposed of as follows:—

- (1) 1 copy to be retained by the O.C. the unit or draft, to be produced for the information of the overseas authorities upon arrival at destination.
- (2) The other two copies to be forwarded to the O.C., Military District or Camp Commandant concerned. One of these to be forwarded to the Secretary of the Militia Council, and the other to be retained for reference at Headquarters of the District.

These certificates will be signed by the O.C. the unit or draft, and by the examining Medical Officer (copy of certificate form attached).

The strictest attention must be paid to the above instructions to prevent the recurrence of the serious situation reported by the overseas authorities.

I have the honour to be, sir,
Your obedient servant,

Major-General, A/Adjutant-General.

New Standard of Vision.

SIR,—I have the honour, by direction, to inform you that the Standard of Vision at present required of recruits for the Canadian Overseas Forces, and which are as follows,—

1. If a recruit can read D-60, at 20 feet, or better with each eye, without glasses, he will be considered "Fit."
2. If he can read D-20, at 20 feet, with the right eye without glasses, and not less than D-80, at the same distance with the left eye, without glasses, he will be considered "Fit."
3. If he can read D-20, at 20 feet, with the left eye, without glasses, and not less than D-120 with the right eye, at the same distance, without glasses, he will be considered "Fit" for the Canadian Army Service Corps, Canadian Army Medical Corps, the Canadian Ordnance Corps or the Forestry Battalions, and for drivers of the Canadian Artillery, or Canadian Engineers. (H.Q. 593-1-23, November 19, 1915, volume).

Have been reduced and the following standards will be considered as sufficient:—

1. If a recruit can read D-80 at 20 feet or better with each eye, without glasses, he will be considered "Fit."
2. If he can read D-80 at 20 feet, with the right eye, without glasses, and not less than D-200 at 20 feet, with the left eye, without glasses, he will be considered "Fit."

3. If he can read D-200 at 20 feet, with the right eye, without glasses, and not less than D-80, with the left eye, at the same distance without glasses, he will be considered "Fit" for the Canadian Army Service Corps, Canadian Army Medical Corps, Canadian Ordnance Corps, or the Forestry Battalions, and for drivers of the Canadian Artillery or Canadian Engineers.

All concerned should be informed without delay and action should be taken to encourage those who have previously applied for overseas service, and who were rejected on account of defective vision, to again present themselves for examination, with a view to ascertaining whether, with the reduced standards of vision, then can be accepted for overseas service.

Standard of Vision.

Your attention is invited to the subject marginally noted.

Very recently a very marked reduction has been made in the Standards of Vision for recruits, and it is therefore most desirable that this reduction be given careful supervision.

It would appear from reports received from overseas, that the eyes of recruits are very carelessly examined; in fact it would almost appear in many cases they were not examined at all.

Every effort has been made to distribute eye-test cards in sufficient quantities, so that all medical examiners of recruits may be supplied. Will you kindly ascertain whether a sufficient supply of eye-test cards has been sent to Military Districts or Camp, and if you require more advise by wire how many.

It should also be ascertained whether the medical examiners or recruits are examining eyes under proper conditions. It is suggested that in many instances it is likely the full distance of 20 feet is not insisted upon.

Medical Services in connection with Recruiting.

SIR,—I have the honour, by direction, to forward herewith copy of the recommendation made and approved by the Militia Council with regard to the Medical Services in connection with recruiting, which reads as follows:—

1. That more care be exercised, especially with reference to "over" and "underage," by the Officers and N.C.O.'s. engaged in recruiting.

(Men over or under the age limit should not be approached by recruiting agents and where such men seek to enlist, their attention should be called to the seriousness of a false oath in attestation.)

2. A preliminary medical examination only should be made by the local examiner, who may be an A.M.C. Officer or a Civilian Practitioner, properly appointed. (The recruiting Officer should satisfy himself that the Medical Examiner has received proper instructions re the conducting of such examinations from the A.D.M.S. of the district concerned.)

3. As soon as a recruit is passed as "Fit," at this preliminary medical examination, he should be sent to the nearest "Mobilization Centre" to appear before the Medical Examining Board. If he passes this second examination as "Fit" he will be sent to the Headquarters of the Overseas Unit for which he was recruited. No equipment or clothing to be provided until he reports to his unit.

4. In the case of men rejected by the Medical Board, necessary transport to and from the Mobilization Centre with pay and allowance at Overseas rates for the number of days lost, should be granted.

5. A certificate of such rejection, to be prepared by the Medical Board; this certificate to be signed by the rejected applicant, the Officer Commanding Mobilization Centre, as well as by the President of the Medical Board. The form of certificate to be similar to that for Deserters: (M.F.B. 356, new series, attached).

(These certificates might be photographed and sent to other Mobilization Centres to prevent future attempts at enlistment of men previously declared medically unfit.)

6. A weekly return of unfits to be compiled at Mobilization Centres of Form similar to M.F.B. 238 (attached) and copies distributed to those concerned, e.g., to the Military District, the Record Office and to all other Mobilization Centres.

7. As soon as a recruit who has been passed by Medical Board reports to his unit, the M.O. of that unit will make a careful medical examination of him and if he has any objection to the decision of the Medical Board, will immediately report to the O.C. of the unit, requesting a reconsideration of the case before any additional expense to the public is incurred.

8. That where permission is given to recruit over wide areas; in all cases, prospective recruits must be sent to the nearest Mobilization Centre for examination by the Medical Board.

9. A recruit who is passed as "fit" should report as soon as possible to the headquarters of his unit.

10. Mobilization Centre: Staff.

- (a) A Combatant Officer is charge with whatever subordinate staff he requires.
- (b) Medical Board composed of three members. An Eye and Ear Specialist to be employed at pay of his rank or at special rate of pay; whichever is more economical. The Medical Staff to be increased as necessary to meet the requirements of the Centre.
- (c) Suitable quarters for Medical Examinations and all necessary technical medical equipment to be furnished.

11. District Arrangements.

That Military Districts be divided into areas to such advantage that Mobilization Centres be as few as possible with due regard to convenience and efficiency.

It is requested, please, that information be forwarded without delay as to whether arrangements can be made in M.D. No. to carry out the scheme. If certain modifications will be necessary to make the scheme applicable in the District, kindly favour with your remarks at the earliest date possible.

The A.D.M.S., M.D. No. should be requested to submit a Requisition for the provision of any necessary technical equipment for such Mobilization Centres as may require same.

Physical Standards of Recruits.

SIR,—I have the honour, by direction, to forward herewith memorandum by the A/D.G.M.S., which it is desired copies be made of and forwarded to each Medical Officer and civilian medical practitioner examining recruits in M.D. No.

It has been very difficult to impress Medical Officers with their responsibilities as regards the passing of men as physically fit for overseas service and the A/D. G.M.S. suggests that an appeal should be made to them from a professional point of view.

I have the honour to be, sir,

Your obedient servant,

MEMORANDUM FOR A.D.M.S.

Physical Standards of Recruits.

With reference to the marginally noted subject, your attention is again invited to the very great importance of insisting that all recruits for the C.E.F. be examined with special care.

A great deal of criticism of the medical profession, not only in the A.M.C., but of the civilian medical practitioners as well, with reference to the medical examination of recruits, has been made. It is desirable that all who are carrying out this duty should be impressed with the serious responsibility which they assume when recruits for overseas service are passed as "fit."

A recruit's acceptance for overseas service depends primarily on a medical certificate of fitness; hence it is essential that no other than medical considerations should influence the medical examiner of recruits in making his decision.

A man is either "fit" or "unfit" in accordance with the regulations and no "special employment," except as laid down in the regulations, should be permitted to modify the decision.

In some instances the anxiety to secure recruits may have influenced medical examiners to relax the standards of physical fitness, as laid down; but they should be reminded that such relaxations is eventually productive of serious results.

The certificate of a medical examiner is given as a professional opinion, and is respected and accepted as such by the Department of Militia. Examiners should bear in mind that their decisions are taken in good faith, and upon their certificates is based the expenditure of public funds necessary in the training and maintenance of a soldier of the Expeditionary Force.

It is hoped that medical examiners will remember that an opinion as to a recruit's fitness or unfitness for overseas service requires the same care and the same judgment as any other professional opinion.

Will you kindly bring this matter to the attention of all concerned, for their earnest consideration.

Physical Examination of Recruits. Operations subsequent to enlistment to render physically fit.

SIR,—I have the honour, by direction, to invite your attention to the subject marginally noted. It is again brought to your attention the undesirability of enlisting men in the C. E. F. who require, subsequent to enlistment, operations to render them physically fit.

Instances have been noted where men have been promised if they enlist such operations would be performed by the military authorities. Cases so enlisted and operated upon must in any case be unfit for the work of training for more or less extended periods, and it is not always to be expected that a cure will follow. In a number of instances the man's condition may not be improved, or may even become worse than when he enlisted, and there is always the possibility of the department becoming liable for claims for pension.

Kindly have this matter immediately brought to the attention of all concerned, with recruiting or enlistment of men for the overseas forces, and instruct them that the practice of enlisting men physically unfit, with the understanding they are to be subsequently operated upon by the military authorities, must cease.

In order that cases of incipient pulmonary tuberculosis in troops may not be overlooked, it is requested that Medical Officers in charge of troops or hospitals will observe closely every case of bronchial trouble.

It is expected that in any chest condition where there is expectoration and the least suspicion, the sputum will be examined for tubercle bacilli.

Where a diagnosis of pulmonary tuberculosis is made the patient should be transferred at once to a Sanatorium for treatment, and the barracks or quarters thoroughly disinfected.

Medical Officers examining recruits should reject anyone who has at any time suffered from pulmonary tuberculosis, and they should be on their guard for attempts at re-enlistment of men who have been previously discharged as medically unfit on account of this disease.

Instructions Regarding Medical Inspection of Troops, and Reports to be rendered regarding same.

SIR,—With regard to the marginally noted subject, I have the honour, by direction, to call particular attention to the following points:

(1) Units and drafts from various districts have proceeded overseas without a report of Final Medical Inspection having been forwarded to the Secretary of the Militia Council, as called for by H.Q. 54-21-51-9 of August 26th, 1916. A copy of the medical certificates, signed by the O.C., the unit or draft, and by the examining Medical Board must, in all cases, be forwarded immediately the final medical inspection is completed.

(2) After a unit or draft is warned for overseas, no leave is to be granted until all ranks have passed their final medical inspection, and any who are on leave when their unit or draft is warned, are to be recalled to undergo such inspection.

(3) If at the final medical inspection it is found that there are absentees, the examining medical board will keep a record of such absentees for the information of the O.C., the unit or draft, who will make out, in quadruplicate, a nominal roll of same, and forward two copies with the final medical inspection report to the G.O.C. of the District. The other copies to be disposed of as per instructions re Medical Inspection Report. In any case where, owing to unavoidable circumstances, absentees are shown, or where men are enlisted subsequent to the Final Medical Inspection, a nominal roll of same will be handed to the Embarkation Medical Officer, in order that these men may be medically examined before proceeding overseas.

(4) The Medical Examining Board will furnish to District Headquarters a nominal roll in duplicate of those found "unfit" at the final medical inspection, and will give thereon the names of the Medical Examining Board or Medical Officer who first passed the recruit as "fit." One copy of this nominal roll to be forwarded to the Secretary of the Militia Council.

(5) In future four copies of the combined certificates of Final Medical Inspection and Nominal Roll of Absentees will be made out; these will be disposed of as follows:—

(a) Two copies to be forwarded to the O.C., the Military District or Camp Commandant concerned. One of these to be forwarded to the Secretary of the Militia Council; the other to be retained at the Headquarters of the District.

(b) One copy to be handed to the Embarkation Medical Officer to the Headquarters of the District where troops embark, where it will be retained for reference.

(c) One copy to be retained by the O.C., the unit or draft to be reproduced for the information of the Overseas Authorities at disembarkation.

Medical Officers i/c troops, although instructed to hold weekly inspections of their units have often permitted men who are medically unfit to be retained in the service for longer or shorter periods; thereby causing unnecessary expense to the public. These men, who should have been discharged previously, are only discovered at the final medical inspection.

Medical officers of units and drafts are to be warned that they must on no account retain unfits in the service.

In spite of the careful instructions which have been issued from time to time, the number of unfits arriving in England is still large. If this condition recurs in the future, the O.C., the unit and the Medical Officer or Officers concerned will be held strictly accountable, and if gross neglect is proved, will be liable to dismissal from the service.

Kindly issue the necessary instructions to all concerned.

(b) Height.—The minimum height accepted is 4 foot 11 inches.

(c) Chest Measurement and Expansion.—These must be proportioned to the height.

(d) Standard of Vision: Men can be accepted who (1) have the lowest standard vision, as laid down in Headquarters' letter, 593-1-23, of 24th August, 1916, or (2) whose vision can be raised to the standard by the use of glasses, or, (3) who have lost one eye, or the sight thereof, but whose sight has not been lost as the result of injury or progressive organic disease within the last three years, the sight in the other eye being not less than D-80, at twenty feet, without glasses, or (4) who have suffered from squint since childhood, provided that neither eye has a visual acuity of less than D-80, at twenty feet, without glasses.

(e) Hearing.—Deafness in one ear shall not prevent acceptance, provided that the hearing of the other ear is normal and that the deafness is not due to existing disease (Otitis Media, &c.).

(f) Lost of Fingers.—Men may be accepted, who have lost one or two fingers of either hand, if the Examining Medical Board considers that the recruit is not thereby incapacitated from manual labour.

(g) Lost of toes.—Men may be accepted who have lost one or two toes from either or both feet, provided the great toes are intact.

(h) Flat Foot.—A moderate degree of flat foot will not constitute cause for rejection. Care is to be taken to determine whether the condition is genuine flat foot (i.e. due to giving way of the arch of the foot) or no, either by X-Ray examination or by the test of a five mile march. Many so-called cases of flat foot are due to filling in of the arch by development of the plantar muscles.

2. Whenever a man is passed for service, who has some physical defect, the nature of that defect, or minor disability and its apparent extent, must be noted in full detail upon the Attestation Paper.

3. No man is to be accepted who affords a history or evidence of (a) Epilepsy (b) Tuberculosis (c) Insanity, or (d) Acute Rheumatic Fever or Acute Endocarditis.

Eyesight and Hearing of Recruits—Record upon Attestation Paper.

SIR,—In consequence of the large number of men, who of late have been prevented from proceeding to the front, or have been returned from England to Canada in consequence of either defective eyesight or defective hearing, and, also, as a means of aiding the Pension Commissioners in adjudging the rate to be granted those who claim damage to eyesight, or hearing, brought about, or aggravated, by active service, I have the honour, by direction, to instruct you that in future the extent of vision and hearing of every recruit, who is accepted, will be determined by the Recruiting Medical Board at the mobilization centre, and, in every instance, will be entered upon the back of the man's attestation paper in the lower part of the space headed "Distinctive Marks," e.g.:—

(a) Eyesight R: D=24: L: D=60. *

SIR,—With further reference to H.Q. 593-3-7, dated November 8, 1916, re the marginally noted subject, I have the honour, by direction, to request that information be furnished as to:—

(1) The rank and names of personnel of the various medical boards at present employed in the examination of recruits throughout the district.

(2) The qualifications of each examiner (i.e., whether physician, surgeon, general practitioner or whether specialist in any branch of medicine or surgery).

As far as possible each medical board should comprise a physician, a surgeon and an eye, ear, nose and throat specialist.

Having regard to the important functions of the standing medical boards, in that they are often responsible for the examination not only of recruits, but of casualties and of pensioners as well, the personnel of such boards should be selected as far as possible from medical officers or practitioners whose high professional qualifications recommend them for this special and important branch of the medical service.

RULES

INSPECTION OF RECRUITS

1916

RULES FOR THE INSPECTION OF RECRUITS, 1916.

Principal points in medical examination of recruits.—In the inspection of recruits the principal points to be attended to are:—

That the recruit is sufficiently intelligent.

That his vision, with either eye, is up to the required standard.

That his hearing is good.

That his speech is without impediment.

That he has no glandular swellings.

That his chest is capacious and well formed, and that his heart and lungs are sound.

That he is not ruptured in any degree or form.

That the limbs are well formed and fully developed.

That there is free and perfect motion of all the joints.

That the feet and toes are well formed.

That he has no congenital malformation or defects.

That he does not bear traces of previous acute or chronic disease pointing to an impaired constitution.

That he is between the ages of 18 and 45 years.

General grounds for rejection.—Men presenting any of the following conditions will be rejected:—

Indication of tubercular disease; constitutional syphilis; bronchial or laryngeal disease; palpitation or other diseases of the heart; generally impaired constitution; under standard of vision; defects of voice, or hearing; pronounced stammering; contraction or deformity of chest or joints; abnormal curvature of spine; defective intelligence; hernia; hæmorrhoids; varicose veins or varicocele, if severe; inveterate cutaneous disease; chronic ulcers; fistula; traces of corporal punishment; or any disease or physical defect calculated to unfit them for the duties of a soldier.

Mental capacity.—Great care is to be taken in ascertaining the mental capacity of a recruit.

Correlation of height, weight, chest measurements, and age.—The height, weight, and chest measurement of a recruit should accord with each other, and with his age, agreeably to the table of standards laid down in the recruiting regulations. So far as concerns weight, this table is to be regarded as a guide only, and the medical officer is to exercise his own judgment as to the general fitness of the man under examination.

Determination of age by physical development.—Should a recruit, on presenting himself for enlistment, bring no satisfactory proof of his age, the medical officer who examines him will, by comparing the height with the weight and general development, and also from the recruit's appearance, decide his age, which will be entered on the second page of the attestation "apparent age."

Position of recruit.—When not required to approach the recruit for special objects the medical officer should always take his place at a distance of about six feet from him. The recruit should be placed so that the light may fall upon him.

Directions for general examination, and objects.—The recruit having, if possible, had a bath, or been washed, and being wholly undressed, the following should be the order in which the examination is carried out:—

He is measured under the standard.

He is weighed.

His chest measurement is taken.

His vision is tested.

If he satisfies requirements in these respects, and appears otherwise eligible, the general examination will be thus proceeded with:—

He is directed to walk up and down the room smartly two or three times, to hop across the room on the right foot, and back again on the left. (The hops should be short and upon the toes.)

He is halted, standing upright, with his arms extended above his head, while the medical officer walks slowly round him carefully inspecting the whole surface of his body.

An estimate is formed of his general physique, of his age, and whether he presents the appearance of having served before.

The objects to be observed and noted in this part of the examination are the following: The general physical development; the formation and development of the limbs; the power of motion in joints, especially in the feet and hips; extreme flatness of the feet; formation of the toes; skin disease; varicose veins; cicatrices or ulcers; and any special marks from congenital or accidental causes, and tattoo marks. If no disabling effects are found, the second part of the examination will be proceeded with.

Examination of the trunk.—The trunk will be examined from below upwards. The recruit stands with his arms extended above his head, the backs of the hands being in contact. The following will be the order of inspection:—

The medical officer notes indications of venereal disease.

He examines the scrotum to ascertain if the testicles have descended and are normal, or if there be varicocele or other disease.

He inserts the point of his finger in the external abdominal ring of each side, and desires the recruit to cough two or three times, to ascertain if he be ruptured or liable to that condition.

He examines the abdominal walls and parietes of the chest.

Examination of the chest.—He desires the recruit to “take in a full breath” several times, while he watches the action and notes the capacity of the chest. Careful stethoscopic examination of lungs is made.

He examines the action of the heart, and notes its sounds.

The upper extremities.—The examination of the upper extremities will be made from below upwards. Time is saved by the medical officer himself acting as well as telling the recruit the movements he desires to be made.

The following are the directions:—

Stretch out your arms with the palms of your hands upwards.

Bend the fingers backwards and forwards.

Bend your thumbs across the palms of your hands.

Bend your fingers over your thumbs.

Bend your wrists backwards and forwards.

Bend the elbows.

Turn the backs of the hands upwards.

Swing your arms round at the shoulders.

Marks of vaccination.—The medical officer will examine the recruit for marks of vaccination.

This comprehends the inspection for loss or defects of the fingers, thumbs, wrists, elbow and shoulder joints; power of rotating the forearm, and vaccination. If not vaccinated the circumstance should be stated on the medical history sheet.

The lower extremities and back.—The inspection of the lower extremities and back will be made from below upwards. The recruit first faces the medical officer, afterwards turns his back to him. The following are the directions given facing:—

Stand on one foot, put the other forward.

Bend the ankle-joint and toes of each foot alternately, backwards and forwards.

Kneel down on one knee.

Up again.

Down on the other knee.

Up again.

Down on both knees, and up from that position with a simultaneous spring of both legs.

Turn round. Separate the legs.

Touch the ground with the hands.

While the recruit performs these movements the medical officer will observe the action of the knee-joints, the conditions of the perinæum, and of the spinal column. This includes the inspection for defects of the toes, ankle and knee-joints; for hæmorrhoids, prolapsus ani, fistula in perinaeo, and spinal deformity.

The head and neck.—The examination of the head and neck will be made from above downwards. The medical officer will note the intelligence, character of voice, and power of hearing of the recruit by his replies to the questions put to him. The following are the directions:

Have you had any blows or cuts on the head?

Are you subject to fits of any kind?

He examines the scalp.

He examines the ears.

He examines the eyes and eyelids.

He examines the nostrils.

He examines the mouth, teeth, palate and fauces, and then tells the recruit to say loudly, "Who comes there?"

He examines the neck.

This comprehends the inspection for injuries of the head; deafness, disease of the ears; defect of voice; polypus of nose; tubercular ulceration; glandular enlargements; and defects of the eyes and the teeth.

Teeth.—An examining officer should not reject a recruit on account of the condition of his teeth, provided that the physical condition of the recruit is good in other respects. The condition of the mouth will receive attention from the C.A.D.C. subsequent to enlistment.

The following are the instructions for the measurement of recruits:—

Height.—The recruit will be placed against the standard with the feet together, and the weight thrown on the heels, and not on the toes or outside the feet. He will stand erect, without rigidity, and with the heels, calves, buttocks and shoulders touching the standard; the chin will be depressed to bring the vertex of the head level under the horizontal bar, and the height will be noted in parts of an inch to eighths.

Chest.—The recruit will be made to stand erect with his feet together, and to raise his arms over his head. The tape will be carefully adjusted round the chest with its posterior upper edge touching the inferior angles of the scapulæ, and its anterior lower edge the upper part of the nipples. The arms will then be lowered to hang loosely by the side, and care will be taken that the shoulders are not thrown upwards or backwards so as to displace the tape. The recruit will then be directed to take a deep inspiration several times, and the maximum expansion of the chest will be carefully noted. It is often attempted to conceal the true minimum measurement, but it can be obtained by a little manipulation and by drawing off attention from the examination by a few questions.

The maximum expansion rarely exceeds the average minimum by more than 2 to 2½ inches.

The minimum and maximum will then be recorded thus—

—	— etc.
35	36½

In recording the measurements fractions of less than half an inch should not be noted. The maximum is the standard measurement, and a recruit must also reach the range of chest expansion laid down in the table of physical equivalents.

Vision.—In examining a recruit's vision he will be placed with his back to the light, and his visual acuteness will be tested by means of test types placed in ordinary daylight, at a distance of six metres (20 English feet) from the recruit.

(1) Squint, or any morbid condition of the eyes or lids of either eye, liable to the risk of aggravation or recurrence, will cause the rejection of the candidate.

(2) If a recruit can read D-80 at 20 feet or better with each eye, without glasses, he will be considered "Fit."

(3) If he can read D-80 at 20 feet, with the right eye, without glasses, and not less than D-200, at the same distance with the left eye, without glasses, he will be considered "Fit."

(4) If he can read D-200 at 20 feet, with the right eye, without glasses, and not less than D-80 with the left eye at the same distance, without glasses, he will be considered "Fit" for the Canadian Army Service Corps, Canadian Army Medical Corps, the Canadian Ordnance Corps, for Forestry, Pioneers, Construction and Labour Battalions, and for Drivers of the Canadian Artillery or Canadian Engineers.

The visual acuity of each eye in the case of approved recruits will be entered on the medical history sheet.

Standards for chest measurement.—At least 33 inches around the chest, if between 18 and 30 years of age, and 34 inches around the chest if between 30 and 45 years of age.

Height.—At least 5 feet in height for infantry, and 5 feet 4 inches for the artillery, and 5 feet 2 inches for other corps.

Forestry Battalions.—1. The absence of a finger on either or both hands, provided it be not the thumb or forefinger which is missing, or the absence of one or two toes on either or both feet, provided it be not the great toe, will not be a cause for rejection.

2. Age limit to be 48 years, provided men over 45 years of age are specially qualified as mill-wright, saw-filer, etc.

Note.—Any defect or minor disability must be noted on attestation paper.

Down on the other knee.

Up again.

Down on both knees, and up from that position with a simultaneous spring of both legs.

Turn round. Separate the legs.

Touch the ground with the hands.

While the recruit performs these movements the medical officer will observe the action of the knee-joints, the conditions of the perinaeum and of the spinal column. This includes the inspection for defects of the toes, ankle and knee-joints; for haemorrhoids, prolapsus ani, fistula in perinaeo and spinal deformity.

The head and neck.—The examination of the head and neck will be made from above downwards. The medical officer will note the intelligence, character of voice and power of hearing of the recruit by his replies to the questions put to him. The following are the directions:—

Have you had any blows or cuts on the head?

Are you subject to fits of any kind?

He examines the scalp.

He examines the ears.

He examines the nostrils.

He examines the mouth, teeth, palate and fauces and then tells the recruit to say loudly "who comes there?"

He examines the neck.

This comprehends the inspection for injuries of the head, deafness, disease of the ears, defect of voice; polypus of nose; tubercular ulceration; glandular enlargements and defects of the eyes and the teeth.

Teeth.—An examining officer should not reject a recruit on account of the condition of his teeth, provided that the physical condition of the recruit is good in other respects. The condition of the mouth will receive attention from the C.A.D.C. subsequent to enlistment.

The following are the instructions for the measurement of recruits:—

Height.—The recruit will be placed against the standard with the feet together, and the weight thrown on the heels, and not on the toes or outside the feet. He will stand erect, without rigidity, and with the heels, calves, buttocks and shoulders touching the standard; the chin will be depressed to bring the vortex of the head level under the horizontal bar, and the height will be noted in parts of an inch to eighths.

Chest.—The recruit will be made to stand erect with his feet together, and to raise his arms over his head. The tape will be carefully adjusted round the chest with its posterior upper edge touching the inferior angles of the scapulae, and its anterior lower edge the upper part of the nipples. The arms will then be lowered to hang loosely by the side, and care will be taken that the shoulders are not thrown upwards or backwards so as to displace the tape. The recruit will then be directed to take a deep inspiration several times, and the maximum expansion of the chest will be carefully noted. It is often attempted to conceal the true minimum measurement, but it can be obtained by a little manipulation and by drawing off attention from the examination by a few questions.

The maximum expansion rarely exceeds the average minimum by more than 2 or 2½ inches.

The maximum and minimum will be recorded thus:—

—	— etc.
36½	35

In recording the measurements, fractions of less than half an inch should not be noted. The maximum is the standard measurement, and a recruit must also reach the range of chest expansion laid down in the table of physical equivalents.

Vision.—(See Appendix I.)

Hearing.—(See Appendix II.)

Nasal conditions.—(See Appendix III.)

Standards for chest measurement.—At least 33 inches around the chest, if between 18 and 30 years of age, and 34 inches around the chest if between 30 and 45 years of age.

Height.—At least 5 feet in height for infantry, 5 feet 4 inches for artillery and cyclists corps, and 5 feet 2 inches for other corps.

CONSTRUCTION AND FORESTRY BATTALIONS AND SECTIONS SKILLED RAILWAY EMPLOYEES.

Age: Upper age limit 48 years, but the apparent age rather than the age given is to be taken into account, and the condition of the arteries of all men of 41 years of age and over is to determine acceptance or rejection.

Lower age limit.—The apparent rather than the stated age is also to be carefully noted in those near the lower age limit. Particular care must be taken to reject those who, while stating, or affording proof, that they are over the lower age limit (18) years, present, nevertheless, a physical development below the normal for that age period.

Height.—The minimum height accepted is 4 feet 11 inches.

Chest Measurement and Expansion.—These must be proportioned to the height.

Standard of Vision.—(See Appendix I.)

Hearing.—(See Appendix II.) Nasal conditions (Appendix III.)

Loss of Fingers.—Men may be accepted, who have lost one or two fingers of either hand, if the Examining Medical Board considers that the recruit is not thereby incapacitated from active manual labour.

Loss of Toes.—Men may be accepted, who have lost one or two toes from either, or both feet, provided the great toes are intact.

Flat Foot.—A moderate degree of flat foot will not constitute cause for rejection. Care is to be taken to determine whether the condition is genuine flat foot (i.e. due to giving way of the arch of the foot) or no, either by X-Ray examination or by the test of a five mile march. Many so-called cases of flat-foot are due to filling in of the arch by development of the plantar muscles.

Whenever a man is passed for service, who has some physical defect, the nature of that defect, or minor disability and its apparent extent must be noted in full detail upon his attestation paper.

No man is to be accepted who affords a history or evidence of (a) Epilepsy (b) Tuberculosis (c) Insanity or (d) Acute Rheumatic fever or Acute Endocarditis.

SPECIAL SERVICE BATTALIONS.

Men for special service in Canada, in addition to those who pass standard requirements, may be taken from two other general classes:—

1. Men invalided (from overseas or Canada) who have a slight disability which unfits them for overseas service, but whose disability will not render them unfit for some form of special service.

2. Recruits who have some slight physical defect of disability which, while it leaves them below the standard required for overseas service, does not render them unfit for less strenuous special service.

These two classes of men may be used to replace soldiers who are willing to proceed overseas, and who are at present employed on garrison or guard duty, as military police, or on clerical or other work.

Owing to the constant demand for men for overseas service, it is considered expedient to substitute, as far as is consistent with efficiency, "Special Service" for "Overseas Service" men.

It is impossible to establish definite rules applicable in all cases, as to how far the usual standards of physical fitness may be realized. Each case must be decided upon its own merits.

In the case of recruits who may have been rejected for overseas service by the Medical Examiners on account of some slight physical defects or disabilities, but whose disabilities are not sufficiently serious to render them unfit for special service, a Medical Examining Board of three members will make a supplementary medical examination. In any area where it is impossible to assemble a Medical Examining Board, a report of the local medical examiner will be accepted.

CLASSIFICATION OF MEN FOR SPECIAL SERVICE.

- (a) Fit for general duty on special service in Canada.
- (b) Fit for garrison duty on service in Canada.
- (c) Fit for labour purposes on special service in Canada.
- (d) Fit for sedentary work, as clerks, etc., on special service in Canada.

It must be borne in mind by the Medical Examining Board that a recruit who is not physically fit for any branch of the service, in Canada or Overseas, is liable to become at a future date a charge upon the public. Hence while the standard for Special Service may be slightly lower or different from that for Overseas Service, it is necessary to be exceedingly careful, lest too great laxity be shown in passing candidates.

There will necessarily be many distinctions between the two standards of fitness, but a few general rules may be laid down.

GENERAL RULES.

1. He must be physically fit for the duty on which it is proposed to employ him, and the report must state any duty on which he should not be employed.
2. He must not be suffering from any disability which is liable to be progressive in character.
3. If he has some disability it must be of such a character that it will not be aggravated by the work of the branch of the service in which it is proposed to employ him.
4. In each case there shall be no disability other than the one or more specified and passed by the Examining Medical Board, but any disability passed by the Board must be noted on the Attestation Paper.
5. No man is to be accepted who affords a history of insanity, tuberculosis, epilepsy or fits.

SPECIAL RULES.

Modifications of the ordinary standard of fitness which may be noted with reference to the examination of men for Special Service only, in Canada. The following may be accepted.

1. Standard of height.—Minimum 5 feet.
2. Age.—Men between 18 and 48 years of age, provided those over 41 years are otherwise physically fit according to the Overseas standard.
3. Chest Measurement.—Minimum 31 inches but the lungs must be normal, and family history free from tuberculosis. (In case of doubt a certificate from the family physician should be secured.)
4. Vision.—(See Appendix I.)
5. Hearing.—(See Appendix II.)
6. Nasal conditions.—(See Appendix III.)
7. Varicocele or Varicose Veins, not of a degree to render unfit for sedentary occupations.
8. Flat feet of slight or moderate degree, not sufficiently marked to render unfit for office work.

THE FOLLOWING WILL NOT CONSTITUTE UNFITNESS FOR "SPECIAL SERVICE."

1. Loss of one or two fingers on either hand, provided such loss does not interfere with his ability to do the work at which it is proposed to employ him.

2. Loss of any toe or toes, except the great toe.

3. Loss of one foot or leg, in invalided soldiers, who can wear and use an artificial limb. (These men may be accepted for clerical or other suitable duty.)

Carefully selected soldiers (not new recruits) suffering from reducible hernia: if properly fitted with a truss and otherwise eligible, may be accepted for Special Service units.

Acceptance will be subject in all cases to the Medical Records which may be on file at Militia Headquarters, coinciding with, or supporting, the decision of the Medical Examining Board as to the desirability of suggested employment.

The general grounds for rejection (with the exceptions above mentioned) as given in "Rules for the Medical Examination of Recruits" shall also apply to men for Special Service in Canada.

The Medical Examining Board will be permitted to use discretionary powers in the approval of any slightly disabled men, who, in their opinion, may be utilized for some branch of the Special Service, but whose disability is not specifically mentioned in the foregoing paragraphs.

N.B.—The Attestation Papers and other Documents relating to men employed on Special Service, who are not up to Overseas Standard, are to be marked in red with the word "Special."

2. In the case of invalided soldiers who are suffering from some disability which may, at a later date, entitle them to pension, the transfer from general service, C.E.F., to Special Service, C.E.F. shall be made only upon the recommendation of a Medical Board. Any disability or disabilities of such recruits should be specifically mentioned in the proceedings of the Medical Board and a copy of these proceedings forwarded to Militia Headquarters.

3. In these cases a Medical Board shall also be held before discharge from Special Service is carried out, and the proceedings forwarded to Militia Headquarters, Ottawa, in order that each case may be given consideration by the Board of Pension Commissioners.

APPENDIX I.

STANDARD OF VISION.

In examining a recruit's vision he will be placed with his back to the light, and his visual acuteness will be tested by means of test types placed in ordinary daylight, at a distance of twenty feet (six metres) from the recruit. The visual acuity of each eye in the case of approved recruits will be entered on the medical history sheet. If vision can be improved by glasses they should be ordered and worn.

Any morbid condition of the eyes or lids of either eye, liable to risk of aggravation or recurrence, will cause the rejection of the candidate.

Standard I.—If a recruit can read D-80 at 20 feet or better with each eye, without glasses, he will be considered "fit."

Standard II.—If he can read D-80 at 20 feet with the right eye, without glasses, and not less than D-200, at the same distance with the left eye, without glasses, he will be considered "fit."

Standard III.—If he can read D-200 at 20 feet with the right eye, without glasses, and not less than D-80, with the left eye, at the same distance, without glasses, he will be considered "fit" for the Canadian Army Service Corps, Canadian Army Medical Corps, Canadian Ordnance Corps, Forestry, Pioneer, Construction and Labour Battalions, Sections of Skilled Railway Employees, and for drivers of the Canadian Artillery or Canadian Engineers.

Men can be accepted who:—

- (1) Have the lowest standard of vision as for the C.A.S.C., C.A.M.C., etc.
- (2) Can be raised to Standard I by the use of glasses.
- (3) Have lost one eye, or the sight thereof, and have been examined and recommended by an ophthalmic medical officer.
- (4) Have squint and have been examined and recommended by an ophthalmic medical officer.

SPECIAL SERVICE COMPANIES.

(a) Any man whose vision may be brought up to Standard I by the aid of glasses provided the visual defect is not due to existing disease.

(b) Any man whose vision, without glasses, is equal to Standard III.

(c) Any man whose vision in one eye is very defective, or who has lost one eye, or the sight thereof, but whose vision in the remaining eye is normal, may be accepted on the recommendation of an ophthalmic medical officer.

(d) Any man who has squint, but has normal vision in the fixing eye, may be accepted on the recommendation of an ophthalmic medical officer.

ENLISTMENT OF ONE-EYED MEN.

It is to be understood that in all doubtful cases of defective vision a definite opinion should be obtained from an ophthalmic medical officer.

APPENDIX II.

HEARING.

Ears should be tested separately with the ordinary voice. Ear not under test to be closed firmly with the finger and the candidate not to look at the officer speaking. The approximate distance at which the voice is heard by each ear should be entered on the medical history sheet.

The following may be accepted:—

(a) Any man who can hear fifteen feet or better by ordinary voice, in each ear, and who has no organic disease of the ear.

(b) Any man who has hearing of twenty-one feet in either ear, but with little or no hearing in the other ear, but, without active organic disease.

N.B.—No man with a discharge from his ear shall be accepted for overseas service.

FORESTRY, CONSTRUCTION AND LABOUR BATTALIONS, AND SECTIONS SKILLED RAILWAY EMPLOYEES, AND SPECIAL SERVICE COMPANIES.

Any man who has hearing of fifteen feet in either ear, and little or no hearing in the other ear, and has no active disease in the other ear.

NASAL CONDITION.

Men suffering from severe nasal obstruction should not be enlisted, as it is found that such cases find it difficult or even impossible to wear respirators.

SPECIAL SERVICE COMPANIES.

The various districts have been requested to furnish information as to how many men in the special service companies are likely to be again fit for service overseas. This information is very difficult to get quickly, as some of the men have to be medically boarded again, and not all districts have been able to furnish the information up to date. Those given below are fairly representative of what may be expected in the other districts:—

Room 301,

FRIDAY, March 2, 1917.

The secretary was instructed to read the minutes of the proceedings of March 1, as follows, which were adopted as read.

The Special Committee of the House of Commons on Returned Soldiers met at 10.40 a.m., the chairman, Sir Herbert Ames, presiding.

Members present:—

Sir Herbert Ames, Chairman; Mr. McCurdy, Mr. Middlebro, Hon. Mr. Murphy, Mr. Pardee, Mr. Ross (Middlesex), and Mr. Sutherland.

In attendance:—

Lt.-Col. F. W. Marlow, Lt.-Col. J. L. Potter, and Mr. E. H. Scammell.

The secretary was instructed to read the minutes of the proceedings of 22nd and 23rd February, which were adopted.

On business arising out of the minutes, papers furnished by the Adjutant-General and marked A.B.C., respecting reports in connection with the 118th Overseas Battalion were laid on the table.

Lt.-Col. Potter submitted papers supplementary to his evidence given on February 23rd, which were subsequently ordered printed, in connection therewith.

The Chairman read communications received from the Hon. Mr. Speaker and Sir George Foster's private secretary, respecting future meetings of the committee and the authority conferred upon the committee as contained in the order passed by the House.

MOTIONS:

Mr. Ross (Middlesex) moved, seconded by Mr. Sutherland, that the Chairman of the committee, or some member thereof, on the re-assembling of Parliament, ask the House to authorize the committee to report from time to time, which was agreed to.

Mr. McCurdy moved, seconded by Mr. Murphy, that the following be the contents of the first report of the committee to be presented to the House:

1. That the committee be granted leave to send for persons, papers and things;
2. That the committee be authorized to print the evidence taken and the statements submitted in connection therewith, from day to day, for the use of the committee, and that Rule 74, relating thereto, be suspended.
3. That the committee be granted leave to adjourn from place to place, which was agreed to.

The committee then proceeded to consider the evidence given by Lt.-Col. F. W. Marlow, M.D., C.A.M.C., A.D.M.S. of Military District No. 2.

It being one o'clock, the chairman left the Chair and the committee rose.

AFTERNOON SITTING.

The committee resumed at 2.35 p.m.

Lt.-Col. Marlow was recalled for evidence.

During the examination of Lt.-Col. Marlow, papers were submitted and marked A.B.C.D. and E., respecting recommendations to headquarters which were ordered filed of record.

Lt.-Col. Potter was recalled for evidence.

On motion of Mr. Middlebro, seconded by Hon. Mr. Murphy, the committee adjourned until Friday, March 2nd, at 10 o'clock a.m.

HERBERT B. AMES,
Chairman.

V. CLOUTIER,
Clerk of the Committee.

MINUTÉS OF EVIDENCE.

HOUSE OF COMMONS,

COMMITTEE ROOM No. 301,

March 2, 1917.

The Committee met at 10.15 a.m., the Chairman, Sir Herbert Ames, presiding. There were also present Brigadier-General Mason and Messrs. McCurdy, Murphy, Middlebro and Ross (Middlesex).

The CHAIRMAN: Our first witness this morning is Mr. E. R. Cameron, K.C., Registrar of the Supreme Court of Canada. He is to be examined in respect to the work of the Soldiers' Aid Commission in Military District No. 3.

Mr. E. R. CAMERON, K.C., called, sworn and examined.

By the Chairman:

Q. What position do you occupy in respect to the Soldiers' Aid Commission?—A. Chairman of the Ottawa Branch.

Q. When were you appointed?—A. I was elected at the organization meeting in January, 1916, and re-elected at the annual meeting about a month ago.

Q. You are chairman then, for Military District No. 3?—A. I do not know that our organization is distributed by Military Districts. We were simply appointed to take care of the cases in the city of Ottawa and in the adjoining county of Carleton.

Q. How wide an area does your activity cover?—A. I do not think I could speak as to that. Any soldier, practically, who comes to us, is looked after; we do not limit ourselves to the place of enlistment. If a soldier is in the city and comes to us for employment or assistance, we attempt to meet his wants.

Q. Have you any organization subordinate to you at local points in this neighborhood?—A. None. We simply deal with our own locality.

Q. What would happen if the returned soldier came to Arnprior, for example?—A. I do not know whether the Commission has a branch in Arnprior or not.

Q. If there is one in Arnprior, who would know about it and to whom would that branch report?—A. The secretary of the organization in Toronto is Mr. Warwick.

Q. All these branches, such as the Ottawa Branch, are in direct communication with Toronto, are they?—A. Yes.

Q. Will you tell us first of all about the need of your work and what you endeavour to do. Then we will ask you how, in your judgment, you could accomplish what you are endeavouring to do in a better way than it is done at present?—A. Do you desire me at the start to supplement the document which you have in front of you? (Report of Organization Meeting of the Soldiers' Aid Commission, held at Parliament Buildings, Toronto, November, 1915.)

Q. I would desire, if I may interrupt you, that you would consider this subject as though there were nothing on file regarding it, and give the Committee, as full an explanation as possible regarding the entire phases of the work.—A. Very well, sir. The Soldiers' Aid Commission is organized under an order in council.

By Hon. Mr. Murphy:

Q. The Soldiers' Aid Commission of Ontario?—A. Yes. The Commission is organized under an order in council which will be found in the Statutes of 1916, Chapter 3. That order in council was passed on the 10th November, 1915.

[Mr. E. R. Cameron.]

By the Chairman:

Q. Passed by the Ontario Legislature?—A. By His Honour the Lieutenant Governor of Ontario. That order in council reads as follows: (reads)

Upon the recommendation of the Honourable the Provincial Secretary, the Committee of Council advise that a commission be issued appointing William David McPherson, K.C., M.L.A., and John B. Laidlaw, Robert J. Christie, and William Banks, Esquires, Toronto; the Honourable George Gordon, North Bay; Senator Kenneth W. McKay, St. Thomas, county clerk; William F. Nickle, K.C., M.P., Kingston; George Lynch Staunton, K.C., Hamilton; Ernest G. Henderson, Windsor, Esquire; and W. L. Best, Ottawa, Esquire, commissioners to constitute a Central Provincial Committee and a Branch Sub-Committee of The Military Hospitals Commission, to take care of and to find employment for members of the Canadian Expeditionary Force, who return to Canada during the period of the war, and to assist, advise and co-operate with the said The Military Hospitals Commission, and with all provincial or local committees or organizations to attain the aforesaid objects, and to do all things which may be incidental and ancillary to the foregoing; the said William David McPherson to be ex-officio a member of the said The Military Hospitals Commission, and to be chairman of the said commission, and Charles Norris Cochrane, Toronto, Esquire, to be secretary thereof.

Certified.

(Signed) J. LONSDALE CAPREOL,
Clerk, Executive Council.

Then the powers of the commission were extended by the legislation passed on the 27th of April, 1916, to the following effect:—

1. This Act may be cited as "The Soldiers' Aid Commission Act."

2. Subject to the provisions hereinafter contained, the order in council approved by His Honour the Lieutenant Governor on the 10th day of November A.D. 1915, providing for the issue of a commission, appointing William David McPherson, King's Counsel; John B. Laidlaw, Robert J. Christie, William Banks, the Honourable George Gordon, Senator; Kenneth W. McKay, William F. Nickle, King's Counsel; George Lynch Staunton, King's Counsel; Ernest G. Henderson and W. L. Best, commissioners to constitute a Central Provincial Committee and a branch sub-committee of The Military Hospitals Commission, which order in council is set out as Schedule "A" to this Act, is confirmed and declared to be and to have been legal and valid to all intents and purposes.

3. The commissioners so appointed to constitute a Central Provincial Committee and a branch sub-committee of The Military Hospitals Commission, may be known as The Soldiers' Aid Commission, hereinafter called The Commission.

4. Notwithstanding anything in the said order in council contained, the commission may exercise the like powers with respect to, and may grant the same assistance to, members of His Majesty's Imperial Forces or the forces of any of the Allies who, as reservists, and while resident in Canada, were called upon to serve in the Imperial Forces or the forces of any of the Allies, or who left Canada for the purpose of enlisting and did enlist in the Imperial Forces or the forces of any of the Allies to serve therein during the war, as the commission may grant to members of the Canadian Expeditionary Forces under the terms of the order in council hereby confirmed, and the like assistance may be granted to any person who, after enlistment in Canada for service in the war, and before going overseas, has been discharged on account of wounds, injury or disease incurred or contracted while on active service.

5. The Lieutenant-Governor in Council may add such persons from time to time as commissioners as he may deem advisable, or may appoint a commissioner in place of any commissioner dying or retiring or becoming incapable to act.

6. The Commission may establish or arrange for the establishment of branches of the Commission in the various municipalities of the province and appoint such officers, clerks, servants and agents as may be deemed necessary and expedient for carrying out the work of the Commission and their salaries, wages, fees, or other remuneration, and all other costs, charges and expenses incurred by the Commission, shall be payable out of such moneys as may be appropriated from time to time by the Legislature for the purposes of the Commission.

7. Notwithstanding anything in the said order in council contained, the Commission shall have and may exercise the like powers and perform the like services with respect to any of the classes of persons mentioned in section 4 returning after the war, as it may do with respect to those returning during the war.

8. The commissioners shall serve without remuneration, but may be paid their travelling expenses and other necessary disbursements as part of the expenses of the Commission, and the receiving of such expenses and disbursements by any member of the Commission shall not render him ineligible as a member of the Assembly, or disqualify or render him liable to any penalty for sitting and voting therein, anything in The Legislative Assembly Act to the contrary notwithstanding.

9. The Commission acting as a central provincial committee and a branch sub-committee of The Military Hospitals Commission, may enter into arrangements with the Department of Education of Ontario, or with any educational authority or institution for providing instruction of any kind, including technical and industrial instruction for those of the classes of persons mentioned in section 4, who, as a result of wounds, disease, or other injury sustained during the period of enlistment, are unable to pursue their former calling or occupation, and for such other as the Commission may deem advisable.

10. The Lieutenant-Governor in Council may confer such further powers and impose such further duties upon the Commission with respect to soldiers returning to Ontario during or after the war with a view to securing their well-being in such manner as may be deemed advisable.

Pursuant to proclamation in the city by the Mayor of Ottawa, about a year ago last January, a meeting was called at the City Hall and the Ottawa Branch was then organized. The City Council gave us a small room and we started in a very modest way with a paid secretary and stenographer. But the work increased rapidly after two or three months, and by about May, I think, we made application to the Department of Public Works for one of the vacant buildings in the expropriated portion of the city on Vittoria street, and in that neighbourhood we were allowed the premises which we now occupy on Cliff street, formerly the Holbrook House, and a very commodious building.

Q. What number is it?—A. No. 25 Cliff street. It overlooks the Ottawa river and the grounds have plenty of room for benches, and so on, for returned soldiers. The ground floor has a large central hall, with two large rooms opening off it. Upstairs we have four large bedrooms, which have been fitted up with cots by four of the patriotic organizations of the city, and I may say that we have also made provision for every comfort and convenience for the soldiers, the idea being that soldiers coming to the city may be comfortably provided for without being sent to an hotel.

Q. Have you a restaurant?—A. We have no means of feeding the soldiers, but the Soldiers' Club, which is not very far off, on Wellington street, managed by, I think, the Laurentian Chapter, furnishes the meals for the soldiers who are sent there. I believe they give meals for three days, gratis, and after that at a very small cost.

Q. Who is your secretary?—A. Mr. A. G. Cameron. He is a retired Presbyterian minister, who was recommended to us at the establishment of the organization, and is, I desire to say, an extremely efficient man, who has obtained the full sympathy of the returned soldiers and their families, and our success is largely due to his personality. Part of his duties are to keep in touch with returned soldiers coming to the city. That is done by having a telegram sent him from Quebec upon the arrival of ships with returned soldiers, stating what soldiers propose coming to Ottawa. He also gets telegraphic communication from Kingston when soldiers come to Ottawa from that centre. We aim at being always present to meet and look after any returned soldier coming to the city.

By Mr. Ross (Middlesex):

Q. Why do they have to come from Kingston?—A. Very many of the soldiers have to go there before being discharged.

The CHAIRMAN: Most of the men who have passed through the Distribution Depot at Quebec are sent to the head town of the district.

The WITNESS: Kingston is the head town of this district.

Mr. ROSS (Middlesex): That explains it.

The WITNESS: To complete what I was saying with respect to meeting the returned soldiers. The City of Ottawa and the Canadian Returned Soldiers' Association also appoints a committee of reception, so that there are generally two or three, or more, persons at the station to welcome these soldiers. They are taken to their homes in a motor car provided by the Voluntary Aid Branch of the St. John's organization, and subsequently, or at that time, taken to the Fleming Convalescent Home, if they have to go there. Our main function, however, is the obtaining of employment for the discharged soldier.

By Brigadier-General Mason:

Q. Who makes the distinction between the convalescent and the non-convalescent returned soldier?—A. That is done by the military authorities. The men who are discharged at Quebec are not required to go to any Convalescent Home. They frequently come to us from Quebec. If they are to go to a Convalescent Home, they first go, as I understand it, to Kingston, after which they are assigned to a Convalescent Home. However, I may be mistaken as to that. They may come direct from Quebec to Ottawa and go to the Convalescent Home; but I think it is the other way about. They go to Kingston first, then come to Ottawa and afterwards go to the Fleming Convalescent Home.

Q. You get information concerning the returned soldiers in what way?—A. Through the Military Hospitals Commission. We had a great deal of difficulty at first in meeting the returned soldiers because the train which would bring them to Ottawa from Quebec arrived here late at night, and the soldier, being treated so generously in Montreal en route by the Khaki Club, would prefer to leave that city at 10 o'clock at night, thus reaching here at one or two o'clock in the morning. It has been the case that soldiers would not arrive on the train we were advised they would come on, but on a later train with the result that there was nobody on hand to meet them but that has not happened frequently.

By the Chairman:

Q. Do you plan that every returned soldier shall be met by somebody and given the glad hand?—A. Quite so. That is our aim, and I think that is done in every case that we know of.

[Mr. E. R. Cameron.]

Q. Do you interview the men for the purpose of finding out in what way you can give service to them?—A. As soon as we meet the returned soldier we tell him where our headquarters are and ask him to come down if he wants any assistance, and very frequently before he leaves the Convalescent Home, which perhaps will be in the course of a week or two when he is allowed to go out for a walk, he takes the opportunity to come and see us and makes enquiry about the chances of employment, and so on. Our main function, as I said, is to try and obtain employment for the returned soldiers. Owing to the fact that we are centered in Ottawa, naturally more soldiers gravitate here than to probably any other part of the Province except Toronto. We have had registered with us since our organization, a little over a year ago, something like 570 soldiers.

Q. What proportion of the total number of soldiers that have come back does that number represent?—A. I do not know that I can give you that information.

Q. Approximately—from your own judgment does that represent 75 per cent?—A. Do you mean what proportion of the number that have come back to Ottawa?

Q. Yes?—A. I do not think that any soldier that has come back to the city of Ottawa who has wanted assistance of any kind, has not come to see us.

Q. What I am trying to find out is what proportion of the number you have stated as returning to Ottawa have not needed your help at all?—A. I should be inclined to think that nearly all of them have come to see us for some aid or other.

Q. You think that the 570 covers 90 per cent of the total number who have returned?—A. I should think considerably over that, I do not think that 5 per cent of them have not come to see us. Then our secretary takes down, on a form prepared in Toronto, particulars regarding the enlistment, the discharge, the medical report and so forth of each man.

Q. Do you make any difference in your treatment between the man who has actually gone to France, the man who has gone to England, and the man who has broken down and has been discharged from the camp here?—A. Not the slightest, any man who has been enlisted and honourably discharged we take care of.

Q. Even if the man has only been in the service twenty-four hours, he is regarded as a returned soldier?—A. Quite so. On that point I may say that the discharged soldiers, as you suggested, divide themselves into the three classes you have mentioned; those who have never gone abroad, those who got to England, and those who got to the front. The first-class, that is those who never left Canada I found that out of 450 men—(this is a statement that was made up for me a few months ago by the secretary.)

Q. That is 450 out of 570 you have dealt with up to date?—A. Yes. Out of the 450, 100 belonged to that first-class, that is, they were discharged soldiers who never crossed; 150 of that number never got farther than England, and 200 of them reached France.

Q. Two hundred out of the 450 that passed through your hands reached France?—A. Yes.

By Hon. Mr. Murphy:

Q. Did you not say a little while ago that over 500 passed through your hands?—A. Yes.

By the Chairman:

Q. But of that 570 you have statistics for 450 only?—A. Yes—the secretary could give them up to date, but I had this prepared some months ago and I think that it represents fairly the proportion of the total number up to date. We considered that, under the powers vested in us by Order in Council and the statute, that the class who never got across is equally entitled to our assistance, because our experience is—of course there are fakers among the soldiers, as elsewhere—but our experience is that these men who fell down in Canada, as a class, have enlisted in good faith. They have, perhaps in some instances been aware of some complaint that they did not disclose to the Medical Officer, but I think, in every instance they have anticipated that if the Medical Officer examined them and passed them they were in a fit condition to go to the front, and they intended to go to the front, so that if they fell down in Canada it was not their fault. We have had 100 of that class and some cases have been very serious, and we have had a great deal of difficulty in knowing what to do for them.

I have prepared one or two examples of these classes to bring before the Committee, if they desire it, to show the nature of the difficulty we have experienced in dealing with these soldiers. Take class 1, that is the soldier who never left Canada; I will call him Private "A"—had before enlistment been a common labourer, cook, butler, etc., he was unable to pass the medical examination owing to hernia. He went to the hospital and an operation was performed on him, which was presumed to have made him fit for active service. He was discharged from the hospital on the 26th March, 1916, and he enlisted on the 30th of the same month. On May 7th following, while taking part in some rifle exercise, his rupture broke open and he was taken to a hospital where five successive operations were performed by the Military Surgeon. He refused a further operation which was advised but he told our secretary that if he could be operated on by another surgeon he would undergo it. He refused however to undergo another operation by the Military Surgeon; that man was at the Carleton County Hospital, from which he was discharged on the 8th August, but his condition was so weakened that he was unable to do anything but light work. At the request of the Military Hospitals Commission, after being supported at Cliff street for a month or so, he was sent to Toronto, and we know nothing further with respect to his case. Before leaving, we furnished him with a suit of clothes and we sent him to Toronto, because they said they would find him something to do, we were unable to find anything here for any man in his condition. That is an extreme case, but we have many of that character. There is another case, almost as extreme, the particulars of which I have not here, but the man went to Valcartier, was accepted when 55 years of age, and after five weeks actual duty was discharged and came to us. The medical authorities gave one complaint, Landry's paralysis, I think it was. The man was examined, at our instance, by another doctor, who had been the family physician and surgeon, and he said that that was not the trouble at all, but that it was another complaint altogether, one of the characteristics of which was that you could puncture his legs anywhere with a hat pin, and he had no sensation at all. We made advances to him to a considerable amount, I think $75, in all, and sent him to the Carleton County Hospital. He was not getting any better from that treatment, and the final medical examination stated that the man was suffering from neurasthenia or something of that sort. The Military Hospitals Commission proposed to send him to Whitby, but he finally went home. The last I heard of him he was with his own people, I could not say whether he went to Whitby or not.

These are extreme cases, and there are a very large number of these men who have enlisted and who complained that the hardships they suffered at Valcartier, sleeping in wet blankets, etc., brought on troubles they never had before.

By Brigadier-General Mason:

Q. These men were still soldiers at the time you speak of?—A. No, Private "A" was discharged.

By the Chairman:

Q. Your activities do not begin with the soldier until he is discharged?—A. No.

By Mr. Middlebro:

Q. Of these 540 men who passed through your hands, how many were agricultural men?—A. Very few, because in the Province of Ontario the proportion of agricultural men was much smaller than in the West.

[Mr. E. R. Cameron.]

I come now to the second class, that is the man who has gone overseas, who has reached England, and I will give you the experience of Private "B." This man was a locomotive fireman, earning, he says, about $1,500 per annum. He enlisted on 12th May, 1915, has a wife and three children, the oldest eight years of age. He got as far as England, where he contracted pneumonia and pleurisy and was returned to Canada and discharged from the Convalescent Home on the 26th December last, his discharge to date from the 27th February, 1917. He was warned by the Medical Officer not to return to his former occupation for at least two months. The Medical Board gave his disability as under 20 per cent, and he has not been recommended for pension. His physical condition to-day will not permit of his returning to his former occupation, and if this continues, the question at once arises what is to be done for him.

By the Chairman:

Q. What have you in mind that you can do for him?—A. I was going to deal with the whole of the discharged men first, and then take up that question afterwards.

Private "C"—this man was a paper-hanger—

By Hon. Mr. Murphy:

Q. In what class is this man?—A. This man is also in the Second Class. He was a paper-hanger and decorator, had served 7 years in the Imperial army and enlisted on the 11th March, 1915. He has a family of 5 children and was earning about $3 a day at his trade. He has some organic trouble with the toes of both feet which causes him to limp and which the Medical Board say was probably aggravated by active service. He never reached the front, but was returned to Canada and discharged at Quebec on November 4, 1916.

Then we come to the third class, and I will give you the case of Private "D."

Private D.—This man was a painter who had served six years in the Royal Fusiliers. He has seen service in Belgium and France. Has a wife and three children. Was sick many times at the front, and finally returned to England as being suspected of having tuberculosis. The medical report says that his lungs show bronchitis rales, a condition contracted on service, and that the reasons why he is unable to earn his full livelihood are: weakness, loss of weight, cough and expectoration. The English Medical Board give his disability as one-quarter for one year. The Canadian Board makes it one-quarter for six months. His average earnings before enlistment was $18 a week. He was discharged from the convalescent home on 9th June last without pension.

Then I give you the case of Lance-Corp. "E."

Lance-Corp. E.—This man was a steam-fitter earning very large wages in Northern Ontario at one of the mines. Has a wife and three children, the eldest 11 years of age. Enlisted on 15th September, 1915, was wounded in France by shrapnel in leg and left knee. Discharged from the convalescent home in Ottawa on February 17th of this year without a pension. He called at our office and inquired what the Government proposed to do for him. An effort was made to find him employment with the Government and at the various local firms, but all said they were discharging steam-fitters and plumbers and were unable to take on new men. When told of the situation he replied that he thought he was getting a pretty raw deal.

By Mr. Ross (Middlesex):

Q. Was he lame?—A. No, he had just been shot up with shrapnel, and I suppose made as good a recovery as possible. I think this man had made some savings. But the secretary will be here some time today, and he can give you information as to whether or not he has been back here since his discharge. What I desire to emphasize is the fact that these men are discharged because they are not fitted for active service, that there has been disability by reason of their service conditions.

[Mr. E. R. Cameron.]

By the Chairman:

Q. From a military point of view they are unfit?—A. From the military point of view they are unfit for active service.

Q. But they are not unfit from a civilian point of view?—A. Not from a civilian point of view. This brings up an important question. For such cases as this there is under the pensions scheme no provision except a gratuity for a man if his disability is under 20 per cent. If it is considered that he has received 20 per cent disability, he can get $100 pension, but if it is 19 per cent he gets nothing except the gratuity, so that this soldier comes back with an admitted disability, he is discharged, he has done his duty, there is no provision for him, nor is there any recognition of an obligation by the country to make some provision for him.

Q. Are not these gratuities regarded as capitalized pensions for a limited period?—A. It cannot exceed $100, so that it makes a very small capital. It is called a gratuity in the Pension Act.

Q. It is equal to $20 a month for five months?—A. If he gets the $100, but I should say from my experience that it is very seldom they get the full amount.

Q. We are anxious as a committee, of course, to be of assistance in improving matters wherever possible. In your judgment there is a weakness in the present system of pensions?—A. Absolutely.

Q. Your complaint is that the man whose deterioration is less than 20 per cent only gets a small gratuity and nothing more is done for him?—A. Nothing more.

Q. And your opinion is that something more should be done?—A. Certainly, something ought to be done. What this should be I would like to take up later, if you will allow me. I thought perhaps I might just accentuate that situation if I took a case showing the situation this soldier and his family were in up to the date of his discharge in Canada, and compare it with the situation the moment he was discharged. Take private F, who enlisted in March, 1915, 36 years of age, wife and five children, was formerly a bridge carpenter, earning 45 cents an hour; this is what the soldier states himself; went to the front, wounded by a shrapnel in the leg, returned to England, and finally to the Convalescent Home in Ottawa, until he was honourably discharged as unfit for active service on the 8th February last. That is 1917. While he was at the front and up to the day of his discharge he was able to make the following provision for his family: Assigned pay $20 a month, separation allowance $20 a month, Patriotic Fund $25 a month—total provision for family, $65 a month. When discharged he found himself incapable to carry on his old employment, but his physical impairment being under 20 per cent, he was not entitled to a pension. He was in such financial straits that our organization advanced him in all $35, and he also had assistance from the Canadian Association of Returned Soldiers. We took his case up with the Military Hospitals Commission, and they are now providing for him vocational training in the allied trade of cabinet making, and under the schedule of pay provided by the Government he will obtain for the support of his family, I should think, some $70 a month. There was that hiatus between the time of his discharge and the date at which something has been provided by the Military Hospital Commission.

Q. Is he reinstated as a soldier?—A. I think so; if not, he will be shortly. I think everything has been arranged for, but whether any money has reached his family I do not know.

Q. Have you been aware of any recent orders which have been passed with a view of closing up the hiatus?—A. I have: I think that is a very good arrangement. This was one of the serious grounds of complaint.

Q. You might put on record whether, in your judgment it meets that complaint?—A. I think it does for the future, if I understand it. But what is to be done for those who have passed out of the hands of the authorities, and have been discharged, and yet do not know whether they are to get pensions; that is all the cases which are now in suspense as to whether the soldier is to get pension or not, which is one of his grievances.

Q. Do you mean those are cases pending before the Pension Board?—A. I presume they are: the man has been discharged and does not know whether he is to get a pension or not.

Q. We understood from the Chairman of the Pension Board when cases were undetermined in respect of pensions, that until the pensions were determined the man would not be discharged?—A. That is for the future.

Q. You think that closes up the gap?—A. Yes; we felt there was a very serious injustice being done, and, as I said, there is no provision for a number who have been discharged, and whose cases are still in suspense before the Pension Board and have been for many months.

By Brigadier-General Mason:

Q. You have had a number in Ottawa: there must be a large number throughout Canada?—A. Yes.

By Mr. Middlebro:

Q. Did that man receive any pension in a lump sum?—A. No.

Q. That is a case where a man was so injured that he could not follow his previous occupation, and yet he was entitled to no pension whatever?—A. No, because his disability was under 20 per cent: I think the chances are he got some small gratuity.

By the Chairman:

Q. In that case the Hospitals Commission is taking him up again and he is being provided for?—A. Yes.

By Mr. Ross (Middlesex):

Q. He was a bridge builder?—A. Yes. He received a shrapnel wound in the shoulder and could not do outdoor work as he could formerly.

By Mr. Middlebro:

Q. The principle of the Pension Board is that whatever a man makes does not interfere with his pension: if he is injured over 20 per cent he gets a pension, no matter how efficient he becomes in his new trade. It seems to me this man is not receiving justice, because he is only getting what the others are receiving to whom pensions are being paid?—A. That is so.

Q. What would you say to this as an amendment to the Pension law: that any man whose wounds cause him a disability less than 20 per cent, but yet are such as to prevent him going into his former employment, should be entitled to a pension?—A. Certainly something of that sort should be done. It is very difficult to figure out what the extent of the disability is.

By Hon. Mr. McCurdy:

Q. With the information you have given us, it would look as though the disability was more than 20 per cent: if a man cannot follow the occupation he has been following all his life in which he earns large wages, it would look like a miscarriage of justice?—A. Yes.

By the Chairman:

Q. I do not think the Pensions Board take into consideration a man's former employment?—A. While on that point, I may say that when these matters came before us in this way, the difficulty as to the amount of pension, and the dissatisfaction of some of the soldiers on the ground that the amount of the disability was not satisfactory to them, we prepared and presented a recommendation to the Pension Board, which seemed, during our interview, to appeal to them as being apparently on its face reasonable, and that recommendation read as follows:—

SOLDIERS' AID COMMISSION,

(OTTAWA BRANCH).

The following recommendations were submitted to a special meeting of the Executive Committee of the Ottawa Branch of the Soldiers' Aid Commission on October 16, 1916, and unanimously adopted, and a special committee consisting of Messrs. E. R. Cameron, K.C., W. J. Gerald, and C. Lawrence, were authorized to present these recommendations to the Board of Pension Commissioners at a meeting to be held on Tuesday, October 17, 1916:—

1. "That when a soldier has been enlisted for overseas service it is to be presumed an absence of fraud that he was at such time physically fit for duty, and no such soldier shall be discharged as unfit for duty on account of some complaint, disease or injury, without a pension unless it is shown affirmatively that he was suffering from such complaint at the time of enlistment and that the said complaint, disease or injury was not aggravated by the condition imposed on him in the performance of his military duties.

2. No soldier who has been enlisted for overseas service and who subsequently is declared by the military authorities as unfit for active duty on physical grounds, shall be discharged without a pension until—

(a) He receives a certificate from the military authorities giving the complaint, disease or injury which unfits him for active service, and which shall declare the grounds for depriving him of such pension.

(b) Thirty days have elapsed from the delivery of such certificate."

Q. You do not cover the case of the man who makes himself unfit by his own indiscretion?—A. No, not in that. The number 3 reads as follows:—

"If, within the said 30 days the said soldier obtains and files with the Pensions Board a certificate from a duly qualified physician that in his opinion the complaint, disease or injury from which the soldier suffers is not that declared in the certificate by the military authorities, or that his complaint, disease or injury may have been aggravated by the conditions imposed upon him in performing his military duties, he shall be entitled to have the decision of the military authorities or officer with respect to the said matter reviewed by the Pension Board which shall deal with the same after the case has been reported upon by some other medical officer, specially appointed by the said Pension Board, and the discharge of the soldier shall not take effect until the said Pensions Board has given its decision upon his appeal."

That was intended to cover the case where the Medical Board declared the disability, we will say, under 20 per cent, in which case he gets no pension, he gets simply the gratuity, and, as in the case that I have illustrated, there is evidently a serious disability which justifies the Military Commission in giving him vocational training. I may say it is in that class that we find the greatest complaints, men who are discharged because they are unfit for active service, and perhaps feel in no physical condition to grapple with the problems of life as they did before they went to the war, who have been supported by the Government and taken care of and their families liberally provided for up to the date of discharge, and suddenly everything is swept away. We find them coming down from the Convalescent Home weeks ahead of the time of discharge, anxious about their future and what shall happen to their families when their pay is cut off, the Patriotic Fund cut off and everything else, and we have felt that there is something radically wrong in the Pension scheme which makes no provision for these men who have been under 20 per cent disabled.

Q. Has any action, to your knowledge, been taken by the Pension Board on that recommendation?—A. No, not as far as I know.

By Mr. Ross (Middlesex):

Q. I suppose the presumption is that where the disability is less than 20 per cent, he will recover his full strength?—A. Possibly, perhaps probably, he will, if you give him time, but the problem is for the three or six months after the man has been discharged; he does not feel able to take up his former occupation and do it as he did in former days. Perhaps there may be a nervous condition and his nerves may not have come back to a normal state.

Q. You would not say that each case should be considered on its merits, or would you say that where a man has been injured less than 20 per cent he ought to be taken care of at a certain rate for six months?—A. That is exactly the line on which I was going to make the suggestion, that these men should not be thrown upon the world in the way they are without being cared for for a long enough time to permit of them getting themselves back physically and mentally into a condition to take up the burden of civil life.

By the Chairman:

Q. Do you feel the Patriotic Fund cuts off its assistance too early?—A. Yes, that is one of the suggestions I was going to make. I do not see why, in the first place, a portion of this man's pay should not continue for three or six months.

Q. I am speaking of the Patriotic Fund?—A. I see no reason why the wife and children of these men should not be taken care of for the same period, the same as when they are overseas.

Q. The Patriotic Fund makes no allowance after a man is discharged?—A. That could be changed.

Q. How long a period do you think should be provided for, after discharge, that an allowance should be made, under those conditions?—A. I would give them a discretion, but I should think they should give them, if necessary, six months.

Q. You think practically all the cases could be provided for if a six months' limit were given?—A. One cannot speak with certainty, but I think it would go a long way towards settling this difficulty.

By Mr. Ross (Middlesex):

Q. You would not suggest this man's family should draw full superannuation allowance for six months?—A. No; you would have to consider what was reasonable in each case to allow; I would say a portion of the pay, and, if the Patriotic Fund could stand it, a liberal allowance for their wives and children.

The CHAIRMAN: Of course, the Patriotic Fund is absolutely flexible and the local committee each month can redetermine the amount of the grant. If the Patriotic Fund should help a discharged soldier and his family for six months it would determine each month what the exigencies of the case would demand for that family, serving, so to speak, as a buffer.

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. It is your opinion that every man who returns injured?—A. Disabled.

Q. —should be taken care of?—A. He should be taken care of until he gets a chance to get back into employment.

[Mr. E. R. Cameron.]

Q. Take the case of that steamfitter you referred to. Apparently he was all right. Would you still suggest that a man of that kind should be taken care of?—A. That man did not feel all right; he was shot up with shrapnel, but he was in a very much better position than most of them. The men have been told that something is to be done for them, and they look upon our organization as a sort of wheel in the governmental machinery, as the gateway of getting access to the Government. They think that where so much has been said as to what is to be done for the returned soldiers and when they find themselves discharged with nothing provided for them they feel that they are not being justly dealt with.

By the Chairman:

Q. You feel that the exit from being under pay and allowances is too sudden?—A. Quite so.

Q. And should be graduated?—A. There should be a discretion exercised in all these cases, but there should be power to do fairly and justly toward these men. I have statistics here with respect to what the Chairman mentioned a few moments ago as to the pursuits from which these men come, which I think would be of service if the Committee has not this information already.

Q. Does that list show their previous occupations?—A. Yes. This is a return up to the 15th of September, 1916, prepared for me by the Militia Department; but I think it may be taken as a fair criterion of what will happen with all the rest of the soldiers. It deals with 216,110 soldiers who went overseas up to the 15th of September, 1916. These are divided into the following classes: Men who came from professions, employers or merchants, clerical workers, clerks I suppose; manual workers; farmers; ranchers; and students. Out of the whole 216,000 there were 142,287 belonging to the class of manual labour; that is approximately two-thirds of the enlistments came from that class.

Q. Can you give us the rest of the figures?—A. I can give them all. I will file this paper, which gives the total by provinces and by occupations.

Q. We should like you to file it. The statement includes both officers and men?—A. This is supposed to be the entire force. The statement is as follows:—

RETURN showing approximately by Provinces the occupations of members of the Canadian Expeditionary Force, which had embarked for Overseas Service to September 15, 1916.

Province.	Professions.	Employers or Merchants.	Clerical Workers.	Manual Workers.	Farmers.	Ranchers.	Students.	Total.

Total.....	9,421	3,597	31,903	142,287	21,817	1,942	5,143	216,110

Q. What is meant by ranchers?—A. I take it western ranchers, men from the Western provinces. The statement discriminates between farmers and ranchers. The farmers number 21,817 and the ranchers 1,942. I was unable to get from the Militia Department any distinction between skilled and unskilled labour, but I have worked that out from the returns given to our Soldiers' Aid Commission at Toronto of discharged soldiers, and I will file this statement also. At the time last fall I received this statement of discharged soldiers from the Head Office in Toronto, which includes Ottawa and all Ontario, there had been 2,622 soldiers dealt with, and the individual occupation of each is given.

By Mr. Ross (Middlesex):

Q. What were they?—A. The occupations of the discharged soldiers of which they have record for the province of Ontario at our head office in Toronto, made up from returns covering the whole province.

By Brigadier-General Mason:

Q. Up to what date does that return go?—A. I am not quite sure. It will be back in September, because I think they have dealt with nearly 6,000 cases up-to-date.

By Mr. Middlebro:

Q. Is the statement classified?—A. I have attempted to classify them. I have analysed these occupations and worked them out in this way: Unskilled labour, that is men who registered themselves as labourers not claiming to have any skill, 25 per cent; almost unskilled, such as janitors, drivers, teamsters, messengers, etc., 15 per cent; farmers and farm hands 5 per cent; clerks and salesmen, students and professional men, 10 per cent; skilled labour, 45 per cent.

By Hon. Mr. Murphy:

Q. Is that your percentage analysis of the 2,622 cases?—A. Yes, I will file this statement.

The CHAIRMAN: By all means do so.

By Mr. Middlebro:

Q. In the statement showing the occupations of 216,000 soldiers, the farming class is exactly 10 per cent?—A. Quite so, it is given as 21,817.

Mr. MIDDLEBRO: That gives an idea of the proportion of farmers.

By Brigadier-General Mason:

Q. How many does that return cover up to September 15, 1916?—A. That return covered the Canadian Expeditionary Force of 216,000 men who had sailed from Halifax.

By the Chairman:

Q. Do you believe that the 2,622 soldiers dealt with by the Ontario Soldiers Aid Commission represent a fair average of the 216,000, or would you believe that the first men to come back were super-abundant in certain classes? Were the first 5,000 men that came home a fair sample of the whole 216,000?—A. I think so, as far as Ontario is concerned, but it does not work out accurately for all of Canada. Take manual workers, that class is less for all Canada than the proportion of those who came back to Ontario, because so many men in proportion went from the cities and towns of Ontario, which makes a difference between the manual workers, who represent two-thirds when you take the whole of Canada and 85 per cent when you deal with the province of Ontario.

Q. Your contention would be that in the earlier drafts, which you are now getting back, the percentage of city men is greater than it will be in the later drafts?—A. I do not think that result would follow.

[Mr. E. R. Cameron.]

Q. The percentage of farmers would be less in the later drafts?—A. Take Ontario, which is the only province we have any return for as to returned soldiers, and there I think the 85 per cent shows that the men enlisted from the cities and towns in greater proportion here than in the West. The proportion of manual workers from the West would be very much less, and there would be a greater number of farmers and ranchers.

By Mr. Middlebro:

Q. That would be the case because the first men to enlist in Ontario would be from the towns and cities?—A. That is possible, and it may be that the percentage will change and not be so large from this class when we get the final results.

By the Chairman:

Q. The 2,622 cases, however, include the three classes of men, those discharged in England, in France, and from the camps?—A. The Ontario return includes them all.

Q. Including those discharged from the camps?—A. Yes, I should say these three classes.

By Mr. Ross (Middlesex):

Q. Some of the 2,622 men may not have gone overseas at all?—A. Part of them have not.

Q. Can you tell us how many of the 2,622 did not go overseas at all?—A. No, I cannot say as to that, but I think the proportion I have figured out from our Ottawa experience ought to apply to the 2,622.

Q. That would be 25 per cent?—A. Yes. Now, I do not know, gentlemen, that I have very much more material to give you.

By the Chairman:

Q. Can you tell us in respect of these men what proportion were, so to speak, fixtures, that is had been in Canada any considerable length of time? For example you have a returned soldier who perhaps prior to enlistment was only in this country a year or two. He would probably be more difficult to place than a returned soldier born and brought up in Canada and who is accustomed to our ways and conditions. Have you any figures to show what proportion of the men who have passed through your hands had been in Canada any considerable length of time prior to enlistment?—A. We perhaps could furnish you with that; but, speaking from memory, I would say it was a very small percentage who had not lived in Canada practically all their life. There were very few who had been here only a short time if you count five or six years as residence in Canada.

Q. Those would be acclimatized?—A. Yes, and there is a very negligible quantity who were not of that class.

Q. In respect of the 450 discharged men who have passed through your hands, what percentage of them had come to Canada within three years, could you give us those figures?—A. I will do so, sir, if we have the material upon which to base them.

Q. Have you anything further to put before the Committee?—A. I do not know that there is anything more that I can offer.

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. Mr. Cameron, from what source do you derive your funds to carry on this work?—A. From the voluntary contributions of the citizens. Perhaps I should have explained that in the first year of our organization we adopted a scheme which had been found fairly successful in Winnipeg and some of the western cities, of having buttons prepared, like the one you see on my coat, and selling one line at a dollar, and a more expensive button at $5, and in this way simply made an effort to reach the citizens and have them purchase these buttons. I should have said something more in dealing with our organization, one of the methods adopted by us to bring our work before the great mass of the citizens was to make provision for a council to which representatives would be sent by every organization in the city—Patriotic, Benevolent or Fraternal, every organization we could get hold of. We have got, I think, about 113 of these organizations who nominated representatives on our Council, and we found that extremely beneficial in raising funds. We had the assistance of these organizations, both in the sale of these buttons and in our campaign conducted about a month ago, where we distributed cards asking for contributions and then called at the houses for them. But the citizens have provided and continue to provide, for the operations of the Soldiers' Aid Commission all over the province. As I understand it, the citizens of Ontario are expected to provide the funds necessary for the operations of the Commission.

Q. Then if private citizens ceased subscribing to your funds your organization would blow up?—A. It would unless the Ontario Government came to our assistance.

Q. Under the Act of 1916 the Ontario Government is empowered to do that?—A. Yes.

Q. Do they not do that? As a matter of fact, do they not permit you to exhaust all your resources raised in this semi-charitable way, before they give you anything?—

A. They have never given us anything, and we have never asked for anything so far, because our funds have been sufficient for our purposes. I may say that I recently, at the suggestion of our Executive, communicated with the Chairman of the Commission suggesting that it would facilitate the collecting of funds from the community if the Government, or the General Organization would supply the funds for our office expenses, because we were frequently met during our campaign by such statements as: "You are spending nearly all your money on your staff," and we thought it would perhaps assist us in any future campaign if we were able to say to the community, "Anything you contribute will actually go to the benefit of the soldier, will reach him and his family, and will not be expended for office expenses."

Q. As a matter of fact, do not the Ontario Government practically say: "Until you have about exhausted the last dollar you can raise in this way, we will not come to your assistance"?—A. I do not think it has been put up to us in that way at all. In fact, I understand from Mr. Best, who is the Ottawa representative on the Board in Toronto, that he has been verbally told that where the citizens do not supply the funds necessary for our work, the Government will supply them. That is the form in which the Government's attitude is stated to us and we know nothing beyond that.

Q. That is the same thing in another way.—A. Perhaps so.

Q. It is a distinction without a difference, I think. From your practical experience in this matter, would you not say there ought to be some stipulated fund provided by the State for this work, upon which you might draw?—A. I would consider that our position is practically the same as that of the Patriotic Fund. If the time is to come when the Patriotic Fund is to be dropped and the State undertake all the pension work, I do not know why the same should not be done with regard to us, because it seems to me that our work will have to go on after the war is over.

Q. Quite so.—A. And I do not think it can be expected that the community is to go on supplying us with funds for ever. Still, we find, and I say this quite frankly, the public to be most generous in their treatment of us, and most sympathetic in their appreciation of our work. Practically no objections have been raised by the public towards contributing to this fund.

Q. Would you think, human nature being much the same, that when the war is over and the danger past, the contributions may cease?—A. I should think that would be very likely.

Q. Then, under these circumstances, do you not think there ought to be some provision made whereby the State should take up the work?—A. I think so.

Q. Speaking as a man with practical knowledge of this work, you would not feel as much inclined to ask for contributions when the war is over and the danger past as you formerly did?—A. Certainly not.

[Mr. E. R. Cameron.]

Q. You do not think the response would be as great if you did?—A. No, I am sure not. In such event it would be probably up to the Government to attend to the whole of this work.

By Mr. Middlebro:

Q. As a matter of fact, you know the Provincial Government have agreed to do that?—A. We were informed by Mr. Best that they are willing to do that.

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. In Clause 1 of the Agreement arrived at when the Provincial organization was formed, it is set forth (reads):

“That all expenditures necessary in connection with the organization and administration of Provincial and other purely local Committees be borne by the Provincial and local authorities, with such voluntary contributions as may be received.”

Just to repeat my question. As a matter of fact they have given you nothing as yet, but voluntary contributions have been wholly relied upon?—A. Yes, I think that substantially they are.

By Mr. Middlebro:

Q. Do you not think that so long as the public is contributing voluntarily it is all right? Is it not clear that when the public ceases to do so the Government will make good any deficiency?—A. I think the Government might make some contribution, Mr. Middlebro, and I think they have made an offer to the municipalities along this line; “You give so much and we will give the same amount.” That is, if the municipal Council will vote us a certain appropriation towards this work, the Ontario Government will grant the same amount. I understand there has been some such proposition as that made.

Q. And you asked the Ontario Government to pay your office expenses?—A. The Provincial Government has not yet had a chance to reply. This resolution was only passed by our association last week. Let me say this, however: We have no complaints to make. We have no complaint to make against the Provincial Government or the Provincial organization, they have never refused us anything yet.

Q. You say they have never refused you anything yet?—A. Not yet.

MR. MIDDLEBRO: And I do not think they ever will.

MR. PARDEE: I was not attempting to insinuate such a thing. I was asking the opinion of the witness if he thought this method of carrying on the work was a practical one.

By Mr. Middlebro:

Q. Up to the present time you have thought the existing system all right?—A. I have modified that statement to this extent, that I think it would be proper for the Ontario Government to contribute something to our organization work here.

Q. And in pursuance of that view you have asked them for a contribution?—A. We have suggested that they pay for the office staff.

Q. And if they do that you will be satisfied?—A. I think so, because that is the largest portion of our expenditure.

By the Chairman:

Q. Where does the money come from which you give to assist the special cases which you have just cited?—A. From the citizens. Everything is in one fund with us. We pay out of the one fund our office expenses and the monetary assistance we give to soldiers, which, I may say, has increased very rapidly the last few months beyond what it ever was before. But everything comes out of these voluntary contributions made by the citizens of Ottawa.

Q. You feel that you have enough money to deal with the situation properly?—A. I have doubts as to that. If the large number of returned soldiers are coming over that we read about, 1,000 a week for 10 weeks, within a few months after they are here many of them will be discharged and coming to us for employment and assistance and we shall not have sufficient funds to deal with the situation.

Q. What would you do in case your resources were overtaxed?—A. We should apply at once to Toronto.

Q. To the Provincial Government?—A. Yes.

By Mr. Middlebro:

Q. And under the agreement arrived at they have consented to meet your wishes?—A. Yes.

By Brigadier-General Mason:

Q. How many branches of the commission are there in Ontario?—A. I understand about 80 or 85.

Q. Similar to yours?—A. Yes.

By Hon. Mr. Murphy:

Q. What have the voluntary contributions amounted to?—A. The voluntary contributions this year have amounted to about $3,000. Then we get a grant of $1,000 from the city council.

Q. And what do your operating expenses amount to?—A. You mean for the office staff and so on?

Q. Yes?—A. About $2,500.

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. Do you know of any Soldiers' Aid Commission which has received aid from the Government?—A. I have heard of one.

Q. Which was that?—A. I have just been told that one organization got $500.

By the Chairman:

Q. From the Provincial Government?—A. From the Provincial Government. There may be more but I do not know as to that.

By Hon. Mr. Murphy:

Q. Is it your commission which takes up street collections?—A. We took up collection about a month ago, but in that instance we distributed cards to every house and called for them.

Q. What I am referring to is collections about the streets and in public buildings?—A. No, that is not our organization.

By the Chairman:

Q. Will you be good enough to file with us for record the literature in which you appeal to the public?—A. I will get that from the secretary and send it in.

By Mr. Ross (Middlesex):

Q. Do I understand you to say that you collect $3,000 a year?—A. We got that $3,000 in our public campaign in January last.

Q. How much do you collect in the course of a year?—A. I think we realized last year from the sale of buttons about $1,500 or $1,700, and we got $1,000 from the city council. We came out ahead last year from all sources.

Q. And you made payments to 450 soldiers?—A. Oh, no. All the soldiers do not need money. We find employment for the majority of them and give financial aid to the rest.

assistance to only a limited number. In every such case we investigate the circumstances before any grant is made.

Q. With the funds at your disposal you could not give assistance to every one? I notice you have one man to whom you gave $70?—A. That is an exceptional case.

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. I have here a clipping from the Journal-Press of this morning's date containing a letter signed by Kenneth E. Macpherson, president of the Returned Soldiers' Association of Ottawa, in which he makes the following statements (reads):—

"Our association is most desirous of having headquarters of its own, and if the Government, the city, or any individual has vacant quarters that would be suitable for us we would gladly accept them. We are not, however, anxious to spend anything for expenses except what is absolutely necessary, as we feel that all our funds should be conserved for the relief of our needy members, and that a substantial bank balance should be built up in order to take care of our needy comrades when they start to arrive home in large numbers.

"Our present quarters consist of a room 12 feet x 15 feet, boarded off at the back of the base recruiting office. This serves temporarily as a place where mail can be addressed and where our executive can meet and conduct their business from.

"Last December the Soldiers' Aid Commission very kindly offered to our association, and to returned men generally, the use of their quarters on Cliff street; this invitation has been renewed quite recently. The Laurentian Chapter, Daughters of the Empire, have also offered the use of the Soldiers' Club on Wellington street. We have made use of this latter club for our general meetings and have received the kindest treatment from all the ladies connected with that institution.

"It must be pointed out, however, that while we greatly appreciate the kindness of both these institutions, neither place is suitable for our requirements. In the first place, it is very difficult for one institution to carry on its business from the headquarters of another institution. A place is required where members of the executive, and various committees, finance, relief, employment, investigation, etc., can meet and keep their records where there is room, or rooms, sufficient to accommodate a general meeting."

What do you say as to that?—A. If these soldiers desire to have rooms or club quarters for themselves, and are asking the citizens to contribute towards that object, I do not see that we as an organization have any right to say to the citizens: "Do not give them this money." If the soldiers have made out a case for quarters of their own different from those that we have, and which we have offered to place at their disposal, and the citizens are willing to contribute for that purpose, I do not see that we, as an organization, have any say in the matter.

By the Chairman:

Q. You have done the best you can for them?—A. We have offered them the use of the accommodation which we have. If they say that these quarters are not sufficiently large for their purpose, as I have said, they are beautifully situated, beautifully adapted for that purpose, if they were large enough. If they say they are not sufficient for their purpose, and if they have sufficient friends in the city to give them the funds with which to procure larger ones, we have no cause to interfere. I may say there are two or three members of the Canadian Returned Soldiers' Association on our executive, and two of those members were at our meeting a few days ago. We said to those two members: we will have a house committee, and we will put you on the house committee—we must keep the control in our own organization, but we are not here in the evening; you are here, that is the time you use it most, and we will give you the quarters, your own men will only come into contact with you who are returned soldiers and belong to your organization. We thought that probably the thing could be worked out in that way. But this is the first time I have known that they feel the offer we made is not sufficient for their purpose.

By Brigadier-General Mason:

Q. How many of these returned soldiers have made use of these quarters?—

A. Captain Macpherson will be better able to tell you that.

By Mr. Middlebro:

Q. Can you tell me what has been done in the way of obtaining employment for returned soldiers?—A. I have some details here, but I think I had better give you that also this afternoon.

By the Chairman:

Q. In your judgment are the different associations already created in Ottawa sufficient to deal with the returned soldiers' problem, if they are provided with the means?—A. I think so. I do not think any additional organizations are required at all.

Q. Do the present organizations, in your judgment, overlap in their work?—A. Our organization, and this Returned Soldiers' Association, with which Captain Macpherson, who is here, and will address you, is connected, do overlap, in that we are both trying to obtain employment for returned soldiers. Both organizations are trying to obtain employment for them, and there may also be an overlapping in regard to the question of financial assistance to the returned soldiers.

Q. Would it be possible for a returned soldier to obtain assistance from both organizations?—A. He might, but we are trying to get over that by letting one another know what we are doing. We are going to try in the future to check one another's work.

The CHAIRMAN: That is all we want this morning, Mr. Cameron, if you will kindly attend the Committee this afternoon, with the further information you have promised to prepare for us.

SOLDIERS' AID COMMISSION,

OTTAWA BRANCH,

HEADQUARTERS, 25 Cliff street, Ottawa, Ont.

To provide for the welfare of our returned soldiers is rapidly becoming one of the most serious responsibilities resting upon the Canadian people.

These men have offered themselves upon the altar of Duty and Patriotism, and although they have not been called upon to make the supreme sacrifice of their lives, they are returning in ever-increasing numbers, more or less incapacitated from continuing their former occupations.

Our duty to them is clear. They have been our substitutes on the battle-fields of France and Flanders. They have suffered in our behalf. Their bodies have been maimed in our defence. Upon us rests the high and sacred obligation of making their future lives reasonably comfortable, and as useful as possible.

How this duty can be best performed is occupying the minds of all thoughtful Canadians. The Governments of Canada and the Provinces have not been unmindful of their responsibilities. In Ontario a Soldiers' Aid Commission has been appointed to deal with this problem. After full consideration it has been decided that returned soldiers can best be cared for by local Boards, established in the centres from which the soldiers were drawn. Here are their relatives and friends. Here they formerly had employment. Here they will prefer to reside in the future. Here they may reasonably expect to obtain sympathy, encouragement and assistance.

The function of these local Boards in no way trenches upon the duty of the State to provide suitable pensions, convalescent homes, and homes for those who are permanently invalided. What is aimed at is to provide occupation for soldiers who have capacity for some employment. It is recognized that the best interests of the soldier, as well as of the State, require that, so far as he has power, every returned soldier should revert to his former condition as a wage-earner.

To perform its functions the local branch has established an office at 25 Cliff Street.

Arrangements have been made by which our secretary is kept informed, so far as possible, of all returned soldiers who arrive at Quebec and whose destination is the city of Ottawa. In every case where such information is received, the soldier is met at the station, however late the hour, and taken to his home, if he has one. In all cases his immediate wants are provided for. Full particulars are obtained respecting his former occupation, his physical condition, local address, etc., etc. The desire is to give each returned soldier a welcome that will effect his real and lasting interest and not vanish as soon as the novelty of his situation and the story of his battles have grown stale.

To accomplish this, the co-operation of the citizens of Ottawa is solicited. Employers of labour are requested to furnish information as to the extent to which they are able to provide employment.

We have now about completed one year's work. In that time we have given assistance in some way to nearly 500 men who have enlisted, and subsequently have been discharged as unfit for active duty. Of these nearly all became incapacitated before reaching France or "having done their bit" at the front, have been discharged with no pension beyond a small gratuity because their disability was less than 20 per cent. Pending further consideration of the pension problem by the constituted authorities, our branch has placed itself on record as of opinion that the debt which Canada owes to the disabled soldier, although the disability is under 20 per cent, is not liquidated by returning him to his family and friends with or without a gratuity, and proposes, so far as funds are provided by our citizens, to help these soldiers along until some final and permanent solution of the question has been found.

The subscriptions now solicited are required in part to enable the Commission to assist returned soldiers who have been discharged from the expeditionary force and who are therefore no longer in receipt of pay or allowances from any Government source nor from the Patriotic Fund. This assistance is absolutely necessary until such time as they can again obtain suitable employment in civil life.

On behalf of the Executive Committee of the Ottawa Branch Soldiers' Aid Commission.

E. R. CAMERON,
Chairman.

SOLDIERS' AID COMMISSION, (OTTAWA BRANCH)

The following recommendations were submitted to a special meeting of the Executive Committee of the Ottawa Branch of the Soldiers' Aid Commission on October 16, 1916, and unanimously adopted, and a special committee consisting of Messrs. E. R. Cameron, K.C., W. J. Gerald, and C. Lawrence, were authorized to present these recommendations to the Board of Pension Commissioners at a meeting to be held on Tuesday, October 17, 1916:—

1. "That when a soldier has been enlisted for overseas service it is to be presumed an absence of fraud that he was at such time physically fit for duty, and no such soldier shall be discharged as unfit for duty on account of some complaint, disease or injury, without a pension unless it is shown affirmatively that he was suffering from such complaint at the time of enlistment and that the said complaint, disease or injury was not aggravated by the conditions imposed on him in the performance of his military duties.

2. No soldier who has been enlisted for overseas service and who subsequently is declared by the military authorities as unfit for active duty on physical grounds, shall be discharged without a pension until:

(a) He receives a certificate from the military authorities giving the complaint, disease or injury which unfits him for active service, and which shall declare the grounds for depriving him of such pension.

(b) Thirty days have elapsed from the delivery of such certificate.

3. If, within the said 30 days the said soldier obtains and files with the Pensions Board a certificate from a duly qualified physician that in his opinion the complaint, disease or injury from which the soldier suffers is not that declared in the certificate by the military authorities, or that his complaint, disease or injury may have been aggravated by the conditions imposed upon him in performing his military duties, he shall be entitled to have the decision of the military authorities or officer with respect to the said matter reviewed by the Pension Board which shall deal with the same after the case has been reported upon by some other medical officer, specially appointed by the said Pension Board, and the discharge of the soldier shall not take effect until the said Pensions Board has given its decision upon his appeal."

Witness discharged.

Controller J. W. NELSON, City Hall, Ottawa, called, sworn, and examined.

By the Chairman:

Q. You are Chairman of the Ottawa Municipal Reception Committee to Returned Soldiers, are you not?—A. Yes.

Q. Will you kindly describe to the committee what work you endeavour to do for them?—A. We are trying simply to meet the returned soldiers who come back to Ottawa, and to give them what is termed an "official welcome," in the name of the people of the city of Ottawa.

Q. Where do you meet them?—A. At the railway stations.

Q. How are you informed of the hour of their arrival?—A. Through the Secretary of the Soldiers' Aid, Mr. Cameron.

Q. Who goes down to meet them?—A. We have divided the members of the council into five groups, and they take week about; there is in each sub-committee a sub-chairman, or one man, to whom Mr. Cameron sends word, and if some of the rest of the members, who are not on the committee, hear about it, they go down also.

[Controller J. W. Nelson.]

Arrangements have been made so that there is always some one there to welcome them on behalf of the city.

Q. Do you inform the public so that they may go also?—A. No, that is not practicable, because, we only get word at four or five o'clock in the afternoon to meet the seven o'clock train. It was proposed to invite the public to join us, but the proposition was found to be impracticable.

Q. What do you do for the men when you meet them?—A. We simply shake hands with them, if we can get to them, and welcome them back; most of these men who have returned, have been men who are going to the different homes.

Q. They are men whose destination has already been determined?—A. Yes, there are automobiles there to take them to their destination. As a rule we do not make any further arrangements, but if a man comes to Ottawa, and when we meet him we find there is no conveyance provided for him, we will get one.

Q. Your object is to have the man feel that the city of Ottawa welcomes him home?—A. Yes, that is the main object.

Q. Do you have any committee to find employment for or give assistance to the men?—A. No, we have no official body of that nature at all. We passed a resolution requesting the head of every department that whenever any vacancies occurred, or when a man was needed—except in the case of technical men—returned soldiers be given the preference, and asking them whenever they had a vacancy to notify the proper official who would forward the information to the different bodies engaged in looking after the returned soldiers so that they could find a man suitable for the position.

Q. Then I understand that in employment given by the corporation of Ottawa, you give preference always to returned soldiers?—A. That is our policy.

Q. Is that pretty generally carried out?—A. No, I think we have only two or three returned soldiers employed so far for the simple reason that we have very few vacancies. When vacancies occurred they have been given the preference. For instance, there is a vacancy to-day in the lavatory, it is a boy's job as a matter of fact, but we thought possibly some returned soldier might be prepared to take that until such time as he is able to get a better one in order to tide him over. It is a $50 per month job.

Q. Have you employed any returned soldiers that you afterwards had to let go?—A. No, we have employed very few, because the opportunity for more has not arisen. I heard Mr. Cameron refer to that locomotive engineer. I got a letter, I think from the same man, who said that he did not feel fit, at that time, to go back to his job as an engineer, but he thought he might be able to fire a boiler. Unfortunately under the Ontario Law he could not be employed as a fireman, and he was not able to do hard labouring work, he wanted some light employment. He is a certified engineer, but he was unable owing to his condition, to work at his trade. My idea is that we have a large number of positions in the city service, such as weigh-masters, who are employed in weighing coal and hay, there might only be thirty or forty loads a day to weigh, and I thought a man who had lost a limb or something like that would be able to perform those duties and the intention was that as vacancies in those positions occurred we would give the returned soldiers the preference, wherever they were capable of filling the position.

Q. Has your Council made any appropriation toward the work of the Soldiers' Aid Association?—A. We give them $1,000 a year.

Q. That is what you have already given them?—A. Yes.

Q. If their work increases would you favour giving them a larger grant?—A. Of course I could not speak for the Council, I can only speak for myself, but I can say that the Council is always ready to show a generous spirit in such cases.

Q. You are satisfied that from the spirit the Council has already shown, they are prepared to do their full share?—A. Yes, although we think that the Ontario Government which takes a war-tax out of the city of $125,000 a year, besides a large amount from the moving-picture shows, should at least help a little, although that does not stand in the way of the Council making proper grants.

Witness discharged.

Mrs. CROMBIE, Carleton Apartments, Ottawa, called.

By the Chairman:

Q. You are the President, I understand, of the Soldiers' Club, carried on by the Laurentian Chapter, I.O.D.E.?—A. I have been up till the day before yesterday, when I resigned.

Q. But you know all about the work of that club, from its inception, and you have been largely responsible for its inauguration. Will you kindly tell us what the Soldiers' Club endeavours to do?—A. We have been working entirely for the men going overseas up till now. The building has been given us by the Slater estate, on Wellington street, and the Government have heated it for us, and we have made it entirely self-supporting, because we have never had any grant made to us in the two years we have been operating, but we have had donations from other sources, amounting to $800.

Q. Is it supported by the regular funds of the Chapter?—A. It is supported by its own canteen entirely. Of course, people have given things in kind, occasionally, but we have never had anything beyond that $800.

Q. What staff have you?—A. We have a working housekeeper and two women who assist.

Q. You have not, then, dealt with the returned soldier?—A. No, except that we give meals on presentation of a ticket from the Returned Soldiers' Aid Association.

Q. And you give them three days' meals for nothing?—A. Yes, and in one instance we gave a months' meals, but we have never turned any returned soldier away if he wants his meal. The returned soldiers do not make a great deal of use of the club, but they are always welcome to the club. We offered the use of the club to the Returned Soldiers' Aid Association, but, of course, they must use it on the same terms as the men going overseas. We have to leave our present building on the 10th of May. When the Returned Soldiers' Association have held a meeting they have had the use of our club for that purpose on several occasions.

Q. Is it the intention of your organization to do anything further for the returned soldiers?—A. We should like to make that our work in the future, if we can be of any use; there are so very few men now in town who are going overseas and we intend to take up the work for the returned soldiers.

Q. When you leave this present house, have you another house in view?—A. No, not yet.

Q. Have you any suggestions to offer, or anything, from your experience that would be helpful to the committee in their recommendations, regarding the treatment of the returned soldiers?—A. I can hardly tell you. They come into the Club when they think of it. They make use of the reading room, billiard room and writing room.

Q. You take steps to make them aware of the fact that they are always welcome?—A. Well, we notify them.

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. It is open all the time?—A. The canteen is open every afternoon from about four till half past nine. The Club is open all day, if they chose to come in.

Witness discharged.

[Mrs. Crombie.]

Captain KENNETH CLARKE MACPHERSON, sworn and examined.

By the Chairman:

Q. Your name in full?—A. Kenneth Clarke Macpherson.

Q. Your rank?—A. Captain.

Q. Are you at present in the active service?—A. Yes, Canadian Expeditionary Force attached to the Military Headquarters here.

Q. You are President of the Canadian Association of Returned Soldiers?—A. I am.

Q. Will you kindly tell us about the organization and work of that association, deal with how it came into being and its organization and charter and put on file the documents that relate to it?—A. A meeting of returned men was called some months ago at which I was not present; that was the initial meeting. The matter was dropped then and came up later. A meeting of the men was called, and a temporary committee was formed to start the organization of the institution, and at a later meeting the officers of the associations were elected. The association is composed solely of men who have seen service overseas, not necessarily in France, but who have been to Britain and have returned through no fault of theirs. We examine every man's discharge papers to see that he is discharged as medically unfit, or if they happen to have returned to Canada on leave and have been retained for services here. They are still eligible, with the exception of men who have returned on account of stoppage of working pay. I might explain that; in the old camp days there was 50 cents to a dollar extra a day to be allowed for certain mechanics, cooks, etc., and this was continued in the early stages of the war. At a later date it was found that a great many of these men were far behind the lines, out of danger, and the Government did not think it was fair that they should be drawing the extra remuneration, over the man who was fighting in the trenches, and on January 1, 1916, this pay was stopped, and, as they made the contract, they gave the men the privilege of taking their discharge out of the forces. There was quite a large number of men came back.

Q. Men who were not willing to remain there unless they got the extra pay?—A. Yes.

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. Had they been to France?—A. Yes, a great many of them had been to France.

Q. And yet they came back?—A. Yes.

By Hon. Brigadier-General Mason:

Q. Were there many came back?—A. I am not aware of the number, but I believe there was a couple of thousand altogether. We had every reason to consider that these men had been led to believe they were to receive this remuneration, but we felt that men who had been over to France and had seen the condition the rest of them were up against were not playing the game in returning on account of the stoppage of pay, and they are not eligible for our association. We have an investigation committee which investigates certain cases. We had a case come up of a man that served about nine months in France: he was drawing that pay, fifty-four years old, and he said he did not feel he could carry on, and he took advantage of that and came back to Canada. He has since tried on two or three occasions to re-enlist, but could not pass the doctor. There are cases such as that, that we leave ourselves open to investigate, and if the association considers the man has done the best he could, and there are circumstances which would warrant us, we might accept him.

Q. Do you require that the man should show good conduct certificates?—A. Yes, we examine all their discharge certificates.

Q. A man must have a good conduct discharge?—A. Yes. Where we find we cannot be satisfied with the discharge certificates, we would take the matter up with the Department, and find out if there is anything further behind it.

Q. In the choice of your officers, is there any difference in the eligibility for election as to whether a man held a certain rank?—A. No; our organization does not take into consideration whether he is an officer, a N.C.O., or a man.

Q. Any man who is fit to be a member may be an officer?—A. Yes.

[Captain Kenneth Clarke Macpherson.]

By Hon. Mr. McCurdy:

Q. Are men returned from England eligible for membership?—A. Yes; they require to have gone overseas. Nobody who has never left Canada would be eligible.

By Hon. Mr. Murphy:

Q. You started to tell about some preliminary meetings to organize, but you did not tell us about the organization?—A. I have the charter here, which I can file, if you wish.

Q. By whom is it granted?—A. By the Province of Ontario.

Q. Letters Patent or by Act of Parliament?—A. As a matter of fact, I just got the copy to-day. It is signed by the Provincial Treasurer, William David Macpherson.

Q. You can file it, but you might read the paragraph stating the objects of the Association?—A. Paragraph A reads as follows:—

“To perpetuate the close and kindly ties of mutual service in the Great War and the recollections and associations of that experience and to maintain proper standards of dignity and honour amongst all returned soldiers; (b) To preserve the memory and records of those who suffered and died for the nation; to see to the erection of monuments to their valour and the establishment of an Annual Memorial Day; (c) To ensure that provision is made for due care of the sick, wounded and needy among those who have served, including reasonable pensions, employment for such as are capable, soldiers’ homes, medical care and proper provision for dependent families of enlisted men, and (d) To constantly inculcate loyalty to Canada and the Empire and unstinted service in their interest.”

Q. What is the name of the Association?—A. Canadian Association of Returned Soldiers, Ottawa District.

By the Chairman:

Q. Do I understand that there is an Association of Canadian Returned Soldiers with a similar object with a membership throughout the Dominion?—A. There are two names that have been used. In Montreal there was an association known as the Canadian Association of Returned Soldiers, Montreal District.

By Hon. Mr. Murphy:

Q. Is that incorporated also?—A. Yes.

Q. Under what?—A. Under a Quebec charter. They are all Provincial charters.

By Mr. Ross (Middlesex):

Q. They are not subsidiary to each other?—A. No. I might mention that it is our intention in the near future to have representatives of these various associations meet here, so that we can bring up questions that interest the various associations; for instance, what men are eligible. We may find a little difference in some of their constitutions, and we want to have them similar, so that if a man belongs to our association here and proceeds to Calgary or some place out there, he presents his card there and the members look after him.

By the Chairman:

Q. Do you desire to secure a Dominion charter?—A. That is our desire eventually.

By Hon. Mr. Murphy:

Q. Who are the applicants for this charter?—A. Kenneth Clarke Macpherson, Joseph Bernard Henshaw, William Pemberton Morling, Joshua Zivian, John Reginald Phillips, Harry Lewis, Alexander Kirkwood, Hugh Spencer Relph, William Craig, Arthur Lapointe and William Lewis.

[Capt. Kenneth C. Macpherson.]

Q. Are these gentlemen all soldiers who have been overseas?—A. They are all men who have been overseas.

Q. What is the capital stock?—A. No capital stock. Our funds are secured by public subscription and by various entertainments we have put on. I have given the objects. Do you want the declaration?

Q. No, that is not necessary. That will appear when it is filed.

By the Chairman:

Q. You have given us the objects?—A. Yes. The sole objects of our association are to pick up a man when he comes back, and if he is in need of financial assistance, give it to him, and also help him to get employment. We have been able to help a considerable number of men since our association has been formed, and we find there are cases that come to us from among the men themselves that would not be heard of in any other organization. They have not the same feeling about coming to our organization as they would have in going to an outside source, and we put all our help in the form of a loan. We simply say "He needs $10 or $25" and we give it in the form of a loan which can be repaid by him at any time; we never press him for repayment, but if he gets on his feet again and feels he would like to refund that money, he pays it back.

By Brigadier-General Mason:

Q. Have you club quarters?—A. No, we have none. In connection with an article which appeared in this morning's papers, I would say that a few days ago there appeared to be a controversy between the Journal and the Citizen over our quarters, and I feel in fairness to the associations—as two institutions were offered to us for quarters, that that fact ought to be brought out. We have a room which does not cost us anything; we have boarded off a place at the back of the Base Recruiting Office. The reason we went there is that Captain Thoburn, who is in charge of the Base Recruiting Depot, said he thought it would help considerably in recruiting to have our men constantly about the place, and he arranged to have this space boarded off. It is a small place, but it gives us a headquarters where we can have our mail sent, and where we can meet. We have regular office hours from 8 to 9 a.m., from 12 to 2 p.m., and after 5 o'clock at night, when there are always some members of the organization there.

By the Chairman:

Q. Have you a paid staff?—A. We pay no salaries whatever.

Q. It is being conducted voluntarily?—A. Yes, by our own members.

Q. How do you get the money that you dispense?—A. By subscriptions, by collections at hockey matches, and by concerts.

Q. That is, by appealing to the generous public?—A. By appealing to the public.

Q. You have no grants of any kind?—A. No grants whatever.

Q. In the matter of securing employment for your men, do you utilize the Soldiers' Aid Commission or do you act independently?—A. We act independently, but we try to work as much in conjunction as possible.

Q. Do you find that the present agencies in Ottawa are adequate for dealing with the returned soldiers problem?—A. Do you mean with our two organizations?

Q. No. Do you find that the existing agencies in Ottawa, which deal with returned soldiers, are adequate?—A. I think that between the two institutions at the present time they are adequate to deal with employment. We look, of course, more to the future. At the present time there is quite a bit of employment to be secured. The difficulty is in securing the men that can carry on these positions. For instance, we do not recommend a man to go to a clerical job in a Department if he is a plumber but to something more suitable to his position. We try to find out where positions can be secured that will be suitable for such a man, not only for the man's own benefit and where he can make larger wages, but for the benefit of the men in general. If we send a man to a firm and he is not suitable for the position and does not make good, the chances are that the firm will say: "We have had several returned soldiers and they have been no good." So we feel, even if a man has to wait a few days, that it is better to hold him and send him to a position for which he is suitable.

Q. Has your experience led you to believe that the men are anxious and willing to work?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Have you found many instances of men who do not desire work on the supposition that the country ought to look after them for life?—A. Very few.

Q. Have you sent many men to positions where they have not been able to hold them?—A. Very few. It has been through no fault of their own. We have had men taken on who have not held their positions. I had two cases of men yesterday who had been employed in the National Registration, who when they reported for duty to sign the book were told that they were not wanted any longer.

By Brigadier-General Mason:

Q. How many have you secured employment for?—A. Roughly speaking, between thirty and forty, that is since Christmas time.

By the Chairman:

Q. Are there many returned soldiers at Ottawa at present in need of employment?—A. Not a great many.

Q. How many would you say?—A. As far as our organization is concerned, I do not think more than five.

Q. Why are they out of employment?—A. Simply that some of them have come into town very lately, and we have not been able to find anything quite suitable for them yet. The great difficulty is that there is a certain amount of employment in the Government but the men are not suitable for such positions. As far as the Militia Department is concerned they have been very good in offering positions to our men; they have practically given preference to any men that we can put on there and we are trying to be careful in sending men there who will be desirable, and in every case they have been taken on where they have had a vacancy. The only difficulty we have so far as Government employment is concerned is the low salaries. We have one or two men who are married, who have been getting only $41.66 a month. When you have a man who is not a skilled labourer and not a clerk, and is probably not capable of carrying on heavy work, which he was accustomed to do before the war, it is quite a problem.

Q. These men are not receiving pensions?—A. No. Last Christmas in one case I came across—there was no complaint from the man; we knew nothing about him—I had a list of men receiving small salaries, and I visited something like twenty-four or thirty houses, bringing parcels of Christmas things to the men; and it was very discouraging, some of the places brought to light things I never dreamed were going on. In the home of one man who was drawing $41.66 a month there was absolutely no sign of Christmas, and he did not even have a fire going in his house.

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. How many of a family had he?—A. Three children.

Q. That was his entire revenue?—A. His entire revenue.

Q. He was not receiving a pension?—A. No. He has since then secured his pension.

By Mr. Ross (Middlesex):

Q. How much?—A. $13 or $14 a month.

By the Chairman:

Q. He was at that time waiting for the determination of his pension application?—A. Yes. We were able to help them of course and give them what relief was necessary.

[Capt. Kenneth C. Macpherson.]

Q. Have you any further instances?—A. We have had quite a lot of instances. I had four men that were employed in the Public Works, and I took their case up with Mr. Rogers. They had been put out in some way, had no money, in fact nothing to carry on, no fire in the house when I called upon one of them, and in another case they had no food. I took the matter up with Hon. Mr. Rogers, who referred me to Mr. Buskard, and action was not taken quite as quickly as we would like. It was probably three weeks or a month before the Department offered to take them back again. In the meantime we had got them employment. They had been in the Public Works Department, and were simply on temporary work, and had been laid off probably through the fault of some official there.

Q. Does the Hospitals Commission help you in the case of men who wish to qualify for regular civil service examination?—A. I have not had any occasion to come across the Hospitals Commission.

Q. In our examination of the members of the Hospitals Commission, they mentioned classes in a number of places where men were preparing for Civil Service appointment.—A. I have not run across any of these men. The only case I had at the Military Hospitals Commission was that of a man who wanted to undertake some steam engine or gasolene engine course.

Q. Had this man been already discharged?—A. Yes. But the Hospitals Commission were not able to take him on; they could not give him the instruction he desired. That is the only case I had up with them.

Q. From your experience coming in contact with returned soldiers, to renew my previous question, are the present agencies sufficient and efficient to care for the returned soldiers here in Ottawa? What additions or alterations would you suggest to make them more efficient?—A. Well, at the present time they are adequate to deal with employment. But looking to the future, it is hard to say. For instance, in connection with the Soldiers' Aid Commission, their work has been practically confined to employment so far as I know.

Q. The responsibility rests with them, and what you do in that direction is simply done through mutual friendliness?—A. Absolutely. We endeavour to help our men in every possible way. We find that among the soldiers coming here there are always little complaints, especially if a man does not understand conditions. When these complaints come up, we have a chat with the man, and we are able to explain matters and he is satisfied; it is known among our members that if they have any complaint whatever in regard to their treatment or anything, and they let us know, we will take the matter up and investigate it, and if we feel that the man is justified we endeavour to put the case before the proper authorities.

Q. In each individual case?—A. Yes.

Q. Have you, as an organization, ever passed any resolutions or presented any petitions to the Government for any alteration with respect to the treatment of returned soldiers?—A. Not that I am aware of.

Q. Have you any recommendation of that kind to make?—A. I would like to recommend that something be done for the small salaried man. Also in regard to salaries, I would suggest that a man who has served overseas for one or two years has practically been in the public service, and instead of starting him in the Civil Service at $500 or $600, I think he should be given the benefit of the six months or two years he has already spent in the service of the Government, and receive the remuneration that he would receive if he had been continuously employed in the Civil Service.

By Hon. Mr. Murphy:

Q. Even though he had not been in the Service before?—A. Yes. He has really been in the public service, and should get the increases that would come to him in that year or two years.

[Capt. Kenneth C. Macpherson.]

By the Chairman:

Q. There should be, you think, a minimum Civil Service wage for the soldier, and he should have credit for the time he has served in the military organization?—A. Yes.

Q. Have you anything to say in support of that, because it is a proposal the Committee will probably consider?—A. We realize, of course, under the Civil Service Act that it is impossible to pay a man in certain positions more than $41.66 but I do not think any man should be asked to work for less than $2 a day.

By Mr. Ross (Middlesex):

Q. If a man is being assisted by a pension, would your recommendation apply to him?—A. The pension should not enter into the matter at all. The pension is given for some disability which he has suffered.

By the Chairman:

Q. It is given for decreased efficiency for which the man is not responsible.—A. I do not think the pension should enter into the question of pay at all.

The CHAIRMAN: That is the policy of the Military Hospitals Commission, as you know. You have seen their pensions placard on the wall as an encouragement to a man to learn a new trade.

By Mr. Middlebro:

Q. The pension is given because of the man's services, and by your proposition he would be getting a double allowance?—A. A man might put in a considerable amount of service in the C.E.F., and if he is not disabled when he returns he gets no pension. A man in the Permanent Force, who has put in a certain number of years, is however entitled to a certain pension.

Mr. Ross (Middlesex): Your suggestion would be logical with regard to the man who gets no pension.

By Mr. Middlebro:

Q. He would be given his pay, his pension, and virtually an extra pension in that case?—A. The man is paid during the time he is in the Army, very small pay considering the risks he is taking with his life. Then when he comes back, if he has lost an eye or a leg, or something, he is disabled and the pension is really for the loss of that eye or limb.

Q. A good many men have got more pay after they joined the Army, with the separation allowance, Patriotic Fund, etc., than they ever got before?—A. Some have, but many have not.

Q. In the second place, they get a pension when they come back, then further pay because they have been serving in the Army by getting the higher pay suggested in the Civil Service as though they had been in the Civil Service and had not been serving in the Army?—A. That is only fair, because the man has been in the public service.

By Mr. Ross (Middlesex):

Q. In the highest form of public service?—A. In the highest form.

By Hon. Mr. McCurdy:

Q. What is the practice in other countries, how does the rate of pay compare with ours?—A. As far as the men here are concerned, with the exception of Australia, the rate of pay is probably the highest.

Q. I was not speaking of that, but of civilian pay?—A. For instance, in the French Army, I understand that they get two pence, about 4 cents a day.

Q. What would a man in France probably earn in civilian life?—A. I do not know exactly what the wage is in France. The wage, of course, is very low. The only case that I ran into which gave me personal knowledge of the wage conditions over there, was in Belgium. It was the case of a woman who worked on a farm and the work done by her did not in any way correspond to the farm work done by a woman in this country. This Belgium woman cleans the stables and carries in the bags of potatoes—over there the majority of such women are as strong as a man—and for the work she does receives about 10 francs, or about $2 per month.

[Capt. Kenneth C. Macpherson.]

By Mr. Ross (Middlesex):

Q. Mr. E. R. Cameron gave evidence here to-day regarding the treatment accorded to returned soldiers. What has been the usual complaint of these men on their return?—A. The great demand is to get a position as quickly as possible, where they will earn proper wages.

Q. What is the usual fault-finding they indulge in?—A. In regard to waiting for their pensions.

Q. That is one of their complaints, is it?—A. That is one of their complaints, as to the period they have to wait for their pensions. They do not know when they are going to get their pensions, in fact, they do not know where they are at.

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. But that delay has been done away with now?—A. Then if that has been fixed one great difficulty ought to be solved.

Q. From your experience, what other causes of complaint have the returned soldiers other than those just mentioned?—A. In my experience it has been mostly where men have been struck off the strength of the Expeditionary Force and struck off the pay list. The Patriotic grant is also stopped, and the men find they are simply landed on the public without any money to carry on. Of course from single men there have been very few complaints, they do not feel the difficulty in the same way; but where a man has a family of four or five children, as happens in the case of some men who have complained, it is a great hardship. Even if the returned soldier has money to carry on with, say $40 or $50, that $40 or $50 means a tremendous amount of money for him to have in reserve, and when he is released and has to wait perhaps two or three weeks to get a position, he feels aggrieved.

Q. What remedy do you suggest?—A. I would suggest that some means be taken whereby the man's pay can be continued for a certain period.

Q. For how long?—A. To give him an opportunity of getting another position.

Q. Would you apply that to both married and single men?—A. Yes.

Q. For how long a term would you say they ought to be continued on pay?—A. I should think that a man ought to be able to secure a position a month after he has returned to his home town, that is if he is in a position to work. We have had cases where men have been discharged, and afterwards have taken fits and were far from well, although they appeared to be so. There is a certain reaction of the nerves going on, and in some cases, even when the men get positions they are unable to hold them.

By the Chairman:

Q. But you are aware that such men could be re-boarded and if necessary sent back to Hospital for treatment?—A. Yes, but take a case like the one I am going to mention. We have got a chap in the Montreal hospital who was discharged and pensioned on an 80 per cent disability basis. He had to walk with two sticks and had to tread on his heels. He showed one of his feet to me. The toes of that foot were all stiff and the foot was practically almost cold. I said to him that he ought to take the matter up, that I did not think his foot looked in a healthy state, so he went down to Montreal and interviewed Dr. Garrow. Dr. Garrow advised him to have the toes taken off and undergo certain treatment. When he returned I sent him to Mr. Scammell and it was arranged that he should go down to Montreal and undergo treatment in the hospital.

[Capt. Kenneth C. Macpherson.]

Q. And the man was re-attested?—A. No, he was not re-attested, he was not taken on. He is in the Government employ. An Order in Council was put through granting him his salary while he was absent. In the Montreal Hospital they had to take off half that man's foot. It seemed to me the officials were rather lax when they were discharging him, that they did not find out his condition. Gangrene had set in and the man was told that if he had been six months later in undergoing treatment he would have had to lose his leg. It looked like a laxity to me, the way that man was treated in the beginning.

By Mr. Ross (Middlesex):

Q. Had the man been in the hospital?—A. He had been in the hospital for a great many months. He had been gassed at the front, and there was difficulty in giving him an anesthetic.

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. Bearing in mind what has already been done to meet the complaints of the men, and what should be done to correct the difficulties you have enumerated this morning, what other complaints are made by the returned soldiers?—A. We have had a number of complaints with regard to gratuities. The men feel that they should be accorded better treatment than merely presented with $50 and let out. There was one case I might speak about, which Mr. A. G. Cameron mentioned to me when I was down there. I have not come into contact with the man myself; he is a Belgian who did not go over to France, but was left in England. That man, I believe, has had nothing given him yet, according to Mr. Cameron, his leg is all crooked and he has to hobble around the room.

By the Chairman:

Q. Did this man serve on the Canadian Expeditionary Force?—A. Yes. He went over to England, but met with an accident there. If I remember rightly, he was kicked by a horse.

By Mr. Ross (Middlesex):

Q. Through his own negligence?—A. No, if I remember correctly it was through an accident.

BRIGADIER GENERAL MASON: In clause 2 of the Charter of the Ontario Soldiers' Aid Commission, it is provided: (reads)

"That each province should assume the responsibility for finding employment for discharged soldiers who upon their return to Canada are physically and otherwise fit to assume such employment, and all expenditures necessary in undertaking this duty are borne by the province."

Would that provision not apply in some of these cases spoken of by the witness, where employment is needed for the returned soldier?

The CHAIRMAN: The duty of finding employment for returned soldiers falls on the Soldiers' Aid Commission. As far as the Canadian Association for Returned Soldiers is concerned, they find employment for one another mutually, as a friendly act.

The WITNESS: It is not an obligation, but we regularly aid in looking after appointments for them, the same as we do in the matter of bestowing relief. If a man comes to us with the complaint that he cannot get work and has no money to carry on, two members of the association visit his house and find out all the particulars they can concerning him and his case, in order to determine whether he is deserving and that there is no maligning, and in the majority of cases we have found that we were quite justified in giving them relief.

Q. In the case of helping any soldier, I suppose you would keep in touch with the Soldiers' Aid Association, so that you would not overlap in the work?—A. As much as possible we try to co-operate with each other so as not to overlap.

By Brigadier-General Mason:

Q. It is evident that there was some dissatisfaction with the quarters referred to by the Soldiers' Aid. I would ask the question, to what extent are these quarters used by the returned soldiers?—A. I do not think they are used a great deal; our association does not use them practically at all. There have been cases when men came into town having no place to go to, they gave them rooms down there, and the Soldiers' Club have given them meals.

Q. There is a paragraph in the local paper this morning about that?—A. That was written by myself. There was some question came up in the papers some days ago advocating that quarters be granted—we had not said anything about it, but the Journal took it up and said it did not see why two clubs should be inflicted on the public, referring mainly to the Soldiers' Club on Wellington Street. Both these clubs have been very kind in offering their quarters. We use the Soldiers' Club for our general meetings as much as possible, but in neither of the clubs is there a room large enough for us to hold a proper meeting. Our Association is growing every day. Both these institutions to which I have referred deal not only with the returned soldiers, but also with the men that are discharged in Canada, and when the city is filled with troops these clubs are filled up, so that it is really impossible to carry on business in rooms or quarters, where you have not full control so that you can do as you like.

By the Chairman:

Q. I should think you would really form a club with a membership fee, and yourselves acquire a building that would meet the requirements of the club. That would be far better than looking to outside sources for assistance?—A. Yes. We have a small membership fee of $2 a year. We do not feel justified in charging any more than that. In paying the $2 fee the men feel that it is their own club and that they have the right to say what they want to. Of course we cannot carry on the relief work without outside support. In the days to come we realize, however, when relief work is not necessary to any extent, and when we have all kinds of membership composed of the men who have come back, it will be self-supporting.

Q. I should say that the social opportunities which you require for a club could be provided for out of your own membership fees?—A. They will be eventually.

Q. And that you will ask and receive from the general public such money as is required for the relief work?—A. We do not desire, at the present time, to use any of our funds for the building, unless it was put up as a special campaign for the building. We have collected this money from the public, and we want to use every cent that comes in for relief work.

Q. What is your membership at present?—A. About 210.

Q. That will give you a revenue of $420 a year?—A. Of course many of our members have not been able to pay their subscription yet. We have only been going as an organization, since just before Christmas, and $2,447.74 have been collected since that time in donations. Then we have put on all sorts of hockey matches, bridges, and different things of that sort, from which we have derived some $1,264.26; our membership fees amount to $132, making total receipts of $3,844. Our disbursements are expenses of different sorts, including rental of theatres and that sort of thing, $300 general expenses, telegrams, $13.46, postage $19, sundries, $74.18, making total general expenses of $116. Our relief amounted since Christmas to $414.70; funeral expenses one or two members of the Returned Soldiers Association died, and we sent a wreath and pall-bearers, costing $9, and we have a balance in the bank of $3,013.

Q. Ample for your present needs?—A. Ample for our present needs. But we are trying to conserve as much as possible at the present time our resources; we think we ought to pile up a reserve now, because after the war is over there will probably be tremendous scarcity of money, so that it will be impossible to raise any funds. For that reason we are trying, as much as possible, to husband our resources so that when our men come back in large numbers requiring our assistance, we will have something to fall back upon. That is one of the main reasons we are not anxious to take up any building scheme at the present time.

Q. But you are in a financial position that would warrant you renting suitable quarters for your purpose?—A. Yes. I might say that we have in connection with our Association a lately formed auxiliary of ladies, who have undertaken to take up small collections of 25 cents up to $1 a month so that we will have revenue to count on right along.

Q. Who is the treasurer of your organization?—A. Mr. J. R. Phillips.

Q. Who is your auditor?—A. We have not appointed one yet, but we are going to have an outside auditor, permanently, a chartered accountant, and of course will publish our audit.

Q. Does your charter require you to render any financial statement to the Provincial Government?—A. I only got a copy of this charter within the last two or three weeks and I have not gone through it yet, therefore I could not say, but it is on file here. With regard to this Ladies Association, one of the ladies here has practically guaranteed that she will raise $1,400 a month, by the small subscriptions through different firms that have been anxious to help.

Q. What is your object, mainly, in piling up this reserve? Do you intend to invest it in property, in buying premises or anything of that kind?—A. No, we do not intend to buy any premises.

Q. Do you intend to use the interest on it in your relief work?—A. The whole of it will simply be used on relief work, and if it is not used in that way, it will either be lying in the bank, or Government bonds can be bought with it.

Q. Your idea is to use the interest, but not the principal, is that it?—A. No, we will use the whole thing, or whatever amount is necessary, it all depends on the needs. We do not know what the conditions will be, but as everybody knows, after the war is over there will be difficulty in raising funds.

Q. You have $3,000 now, and you are going to get from $1,000 to $1,500 a month?—A. Yes.

Q. What are you expecting will constitute the drain on that fund?—A. Relief work.

Q. Relief work for your own members?—A. Yes. Of course when the thing is over, if there is any balance on hand, after the relief work is done, it can be used for our quarters.

Q. You have in mind that this Canadian Association of Returned Soldiers will be a permanent organization?—A. Oh, absolutely.

Q. Continuing for many years after the war?—A. Yes, run on the same principle as a lodge. We will have different branches in the different cities, and when one man goes from one place to another, he will have the assistance of the members in that district.

Q. Have you any plans for the future as to what lines of usefulness you might follow?—A. Do you mean in the immediate future or far future?

Q. In the far future?—A. There has not been any great discussion of that. We have had our time pretty well taken up with the present near future.

Q. Do you expect your association will be the authorized mouthpiece of the returned soldier?—A. Yes.

Q. In voicing their wishes and opinions in the future?—A. Yes. We feel that we can help considerably in many ways if we are recognized in that way. The men are very anxious to do everything they can to help each other, they are very anxious to do everything they can to help recruiting, and in fact our organization has offered to give any assistance we possibly can render in recruiting. Somebody informed me yesterday that in Toronto they are forming a reinforcing company, which is practically being recruited by the returned men.

Q. War veterans?—A. Yes.

Q. To your knowledge is there any organization of any kind where the men discharged in Canada meet?—A. No organization, no fraternal organization.

Q. And these men are ineligible, as far as you are concerned?—A. Ineligible as far as we are concerned.

Q. What area do you cover geographically?—A. We have no specified area; we speak of the Ottawa district in order that we may take in any of the small places about where there is an organization covering it. I think in these little places, when they have enough men to form a local organization, we will bring them in under our charter.

Q. Will they be part of your organization?—A. Yes.

Q. They will be part of your Ontario organization?—A. Yes: that is up to them. We have tried to help them at one or two points.

Q. Is there any provincial organization charged with the organization and founding of branches throughout Ontario?—A. Of our organization?

Q. Yes?—A. No. I have been away for the last two weeks, but since I have come back I have been informed there is a convention in Toronto to be held, I think, about the 18th of this month to discuss matters.

By Hon. Mr. Murphy:

Q. To discuss what is to be done?—A. There are certain matters to be discussed.

By the Chairman:

Q. When do they meet?

Mr. ZIVIAN: They will meet in Toronto when this Parliamentary Committee meets there.

The CHAIRMAN: We will be glad to have representatives from them before us.

WITNESS: I think in all our organizations, from what I have seen of them, they are all very reasonable in anything they ask. We have had absolutely no difficulty with any of our men at all. Of course you will find some who complain but when things are explained to them there are no differences.

Q. Will you state to your men that this committee would be glad to have that convention convey to us any opinions or suggestions that they think may help us in our inquiry?—A. Yes.

Q. Are men who have served in the Imperial regiments or men who have served in the French or Belgian army eligible for membership?—A. Men who have served in the Imperial forces.

Q. How about the French and Belgian?—A. I do not know whether our constitution covers that, but men who have served in the Imperial Army are eligible.

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. As a returned soldier what would you suggest to this committee? You are the first returned soldier who has given his views. What would you suggest by way of amelioration, anything which you think ought to be done that has not been done?—A. Well, I do not know. It is a very difficult question.

Q. You have grievances?—A. Yes. I would suggest that our association throughout the country be used as a mouthpiece for the returned soldiers.

Q. That is a matter of internal economy for yourselves?—A. Yes, and that there should be some Government committee which would take these questions up.

Q. A committee of the House of Commons?—A. Well, a committee appointed by the House of Commons.

[Capt. Kenneth C. Macpherson.]

Q. What you mean is that at the present time you are not able to make suggestions of what the complaints are, but when they have been made that they should come through this committee?—A. Yes, and that they should be investigated.

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. At the present time the only thing you have to complain of is this hiatus between the time the men are discharged?—A. That is the main thing at the present time.

Q. Is there anything else at all but that and the 20,000 men, or the less than 20,000 men?—A. Well, the gratuity men.

By Mr. Ross (Middlesex):

Q. You think the gratuity man is not treated fairly. You made a suggestion that you think a man ought to be able to get funds to carry on at the end of the month. The Government have been looking after the man discharged, and giving him a gratuity which is not sufficient, and supposing they keep him on pay for a month, would he be able in that time to get in shape to carry on his work?—A. I think so, if he is really able to carry on his work.

Q. Would that be too short? Mr. Cameron says six months?—A. I do not think that is necessary. I think if a man is fit, and there is a proper employment committee, he should be able to get it in two months.

Q. That would do away with the complaint in regard to the gratuity?—A. Yes, I think so: unless a man is disabled to any extent. We have not had a great many cases, but there is that sort of feeling that they are not being properly treated.

By the Chairman:

Q. You are wearing the Patriotic Fund service button: you got that for service in France?—A. Yes.

Q. Do you find that that is appreciated by the soldiers?—A. Greatly appreciated.

Q. Would that assist you in determining the difference between the sheep and the goats, so to speak?—A. Tremendously. I do not know what the men would do without it. If he takes it off, he is stopped by every recruiting sergeant about the place.

Q. Would you advocate that the Patriotic Fund should continue giving that button?—A. I understand that the Dominion Government has under consideration the giving of other buttons.

Hon. Mr. McCURDY: Orders in Council to that effect have been passed.

The WITNESS: There are various kinds of buttons issued covering men who have served in France, in England, or in munitions work.

By the Chairman:

Q. Would you advise the Patriotic Fund to continue to issue their button? We are quite willing to do so.—A. I think they do not really need the two of them. But they do appreciate the badge.

Q. Have you heard of any counterfeiting or selling of these buttons?—A. I heard some mention some time ago of that over in Hull, but I never heard what came of it. Some of our men went over there to try to get to the bottom of it, but I never learned the result.

The CHAIRMAN: You would oblige us very much if you would send us any information regarding this matter that you may discover. If you have anything further to add at our afternoon sitting, we would be glad to hear you.

(See also Exhibit No. 2 in Appendix herein).

Witness retired.

Committee adjourned.

The Committee resumed at 2.38 p.m.

The examination of Captain KENNETH MACPHERSON resumed.

The CHAIRMAN: If there is anything you would like to add to the evidence you have already given we would be very glad to receive your statements.

The WITNESS: I think there is very little more I can add, except, perhaps, some suggestions in regard to the future. I would suggest that when the men are coming back from the front in large numbers that some way be adopted of absorbing them, instead of keeping them too long. Doubtless there will be all kinds of suggestions as to the best way of demobilizing, as to whether or not the men should be kept in camps and all that sort of thing. There has been a lot of talk among the public and a great deal of comment in the newspapers with regard to settling the returned soldiers upon the land. I think you will find that only a very small proportion of them—perhaps 10 per cent, and certainly not more than 15 per cent—will go on the land. Of course, as to that, a great deal will depend upon the amount of backing granted by the Government. I noticed the other day in the press an announcement regarding the Ontario Government giving 80 acres (10 acres cleared) and an advance of $500. I think, instead of giving an advance, it would be better if materials were purchased for the men, implements and that sort of thing.

Mr. MIDDLEBRO: That is what the Government is going to do.

The WITNESS: I have not seen the details of the scheme, but it struck us at the time that if such were the proposition it would be rather a hard thing for a man to make any kind of a start on $500. By the time he has purchased a team of horses and fixed his barns and house up he won't have very much working capital left. We were figuring the other day that, taking a month's war expenditure of the country at $40,000,000, something like 27,000 men could be put on the land and helped to the extent of about $1,500 each. With respect to the remainder of the men, I think that some efforts ought to be made to mobilize all our industrial forces to find out how many men these would be able to take care of. Where it is possible, the men should be located in the municipality they came from. They will want to be as near their former homes as possible and will probably be better off there. In the factories now devoted to the manufacture of munitions—which will doubtless transfer their attention to the production of other materials when the war is over—many of the men could be absorbed, and arrangements made towards that end. I think those are about the only two points we are anxious about, namely, the land settlement policy and the return of the men to their civil positions.

The CHAIRMAN: We are very much obliged to you for your evidence. If, upon reflection, there is anything you wish to add to your evidence, if you will forward it to the Committee we shall be very glad to receive it.

By Hon. Mr. Murphy:

Q. You were in civil life, I assume, up to the time the war broke out?—A. Yes.

Q. You are now attached to the Militia Department?—A. Yes.

Q. Permanently?—A. No, sir, I am an Expeditionary Force man still.

Q. In connection with the organization of this Canadian Association of Returned Soldiers, the charter of which was read here this morning and a copy of which was placed on file, shows that you were incorporated for the Ottawa District?—A. Yes.

Q. And I understood you to say there was a similar Canadian Returned Soldiers Association in a number of other places in other provinces?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Are all these Associations incorporated with the same object?—A. In substance they are practically the same. Their charters may differ slightly in character. That I cannot say because I have not seen them.

Q. I also understood you to say that later on it was intended to seek Dominion incorporation?—A. Yes, Dominion incorporation. There is a Provincial gathering in Toronto this month, as I mentioned this morning, and we propose as far as possible to get from our various Associations a consensus of opinion as to the feeling of the men. Then about the time Parliament would be re-opening, possibly, have a Convention in Ottawa attended by representatives of these various Associations, discuss the different problems we have in view and elect a National Council. In that way we could gather the opinions of the men from all over the country and perhaps assist the Government in the carrying out of any plans they may have in view.

Q. This morning in answer to a question asked by Mr. Pardee, I think I understood you to say that the Orders in Council which had been recently passed by the Government had met the complaints of the returned soldiers?—A. I did not say that.

Q. That they have covered the difficulty?—A. I did not say that, but somebody else, I think, did.

Q. I understood you to say that the returned soldiers had no complaints at the present time, that one of their complaints dealing with covering the gap between the time certain pay ceased and the pension was awarded, had been remedied by a recent Order in Council. I understood you to say that?—A. I did not say that. I think probably Mr. Cameron made that statement.

Q. Did you know that was the fact?—A. That is one of the difficulties. I was not aware though that it was the fact.

Q. I understood you to say, in fact, that the returned soldiers had no complaints, or no grievances, at the present time?—A. No, I did not say that.

Q. What grievances have they?—A. The grievances have been small. The majority of the men have a grievance in regard to the gratuities. They do not like the gratuities. Even if a man is only incapacitated to a 20 percent degree he is disabled for life to a certain extent—

Q. That is one of the grievances?—A. And the other was the gap between leaving off military life and going into civil life again, where the men have no means of supporting themselves.

Q. You mean getting re-employment?—A. Getting re-employment.

Q. This organization of your numbers some 210 members, does it not?—A. About 210 members we have here.

Q. That will be a very small proportion of the men who have enlisted?—A. Yes, very.

Q. I understood you further to say that the desire of your Association was that it should be the mouthpiece of the returned soldiers?—A. Yes.

Q. That is that any complaints or claims which they might want to make, should be made through your Association?—A. Yes.

Q. And that you wanted to be recognized as the mouthpiece of the returned soldiers?—A. Yes.

Q. As only a very small proportion of soldiers have returned, let us assume that the large majority who may return, may not join your Association, but may take it into their heads to form another Association. In that case would you take the ground that they should not be listened to?—A. I do not think it is at all likely that there will be another Association formed.

Q. Is there anything to prevent them from doing what you have done when they come back, that is, form an Association?—A. No, so far as I know, any more than there is in forming another Club in the city. But I think our Association covers all the aims that any man would want or that another Association would have in view.

By the Chairman:

Q. You have an Act of Incorporation, and if another similar organization were formed and applied for a charter, the question might be asked why it was necessary to have another incorporation?—A. The only other Association or organization which would be likely to crop up would be of men not eligible for our Association.

Mr. Ross (Middlesex): The members of your Association consists of men who have gone overseas?

[Capt. Kenneth C. Macpherson.]

By Hon. Mr. Murphy:

Q. I know a number of the men who have gone overseas, and they hold views different from those which you have expressed this morning. These men when they come back may not join your Association?—A. They may not, it is not compulsory for them to do so.

Q. Then I want to know why these men should not be listened to instead of representations being limited to your Association?—A. I think if you have an Association that can listen to any representations the men desire to make, it will serve their purpose best and also save the Government a considerable lot of trouble.

By the Chairman:

Q. In other words, you do not approve of these individual complaints which are rushed into the newspapers with only the name of one man behind them?—A. No. I do not think that is always wise.

Q. The representations would have a more valid and effective voice through the backing of your Association?—A. Yes. I do not think a man gains anything by running around the streets with a lot of stories, he puts foolish ideas into some people's heads. If men who have just cause for complaint and belong to our Association bring the matter to our notice, and we make representations to the proper authorities, they are far more likely to have their complaints answered.

Q. And on the other hand, there is less likelihood of complaints being made which will not stand investigation?—A. Far less likely. If the men feel they have an Association to whom they can go and make their complaint in writing, and if our investigation committee looks into the matter and says it is just and right, whatever the complaint consists of—whether it relates to pay or pension—and we bring it to the proper authority it is only reasonable to expect it will get recognition.

By Hon. Mr. Murphy:

Q. What I had in mind was the great danger of duplication and multiplication of unnecessary Associations or bodies, as there are over-lapping demands for public assistance. It is with a view of trying to qualify this situation that I am asking you these questions?—A. I quite understand.

Q. For instance, your Association and the Soldiers' Aid Association do practically the same work in Ottawa?—A. To a certain extent.

Q. Until a letter was read from the newspaper this morning which you afterwards said you had written, I was not aware of the fact that discussion had been going on regarding suitable quarters for your association. Having heard that letter read and having heard your statements I am yet unable to see why, from the economical point of view and from the point of view of not subjecting the public to unnecessary demands, the building of the Soldiers' Aid Commission on Cliff street cannot be used by your Association. I happen to know that building, and I would like to ask why it cannot be made suitable by means of partitions for two such Associations?—A. I do not think it is possible for one institution to carry on its work under the roof of another institution.

Q. Do I understand you to mean by that that you do not want the accommodation offered in the Cliff street building but prefer to be by yourselves?—A. We prefer to be by ourselves.

Q. So that no matter what kind of house they have to place at your disposal you much prefer to have one of your own?—A. We would much prefer that, if it is at all possible.

By Hon. Mr. McCurdy:

Q. Do I understand that the soldiers cared for by the Soldiers' Aid Association and those looked after by your own Association are two different classes of men?—A. Yes, that is one of the difficulties. Both the Soldiers' Aid Association and the

[Capt. Kenneth C. Macpherson.]

Soldiers' Club include in their treatment all classes of men. We do not. We simply take the man who has been overseas. Those are the only people we are interested in at all.

By the Chairman:

Q. In other words, it is the élite of the service with whom you deal, the men who have been overseas and honourably discharged?—A. Yes.

By Hon. Mr. Murphy:

Q. That would scarcely affect the question I was dealing with, as to the use of the Cliff street building as a club house?—A. We did not bring up the question of the club house ourselves. The Citizen published an article dealing with the matter.

Q. But I understand your Association prefers to be alone and have its own quarters?—A. Yes, our own quarters.

Q. Are you aware that in other places these two bodies manage to get along together?—A. No, I do not know that I am aware of it.

Q. I am told that in the city of Winnipeg, for instance, they have one of the strongest organizations in this country?—A. The Soldiers' Aid Association is purely an Ontario organization.

Q. The provincial body corresponding to the Soldiers' Aid Association in Manitoba is the same in character but only different in name. Now, are you aware that these two bodies co-operate there?—A. I understood there was some arrangement of that sort.

Q. I think there is a joint procuring and re-distribution of funds?—A. Yes.

Q. Why could not arrangements of that kind be made in Ottawa?—A. It could be done, but our efforts are not in that direction, we are not interested in the men discharged in Canada at all.

Q. But in a big city like Winnipeg, from which there has been an enormous enlistment, and where this has been worked out in practice, and where there is only one demand made on the public, both the Returned Soldiers Association and the Soldiers' Aid Association are represented on this Committee. You see the public have added confidence in what is done under those circumstances?—A. I see what you mean.

Q. And they are not subject to the same number of demands. Do you not think that is feasible in Ottawa?—A. We say that we feel we ought to put our efforts toward assisting the returned men.

Q. And you have not made any attempt to work that out in Ottawa?—A. No, we have not.

Q. Was it your Association that made a canvass, a month or so ago, for $25,000?—A. Yes.

Q. How much of that did you get?—A. We have raised altogether about $3,800, I think.

Q. What necessity would there be for such an amount of money as that?—A. We aimed high, as it were, to get capital back of us.

Q. Has anybody connected with your Association ever thought of the old adage, about killing the goose that laid the golden egg?—A. I do not know.

Q. You have not thought of it yet?—A. Not yet.

Q. This morning you mentioned some auxiliary from which you expected to get $1,400 through one lady?—A. Yes.

Q. What need is there of such a large collection as that?—A. We are not looking to the present, but to the future. We will be up against a big proposition, when the men come back; something like 9,000 men have left Ottawa, and when they come home we will be up against a proposition that we know nothing about.

Q. And knowing nothing about it you prepare to meet it on that scale?—A. That was far beyond what we ever expected to get; but these ladies were very anxious to help us, and they have formed an Auxiliary of our Association.

[Capt. Kenneth C. Macpherson.]

Q. Is that one of the existing ladies' associations, or is it a new one?—A. It is composed of ladies who are members of various organizations, and they are now concentrating their efforts in a new organization to assist us.

Q. That will amount to $16,800 a year which you will receive from them apart from what you get from other sources. How would you require so much money as that except for a club house?—A. If you notice the financial statement for Winnipeg you will see that in the six months their organization has been in force there, they used up $18,000 and there are about 1,000 men there. We will have a considerable number of men coming back here, and, after the requirements are met with regard to relief and everything of that kind, if we have the money it would probably go to help us out with the club house, but we do not look for anything elaborate at the present time. In fact, if we make any appeal for a club house, it will be understood that the money we collect will be absolutely for that purpose. We want the public to feel that the funds we collect are for the relief of the men, and that our expenses are very low. We have no salaries, no rent and no light to pay, we have practically nothing to pay out, except for relief.

Q. You are at some expenditure for carrying on the work of the organization, are you not?—A. Very little; there is stationery, and supplies of that sort. We rent a typewriter, and there is postage to pay.

Q. Is there anybody in receipt of a salary?—A. No, not whatever.

Q. And the intention is to continue along in that way?—A. As long as possible, but it is natural to expect that when our work gets to such a proportion that it will require a man to be there continually, we will have to pay him for his time.

By the Chairman:

Q. Will you place on file for the record the literature that you use in the appeal to the public for $25,000? There was some newspaper literature, and we want to know what your proposition to the public was?—A. Yes, I will do so.

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. We have had evidence here with regard to a number of men who were discharged in Canada, and a number of men who were discharged in England without going to the front at all. Where do you draw the distinction between the man who has been in the service here for some considerable length of time, and has then been discharged by reason of the fact that his health has failed, and the man who goes to England and gets his discharge for the same reason? What is the distinction?—A. You will find many men, of course, that have only been a week or two weeks in the service before they are discharged. That fact makes it very difficult to draw the line.

Q. The argument you apply there is, supposing a man has been in the service here for a year and then breaks down, he is not placed on the same basis as the man who has been in the service for a year and a day and crosses the ocean before he breaks down. Can you tell me where the difference is between those two men?—A. The majority of the time he is in Canada he is with his own people, or near his own home.

Q. No, he is not. I have knowledge of cases in my own town, two or three cases, where men who have been in the service for months have been discharged, and there have been other cases where the men have gone overseas and have been discharged there. What is the difference between those cases?—A. It is a very difficult thing to make a difference, but we have to draw the line somewhere.

Q. Do you not think, arguing it out on your own basis, that when a man is honourably discharged, whether he has gone overseas or not, he should be entitled to come into your association? All these men have been ready to go to the front?—A. It is not the feeling of the men that they should; they feel that if they have been overseas they will have more in common with each other.

[Capt. Kenneth C. Macpherson.]

By Mr. Middlebro:

Q. It does not make any difference they do not get from the public any more than any other class?—A. It is just a matter of feeling, that is all it is. Then we run into the difficulty with regard to these home guards, men that never had any intention of leaving Canada.

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. They never enlisted for overseas, they did not become members of the C.E.F. Yet a great many of them will feel slighted if they have put in a year over here on guard duty and are not admitted?—A. I can only just explain that it is the feeling of our men that there is more in common between those men who have been overseas. It is not that they look down upon the men who have not been overseas at all, but that the fact that they have been overseas is a bond of friendship and brotherhood. Of course that very question is one that will have to be decided anyway when we have the Dominion convention, which is to be held shortly, so that we will then have the feeling of the men from all over the country.

By the Chairman:

Q. You make your appeal for assistance to the public, on the grounds that your association is composed of men who have been in danger in defence of the country. You do not appeal for the man who has not been there?—A. No.

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. You have had 149 men from Lambton, these men have been in training for fifteen months; they all want to go across, but the officers are told that the men can go, but that they, although they have been down on their bended knees begging to go, and have been training these men for fifteen months and are practically entitled to go overseas, are now told they cannot go except as privates. These men have all given up their business and devoted themselves to the service, and they are just as much entitled to consideration as the others.

Witness discharged.

Major HUGH SPENCER RELPH, Royal Bank Chambers, Ottawa, called, sworn and examined.

By the Chairman:

Q. You have seen active service on the front, have you not?—A. With the Princess Patricia's.

Q. You were until recently Secretary of the Canadian Association of Returned Soldiers?—A. I was not exactly that. I was more in an advisory capacity. I offered to help them. I had not very much time to spare to help them, but I advised and helped them in every way I could. I helped to get them their charter.

Q. You have been here most of the morning and heard the testimony: you know the line of investigation we have been following?—A. Yes.

Q. We would be glad if you would add, of your own volition, what you can give us from your own experience?—A. I have spoken to the men about going on the land and I have not the slightest doubt a number of them would like to do so if they could get the proper tuition before hand. After a man has been overseas, say he is a clerk, living an indoor life previously, he digs trenches and does manual work over there, and he prefers that class of work, and if you try to get them back to their own calling you will have difficulty. They feel a lot better with outdoor employment, and I think they will take up that employment if they have the opportunity.

Q. You have come in contact with a number of returned soldiers?—A. Yes.

Q. Have you found any number of them wanted to go on the farm?—A. A lot of them thought, if they knew what the proposition was, they would accept it. They suggested they would like to be forestry inspectors for survey parties. They are the very men for positions in parks, out door police work and things like that.

Q. All under the Civil Service?—A. Yes.

By Hon. Mr. Murphy:

Q. That is quite different from going on the land?—A. Quite a lot of them would like to go on the land. A lot of them would also like outdoor life.

By the Chairman:

Q. We would be glad if you would tell us anything you think would be pertinent to the inquiry?—A. With regard to pensions, one man drew my attention to the fact that he had received a pension of eight or ten dollars a month, and he went back to the Bell Telephone Company where he had worked previously. He used to be a lineman, and if he had stayed he would have been at the top of his profession and at the limit of pay. When he came back something was the matter with his spine or leg, and he was not able to carry on that line of business, but the company gave him a position at the same salary at the office, and the Pension Board immediately cut off his pension, because they said he was drawing the same salary as he was before he went overseas.

By Brigadier-General Mason:

Q. How did it work out in dollars and cents?—A. I do not know, but I know that if he had stayed with the Bell Telephone Company he would have been drawing more.

By the Chairman:

Q. How long ago was that?—A. Month or six weeks. I understand the name of the man was Trudel.

Q. In Ottawa?—A. Yes.

Q. Can you give us the regimental number, and we will inquire into it?—A. Yes: this is a case where he has been earning the same as before, but his earning capacity was more, because he could get more as a lineman.

By Hon. Mr. McCurdy:

Q. These men are under the control of the local Government?—A. Yes, they are. In Alberta they are continually calling for men, and they get very good pay and their keep, and they have tremendous survey camps there, and in British Columbia.

By the Chairman:

Q. That would, of course, be for the Provincial Government to fill those positions?—A. Yes.

By Brigadier-General Mason:

Q. Supposing such a man as you refer to ceased to earn his old salary, would they restore his pension?—A. I could not say. I know they sent him a cheque for $50 or $100, and, as he was drawing the same salary, he was not entitled to the pension. There was another case of the same style of a man who returned and received his position back at the same salary, paid so much a day, and, on account of his debility, he could not always work, and he would lose six or seven days a month, and the Pension Board cut off his pension and gave him a grant of $50 or $100, and his wife had to go out to work on account of that.

By the Chairman:

Q. If you furnish the names of such cases we will have them looked into by the Pension Board, and ascertain what was their object in their action?—A. You spoke about the buttons. The majority of those buttons have been earned by the men, but I understand men are manufacturing them and selling them.

Q. Where?—A. I drew the attention of the Patriotic Fund to that. It was in Hull, a man was selling them for $5 apiece.

Q. Did you communicate to the Patriotic Fund?—A. I phoned to them.

Q. Did you tell them the name of the man who was doing it?—A. We did not know it but we got one of the chaps who was an assistant salesman.

By Hon. Mr. McCurdy:

Q. There is a penalty for that?—A. There was not at that time.

Q. That will be safeguarded in future?—A. If the Government will issue a button such as the Imperial Government issue, if a man wears it wrongfully he can be prosecuted. A man in Hull was manufacturing these buttons and selling them to everybody he wished to for $5.

Q. Did he sell many?—A. Well, some of our men lost the buttons, and one of them went over and took a policeman with him, and the man was arrested.

Mr. ZIVIAN: The assistant salesman was a discharged soldier.

Mr. ROSS (Middlesex): What was done with him?

Mr. ZIVIAN: He was taken in charge by the Dominion Police. He was absolutely without means.

WITNESS: That question about men who were rejected in Canada was brought up. I tried to bring the matter before the Association, suggesting that every man who has enlisted for active service is exactly in the same position as any man who has been overseas and been wounded. A man may join up in Canada and may be with a cavalry unit, and may have his leg broken, with the result that he cannot go overseas. We have heaps of unemployed who joined the overseas forces, and went as far as they could, so that they could obtain the decoration. We had men who went as far as England, and when they got to England or to France they had heart trouble. A great many men have gone over in an honorary position. There is a great deal of difference between a combatant position and a non-combatant position. It is quite safe for a man to go over in an honorary position. A quartermaster's position is one where there is no danger to the man, but it is an important and necessary position. He never goes near the firing line. He is going to be entitled to benefits which the poor chap who volunteered to go and fight for his country and got his leg broken and did not get over it is not entitled to.

By the Chairman:

Q. The rejects in Canada are very few, I suppose?—A. There are many. You would be surprised at the number of casualties we have in Canada. A man is passed by the doctor as physically fit when he enlists and he may not be fit; that is the doctor's fault. The man may afterwards be in such a position that when the regiment goes overseas he is not physically fit. His intentions are just the same as the man who goes and fights.

By Mr. Ross (Middlesex):

Q. And some get cold feet in England?—A. There are many would like soft jobs if they could get them.

By Hon. Mr. Murphy:

Q. Why don't you get rid of the whole of them?—A. I think we have got rid of all of them.

Q. They have all been sent to the front?—A. Yes, since the change of policy. I was in the London office and saw a number of them who were with the first contingent and stayed in London, but I think a number of them have been sent to France since. I may say, with regard to the employment at the present moment, for the last month I have been asking to get a returned soldier to work in my office and I have not been able to get one, and last week I put in an appeal for two more, and I do not know that I can get them.

Q. The demand exceeds the supply at the present moment?—A. Yes. At the present time I know that if a man has any clerical ability at all they would not let him out of England. There is the London office and the Shorncliffe office, men who are all being trained as stenographers and typists, and book-keepers, and it is only the inferior type of men they are allowing to go and there are hundreds of business men and lawyers privates in the Canadian Expeditionary Force.

By Brigadier-General Mason:

Q. Are you quite sure of that?—A. I know we had repeated requests for the best men who had clerical experience.

By Hon. Mr. Murphy:

Q. What about the lawyers?—A. Quite a lot of lawyers are doing odd jobs. One is using a typewriter in the C.C.A.C. offices in England. I wanted him in my office, but I have not been able to get him yet. His legal qualifications would stand him in good stead.

By the Chairman:

Q. Has he seen service at the front?—A. No, I think he was turned down as physically unfit.

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. What do you say are the returned soldiers' grievances now?—A. Except that slight question of pension, I do not think any. It is not the present that is to be looked after; it is the future.

By Hon. Mr. Murphy:

Q. When they will come back in large numbers?—A. Yes.

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. What do you say as to the future?—A. We will have to make tremendous plans to cope with the troops when they come back.

Q. In a financial way?—A. Yes, and every way. It is easy enough to mobilize an army, but when you come to demobilize and put them into civil life again, then you will have trouble.

Q. What will be your suggestion?—A. If the Government would prepare farms ready for them, and try to obtain positions in survey parties to place the men in the open air, and open mines in the western provinces under Government control, any money expended there would come back eventually, and the men would have employment.

Q. Build highways?—A. Yes, build another transcontinental railway if necessary. It would pay in the long run; it would give the men plenty of work. There will be tremendous expenses, but they would be returned in the future. If you give a grant to a returned soldier of $50 or $100, quite a few will toddle over to Hull, for instance and spend it, and the wife and family will receive no benefit. We have some cases now where men are receiving aid from the Soldiers' Aid Commission and from us. You might as well throw the money away. If the assigned pay and separation allowance were continued for a few months in the hard cases, that might meet the situation until the men get work, and in that case the men would not be able to touch that money because it would go to the wife.

[Major H. S. Relph.]

By Hon. Mr. Murphy:

Q. It is not money so much that is wanted, but constant employment?—A. Yes.

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. Did I understand you to say that the Returned Soldier's Association grant aid and also that the Soldiers' Aid Commission, a civilian body, grant aid likewise?—A. In that particular case it was granted by both societies without either knowing, and that is what brought the matter up. We now work on a system where applications for aid will be compared before grants are made.

By Hon. Mr. Murphy:

Q. What is your present position?—A. I am in charge of the Estates Branch. I look after the estates of officers and men who are killed, and distribute them.

By Mr. Ross (Middlesex):

Q. Are you getting complaints in regard to the return of soldiers' uniforms, kits and so on?—A. I continually get complaints. It is impossible to do everything. We do everything we can. We have a certain system that we have to keep to.

Q. How long after an officer is killed does it usually take for his effects to reach his family?—A. Personal effects, four and a half months. Sometimes we have difficulty in collecting them, and they are sent over here by freight steamer.

Q. Sometimes I see in the papers that the relatives have to pay for the transportation of these effects. Are you trying to avoid that?—A. In no cases have the relatives had to pay anything except through their own fault. We have a system of collecting the effects of dead officers in France, and any surplus effects scattered over England if we are advised where they are, and these are sent over by freight steamer to Canada by the C.P.R. free of cost. They are checked in my office and forwarded to the relatives without cost. If anybody has had to pay for personal effects it is due to mistakes of their own, or possibly through some error on the part of the officer commanding the unit.

Q. It is because they have not known the proper system that these cases have happened?—A. Yes. There was one at Windsor.

Q. And there have been others?—A. In one case a mother had written to somebody on the other side and asked them to forward the effects, which was done, and charges were collected on it. A claim was sent to the department for these charges.

Q. Was it paid?—A. I do not know, it was referred to Mr. Brown.

Q. In the case of dead soldiers who have left money, do you insist upon letters of administration before releasing it?—A. No, sir.

Q. Do you give it to the next of kin?—A. We go into the matter legally. I keep all original wills, and London keeps the balance. I have over 55,000 wills.

Q. What do you do in the case of a soldier who has made no will?—A. I get into communication with the relatives, find out where he was domiciled, and in accordance with provincial or state laws take the proper steps to administer the estate. It takes seven and a half months before we get the pay accounts.

By Mr. Middlebro:

Q. You mentioned that you had 55,000 original wills?—A. Yes, and London have about the same.

Q. Are the soldiers asked to make a will?—A. Yes, when I came over here I found that was not being done, I brought the matter before General Fiset, with the result that a form was sent out, and quite a lot of men are now making wills.

Q. Are they required to do so under the regulations?—A. It is not compulsory; it is left to the districts to try have them make their wills. The reason for this is: in the case of a man in Ontario with a father and mother and seven or eight brothers and sisters, if there is no will, his small balance of pay would have to be distributed equally, but if he leaves a will any money he left can be sent to the person named in the will.

Q. You have to comply with the requirements of the different provinces?—A. Yes, in every case.

Witness discharged.

Lieutenant-Colonel C. S. MacINNES, Assistant Adjutant-General, Militia Headquarters, called, sworn and examined.

By the Chairman:

Q. What position do you occupy, Colonel, in connection with the Militia Department?—A. Assistant Adjutant-General at Headquarters, Ottawa.

Q. What are the duties particularly of the Assistant Adjutant-General?—A. To assist the Adjutant-General in his duties, and particularly with reference to organization and recruiting.

Q. You would be able to tell us then how many have gone overseas?—A. Yes. I do not know that I have the figures here, but, roughly speaking, as I remember, it is 200 odd thousand of the Canadian Expeditionary Forces.

Q. How many have come back?—A. That I could not say. I have not seen the recent figures since I went away two months ago.

Q. Will your branch be particularly charged with demobilization?—A. I could not say as to that. I understand it may be dealt with in a special manner, but so long as the men are soldiers it would be a charge to the Adjutant-General, so to speak, to take care of them.

Q. Is it the Adjutant-General or his branch that determines when a man shall be discharged?—A. Yes.

Q. The order for his discharge proceeds from your office?—A. Quite so. From our office or from a similar office in the Military District. It would be an Adjutant-General's matter either from Headquarters or from the Military District.

Q. In the case of the men returning from the other side, would you explain to us when and how they are discharged?—A. When the men arrive at the discharge depot at Quebec or elsewhere, they are, as you know, classified into classes 1, 2 or 3. This classification is verified at the discharge depot by such further medical examination as may be necessary, and if the man is found to be in Class 1 for immediate discharge he is discharged there, and he is forwarded to the Military District to which he belongs.

Q. What do you do about any pay that may be due him at that time?—A. That is dealt with under regulations dealing with Classes 1, 2 and 3. They are dealt with in different ways. My recollection is that a man is credited with a certain amount of pay from the date of his discharge, fifteen or thirty days' pay in addition to the pay that is still coming to him, and a certain amount is given to him at the discharge depot not exceeding I think $10, and the balance is forwarded to his own home or the district from which he comes.

Q. Is the balance remitted generally to the Headquarters of the Military District to which he returns? It was mentioned here that an Ottawa man had to go to Kingston to get his pay?—A. That has all been threshed out by those who have been dealing with the discharge depot, as to the best method of handling the matter. The Pay Department could give you more accurately the present situation.

Q. You have charge, Colonel, of the formation of a regiment to a very considerable extent?—A. Not the authorization for it, that would come, of course, from the Minister or the Militia Council, and would then go to Colonel Gwynne, who is Director-General of Mobilization, who would issue instructions to the district that such and such a battalion or unit has been authorized, to be under the command of such and such an officer. Then the organization is formed and matters relating to recruiting and enlistment, etc., are dealt with by other members of the Adjutant-General's branch.

Q. Who names the medical officers for the battalions?—A. Recommendations are put forward by the officer commanding the district where the unit is to be authorized, unless the practice has been changed and these are presumably considered by the Director-General of Medical Service, and the Adjutant-General, and then forwarded to the Minister. But whether it is necessary latterly for them all to be passed on by the Minister, I would not be prepared to say.

Q. Judging by results, do you think it has been a wise plan to have the officer commanding a regiment responsible for the nomination of the medical man who should examine his recruits?—A. Under the battalion system, I would say certainly yes, because a medical officer, like every officer, is a member of the battalion family, so to speak, and it is very important that the medical officer, as all others, should be a man satisfactory to the commanding officer.

Q. Are you able to tell us how many enlisted men of the total number enlisted in Canada have been dropped before the regiments went overseas?—A. No. I may say that I have been endeavouring for some time past to get accurate figures from the different military districts on that subject. We have figures as to those who have been enlisted. Even as to these there has been considerable difficulty in getting accurate figures. I think we have now got them fairly accurate. One difficulty has been that men are enlisted in one district and are then perhaps transferred immediately to another district, and there is difficulty in knowing whether that man has been, so to speak, credited or counted twice. Then we also have returns from the districts of men who have been discharged in a particular district. There again there is difficulty because in some cases undoubtedly men have been taken on and have been counted as enlisted without a complete enlistment having been made, and that being so a formal discharge was not considered necessary in the district.

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. What do you mean by saying "without a complete enlistment having been made?"—A. Without having been attested before a Justice of the Peace or a field officer.

By the Chairman:

Q. Are you able to give us approximately the number of men who have enlisted in Canada and who have been discharged in Canada without going overseas?—A. My recollection is that out of 400,000 men enlisted, judging from the figures we have now, it is in the neighbourhood of 50,000.

Q. Who have been enlisted and discharged from the units in Canada before going overseas?—A. Yes.

Q. Can you tell me how many men from the units that have gone to England have been rejected as unfit over there?—A. No, it would not be possible to say that, because what happens in England is that these men arrive and if they are not considered to be absolutely up to standard they are not necessarily discharged but are put into classifications. That is to say, a man fit for the front is called an "A" man, that is a man fit for all purposes at the front. A man who is fit for service at the front but not for all purposes is called a "B" man; in other words that man could be employed on roadmaking or railway construction or something of that kind. A man who is fit only for garrison duty or work in England is called a "C" man, and these men are employed there as military police or on clerical work, or on other duties that are necessary in connection with military life, of various kinds, such as guards, pickets, etc., in connection with the camps. Then, a "D" man is one who is considered within the course of a few months, I think it is six months, to be fit for one of the other classifications. The remaining class is the "E" man, who is a man ready for discharge, and who when his documents are completed will be sent back to Canada.

Q. Can you tell us approximately how many there are in this classification?—A. No, I could not tell you that. It would be possible, I think, to give you the last figures which we have from England, which, as a matter of fact, I brought with me when I came back at the beginning of February, but I have not got them with me.

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. As to the "E" men you spoke of, you have not got the figures?—A. I could not tell you the details as to the "E" men. They are collected there to go back to Canada for discharge.

Q. You do not know how many have come back?—A. No. I think to December the number of returned soldiers discharged was something like 10,000, if I remember rightly.

By Mr. Ross (Middlesex):

Q. You can give us the figures with regard to the five classes, can you?—A. Yes, up to the last data we have in the department.

By the Chairman:

Q. And you will please have an exhibit prepared with these figures?—A. Yes.

Q. Now, Colonel, with respect to your men in Canada, do you have a similar classification?—A. A classification of those now in Canada?

Q. Yes.—A. No, because that would hardly be necessary. All men who are enlisted who are in Canada, generally, are men who are supposed to be, and ought to be, fit for all purposes overseas.

Q. As a matter of fact they are not?—A. There are some who are not, of course. In addition to this in Canada you must remember there are men who would come within the classification of "B" men, namely, men who have been enlisted for Forestry, Railway Construction and Labour Battalions. In all of these units there would be a large number who would not come up to the "A" standard. Then in addition to those there are the men as to whom I understand there has been some discussion, namely about 1,700 men belonging to Special Service Companies, of whom a certain proportion are not up to "A" standard.

By Hon. Mr. McCurdy:

Q. Are those men you spoke of as being in Special Service Companies, all higher class men than the "D" class men in England, the latter class comprising those who will likely be grouped in a higher class after six months?—A. I would say they were equally high, and on the instructions we have issued in Canada, both administrative and medical instructions, they should be as high as the "D" men. You see, the men in Canada, are classified in a different way. They are not at present under the letters "A", "B", "C", "D" and "E"; they are in different classes by reason of the work for which they have been enlisted.

Q. Your first classification are your combatant battalions?—A. Quite so, and the artillery, engineers, and so forth.

Q. The battalions that are expected to go to work at the front?—A. Quite so.

Q. Then your second classifications are your Forestry and Construction Battalions?—A. And our Labour and Pioneer Battalions.

Q. Do I understand that the British authorities have particularly asked that we should send over these Forestry and Construction Battalions?—A. Absolutely so. On all occasions they have sent over a special request.

Q. Would it be safe to say that the Imperial authorities have been more urgent in the request for Forestry and Railway Battalions lately than for infantry?—A. That would be quite true.

[Lieut.-Colonel C. S. MacInnis.]

By the Chairman:

Q. Can you say from memory what percentage of men who have been dropped from combatant regiments, have been absorbed in Forestry and Construction Battalions?—

A. No. Those figures are not available. Those figures are not available and it would be impossible to get them, as you can readily see. If a man is dropped out of one battalion and joins another—

Q. There is no continuity in his history?—A. There could not be. There is no record of him alphabetically and he is not recorded under his name. It would not be possible to do that.

By Brigadier-General Mason:

Q. Is your classification in England applied to all arms of the service, or is it confined mostly to infantry?—A. Mostly to infantry, but my recollection is that it applies to all arms of the service.

By the Chairman:

Q. Inasmuch as the Government is called upon to provide, by way of pensions, hospital treatment and other things for a man who is discharged in Canada, as medically unfit, just the same as for a man who has been at the front, and come back, is it not a fact that a very large number of men who have been found to be medically unfit in Canadian reports, constitute a very heavy cost on the Government, both present and future?—A. That may be so, and I would say, obviously so. From what one hears, I think that our experience here has not been different to that of England, or other countries, under a voluntary system. For that reason what you have to deal with is not a question merely of administration, but of human nature, so to speak. A man is anxious to enlist and he goes forward, being unaware of his medical condition, that is to say, in the case of those men where the defect or disability is not obvious. He then goes before an organization of various officers, who are anxious to have his services, who naturally admire the spirit in which he comes forward, and who perhaps, as to certain defects, were not at the beginning as critical as they would be in the case of an ordinary business transaction. Then in addition to that, a very large proportion of those who have been discharged, is for under age and over age, both of which are points that are difficult for medical officers to express an absolute opinion upon.

Q. Are not the directions explicit as to the ages at which men can be enlisted?—A. Quite so. But that does not prevent the human nature element to which I referred a moment ago, from giving the answer one man did whom I heard say to the Duke of Connaught, that he had two ages, one traditionary and the other expeditionary.

By Brigadier-General Mason:

Q. Was that man an Irishman?—A. He may have been.

By the Chairman:

Q. Are the medical regulations and their obligations more strict to-day than they were say a year ago in dealing with recruits?—A. Undoubtedly there is more machinery for the purpose of preventing men getting overseas who do not come up to the overseas standard by way of check and counter-check.

By Brigadier-General Mason:

Q. Would you say now that we are getting the "A" standard?—A. Those are the instructions and it is ordered and intended that they shall be observed absolutely, with the exception of the Forestry Battalions.

By the Chairman:

Q. Were these regulations stiffened because of the desire of the overseas authorities with their experience in England?—A. No. They had been stiffened and were being stiffened regardless of what we heard from England, because it was being noticed by the medical and administrative authorities that large numbers of men were being discharged in Canada after having been enlisted for some time. That of course, arose, as you are aware, to a large extent from men being enlisted in small places before they came to their own battalion. These would be a further check as soon as they got to their own battalion, and then subsequently there was an additional check when they went overseas. The additional regulations established enabled medical boards to go to these smaller places where men were being collected and provided also not merely a ordinary medical examination before proceeding overseas, but an examination by Medical Boards of two or three Medical Officers exclusive of the Medical Officers of the battalion, and also the exacting of certificates both by the Medical Officer and the Commanding Officer that the regulations had been complied with.

By the Chairman:

Q. What are the medical examinations that are necessary today before a recruit can be given his uniform and his equipment?—A. I could get that information for you. Those regulations were issued from the Medical Branch with the approval of the Adjutant General.

By Mr. Ross (Middlesex):

Q. I would like to know how many men have been recruited in the Forestry and Labour Battalions, or rather, how many men of all ranks in all the Corps throughout Canada have been enlisted?—A. About 400,000.

Q. And how many have been enlisted in these Forestry Battalions? The Forestry and Constructions Battalions and so forth?—A. I should think they must be now in the neighbourhood of 20,000. In other words, 400,000 men have been enlisted, 300,000 have gone overseas, and there are approximately 40 or 50,000 men in Canada.

By Brigadier-General Mason:

Q. Of the men of Class "E," did you say that 10,000 had been returned to Canada in December or up to December?—A. Up to December, but that was a total which included all returned soldiers.

Q. How many of them were originally unfit?—A. I could not say, but not a very large proportion, because all men who were fit for military work of some kind were used.

By the Chairman:

Q. So that the total percentage of waste material sent to England that could not be utilized at all is not represented by the figures 10,000?—A. The 10,000 include all the returned invalid soldiers who have been wounded more or less seriously. There would not be, out of that number, I should say more than 1,000.

By Mr. Ross (Middlesex):

Q. Are there many in England who have not been returned?—A. Not many over there now that are not returned.

Q. How many of them are there?—A. As I recollect it, I think it is in the hundreds; I think a return I have will show it.

By the Chairman:

Q. When you speak of Class "E" in England, the residue cannot be absorbed in any useful work?—A. There is my difficulty. Class "E" includes men who have come back from France, who have been wounded or in the hospitals and convalescent homes but they are not separated. They are all men who are of no further military value and are eventually sent back here, not by reason of original sin, but by reason of military work.

By Mr. Middlebro:

Q. Not more than 1,000 who come back will be men who are not useful for anything, out of 290,000 that have gone over?—A. Yes, exactly.

[Lieut.-Colonel C. S. MacInnes.]

Q. One in 290?—A. One in 290. There again, one must, perhaps, consider this point. There were recently, I understand, some men sent back from England as being too young; formerly they were sent back, but that is not being done now, because all these men were found valuable and useful in England.

By the Chairman:

Q. How many returned incapacitated men have been fully cured and re-enlisted here in Canada?—A. Of those who have come back?

Q. Yes?—A. I can tell you that. Of those who have come back, approximately 1,000 have been transferred, enlisted in Special Service Companies, or have been transferred or re-enlisted in other units.

Q. How many?—A. 994, exclusive of Military District No. 10, which is the Province of Manitoba, so that the total number will be something over 1,000. That would indicate that my estimate of 1,000 out of 10,000 is probably too low, because I would estimate some of these men who have been fit enough to re-enlist in other units may have been used. No, I do not know that one should increase that 1,000 very much.

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. Do I understand that all the rejected men whom you have found were useful, that is of those that went overseas?—A. No, I cannot say that; as I understand it, I am subject to correction, there have been about 10,000 that have been sent back from England to Canada, for all causes. Separating the number of wounded that have come back, so far as I know it, I should not think there have been more than a thousand who have been sent who are called misfits.

By the Chairman:

Q. And of those that are over there, you think most or nearly all of them, of the secondary grade, are being utilized in some useful way?—A. Exactly. I do not want to mislead the Committee in any way; there has certainly been sent over from Canada to England far more than 1,000 who are not up to Class "A." But those who have been sent over have been employed in these other categories, but not sent back to Canada; they have been usefully employed.

By Mr. Ross (Middlesex):

Q. Was the service overloaded simply to keep them there in employment?—A. I do not think so.

By Hon. Mr. McCurdy:

Q. Have not a large number of men been sent over to France on railway construction?—A. Certainly.

By the Chairman:

Q. Will you give us some information about the Special Service Companies, their origin and the number of them?—A. The origin of the Special Service Companies was this: It was necessary to have men for guard duty and for other military duties in Canada. One way of obtaining such men would be by enlisting them in the Expeditionary Force, or to enlist them in the active militia, and call them out on active service. It was found very difficult to get the number of men required by enlistment in the active militia.

Q. Was the difficulty because of the difference in pay between the active militia and the overseas forces?—A. Not entirely that, but partly, and partly by the lack of glamour which surrounds everything connected with the Expeditionary Forces. At the same time it was found that a considerable number of men who had been trained as soldiers, who were in good condition, and upon whom the country had spent considerable money both in pay and training, were being discharged for comparatively minor defects, just before their units went overseas. The only thing to do under the existing practice was to discharge these men and then, if these men were requested to do guard duty or something of that kind they either said they would not, or that they would think about it. They had become civilians, and we had no further control over them, although the country had spent money on them for training.

Q. Do you mean to say they refused absolutely to enlist?—A. I do not say they refused, but you could not control them; these men had enlisted as soldiers, and they were still soldiers, so that regulations were sent out on July 16 to this effect:—

Of course, that was followed by a circular on July 25, which referred to that and said:

“With further reference to circular lettergram of 16th inst., concerning the transfer to a junior C.E.F. Battalion in your command, of men of good character with minor physical disabilities, to be employed on guard duty or as military police, or for clerical or other work, you will now find enclosed copy of instructions concerning medical requirements for men transferred to special companies of such battalions, or who may be enlisted in the same.

2. It is not desired that men should be employed on such special service who are not fully capable of performing the work to which they are allotted and of earning the pay and allowances which they will receive.

3. You are requested to report to Headquarters the designation of the Junior Overseas Battalions to which such men have been allotted, and to report weekly to Headquarters the strength of such Special Service Companies, and the duties on which its members are employed; it being the intention as soon as sufficient men have been obtained and have received sufficient training, to utilize them for all special service work in Canada, thereby releasing all those who are physically fit for overseas.

4. It is expected that Special Service Battalions will shortly be authorized, of which the Special Companies above referred to will form part.”

That has not been done because it was desired to keep down the overhead expenses as much as possible, and, I may say, that has certainly been done, because for 1,748 special service men in Canada, there are only 21 officers, which is an exceedingly small establishment.

By Hon. Mr. Murphy:

Q. At what are those 1,700-odd men employed?—A. As military police, guards, fatigues, pickets, orderlies, etc.

By Hon. Mr. McCurdy:

Q. If you have a whole regimental staff of officers, according to your establishment, how many officers would be required to look after that number of men?—A. That number of men is practically equal to two battalions, which would require 60 officers, of whom a large number would of course be senior officers, Lieut.-colonels and Majors, whereas in this case the establishment is entirely junior officers, on the following basis:—

For each company, one captain and one company Sergeant-Major.

For each fifty rank and file, one lieutenant, one sergeant, one corporal, two lance-corporals.

So that it would be impossible to have a less expensive military organization.

11. Lieut.-Colonel C. S. MacInnes

By the Chairman:

Q. These men enlisted, I understand, in the Canadian Expeditionary Force?—
A. Yes.

Q. And they are still regarded by you as C.E.F. men?—A. Yes.

Q. What percentage of them are sufficiently restored in health to go into the combatant's battalions?—A. I sent out and asked for the information, and I found that 398 of these special service men have already been transferred to other Expeditionary Force Units. That meant that they have gone overseas with regular units, or have joined Forestry or Construction Battalions.

Q. Do you encourage them in doing that?—A. Absolutely.

Q. I notice that the number you have on the 1st February is larger than the number on the 1st January.—A. Probably.

Q. Then the number in the Special Service Companies is increasing?—A. Yes. The number will increase up to the point when requirements are filled.

Q. What is the limit of that organization?—A. There is no absolute limit, but the number is continually checked, and the officer commanding the military district is responsible for not employing any more men than is required for the work to be done.

Q. Then the number you expect to have in these Special Service Battalions or companies depends upon the totality of the work to be done in these 13 districts?—A. Quite so.

Q. What is the maximum you could usefully employ in that way?—A. It is difficult to state that exactly. There are, for instance, on guard duty in Canada at the present time,—

By Hon. Mr. McCurdy:

Q. Perhaps if you state how many active militia men there are out on duty that would assist the committee in arriving at a conclusion.—A. There are 9,000 men of the active militia on home service doing guard duty, garrison duty, and other duty, at the present time. From that number you can, of course, take the men who are "A" men, fit for overseas service, and let them go, substituting for them these special service men.

Q. You mean if, for example, there are 9,000 of the active militia, and 2,000 of the special service men, that is 11,000 men altogether. Do you think that number of men is a sufficient force if your requirements continue to increase?—A. What I mean is that of those 9,000 men on guard duty, if there are 3,000 men fit and capable to go overseas, I would like to send them and use 3,000 special service men in their place.

Q. Are the special service men to any considerable extent composed of men who have been overseas and come back?—A. Yes, in those figures, exclusive of four military districts, 127 of the men who came back from overseas have been transferred to special service company.

Q. That would not be more than ten per cent?—A. No.

Q. Those men having been enlisted for overseas service, and not serving overseas, you retain them for the special service work, whether they are willing to remain at that particular work or not, but in that respect they differ from the composite battalion?—A. No.

Q. Is the man in the composite battalion doing home duty retained there indefinitely against his will, or is it voluntary service, as far as he is concerned?—A. No. He has enlisted for service during the period of the war and six months thereafter.

Q. They have no option of discharge?—A. No. But they could not be sent overseas, whereas all of the men of special service company have enlisted for overseas, and can be sent overseas, and will be sent over just as soon as they are medically fit.

[Lieut.-Colonel C. S. MacInnes.]

Q. But there is a considerable portion of them, according to the report given us by the Medical Department, that will never be fit to go over?—A. I have that report which shows that out of 1,769, 511 are stated to be unfit.

Q. Do you think it is right that a man who has enlisted for overseas service, who is disappointed at finding he cannot go to overseas service, and who is assigned to special service duty, which is, at least, much less romantic and patriotic?—A. I won't say that.

Q. Much less romantic than going overseas. Do you think that man should be retained against his will for services in Canada when he has enlisted in good faith to go overseas?—A. Why not? My answer would be positive. He enlists. His enlistment is not limited to going at once into the trenches to throw bombs, but he enlists in the service of the country for military duty, with the additional qualification that that may be for overseas. He is subject to that, and he agrees in his enlistment form that he may be allotted to another service. It may be quite true he would prefer the glamour of a particular class of work to any other work in the war; but if what he is put at is military work, he surely has no ground to say he has been unfairly treated. He has to be retained in Canada, in the first place, to be trained, before he goes over there. When he gets to England he has to be further trained.

Q. Here are 511 men who have, in response to the appeal of the recruiting sergeant to go and fight for their country, been attested, expecting they would go to the front. Now they find they are medically unfit and never can go to the front. You say to them "Your duties hereafter will be about the camps."—A. It will be military duty.

Q. Doing the chore work of camps and otherwise. Do you think it is quite fair to that man to compel him, when he finds he cannot go overseas, against his will to do that type of duty?—A. You are suggesting that a number of these men are complaining about that situation.

Q. Take a man who has had a good position at $3 or $4 a day, and has a family to support, and expects to go overseas, and is willing to make sacrifices to go overseas, but finds himself in one of these special service companies and is given the sweeping of the officers' quarters; he asks to be relieved to go back home and earn his three or four dollars a day and support his wife and children, and you say "No, once you have enlisted you must do the duty assigned to you." Do you think that is fair to the citizen who has enlisted?—A. Your idea is that any soldier who enlisted and got work he did not like might claim his discharge. That is carrying the voluntary system to a degree—

Q. I am putting myself in his place. If I had felt called upon to lay aside my business, and endure considerable privation in order to enlist, expecting to be sent to France, and I found after I had enlisted I was medically unfit, I think I would feel very badly if I had to act as a private in doing the ordinary home service under those circumstances?—A. I quite agree that you would have that feeling, but that does not lessen the value of the work; it possibly increases it.

Q. Is it not unfair to take a valuable man, who, perhaps, in civil life, can make three or four dollars a day, and maintain his family properly, and have him do chore duty in a special service battalion, when he wants to return to his home?—A. Not if by his doing that duty he is, as a matter of fact, releasing somebody else from the work, and enabling that man to fight in the trenches. In England, as you know at the present time they have a system of substitution, pulling out A. men from England and putting in B. men. Those B. men wanted to go to the front, but they are compelled to perform the duties of the A. men at home.

By Mr. Ross (Middlesex):

Q. Your argument is that it releases the men who are doing this work and who can go to the front?—A. Yes.

[Lieut.-Colonel C. S. MacInnes.]

Q. You have a battalion of 1,700 odd, including 21 officers?—A. Yes.

Q. Are they really necessary for the service? How many orderlies and officers' servants have you?—A. I have not the list. It certainly was not intended these men should be put there to increase the expenses of the institution.

By Hon. Mr. Murphy:

Q. How has it worked out? You say it was not intended to increase the expenditure?—A. That is the way it worked out. They are not entitled to more men than had been authorized by headquarters for particular duties. They have no right to create additional posts.

Q. The amount authorized and established by headquarters might be excessive. Can you give us a statement as to how these men are employed? Can you give us the grades?—A. Military police, cooks, orderlies, etc.

Q. Can you let us have that?—A. Yes.

By Mr. Middlebro:

Q. You say they are doing duties which able-bodied men would have to do, if these men were not there?—A. Exactly. You are increasing your force at the front in that way. We have endeavoured to cover the situation as well as we can by the regulations. Rule No. 1 reads:—

"No member of the C.E.F. is to be transferred to a special service company, if he is fit for overseas service. A transfer should be made in any such case to a C.E.F. battalion or other unit.

Including forestry, and so on.

(2) As soon as any member of a special service company becomes fit for overseas service, he should be transferred to a C.E.F. battalion or other unit.

The general rules provide that the man must be physically fit for the duty on which it is proposed to employ him, and the report must state any duty on which he should not be employed. He must not be suffering from any disability which is liable to be progressive in character. If he has some disability, it must be of such a character that it will not be aggravated by the work of the branch of the service in which it is proposed to employ him.

Then there is a provision as to age and height: and the chest measurement is less, the vision is less, and varicose veins are excepted.

Flat feet, of slight or moderate degree, not sufficiently marked to render unfit for office work.

The loss of one or two fingers on either hand, excepting thumb or forefinger, provided such loss does not interfere with his ability to do the work at which it is proposed to employ him, will not constitute unfitness.

This is addressed to the officers of the districts in Canada, and includes authority to use discretion as follows:

"4. When the Medical Board shows that the disability is such that the man will not become fit for Overseas Service you are authorized to use your discretion as to whether he should be discharged from, or transferred to (or retained in) the Special Service Company."

On the further question of establishment, it is also stated:

"5. The authorized establishment of N.C.O.'s should not be exceeded without authority from Headquarters, and should not be applied for except under special circumstances. Any N.C.O.'s beyond establishment should be offered the option of transfer, with reduced rank, or of discharge."

That is if a man comes back as a N.C.O., you cannot increase the establishment, and yet it would be unfair to compel him to serve at a lower rank, so he is given the option of accepting the lower rank or of discharge. So far as the practical operation is concerned, I wish you could have had before you to-day, Col. Mewburn, the Assistant Adjutant-General of Military District No. 2, because I was asking him how the special service company system worked, and he told me he did not know what they would have done without it.

By Brigadier-General Mason:

Q. It amounts to this: that the duties these men perform must be performed by somebody, and better by those men who can be best spared?—A. Yes.

By the Chairman:

Q. Would it not really mean that owing to the slackening of recruiting, there is no plethora of men, and the Militia authorities do not like to release any men who can be usefully employed?—A. That is not quite it, Sir Herbert. When this was done in July, we found men who were soldiers, and on whom we had spent money for training, were being discharged, and from whom no value was obtained. Surely it was more desirable to make use of their services than in getting other green men from the active militia.

Q. You used these men about the camps?—A. Certainly.

Q. For duties for which you did not want to use the "A" men, otherwise the "A" men would have to do their own fatigue?—A. That is quite a wrong idea, Sir Herbert. No new positions have been created for these men. These men are doing duties which otherwise "A" men would have been doing. The "A" man would not have received the training he ought to receive, and for which the country was paying.

Q. Because a certain amount of his time would have been taken up doing these secondary duties?—A. Yes. I would add that at the beginning we did permit (for one month) the direct enlistment into these companies of men not up to standard, in order to get certain men who had been discharged before the regulations came into effect, but it was found that that might be establishing two standards for the C.E.F. So after a month of trial that was abandoned, and was only put into force again in connection with the Welland Canal Field Force when a complaint was received that a number of men on that guard duty in the home service wanted to go overseas, and they could not be released because men could not be got to take their places. We then authorized the direct enlistment of 100 men. There again the value of the system was shown.

By Mr. Ross (Middlesex):

Q. You spoke of the small number of officers in connection with the Special Service. I saw a memorandum this morning which showed that there were about 46,000 troops in Canada at the present time, and in connection with these troops there were about 2,300 officers, that is one officer to about 20 men. Isn't that a terrible waste?—A. No, that is about the usual percentage, 5 per cent. Of course, in some of the units there is a larger number of officers in proportion, the artillery for example.

Q. That is about the usual percentage?—A. Yes, 5 per cent.

By the Chairman:

Q. There are a good many battalions which have their full quota of 30 officers and only half the number of men has been recruited.—A. That is true, but that condition will soon disappear, because all of these men will be going overseas. For instance, in the Field Ambulance Corps you will find 42 officers for 105 men. Some of these small units bring up the average.

Witness discharged.

Mr. R. P. BROWN, Acting Accountant and Paymaster General, Militia Department, called, sworn and examined:—

By the Chairman:

Q. Mr. Brown, you are the assistant paymaster general of the Militia Department, are you not?—A. No, sir, my appointment is assistant accountant. I am acting accountant and paymaster general.

Q. You are acting in Mr. J. W. Borden's position during his absence?—A. Yes.

Q. You are the acting head of the Paymaster's Department?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What we want to get from you, particularly, Mr. Brown, are the regulations in connection with returned soldiers in the matter of keeping them on the pay roll. How long are they paid, and when does their pay cease? When a man returns home there are three classes as you know, into which he is classified at Quebec. Will you tell us when the pay ceases for class 1?—A. When he is discharged at Quebec he is paid up to the date of discharge which is post dated and given 15 days.

Q. Is he given his ticket to his destination?—A. Yes, his ticket to his destination and his meal tickets to his destination.

Q. Supposing there is a certain sum of money due him, when is that paid to him?—A. They pay him usually from ten to twenty dollars at Quebec, and the balance is sent in a cheque to the district paymaster where the man is going.

Q. To the Divisional Paymaster?—A. The District Paymaster.

Q. Would all cheques for Military District No. 2, for example, be sent to Toronto?—A. Yes.

Q. Where would the cheque of a soldier who returned to Ottawa be sent?—A. To Kingston.

Q. Would he have to go down there for it?—A. No, in the case of Ottawa it is mailed to him from Kingston.

Q. Is there only one casualty paymaster for each division?—A. Yes.

Q. What happens with a soldier who, for example, goes to Perth, would he have to go to Kingston to get his pay?—A. It would be sent by the paymaster.

Q. To Perth?—A. Yes.

Q. Now, many of these soldiers come back with large sums due them?—A. Yes.

Q. Sometimes one hundred, two hundred or three hundred dollars?—A. Yes.

Q. Would that money be paid in one lump?—A. No, sir.

Q. How is it paid? Supposing a man comes back having $150 due him and receives $10 at the discharge depot, how does he get the balance?—A. The balance is sent on to the casualty paymaster in his district.

Q. At Kingston, if the man comes from District No. 3. Does the paymaster send the whole sum to the man in one cheque or in instalments?—A. He sends it all in one cheque.

Q. So that after the man gets home, he gets complete payment of all that is due him?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Have you any idea what the average sum is that a returned soldier gets in Class 1, when paid off in Canada?—A. I suppose it would be about $150.

Q. That is practically the average for a discharged soldier who is discharged almost immediately on his arrival at Quebec?—A. That is my idea of it.

Q. I judge so, because we have chequed a good many of them in connection with the Patriotic Fund. Now, take Class 3—we will omit Class 2 for the moment—the man immediately entitled to a pension. How long do you continue to pay him?—A. Until the Pension Board notify us that their first pension cheque is ready.

Q. There is no hiatus then?—A. No, sir.

Q. Is that a new arrangement?—A. It has just come into force.

Q. Because of complaints?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How about his wife, does she get her separation allowance? In the case of a married man, whose wife has been accustomed to receiving separation allowances of $20 a month, and whose husband has assigned her $15 a month, when he comes home and his pension has not yet been determined, and while he is waiting for his pension, how long do the separation allowance and assigned pay continue?—A. Up to the time he gets his first pension cheque.

Q. That is also a new arrangement, is it not?—A. Yes, sir. At the beginning of the war there was a period of 15 days allowed for the granting of the pension during which the man received pay and allowances; that was found to be too short, so it was extended to 30 days; and now it is extended until the time we get notification from the Pensions Board, that they are ready to issue the first pension cheque.

Q. That is, you found that a fixed date was likely to leave gaps?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And now the Government pays separation allowance and assigned pay after the man has come home physically unfit from the time he arrives until his first pension cheque goes out?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. There is no hiatus?—A. No, sir.

Q. Now take Class 2, the men whom you might call undetermined, so far as their physical condition is concerned.

Brigadier-Gen. MASON: Before we leave Class 3, what about the case of the unmarried man?

The CHAIRMAN: In that case there is no separation allowance, unless he has a widowed mother.

By the Chairman:

Q. Now, in the case of the undetermined pension, where a Class 2 man has returned either convalescent or an active treatment case, he lands at Quebec and is sent to a hospital. What pay does he get, and what allowances does his wife get while he is in hospital?—A. Just the same as he has been receiving all along.

Q. Just as on active service?—A. Yes.

Q. When he becomes convalescent how long does his pay continue?—A. Just the same.

Q. Supposing he becomes an out patient?—A. In that case, he gets 60 cents a day subsistence allowance.

Q. And his wife received $20 separation allowance just the same?—A. Yes.

Q. He will get his full pay of $33, his wife will receive $20 separation allowance and in addition he will have 60 cents a day for boarding himself?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Making a total of $71, if I am right, for an "out" patient?—A. Yes.

Q. While the "in" patient gets his keep in the hospital, his full pay of $33 per month and $20 for his wife?—Yes, that is right.

Q. That is for case No. 2. Now, suppose there is a chronic case, where a man is in the hospital for six, eight, ten or twelve months, what happens there, does the man's pay go on all the time?—A. Yes.

Q. His pay goes on no matter how long he is in the hospital?—A. Yes, it goes on until the man is discharged for pension.

Q. Now take the case of a man who is discharged. After he has been discharged two or three weeks he endeavours to work and breaks down, then goes before a Medical Board, is re-examined and re-attested and returns to hospital again. What do you say about the pay and allowance of that man?—A. We start his pay from the date he is re-attested.

Q. From the date he is re-attested?—A. Yes.

Q. Do you not make it retroactive to cover the three or four weeks he was out?—A. No. He would be getting a pension during that time.

Q. Suppose he was getting no pension, but was in the class that received a gratuity on discharge. He goes out and tries to work, and after two or three weeks he breaks down, goes before a Medical Board and is re-examined and re-admitted to the hospital. Do you pay that man any wages for the period he was out?—A. No, sir.

[Mr. R. P. Brown.]

Q. His pay commences again with his re-attestation?—A. Yes.

Q. Suppose you have a case where the Hospitals Commission decides the man must be re-educated. Does he go back to pay and allowances? Take the case of a man whose right hand is cut off and who has to be taught a new trade. Does he get pay while he is being re-educated?—A. He gets his pay as long as he is in the hospital, and is not discharged.

By Mr. Middlebro:

Q. He is never off the pay-list?—A. No.

By the Chairman:

Q. If the man is supposed to be physically fit but his re-education is in process, does he get pay and allowance?—A. Yes, sir, until discharged.

By Mr. Middlebro:

Q. His Separation Allowance is paid while he is undergoing vocational training until his final discharge?—A. Yes, sir, until he is either discharged into civil life or to pension, the pay is just the same.

Q. Can you tell me what you are paying out in Separation Allowances today?—A. Yes, I can give you the figures for Separation Allowances and for assigned pay.

Q. Give the expenditure under the head of Separation Allowance first?—A. The payments on account of Separation Allowances for the month of January were $1,767,000.

By the Chairman:

Q. Paid to how many people?—A. About 80,000.

Q. Then you pay 80,000 Separation Allowances?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. In Canada and in England?—A. No, that is in Canada alone.

Q. Can you tell us how many Separation Allowances have been paid in England?—A. Separation Allowances have been paid to about 12,000 families in England.

Q. That makes about 92,000 Separation Allowances all told?—A. Yes, Sir.

By Hon. Mr. McCurdy:

Q. What is the total amount?—A. About $2,050,000 a month.

Q. Now give us the assigned pay?—A. For January that amounted to $2,791,000.

By the Chairman:

Q. How many assignments does that represent?—A. About 160,000.

Q. Out of 300,000 men who have gone over?—A. Yes, sir, about that.

Q. A little over 50 per cent of the men assigned their pay?—A. It is nearly 60 per cent.

By Hon. Mr. McCurdy:

Q. Have you the payment of pensions for the month of January?—A. No, sir, I have not.

By Mr. Ross (Middlesex):

Q. Could you tell me the amount of Separation Allowances paid to dependents of officers in Canada, and in Great Britain, respectively, and the same to dependents of privates and non-commissioned officers?—A. I could not give you that information off-hand, but I can get the figures for you.

Q. I would like to get those figures. I want the pay and separation allowances paid to officers wives in Canada and in England and the same information in regard to wives of non-commissioned officers and privates?—A. I think I can get that information for you.

SEPARATION ALLOWANCE.

Separation Allowance is issued at the discretion of Privy Council. Its object is to provide for the maintenance of the family or dependent of a soldier when he is separated from them on Overseas Service and is payable from the date a man enlists.

The governing principle in both British and Canadian regulations is that Separation Allowance cannot be paid in respect of the same soldier to more than one household at the same time.

ASSIGNED PAY.

Non-Commissioned Officers and Men, in order to draw Separation Allowance must assign not less than half their pay but are not permitted to assign more than twenty days' pay.

The minimum in the case of a Private would be $15, the maximum $20.

RATES OF SEPARATION ALLOWANCE.

Rank and file.....	$20 per month.
Sergeants and staff sergeants.....	25 "
Warrant officers.....	30 "
Lieutenants.....	30 "
Captains.....	40 "
Majors.....	50 "
Colonels or lieut.-colonels.....	60 "

Present Regulations for one or more motherless children authorize the above rates.

Classes of persons entitled to draw Separation Allowance.

Wives and Children.

- (1) Lawful wife at time of enlistment.
- (2) Wife married since enlistment with Commanding Officer's consent.
- (3) Wife separated by Court, provided Court decrees Husband must contribute to support.
- (4) Wife separated less than two years without Court decree.
- (5) Woman supported by soldier on a permanent bona fide domestic basis two years prior to enlistment.

Motherless Children.

- (1) Legitimate children. (May be paid to Guardian named by soldier.)
- (2) Children of a household as in Class A (5) as above.

Widows.

Widows entirely dependent where the son has enlisted and is their sole support.

Special General Provision.

In the event of individual cases arising which do not appear to come within the present regulations, or any cases not already provided for, such cases will be specially considered by the Governor in Council.

INVALIDED SOLDIERS.

All invalided soldiers will receive pay and allowances until discharged from Canadian Expeditionary Force; but no invalided soldier will be discharged until a Board of Medical Officers certify that further treatment or hospital care will not improve his condition. If not medically fit he is recommended for a pension, according to his disability.

If a soldier who has been discharged and awarded a pension and who subsequently requires treatment and is so recommended by a Board of Medical Officers who certify such disability was caused or aggravated by service the Board of Officers may recommend his reattestation as a member of the Canadian Expeditionary Force. If such recommendation is acted upon he is placed on pay and allowances from date of reattestation and his pension, if any, cancelled from such date.

When a pensioner has been reattested he will be regarded as a new case in so far as discharge and pension are concerned and the usual procedure followed.

Q. What else have you which may be of value for our record?—A. These (referring to memoranda) are mostly notes I made.

Q. In anticipation of questions which might be asked you—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Possibly we will ask you those questions if we know the nature of the memoranda.—A. There is one thing further I would like to say, and that is in regard to the position of the soldier on his return from the war. A rule was made taking effect from 1st January, 1916, that deferred pay would be held up to the extent of 50 per cent of their pay in the case of single men with no assignments overseas, and 50 per cent, less the assignments, in the case of others. That would mean in the case of a private, that if he had served a year overseas he would have about $200 in his pocket when he arrived home.

Q. Does the soldier get any interest on deferred pay?—A. No, sir.

By Mr. Middlebro:

Q. You mean by that, every soldier on his return will have enough money in his possession to tide him over until he is provided for?—A. All the men will, who have not made assignments.

[Mr. R. P. Brown.]

By the Chairman:

Q. The married men will have very little because their assignment is $15 out of $33.—A. A few men are assigning small amounts to other than dependents.

By Mr. Middlebro:

Q. How many letters are coming to the Department each day?—A. In the Assigned Pay and Separation Allowance Branch lately the number has averaged about 900 a day.

By the Chairman:

Q. Do you try to have them all answered within 24 hours?—A. We do, but we do not always succeed.

By Hon. Mr. McCurdy:

Q. Do you know anything about the correspondence of the Records Branch?—A. I do not know what the extent of that would be.

Q. Is it as heavy as in the Assigned Pay and Separation Allowance Branch?—A. No, not as heavy, I believe.

By the Chairman:

Q. How many have you on your staff now?—A. About 800. Of course there is much other business besides correspondence to deal with.

Q. Have you anything further that you think would be of value to place on our records?—A. There is the question of extra duty pay for men who went over at the beginning of the war. A great many men were enlisted with the understanding that they would get special pay.

Q. These men all came home?—A. Yes.

By Mr. Ross (Middlesex):

Q. Can you give any idea what the responsibility of Canada amounts to to the men on account of the pay that has been retained? You keep back a certain amount of the pay. Can you give us an idea what the whole amount of the pay that has been kept back is?—A. Yes, on the 30th September, that is the latest returns we have from overseas, the deferred pay amounted to $16,000,000.

Q. That would be largely increased now I suppose?—A. Yes, it is probably $25,-000,000 today.

Q. When an officer comes back here, wounded, and is on leave, and his leave is extended, does his pay go on just the same?—A. Yes.

Q. Although he is not in a Convalescent Home at all, but is just here on leave, he gets full pay just the same?—A. Yes.

Q. Does he get subsistence?—A. Yes, he gets subsistence allowance.

Q. His wife gets the separation allowance, just the same?—A. Yes.

Q. Does the separation allowance end immediately if the man is discharged?—A. In the case of a dependent, do you mean?

Q. In the case of a married man who is discharged?—A. If we know about it, yes.

By Mr. Middlebro:

Q. I had a lady come to my office, before I left, who said that her husband was discharged last September, and she was still receiving her separation allowance. She wanted to know if it was right for her to take it.—A. There are a great many of those cases, and the office at Headquarters here gets blamed for them, although we are not entitled to the blame.

By Hon. Mr. McCurdy:

Q. In cases of over-payment, do you ever have refunds?—A. Oh, yes, we have a staff recovering that money right along.

By the Chairman:

Q. And sometimes after having sent poor women cheques for $20 or $30, and after they have spent the money, then you want it back again.—A. Sometimes they do not use very good judgment.

By Mr. Middlebro:

Q. In a case of that kind, is it the fault of the officers not reporting that the man has been discharged?—A. Yes. A man in Canada may be discharged or may desert, and the officer, whose duty it is to notify us, will not do so and it goes on for months; we quite frequently hear of those things through private parties, and, as soon as we do hear of them we stop the allowance.

Q. Is it the fault of the local paymaster?—A. No, it is the fault of the officer commanding the Battalion, in a great many cases.

Witness discharged.

Dr. ADAM SHORTT, Civil Service Commissioner, called, sworn and examined.

By the Chairman:

Q. You are Chairman of the Civil Service Commission?—A. No, sir, that is a popular mistake, there are only two Commissioners, and there is no Chairman as yet, although provision has been made for a Chairman.

Q. Then your title is?—A. Simply: Civil Service Commissioner.

Q. The policy of the Government, if we can judge from the declaration of some of the Ministers has been to give preference in the Civil Service to returned soldiers?—A. Yes.

Q. Have you a copy of the Order in Council to that effect?—A. Yes.

Q. Will you kindly file that?—A. There are several Orders in Council here.

Q. Orders that relate to that subject?—A. Yes.

The CHAIRMAN: They will all be filed on the record.

WITNESS: Starting with the Order of the 27th November, 1915 (P. C. 2758):

“The Committee of the Privy Council, on the recommendation of the Right Honourable the Prime Minister advise that in making appointments to the Government Civil Service, preference be given to the returned members of the Canadian Expeditionary Force, especially those who through disability occasioned by active military service are unable to fill their previous occupations; such appointments to be subject to the provisions of the Civil Service Act, and to be made with due regard to the capacity of any applicant to discharge the duties of the position to which it is proposed to appoint him.”

By Hon. Mr. Murphy:

Q. That is the first Order in Council?—A. The first Order in Council, dated 27th November, 1915.

Q. What is the next Order?—A. The next Order is that of the 12th October, 1916.

Q. What is the substance of it?—A. Making absolute restrictions on the appointment of persons of military age who are able to pass the medical test.

By the Chairman:

Q. As I understand it, at the present time no person can be appointed to the Civil Service who is fit and who is of military age?—A. Who is of military age and who has not presented himself for enlistment.

Q. Who cannot show his certificate that he has presented himself?—A. That is, he may or he may not be unfit, but who has not yet presented himself. If he has presented himself and has been declared unfit, we ask for a certificate from the regular authority, and if he cannot produce that, we ignore him. It comes down to this, that the only persons eligible to enter the Service in the regular way at the present time are those below the military age, and that age has been reduced by this Order in Council from 18, which was formerly the minimum, to 16, and those over the military age. Formerly they could not be admitted above the age of 35, now they can be taken in to an indefinite age, which is dependent upon the judgment of those who issue these certificates, or who suggest them for employment.

Q. That discretion is permitted by this Order in Council?—A. Yes.

Q. To whom is that discretion given?—A. Jointly, to the Commissioners and the Departmental Heads, each within their respective jurisdictions.

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. Under that Regulation, can a man be taken into the Civil Service at any age? A. No, it leaves it to the discretion—

Q. But if the discretion is alright, he can be taken in at 70?—A. Yes, but usually, unless there are special circumstances, not over sixty.

By Brigadier-General Mason:

Q. What is meant by the term "Civil Service"?—A. The regular Civil Service is composed of the organized Service under the Civil Service Act, which alone is called the "Civil Service," but outside of that there is a large staff of public employees in all kinds of positions.

Q. Such as the Customs and Post Office?—A. There are the Inside and the Outside Services; the Inside Service comes under the provisions of the Act of 1908, and its amendments, the Outside Service is under the old Act.

Q. Then this Order in Council does not apply to the Outside Service?—A. Yes, to all the regular organized Service. It is a question how far it applies to the miscellaneous Service, that is people employed as snowshovellers, and those in the Militia Department paid out of the War vote; none of these are in the Civil Service, and it is a question as to whether that regulation is compulsory with regard to them.

By the Chairman:

Q. How about those people that are on for short periods? I understand that persons can be employed for six months without a Civil Service Commission Certificate. When that period is up, what happens?—A. This limit has been abolished until the end of the war. That is also a feature of this Order in Council, that any one taken on temporarily can be continued until the end of the war.

By Hon. Mr. Murphy:

Q. In any department?—A. In any department, inside or outside.

By Mr. Middlebro:

Q. But they must be of non-military age?—A. Yes, or women.

By Hon. Mr. Murphy:

Q. Is there any other feature of that Order in Council you want to refer to, creating any further change?—A. No, except this question of badges that "during the continuance of the present war, no male person of military age shall be appointed to the Civil Service, whether in the inside, or on the outside, service, unless a badge has been issued to him under the provisions of the Order in Council of the 16th August, 1916." That is another Order in Council.

Q. Have you any other Order in Council?—A. Yes. These Orders in Council require that those appointed in the inside service should conform to the qualifications required for the candidates entering the inside service.

Q. You are speaking of the two orders already referred to?—A. Yes. But it was found that sometimes we could not issue certificates to returned soldiers for various reasons, partly because of questions arising out of that elementary test that they were given, and partly by reason of habits, character, etc. We had an arrangement from the start that the preference would be given to the returned soldiers, or to those who could not serve overseas, on condition that they had the minimum qualification; they were not treated in a competitive way, and in our lists at the present time what we do is we go through those lists and take out, first, all the returned soldiers who have qualified and who are suitable; next, take out those who have military badges. Next, take out the women, and then, finally, any other men who come under those restrictions.

By Hon. Mr. Murphy:

Q. These are regulations made by the Civil Service Commissioners themselves?—A. Yes.

Q. Apart from the practice?—A. Yes.

Q. Apart from Orders in Council?—A. Yes. We were following that line, and then we came to have the special authority for it in these Orders in Council. Now, in order to get at the men who could be properly qualified, we made arrangements for examinations. I visited all those institutions that were then in operation for training under the Military Hospitals Commission, and made arrangements for the examining of those people at those centres all up and down Canada. We held the first examination in September, 1916. We got nine people out of some twelve or fourteen at Calgary. I have a list here of the examinations held in the end of December, where we got forty at different centres in Canada. We have another examination coming on the 6th of this month.

By the Chairman:

Q. These are all returned soldiers?—A. Yes. We hold these at different centres, and the list, of course, is extending. We will probably have, perhaps, fifty, sixty, or seventy; we are not sure how many will pass, but a large number. We utilize these lists in two ways. Our Commission has no control over the appointments in the outside service, and, therefore, all we can do as regards the outside service is to send these lists, with the names of the persons and the places at which they have taken their examination. We get at each centre, from the Hospital Commission, the disability under which each one of these patients is labouring; so that, when the department is selecting a person they will know whether he has an arm off, or which arm it is, or whether he is suffering from shell shock, or what he is suffering from, and what he might be addicted to. We send those lists to all the deputy ministers for their information, and from these they should, in accordance with the Orders in Council, select those qualified persons up and down the country. As regards the appointments here in Ottawa, we select them off those lists. It was because some of those were rejected that this Order in Council was passed, which enabled those men—

By Mr. Ross (Middlesex):

Q. Rejected by whom?—A. By the tests we applied in the Civil Service.

By the Chairman:

Q. They fell down in their examination?—A. Yes, or could not furnish a clean record as to their habits, inclined to drink, and one thing and another. This was passed—

By Hon. Mr. Murphy:

Q. What date is that?—A. This is the first day of January, 1917, and reads as follows:—

“His Excellency the Governor General in Council, under and in virtue of the provisions of section 6 of the War Measures Act, 1914, is pleased to order that section 22 of the Civil Service Amendment Act, 1908, as amended by chapter 8 of the Statutes of 1910, relating to the appointment to the position of messengers, porters, sorters and packers, and to certain other positions, shall be and the same is hereby amended by adding thereto the following sub-section:

(3). Any person who has been on active service overseas in the Military or Naval forces of His Majesty during the present war may be appointed either temporarily or permanently to any of the said positions upon his satisfying the Deputy head of the Department in which he is to be appointed that he can read and write and also that he has the usual qualifications required with respect to character and health."

That removes the restrictions.

By Mr. Middlebro:

Q. Does that apply to a letter-carrier?—A. No, he is not in the Civil Service.

By Brigadier-General Mason:

Q. What is the result of the change?—A. A man who is rejected, or who would have been rejected by our test under our examination, may still be appointed.

By the Chairman:

Q. To a restricted number of positions?—A. Yes.

By Hon. Mr. Murphy:

Q. And may be appointed permanently?—A. Yes.

Q. In other words, these appointments may be made outside the Civil Service Commissioners altogether?—A. Yes.

Q. By the deputy head?—A. Well, by the head who orders the deputy head to take action.

By Mr. Middlebro:

Q. It does not include a person who has been discharged as medically unfit?—A. No.

Q. He is not eligible?—A. No. The effect of the Order in Council is this: that anyone who has sufficient influence to get the appointment will get it, and exclude the appointment of those who have gone up through the Military Hospitals Commission and taken their tests and are ready to be appointed.

By Hon. Mr. Murphy:

Q. At the hands of the Civil Service Commission?—A. Yes.

Q. Who have passed an examination?—A. Yes.

By the Chairman:

Q. But there is a limited number of employments for which those semi-unfit men are eligible?—A. That makes the condition all the more serious for those who have taken the regular course and have qualified.

Q. Those that have qualified have open to them a good many more positions?—A. If they have taken the qualifying examination, or the second division examination, or that for any other division, but this is the lower grade, and that lower grade applied in the outside service to railway mail clerks and postal clerks, and therefore to a large number of positions in the outside service.

By Mr. Ross (Middlesex):

Q. Many thousand?—A. No. The postal service is divided into two classes, organized and unorganized. This applies only to the organized service.

[Dr. Adam Shortt.]

By the Chairman:

Q. He must be a returned soldier from overseas?—A. Yes.

By Mr. Middlebro:

Q. Would that apply to rural mail carriers?—A. I presume not.

By the Chairman:

Q. What is being done by the Military Hospitals Commission, under your co-operation, is to fit every man for the service who is at present unfit?—A. The principle is this: As you have already indicated, there is a very limited number, and always must be a very limited number, of Government positions open to returned soldiers. We, of course, expect there will be many more returned soldiers fully qualified for those positions than can obtain them, and therefore we expect the returned soldiers will be their own competitors when they return in sufficient numbers.

Q. It would look as though all future appointments practically would be taken by returned soldiers?—Yes, up to very high grades.

By Mr. Middlebro:

Q. We will become militarized, as they were in Germany?—A. Well, in a sense, but we go on the assumption that these men will return to civil life. There are many engineers, chemists and scientific men of all grades in the troops, who are receiving at the front a magnificent training in practical work, in engineering of every description and in administrative work. We expect these men will be able to fill these positions when they return, that they will be strong competitors, and that preference should be given to them. That is the expectation we are proceeding on. It does seem to us that in the meantime these positions should be filled only temporarily, whether by returned soldiers or otherwise, and the abolishing of the six months' limitation makes that possible. Such men as are available, preferably returned soldiers, if there are any, for the higher grades, may be put in these positions. Most of them have been filled by men who have been unable to go overseas on account of their inability to stand the medical test. Let them be put in temporarily, and when these men get back from the front after the war is over, let the positions be thrown open to competition, and we shall be able, on that basis, to select from the returned soldiers, without favour, and with everybody having the same chance, the best men for the positions.

By Hon. Mr. Murphy:

Q. What you have just said is your idea as to the way this ought to work out?—A. Yes.

By Hon. Mr. McCurdy:

Q. What are your views with regard to extending that suggestion to men in the Civil Service who are physically fit and qualified for overseas service and now holding permanent positions?—A. We have given every encouragement to those who will enlist and put every obstacle in the way of their getting anything unless they go overseas. What we did in the case of our regular lists after the war broke out was this: To every man on that list under the competitions which were then permitted, and, indeed, required by law, we said: Have you tried to enlist? If the answer was no, we replied: All right, don't you think you should? The man would say: Well, what does that mean for me? We told him: It means that we will keep your position for you, in other words keep you on the list and when you come back you will not have to pass another examination. The law authorizes this, because the law says that these men shall be retained on the list until we find positions for them. When they return from overseas, they simply present themselves and ask for their appointment, and that appointment will be given in due order. In comparison with those who have not taken any examination they will get the preference over all others.

[Dr. Adam Shortt.]

By Hon. Mr. Murphy:

Q. Are you speaking now of men at present in the Civil Service?—A. Well, partly.

By the Chairman:

Q. You are speaking of the waiting list?—A. Take a man in the third division of the Service, he goes up and becomes a successful candidate for the second division, but we do not count the fact of his being in the third division as giving him any claim at all to exemptions from the Orders in Council, and he will not go up through our Commission to the higher grade.

Q. Unless he tries to enlist?—A. Yes, and has been turned down.

By Mr. Ross (Middlesex):

Q. If he does enlist he gets the preference when he comes back?—A. That is right.

By Hon. Mr. McCurdy:

Q. The reason I ask the question is because you have suggested yourself, that, when the soldiers come back at the end of the war, those temporarily holding the positions, having been allowed in because physically unfit and therefore necessarily not then able to earn a good living, are to be thrown out and a way made for the soldiers?—A. They will have whatever opportunity anyone has to enter into the competition. As Mr. Middlebro has pointed out, we have no control over holding positions in the Service for men who have gone to the front, but we understand that the Government holds these.

Q. I am not speaking of those. You have suggested that from now on all vacancies be filled temporarily by men who are physically unfit for overseas service?—A. Yes, or returned soldiers.

Q. Yes, certainly returned soldiers first, but for other positions for which suitable returned soldiers cannot be found with men physically unfit for overseas service, and that this latter class shall hold these positions until the end of the war, and that they shall then, physically unfit as they are, be summarily thrown out and their places taken by returned soldiers. Admittedly, you approve of this procedure, then I put this question to you: Is such a course equally feasible with regard to the able-bodied men who have not gone overseas and who, at the end of the war, are holding good positions in the Service?—A. Not if they are holding permanent positions. I should like to correct just one point, that these temporary men shall be indiscriminately thrown out. They will have the same opportunity as all others eligible to compete for those permanent positions with the returned soldiers, and they will have the advantage of a certain knowledge and experience gained in the temporary holding of the positions which will be an advantage to them.

Q. You would, of course, give the preference to the returned soldiers?—A. Certainly, where there are not other returned soldiers eligible to compete with them. If they are holding these positions merely as civilians they would be thrown out.

Q. You propose to throw out then a class of men who are not physically fit to make their way in the world, and retain other physically fit men who have not volunteered, because they are "permanents"?—A. In any case the former are only temporarily employed, and we are not changing that situation.

Q. What difference does that make? The former class cannot earn a good living. I have no personal knowledge, but it is said that at the present time you have in the service men who are able to make their way any where, and who are not going to the front. My question was: Would it be feasible to recruit in the Civil Service many men who are now there by adopting the suggestion which you proposed that the Government should adopt after the war for the temporary men?—A. You mean by throwing them out at the close of the war? There is this serious difference: It is up to the Government and Parliament to say whether they will abolish or fill many positions, and there are many filled now on a purely temporary basis. Every one entering on the temporary basis knows that they enter on a basis which comes to an end normally in six months, or, since the passing of the Order in Council, at the end of the war. They enter on that basis; they know exactly where they are; there is no breaking of faith with them. Whereas those who have been regularly appointed to the permanent Service have entered knowing that the Acts and regulations and the practice and everything else enables them to go through to the end of the chapter. So that there is a serious difference, I think, between the two classes.

By the Chairman:

Q. Between the permanent and temporary classes?—A. Yes.

By Hon. Mr. McCurdy:

Q. You would not be prepared to carry your suggestion that far?—A. I do not interfere with them. I think, as I say, that those men who can go to war, and where there is no special reason why they should not, should have whatever pressure put on them that is deemed advisable; but in all such cases where they go their positions are held for them, and those who occupy such positions in the meantime know that they are holding them temporarily until these men return.

By Hon. Mr. Murphy:

Q. You say that their positions are held for them. Do you know that that is the fact?—A. That is the declaration of the Government.

Q. In an Order in Council?—A. No, they have simply never been discharged.

By the Chairman:

Q. Most of those who are away draw their pay?—A. They are on leave of absence purely.

By Hon. Mr. Murphy:

Q. You do not know, doctor, that any regulation or Order in Council has been passed expressing in words what you have just said?—A. I know this, that unless some special Order in Council or law has been passed putting them out of their positions, they still hold them.

Q. That is your reason for saying what you have said?—A. Yes.

By the Chairman:

Q. They are absent on leave?—A. They are still members of the Civil Service and their pay is still continued.

By Hon. Mr. Murphy:

Q. Provided they are in certain divisions?—A. Yes.

By Hon. Mr. McCurdy:

Q. Was not some change made with regard to the granting of leave to permanent officials of the Civil Service? Up to a certain date they received their full pay from a department as well as their military pay and allowances, and after a certain time was there not some change made in that connection?—A. Yes.

Q. What was that change?—A. That their military pay should be deducted from their civil pay.

By Hon. Mr. Murphy:

Q. That was the rule at first?—A. No, the rule at first, up to July, 1915, or about that date, they received their pay of their Civil Service position regardless of what they got in a military capacity. After that, they received their military pay and whatever the difference was between that and their Civil Service pay; in other words the military pay was deducted from the Civil Service pay.

Q. Is that the rule now?—A. Yes.

[Dr. Adam Shortt.]

Q. Are there any other Orders in Council affecting the Civil Service Commission with relation to the war?—A. Some of them have been repealed.

By the Chairman:

Q. In putting these Orders in Council in for our file, it will not be necessary to put in those that have been repealed. And if the latest ones replace previous orders, put in the latest?—A. The Order in Council of January 1, 1917, amends section 22 of the Civil Service Amendment Act, and reads as follows:

P.C. 3281.

PRIVY-COUNCIL, CANADA.

At the Government House at Ottawa. Monday the 1st day of January, 1917.

PRESENT:

His Excellency the Governor General in Council.

His Excellency the Governor General in Council, under and by virtue of the provisions of section 6 of the War Measures Act, 1914, is pleased to order that section 22 of the Civil Service Amendment Act, 1908, as amended by chapter 8 of the Statutes of 1910, relating to the appointment to the position of messengers, porters, sorters and packers, and to certain other positions, shall be and the same is hereby further amended by adding thereto the following sub-section:

3. Any person who has been on active service overseas in the Military or Naval forces of His Majesty during the present war may be appointed either temporarily or permanently to any of the said positions upon his satisfying the Deputy head of the Department in which he is to be appointed that he can read and write and also that he has the usual qualifications required with respect to character and health.

(Sgd.) RODOLPHE BOUDREAU,
Clerk of the Privy Council.

There are two significant things I might mention, first, people in Ottawa, it seems to me, should not have a special claim on Government positions as if the Dominion Government's offices in Ottawa were a local industry. We hold our examinations from the Atlantic to the Pacific, and everybody is equally entitled to compete.

By Hon. Mr. McCurdy:

Q. The Johnny on the spot always has the advantage?—A. In a patronage way, always. If there are qualified returned soldiers up and down the country who have taken their examinations, and who have taken the training offered them by the Military Hospitals Commission, and have shown themselves in passing these tests able to hold these positions, why should inferior people be taken when the others are available? The same applies to this other question of holding them over. Moreover, these tests are very elementary, the lower grade examinations being simply writing, spelling and the first four rules of arithmetic.

By Hon. Mr. Murphy:

Q. And reading?—A. No. The spelling and the arithmetic are such that if they can spell the easy words they can pass, and if they can add and subtract they do not need to know how to multiply and divide, because they can get enough marks to qualify.

[Dr. Adam Shortt.]

It is not a serious test, but it has this remarkable advantage. Lord Macaulay, Sir George Trevelyan, the Marquis of Hartington, afterwards Duke of Devonshire, and other advocates of the Civil Service reform in Britain, pointed out that if a man will undertake to go up for these tests, it is a more valuable test of steadiness of character, of habits, and of general ability than any value of the test itself, and that is what we have found works out here.

Q. It is that elementary test that the amendment to Section 22 of the Civil Service Act breaks down?—A. Yes.

By Mr. Ross (Middlesex):

Q. A man who could not do any of these things could be appointed by the head of a department under that section to any of these positions?—A. Yes, in the lower grade.

By the Chairman:

Q. If he was a returned overseas soldier?—A. Yes.

Q. What are you doing towards qualifying and fitting returned men for Civil Service employment?—A. Well, of course, we have no such function, except to test them when they profess to be ready to be tested.

Q. The Military Hospitals Commission are giving training at a number of points, I understand, under your advice?—A. Well, we have talked the matter over with the different centres. What I have said is this: These men come back to you covering all grades and subjects for all kinds of employment; you will find some who show by their character and industry tendencies which will be suitable for Civil Service positions; it should be your function to find—

Q. Certain selected men?—A. Yes, to go in for these positions, and then there are others who should go in for manual training or some other occupation. Because of your knowledge of these men, you have the opportunity to give suitable advice to them, and to give them the training. Then, when you declare them ready, we provide the machinery for examining them and certifying to the various Departments of the Civil Service that these men are qualified up to the various standards.

Q. In a normal year how many people are absorbed in the Civil Service?—A. In the Inside Service, about, probably a hundred in the third division; between forty and fifty in the second division, and perhaps about the same number in the other divisions.

Q. That is in the Departments at Ottawa?—A. Yes. And in the lower grade probably about one hundred.

Q. So that three hundred a year is about the normal absorption in Ottawa?—A. About that.

Q. And throughout the country at large, do you deal with the Outside Service?—A. We simply hold the examinations, but we have no knowledge of the number appointed.

Q. Are the returned soldiers to have the preference in the Outside Service as well?—A. Yes.

Q. I am trying to find out how many returned soldiers could be absorbed annually in both the Inside and Outside Service, how many would you think?—A. In the Inside Service, probably as you say, about 300 of all grades.

Q. That is males?—A. No, males and females. Of the three hundred appointments, seventy-five would represent males.

Q. Then, 75 to 100 would be the limit of returned soldiers that could be placed annually in the Inside Service?—A. Unless they replaced the women.

Q. And in the Outside Service have you any idea how many annual appointments are made?—A. No, we simply hold the examinations. We qualify, as a rule, about one thousand a year.

Q. As a means of finding employment for returned soldiers, the Civil Service offers a very limited absorptive power?—A. Yes.

[Dr. Adam Shortt.]

By Hon. Mr. Murphy:

Q. That is the Inside Service?—A. And the Outside, too, that is the regular Services only.

Q. What distinction do you draw between the "regular Services" and the others?—A. The three regular outside services are the Post Office, Customs and Inland Revenue. The outside employees of the Public Works, Railways and Canals, Justice, and all these Departments—

Q. Interior?—A. Yes,—are simply Government employees.

Q. In all these services there are a very large number of employees?—A. At present there are no tests for these, anybody can be appointed.

By the Chairman:

Q. That is known as the Outside Service?—A. No, I beg pardon, that is the Irregular or Miscellaneous Service.

Q. Have you any idea how many appointments are made in the Irregular Service?—A. No. It would be necessary to inquire of the different Departments to obtain that information. At any rate it is perfectly true that in the regular Service the number is very limited, and in the higher grades, embracing the highly specialized classes of official, the returned soldiers will present probably ten times as many fully qualified persons as can be taken in. That being the case, why should not the best of them be taken.

By Mr. Middlebro:

Q. Would it be proper that a man's service in military life should count in his Civil Service career?—A. We have stipulated with most of the Departments that in the matter of promotion the employee shall not suffer because he has gone to the front, and we have objected to certain promotions because they would seem to conflict with that policy.

Q. Then the Civil Servant's military service does count in the matter of promotion?—A. Yes.

By Hon. Mr. Murphy:

Q. You have no record of appointments made under section 22?—A. No. You would have to go to the Departments for that information.

By the Chairman:

Q. A suggestion was made here to-day, by Mr. Cameron, I think, that where a man applied for a position in the Civil Service and was selected, he should be given credit or the amount of time he had served in the Army. That is to say, if a man had served 18 months in the Army and should be admitted into the Civil Service, he should receive the pay to which he would be entitled after 18 months in the Civil Service?—A. That, perhaps, is feasible, but one of the difficulties to be overcome is this: Most of the returned soldiers who have been offered employment through our Board and have rejected it, have done so on the ground that they could not live on $40 a month. I think they are quite right.

Q. Suppose a returned soldier who is offered $40 a month had, say, his 18 months' military service recognized, what would his salary amount to?—A. It would be the difference between $500 and $550.

Q. It would be about $45 a month?—A. It would be about $44. The low salary is one of the difficulties we have to deal with now. We have never yet, I may say, obtained enough men in the third Division to fill the requirements of the Government at a salary of $500, the consequence being that women have had to take their places, and that is why we appoint to such positions two women to one man.

Q. Do you say that is because of the lowness of the salary?—A. Yes, because of the lowness of the salary.

[Dr. Adam Shortt.]

Q. Would it in your judgment, demoralize the Service to fix a minimum wage at which a soldier returned from service overseas might enter the Public Service?—A. Not at all. The Civil Service Commissioners think the minimum should be fixed.

Q. And raise it only for the returned soldier?—A. Not for the returned soldier only, but if my prediction is at all correct, the returned soldiers are the only class of people that will receive the advantage.

By Mr. Middlebro:

Q. What do you think of this suggestion, say in the case of a man who has spent three years in the Canadian Expeditionary Force, and who is admitted to the Civil Service: We will pay you the same salary as if you had already spent three years in the Civil Service?—A. Very well, but even if you do that it would only give him a salary of $600. In the bill which was interned at the outbreak of the war, the minimum was raised to $700 for the Third Division, and $1,000 for the Second Division, with corresponding increases in the other Divisions. $700 is certainly the minimum at which you could get men to come into the Service, and that should apply to the returned soldiers.

Q. You think the minimum should be raised?—A. Certainly, you will not get sufficiently qualified men to take the positions, returned soldiers or others, at the existing rates.

By Brigadier-General Mason:

Q. Women are coming in at those rates?—A. Yes. Women compete with the men at present. They take $500, and I am free to say plainly, that the most of them live at home; if they did not, most of them would starve.

AT THE GOVERNMENT HOUSE AT OTTAWA,

THURSDAY, the 12th day of October, 1916.

PRESENT:

His Excellency

The Deputy Governor General in Council.

His Excellency the Deputy Governor General in Council, in order to remove a doubt that has arisen concerning the applicability of the Order in Council of the 27th November, 1915 (P.C. 2758), to the Outside Service; to ensure throughout the whole Government Service the effective operation of the policy expressed in the said Order in Council; and to prevent the appointment of men eligible for military service except in cases of necessity, is pleased, in virtue of the authority of section 6 of the War Measures Act, 1914, to make the following regulations and the same are hereby made and established accordingly:—

1. (a) In making all appointments to the Civil Service, whether in the Inside or in the Outside Service, preference shall be given to those candidates who have served overseas in His Majesty's Forces during the present war, and who have been honourably discharged therefrom, especially to those who through disability occasioned by active military service are unable to fill their previous occupations.

[Dr. Adam Shortt.]

- (b) Heads of Departments, Deputy Heads of Departments and the Civil Service Commission shall, within their respective jurisdictions over appointments, be responsible for establishing systematic methods for ensuring that such preference is given.

The Civil Service Commissioners.

3. (a) During the continuance of the present war a candidate for examination for, and appointment to the Civil Service, whether in the Inside or in the Outside Service, shall not be ineligible by reason of the fact that his or her age is less than eighteen years, provided that his or her age is greater than sixteen years.

(b) During the continuance of the present war a candidate for examination for, and appointment to the Civil Service, whether in the Inside or in the Outside Service, who has served overseas in His Majesty's Forces and who has been honourably discharged therefrom, or to whom a badge has been issued under the provisions of the Order in Council of the 16th August, 1916 (P.C. 1944), shall not be ineligible by reason of the fact that his age is greater than thirty-five years.

4. During the continuance of the present war no male person of military age shall be appointed to the Civil Service, whether in the Inside or in the Outside Service, unless a badge has been issued to him under the provisions of the Order in Council of the 16th August, 1916 (P.C. 1944).

5. A candidate who has served overseas in His Majesty's Forces, and has been honourably discharged therefrom, shall not be required to pay a fee for admission to any of the several examinations held under the direction of the Civil Service Commission for admission to or promotion in the Civil Service, whether in the Inside or in the Outside Service.

6. The Orders in Council of the 27th November, 1915 (P.C. 2758), and of the 4th August, 1916 (P.C. 759), shall be and the same are hereby revoked.

Witness discharged.

Mr. JOSHUA ZIVIAN, 360 Laurier avenue west, Ottawa, called, sworn and examined.

By the Chairman:

Q. You are, at present, I understand, Secretary of the Canadian Association of Returned Soldiers?—A. Yes, sir, the Ottawa District.

Q. You have been good enough to remain here to-day, during the deliberations of the Committee, and have heard practically all the evidence that has been given. We would be very glad if you would give us the benefit of your experience with regard to the treatment of the returned soldiers and their grievances?—A. The chief grievance so far is the question of salary, and I am glad that Dr. Shortt was here and I appreciate the sentiments he expressed.

Q. You mean with reference to the salary at entrance into the Civil Service?—A. The salary of the Civil Service. In the first instance, at Ottawa, I do not believe that a single man can live under $750, or $800 a year, if he lives according to the statistics of the Government Labour Bureau for 1916, set out in the summary of statistics embodied in the report of the Committee regarding pensions. The Labour Bureau declared in that memorandum that a man could not live under $61.66 a month, which does not include fuel and light—I am not just certain with regard to that, but I think it is fuel and light anyway. Since 1915 the cost of living has increased so much that the statistics of the Government Labour Bureau must, at the present time, be correspondingly more, and yet the returned soldiers, or anybody else for the matter of that, but the returned soldiers especially, are offered the sum of $41.66 a month.

Q. To enter into the lowest class of the Civil Service?—A. Yes.

Q. From your experience you found they will not accept those positions?—A. From my experience, I have been doing my best to take them out of these positions at $41.66, and to put them into positions where they can get, if possible, a salary far exceeding that.

Q. This $41.66 a month is in the case of a man who has suffered partial disablement, in addition to the amount which he received as a pension?—A. But it has been said that the fact that a man is in receipt of a pension should not interfere with the amount of salary he is paid.

Q. As a matter of fact, does the Government give him any less than that $41.66 because he has a pension; that is the minimum salary paid by the Government to anybody?—A. It does not give him any less, but at the same time I will show you an instance where a man is now working in the employ of the Government, taking the position of a man who was getting between $1,000 and $1,100 a year. This man's right hand is useless; he was a machinist by trade before he enlisted, and now he is in receipt of $41.66 for his services. The man whose place he took, under the war appropriation, was getting between $1,000 and $1,100 a year. This man is now in receipt of a pension of $21 a month, so that altogether he would be getting $62.66 per month, but, I submit, that that man was a machinist before he enlisted, he was getting more than that when he enlisted, and in spite of the handicap he has to go through for the whole of the rest of his life because of the loss of the use of his right hand, even with the addition of the pension of $21 a month, he is not getting the salary he used to earn before he enlisted.

Q. Of course there is this side to that case, that if he had continued to work as a machinist, as he grew older in life he would earn less, and he would have no pension. He is now in the Civil Service, and he will have his pension up till the end?—A. But he is not in the Civil Service, in the position he now occupies, he is under the War Appropriation Act, and his employment is not permanent.

Q. Under the "War Appropriation Act," what do you mean by that?—A. Under the War Appropriation Act, his is only a temporary appointment. This was a young man who had good prospects for the future, and by the loss of that arm he is handicapped through the rest of his life. I do not think his prospects are nearly as good now as they were before: and besides he has lost his arm.

[Mr. Joshua Zivian ?

By Mr. Ross (Middlesex):

Q. The individual whom this man succeeded was getting $1,100 whereas the man you speak of is only being paid $500 for the same work; was there any difference in the employment?—A. Same work.

By the Chairman:

Q. Give us the name of that man, because we will investigate it?—A. R. H. Case, in the Department of the Interior. I might say the Department of the Interior have been very good in employing returned soldiers, and, in most cases, have given them a decent salary.

By Hon. Mr. Murphy:

Q. Is Case the name of the returned soldier?—A. Yes.

Q. Whom did he replace?—A. Gillespie.

Q. What did Gillespie do?—A. The same work that Case is doing. (For correction see Appendix, Exhibit I.)

Q. Immigration work?—A. No, stationery work. The Interior Department has been very good to returned soldiers and to our association.

By the Chairman:

Q. With regard to Case, was any attempt made on the part of the Hospitals Commission to re-educate him or re-train him for other work? You say he is a machinist and lost his trade?—A. Yes.

Q. Has he endeavoured to get an opportunity to learn a new trade?—A. No, sir. Well, most of the returned soldiers expect word through their association in the city and as we have had no correspondence from any of the institutions in the city regarding that, he does not know.

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. Was your association aware of the existence of these institutions prior to that time?—A. Oh, yes.

Q. But you had made no application to them for any of your men?—A. We knew about the vocational training, and any cases that came up in the course of events we certainly did make application to the authorities whom we thought could handle the matter.

Q. Have they taken your men on and re-educated them, or given them vocational training?—A. I am not aware of any one having been re-educated in the city, although I understand that those in the convalescent hospitals now are being given the advantage of that.

Q. Have any of your requests ever been refused for re-education or vocational training?—A. Never.

Q. They have taken on any that you have asked them to?—A. We have never refused.

By the Chairman:

Q. Don't you think, Mr. Zivian, that instead of your Soldiers' Association, which is a very limited opportunity to place men, trying to do this work, you should put the responsibility on the organization that has been created for that purpose? Why don't you leave these men to the Soldiers' Aid Association?—A. Of course, that brings up an old subject that has been threshed out, but no really definite understanding has been arrived at. Our association is composed entirely of returned men; they want to stay together; they have been together in England and at the front, and they still—

Q. For social purposes, you mean?—A. Not only for social purposes, but for fraternal purposes and mutual benefits.

Q. Yes?—A. And this association is all over Canada, from coast to coast, and it has been formed for the purpose of fraternal benefits.

Q. Just like a lodge?—A. Well, not necessarily like a lodge. They expect the country—the State—to do something for them, for those who are disabled, and one of the results was vocational training, and so on.

Q. The State, as we understand, has created an organization and provided for its support in the province of Ontario, which is known as the Soldiers' Aid Commission. Why does your organization not leave men who need training to the Soldiers' Aid Commission? Why do you, without facilities to undertake it, do what they are expected to do and have the facilities for doing?—A. As I said before, the men want to come to their own association.

Q. Very good.—A. And if they possibly can do so they would rather come to that than to any other outside organization.

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. Let me ask one question: Suppose the man you spoke of could have been re-educated and made to earn $70 a month; would he rather take $41 in this work and be fraternally with you, or take $70 after his re-education?—A. If he was re-educated that does not mean that he need necessarily break away from our organization.

Q. That is exactly what we are coming at. Why would you not make application to the Military Hospitals Commission in order to have that man re-educated?—A. I would make application to the commission if he asked me to. But I think the commission should send a notice out to each man.

By the Chairman:

Q. Don't you think, being in the position you are in as secretary of this association, that one of the first things that you would do would be to get an organization together that would help your returned men?—A. Yes.

Q. In order to help them, would you not go to the source where help may best be found? Don't you think the work the commission is doing is worth your association taking up?—A. Yes.

Q. Then why not communicate with them?—A. Well, I have no objection, or the men have no objections, to communicating with anybody in order to better their condition, far from it, but at the same time, the wishes of the men must be consulted.

Q. What are their wishes now?—A. I am speaking of the man as an individual not of the men as a body.

Q. What are their wishes, what do they want to do?—A. For instance, a certain man has lost an arm, say his left arm, and he is not willing to take a position at $70 a month, which in the ordinary routine is what they would educate him for.

Q. That is for them to say. Can you not state what the men want?—A. Well we have suggestions as to how provision should be made for the returned soldier for instance, such as engaging in poultry farming.

By Mr. Ross (Middlesex):

Q. Will they accept those suggestions?—A. Yes. Our object is to forward to the authorities some of these suggestions. Now, in connection with the land settlement scheme which has been talked of, I would suggest the adoption of poultry farming, but of course you realize that the man must be fit to go into anything like that.

Q. Just one more question: Suppose the land settlement scheme is determined on, and you continue to receive returned disabled soldiers whom re-education would put on their feet again, will you wait until the land settlement scheme becomes effective, or will you immediately open communication with the Military Hospitals Commission and see what can be done for your members?—A. Certainly I would send any man to the Military Hospitals Commission. I would advise him to go to them for his own good, not simply because the land settlement scheme is in abeyance but because of the good he would derive from the education given by the Military Hospitals Commission.

[Mr. Joshua Zivian.]

By the Chairman:

Q. Which would you regard as of greater importance, the building up of your association or seeing that each individual man gets the best opportunity in respect to education?—A. We expect to build up the organization of our association by means of the influence spoken of in the end of your question.

Q. It would seem to me that in your opinion the other aim was the more important?—A. Not at all.

Q. According to the arguments you have made you would rather put the returned soldier into a $40 job yourselves than have the Soldiers' Aid Commission find him a $75 position?—A. Oh, no, not at all, you have got me wrong there. I don't care who gives him the position, as long as he gets one at a salary on which he is able to live.

Q. That is, your organization is quite willing to send the returned soldier to the proper authorities so that they may do all they can for him?—A. Yes.

Q. Is that what you are doing?—A. Certainly.

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. Then what do you mean by saying that the returned soldier would rather go to one of his own?—A. What I mean is, the returned soldier will realize the position of a comrade more than an outsider, and will have more sympathy with him.

Q. Quite so?—A. And, as a natural result, that returned soldier to whom he applies will try to do his utmost to put him in as good a position as possible. Now, the Soldiers' Aid Commission are, I understand, it is only a natural inference, trying to do exactly the same thing.

By Mr. Middlebro:

Q. Who organized first, your association or the Soldiers' Aid Commission?—A. The Soldiers' Aid Commission, certainly.

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. I want to understand this matter quite clearly. Messrs. Scammell and Kidner have charge of the school, conducted by the Military Hospitals Commission?—A. Yes.

Q. Do you know whether that school is in existence?—A. Yes, I know it is in existence.

Q. Have you, as secretary of the Returned Soldiers' Association, taken the trouble to find out what kind of training or education is given?—A. No, I have not taken the trouble for the simple reason that I am working, and my services to the Soldiers' Association are voluntary, and I have not got time to keep in touch with everything.

Q. I am not finding fault with you, I am trying to find out what the soldiers really want. Now, as secretary of the Soldiers' Association you knew of the school conducted by the Military Hospitals Commission, and you knew what the men I have mentioned were doing?—A. Yes.

Q. Then, have you made any effort to have any returned soldier re-educated?—A. Yes.

Q. Whom?—A. We had a man, I have forgotten what his name is. We had the man that Capt. Macpherson referred to in his evidence this morning, the man who had been an excellent engineer.

Q. What happened, did you correspond with these people?—A. I did not correspond, but it was brought to their attention personally.

Q. By whom?—A. I am not quite certain.

Q. By the returned soldier?—A. I believe it was the Soldiers' Aid Association.

Q. Was anything done with him, do you know?—A. Nothing was done with him.

Q. Was the application refused?—A. I understand they did not have the necessary facilities to tackle it.

Q. They did not have the facilities for the sort of thing he wanted?—A. For the sort of thing he wanted. In regard to that man I may say that he was sent to a position in the Government Service, he has six or seven children, and he was offered $41.66 per month, which, of course, he refused; he came back to our association, and we placed him at $70.

Q. I am not talking about that, what became of the application that was made to have this man re-educated?—A. I do not know anything about that.

Q. Is that the only man you have made application for?—A. Yes.

Q. Why have you not made application for more?—A. I suppose that an application will be made for a number of these things in the future, but, I submit that the Hospitals Commission, or the Vocational Training people, should let us know all about these things so that we can submit it to our members.

Q. Do you not think that, as you are doing this very exemplary work, you should find out what can be done for the returned men?—A. We are trying to find out.

Q. But you know now what can be done?—A. I know about this vocational training.

Q. But you have not made any effort at all, along that line. When the man came to you you got him a job in the Civil Service?—A. Who got him a job?

Q. You or your association?—A. We did not get that for him, it was in his own home town he got the position.

Q. Are there any other men in your association who are in the same position, men with maimed legs or arms?—A. I would not say there are many of them, they are partially disabled.

Q. Are they 20 per cent worse off than they were before?—A. Most of them, yes.

Q. Are there many men who are in this condition who ought to be re-educated?—A. No, quite a number of them were just labourers before; of course, there will be no re-education to put them in the same position they were in before, but at the same time, they might be educated to do something.

Q. So that there may be prospects for application by them for this vocational re-educational work?—A. They may apply.

Q. How many of them have you out of employment, do you know?—A. I placed one of the men, I believe there are three out of employment—I would not say they are out of employment, but they are expecting their discharge, and we are looking out for positions for them.

Q. Are there any of those who might take advantage of these opportunities?—A. Yes.

Q. Will you make application for them?—A. Yes.

Q. No doubt you will?—A. Yes.

Q. When you told us you wanted to keep together for fraternal purposes, you did not mean that the Returned Soldiers' Association wanted to place all your returned men yourselves; you were quite content to have them placed as outlined here?—A. Yes. My complaint is only incidental.

Q. So that your association is not in antagonism to the other association?—A. Not at all, no sir.

Q. You are a returned soldier?—A. I must be, to be a member of the association.

Q. And you are on pension now?—A. My pension is under consideration.

Q. How long have you been back?—A. For a long while, last year.

Q. What is the matter with the pension?—A. I do not know, however, it has been taken up by the Pension Board, and I expect results from it.

Q. How long has it been under consideration?—A. It is just a matter of about two weeks.

By the Chairman:

Q. When you passed through the Board of Discharge at Quebec you were not rated as to the degree of disability?—A. Yes.

Q. What was the rating?—A. I think it was 80 per cent.

[Mr. Joshua Zivian.]

By Hon. Mr. Murphy:

Q. You stated that the application for a pension did not come before the Board until about two weeks ago; what was the reason of the delay?—A. I made no application for a pension. They should have sent me a form of application, but they did not: That was in the old time, and I neglected to apply for a form, it was my fault.

Q. Are you in the service of the Government now?—A. Yes.

Q. In what Department,—Militia?—A. No, the Interior Department.

Witness discharged.

Mr. E. R. CAMERON (recalled): I am filing all the material asked for by the Committee excepting the proportion of enlisted soldiers who had only been in Canada a short time. We have not that material, but the secretary said it was a negligible quantity.

Witness discharged.

CANADIAN ASSOCIATION OF RETURNED SOLDIERS.

OTTAWA DISTRICT, H.Q., 194 Sparks Street.

OTTAWA, ONT., March 5, 1917.

Sir HERBERT AMES,
Chairman, Parliamentary Committee,
On Returned Soldiers.

SIR,—I beg to inform you that I made a mistake in my evidence before the Committee on Returned Soldiers on Friday afternoon when speaking regarding a returned soldier named R. H. Case, who was supposed to have taken the place of an employee by the name of Gillespie.

The position was formerly held by a permanent Civil Service employee by the name of Frederick William Carson, who, when he left the position to go overseas, was in the receipt of a salary of $1,100.

The mistake occurred by the fact that Gillespie took the place of Carson originally and after some time in that position he also enlisted. The vacancy was then filled by Mr. Case.

Trusting sir, that this part of the evidence will be corrected,

I have the honour to be, sir,

Your obedient servant,

J. ZIVIAN,
Secretary.

MINUTES OF EVIDENCE.

WINDSOR HOTEL, MONTREAL,
ROOM 129,

THURSDAY, MARCH 15, 1917.

The Committee met at 10 a.m., the Chairman, Sir Herbert Ames, presiding.

Major General EURASTUS WILLIAM WILSON, General Officer Commanding Military District No. 4, called, sworn and examined.

By the Chairman:

Q. Will you describe briefly to us the organization of No. 4 Military District, with a view particularly of showing us where the medical work, or rather the medical work and the disciplinary work, comes under your control?—A. The organization of this military district is the same as that of all the other military districts. We have an Assistant Director of Medical Service here who has charge of all the medical work under the Director General of Medical Service at Ottawa. He deals with medical examinations and other matters of that kind.

Q. What is your relationship to the Army Medical Corps, or to a unit of the Army Medical Corps?—A. All those departments come under the General Officer Commanding for discipline and administration. That is, any communication from the medical department to the Militia Council must go through the General Officer Commanding to make him familiar with what is being done.

Q. Would you explain, for example, the relation of Dr. Mackenzie Forbes and Dr. Patch to you?—A. Dr. Mackenzie Forbes has no relation with me whatever, excepting should something arise from a disciplinary point of view. He is under the Military Hospitals Commission. Dr. Patch is directly under me, and receives his instructions through me from the Militia Council. Sometimes he receives them from his own superior officer.

Q. What is the difference between the classes of patients handled by Dr. Mackenzie Forbes and by Dr. Patch?—A. I cannot answer that question, I do not know sufficient about the matter.

Q. Which class of soldiers come under your general supervision, the men going out or those coming back?—A. The men going out are the ones we pay the most attention to.

Q. To what extent are the men coming back under your direction or control?—A. Only when they come under the administration of Colonel Patch.

Q. We will get that information more particularly when Colonel Patch is on the witness stand. I would now ask you to file for the record a list of the Battalions raised in No. 4 District and their strength on going overseas?—A. I have that all prepared, I have given full details not only of the battalions, but all the units.

Q. You might tell us briefly the limits of No. 4 District?—A. I could not enumerate them from memory.

Q. How far west does it go? Up to the border of Ontario?—A. It goes to the border of Ontario, and it runs from around Sherbrooke, Richmond, Yamaska—.

Q. As far as Three Rivers?—A. Yes, it takes in Three Rivers.

Q. And how far up the Ottawa does it go?—A. It goes right up the Ottawa, right to the North Pole, I think.

Q. It takes in Argenteuil and Pontiac?—A. Yes.

Q. As far as Lake Temiscaming?—A. Yes.

[Major-General Wilson.]

By Hon Mr. Marcil:

Q. It is important that we should have the boundaries of the district?—A. If I had the Militia List here, or a map, I could show you the boundaries; but I cannot from memory answer such a question as that.

The CHAIRMAN: You might fyle, simply for the information of the Committee, a statement showing the area and the population of the district.

By the Chairman:

Q. You have a statement of the list of units raised, their strength on leaving, and the detail of the number of the men sent overseas?—A. Yes.

Q. You might fyle that for the information of the Committee. How many men have returned who were sent from No. 4 District?—A. How many have returned?

Q. How many returned soldiers have come back to No. 4 District from Overseas?—A. Approximately 1,580.

Q. Have you any figures that would show what proportion of those are casualties, and what proportion of those are misfits?—A. It is impossible for me to tell that; no information is furnished by Headquarters, except that a certain number of men were killed, wounded, or missing, according to the date the casualty happens; the various districts are not shown separately.

Q. But 1,580 men have so far returned?—A. That is approximately, as near as we could get it.

Q. Do you know how many of these men had been to the front, and how many of them returned from England?—A. That is impossible to tell; we have received no information from Ottawa of the number of men who have been returned having never reached France.

Q. And you cannot tell us what proportion have come back from France, and what proportion have come back from England?—A. No.

Q. How many men have you sent overseas to date from No. 4 District?—A. 1,393 officers and 27,980 men, out of which approximately 1,580 have been returned.

Q. You sent 27,980 men, out of which number 1,580 have returned?—A. Yes.

Q. And you do not know how many of those were discharged as medically unfit?—A. No, sir.

By Mr. Middlebro:

Q. Can you tell me how many men have enlisted in District No. 4?—A. Yes, the list I gave you just now shows that. The total number of enlistments were 1,649 officers and 35,652 of other ranks.

By the Chairman:

Q. Making a total 37,301?—A. I have not totalled them up—yes, 37,301.

By Hon. Mr. Marcil:

Q. Are those figures shown by years?—A. No, sir, those are since the commencement of the war until February 28, 1917, when the list was made up.

By the Chairman:

Q. Then 37,301 men have enlisted, of which 27,980 officers and men have gone across?—A. Exactly.

Q. How many men have you here at present?—A. According to this list those discharged and struck off strength were 40 officers and 5,028 men.

Q. That is, there are practically 5,028 men, representing those medically unfit, those discharged, and desertions?—A. That accounts for all casualties as shown on the statement.

[Major-General Wilson.]

Q. There should be about 5,000 men in the district now ready to go?—A. No, there were stationed in the district on the 28th of February last 216 officers and 2,644 men.

Q. General Wilson, does the figure of 27,980 that you gave as having gone overseas include both officers and men?—A. No, sir. There were 1,393 officers and 27,980 men.

Q. That would give a total of 29,373 men who have gone overseas. That leaves a difference of 7,928 officers and men. You say that you have 5,068 struck off as medically unfit, and 2,860 here as present?—A. Exactly.

Q. Making a total of 7,928. So that the total enlistment from District No. 4 was 37,301 of whom 29,373 have gone overseas, including officers; 5,068 have been struck off the list; and 2,860 are here at present expecting to go overseas?—A. Exactly.

Q. Does that 2,860 include Special Service Companies?—A. No, I do not think so. We put the Special Service Companies in a complete regiment, they are simply doing guard duty.

Q. The 2,860 are regarded as men eligible for overseas service?—A. Exactly.

By Mr. Bennett:

Q. That seems hardly correct. The total of the discharged men and of those who have gone overseas makes 37,301. The total enlistment included the Special Service Companies, therefore they must be included?—A. That might be. They simply represent 2 officers and 94 men, a number that is not very material.

The CHAIRMAN: Does the committee wish to ask General Wilson any further questions with reference to enlisting? We will ask Dr. Patch more particularly about the medically unfit. Will you tell us General Wilson, about the Special Service Company, its number, strength and duties, and how many may be expected to be fit for overseas service?—A. Well the total February 28, would be that there were two officers and 94 of other ranks, and they were distributed at that date as follows: Eleven of them were doing garrison military police work, 52 on picquet and guard duty, seven men in hospital, nine men as clerks and orderlies, 13 men doing fatigues and furnaces and five deserters.

Q. How many of those men will become fit for overseas service?—A. That I am unable to answer.

Q. Do you anticipate any considerable number?—A. I do not think so.

Q. You do not regard that Special Service Company then as liable to assist recruiting to any great extent by getting men?—A. No. You asked a question about how many of those men might be sent overseas. It would depend altogether on the unit you were going to draft them into. I do not think there will be any of them fit for an infantry or artillery unit.

Q. That is a combatant unit?—A. No; but some of them may possibly be fit to go with those units that do not have such a high standard of physical fitness.

Q. Forestry units?—A. Yes.

Q. And Railway units?—A. Yes, there may be a certain percentage of them there.

Q. Do you know how many of them are under or over age?—A. I do not.

Q. How about a man being released from a special service company. What is your procedure in that respect?—A. These men are released under headquarters authority wherein it lies within the power of the general officer commanding the district, on the recommendation of the officer commanding the unit, to discharge any man who is not likely to be fit for overseas service, or if he is not likely to make an efficient soldier for duties here, also for family reasons. It is considered that none of these men will become fit for overseas service, but those who had minor defects were transferred to units whose lower physical standard would permit of their being taken such as Forestry and Railroad Construction Units. The principal causes of unfitness of these men are hernia, flat feet, and weakness of heart. In most cases these defects should have been discovered by the doctors making the original examination. We have discharged quite a number of them when they have applied for it.

Q. Supposing a man with a large family enlists, intending to go overseas, and after being enlisted is found incapable of going overseas, and is sent to the Special Service Corps; would you release him on the ground that he had a large family to support and had been disappointed in not being allowed to go over?—A. If he applied for it, yes.

By Hon. Mr. Marcil:

Q. Is there any distinction made now in the class of men recruited from what there was the first year of the war?—A. Not to my knowledge. The standard is a little higher for infantry; in some cases it has been lowered. I think we have lowered the standard for overseas.

Q. You are not excluding any particular class because they belong to any special trade or calling, but enlist all who come forward who are qualified?—A. Concessions have been granted in certain cases where men are filling certain occupations, it was thought possible their duties here were of more importance than their duties as soldiers would be.

Q. Was that done under instructions from the Department, or was it optional with the officers?—A. The Department gave the authority to do it.

Q. Do you know if any considerable number has been refused enlistment on the ground that their services would be more useful here?—A. No.

Q. If a man enlists in Montreal, is he credited to Montreal if he comes from one of the rural parts of the province?—A. We only enlist in No. 4 Military District.

Q. That comprises a large number of rural districts?—A. Yes, quite so. Montreal happened to be the headquarters of this district, but if he comes from one of the counties, on his attestation papers his address and all information that is required to tell where the recruit arises is given.

Q. He is credited to the district?—A. He belongs to the district. If any more details are required we will be glad to furnish them.

By Mr. Bennett:

Q. There is no difficulty, if you have the slips, in ascertaining what counties the men come from?—A. Not the slightest.

Q. It is only a question of taking the necessary time to go over the nominal roll and you can determine the number of men that come from any county in Canada. There is no particular trouble involved?—A. No trouble at all.

By the Chairman:

Q. There has been some criticism, General Wilson, with respect to a hiatus in pay between the time of a man's discharge and the time he commences to draw his pension. Have you had any complaints from discharged men whose pensions have been delayed?—A. I have a recollection of one or two instances where unintentionally men were discharged before their pension was arranged, but the matter was adjusted afterwards.

Hon. Mr. MURPHY: That difficulty has been adjusted by an amended Order in Council.

Mr. BENNETT: The new Order in Council prevents any such cases now.

The WITNESS: Exactly.

By Mr. Bennett:

Q. There is no question now of delay?—A. No.

The CHAIRMAN: I was going to bring out the fact that while there may have been some delay in the past it has presumably been rectified as far as the future is concerned?

The WITNESS: Yes, sir.

[Major-General Wilson.]

By the Chairman:

Q. Can you tell us briefly what the machinery is which discharges a man from military service?—A. For example, if a man is medically unfit—

Q. Who discharges him and what constitutes the discharge?—A. The authority which comes from the General Officer Commanding the District to the officer commanding the unit.

Q. And does every man who is discharged in No. 4 District have to be discharged by you?—A. Oh, no.

Q. Who do you delegate that authority to?—A. To the officer commanding the unit.

Q. The officer commanding the unit can make the discharge?—A. Exactly.

Q. I wanted to find out the source of authority in discharging a man. Now, will you tell us, General Wilson, whether Major Hall, of the Grey Nuns' Convalescent Home, is under your direction?—A. Major Hall is under me, like all other officers in this district, for discipline only.

Q. He receives his instructions for the administration of his unit from the Military Hospitals Commission, but he is under your joint authority in a way?—A. If anything arises in connection with matters of discipline among the men it has to come to me.

By Hon. Mr. Murphy:

Q. For the benefit of those who do not know the gentleman, who is Major Hall?—A. Major Hall was an officer in the artillery here, who was appointed Officer in charge of "A" unit of Military Hospitals Commission with headquarters in Montreal.

Q. What position did he occupy in civil life?—A. He was employed by the C.P.R.

Q. Is he an engineer or a man with technical experience?—A. I believe he was employed in the office at the Windsor Depot.

By the Chairman:

Q. Major Hall is the Military Hospitals Commission command officer in charge of the Grey Nuns' Hospital. I am trying to find out under whom Major Hall comes, whether under the Military Hospitals Commission or under you, because this will lead up to another question. By what authority are the regulations governing the hours that men at the Grey Nuns' Hospital may be out on leave, and the treatment accorded to men who have misbehaved themselves when on leave, carried out?—A. That matter has never been submitted to me.

Q. What authority has the power to determine what hours the men at the Grey Nuns' Convalescent Home shall be permitted to go out and what hours they shall not be permitted to go out?—A. I cannot answer that question because I do not know.

Q. Then it has never come under your cognizance?—A. It has never been submitted to me. Any orders of that kind that are in force have been issued by Major Hall, I presume.

Q. On his own responsibility?—A. I cannot say as to that. The orders may have come from the Military Hospitals Commission.

Q. You have at the Grey Nuns' Convalescent Hospital a large number of camp cases?—A. Camp cases?

Q. Yes.—A. Oh, yes.

Q. They are not under the Military Hospitals Commission at all?—A. No.

Q. Who makes the rules that govern the hours of these camp cases?—A. I beg your pardon, I do not think we have any camp cases there now.

Q. Yes, there are some at the Grey Nuns' Convalescent Hospital.—A. Colonel Patch can tell you as to that.

Q. What I want to find out is the source of authority for the disciplinary measures enforced on the men at the Grey Nuns' Hospital?—A. I do not know that. The administration there has been carried on without reference to me. As far as my knowledge goes, nothing bearing on that matter has been submitted to me.

[Major-General Wilson.]

Q. Suppose the men who are convalescing at the Grey Nuns' Hospital were dissatisfied with the regulations with respect to their hours of leave, and the hours at which they were permitted to go outside the institution, to whom should they complain?—A. They should complain, I imagine, to Major Hall.

Q. Would Major Hall have the authority to decide entirely, or would he have to refer the matter to another officer?—A. Well, you know it is the privilege of the soldier to make an appeal to a higher authority.

Q. To whom should he appeal?—A. He should come to me if it is a matter bearing on discipline.

Q. Have any complaints come to you from the convalescents in the Grey Nuns' Hospital with regard to the hours of leave they are permitted to take?—A. The matter has never been submitted to me.

By Mr. Bennett:

Q. I think possibly you misunderstood the question. From the standpoint of discipline, every man who wears a uniform in this military district is supposed to be subject to you? That is the theory?—A. That is the theory.

Q. In practice, the Military Hospitals Commission has the control of these officers, is that not so?—A. Yes.

Q. And you have nothing to do with that administration as such?—A. Quite so.

Q. Major Hall is the head of Unit "A" of the Military Hospitals Commission?—A. Yes.

Q. Occupying in that connection, what you might term a position of supreme importance in the matter of administration, that is right, is it not?—A. He is the Officer Commanding.

Q. And exercises all the powers of an officer commanding?—A. Exactly.

Q. And his instructions come from the Military Hospitals Commission?—A. So far as I know.

Q. So that in practice you have nothing whatever to do with the administration of the Military Hospitals Commission?—A. That is correct.

Q. Major Hall, as the officer commanding this unit, is in supreme control of administration?—A. Yes.

By Mr. Ross (Middlesex):

Q. I suppose that as Officer Commanding this district you would be as closely in touch with the returned soldier as any officer in Canada?—A. No, sir. As Officer Commanding this district I devote my whole time and attention to securing and training men to go overseas and fight. The returned soldiers are under the care of the Military Hospitals Commission, or the medical department. I have not the time to supervise the care of returned soldiers. I give my whole attention to recruiting and training the soldiers and getting them overseas.

By Mr. Bennett:

Q. The Military Hospitals Commission was created in order to relieve you of the responsibility connected with the returned soldier. (No answer.)

By Mr. Ross (Middlesex):

Q. Have you any suggestions to make to this Committee that will tend to improve the lot of the returned soldier when he gets back to this country?—A. I am sorry that I am unable to meet your wishes, but I have every confidence that Colonel Patch and his staff, and also Colonel Busteed, who comes into personal contact with returned soldiers, will be able to give you the benefit of their experience and good advice. As far as I am personally concerned, I am unable to do that.

[Major-General Wilson.]

CANADIAN GOVERNMENT RAILWAYS.

By Mr. Middlebro:

Q. Have you any complaints to make with respect to the present management of the treatment of the returned soldier?—A. Do you mean of the Military Hospitals Commission?

Q. I mean with respect to the care of returned soldiers in any way at all?—A. I have nothing to state in that connection at all. If there is such information to be got it will probably emanate from the officers of the department as they come along.

Q. Have you had any complaint from the soldiers of their treatment on their return?—A. No. No complaints have come to me either directly or indirectly.

By Hon. Mr. Marcil:

Q. Have they written to you at all making complaint?—A. No. I have heard some verbal complaints.

By the Chairman:

Q. That would be cases of citizens who came to you and claimed that certain cases of hardship existed?—A. There was one case of that kind, but the remedy was applied as soon as the matter was brought to my attention.

Q. This is a pertinent question: All such complaints which you have had have been investigated, have they not?—A. Most certainly.

By Hon. Mr. Marcil:

Q. How many units are in course of formation in No. 4 District now?—A. We have had 25 units recruiting in this District.

Q. At the present time how many are still in course of formation?—A. They are all still here.

Q. You are recruiting for all the corps formed in this District?—A. They do not all belong here. There are half a dozen units recruiting here for other Districts. For example, the Forestry Battalion, the Railway Construction Corps, and detachments like that.

By Brigadier-General Mason:

Q. I see you have given the number struck off the strength of regiments?—A. The number discharged or struck off amounts to 40 officers and 5,028 men.

Q. Why were they struck off the strength and discharged?—A. They were discharged after having undergone examination before a Medical Board and been found unfit, or they would be deserters.

Q. Can you classify these men in any way?—A. That can be done.

Q. Now when men are struck off as medically unfit, that would be the fault of the examining surgeon, of course, in accepting them?—A. In the first place, but not always. Cases have been known where men have passed in the first place, and have been subsequently thrown down.

Q. They were discovered to be medically unfit?—A. Something had developed.

By Mr. Middlebro:

Q. About what proportion of that 5,068 were desertions?—A. I will get that for you.

By Brigadier-General Mason:

Q. You might classify them giving those discharged as medically unfit, those who deserted and those who were struck off for other reasons?—A. I will do so.

By Hon. Mr. Daniel:

Q. I understand, General Wilson, that you are the Commanding Officer of this District, is that correct?—A. That is correct.

Q. Supposing the Chief Medical Officer for your district wishes to get a hospital in this district, what is the course that he pursues? Does he send his communication to Headquarters through you?—A. Yes.

Q. And it goes from the Medical Officer to the Assistant Director General?—A. That would go from me to the Militia Council.

Q. You send it direct to the Militia Council, and the Militia Council have the authority to order the expenditure?—A. Yes.

Q. And they are the only people who have that authority. Who composes the Militia Council? I do not want the names, but tell me if there is a member of the Headquarters Medical staff, on that Council?—A. I do not think so—the Director-General does not belong does he?

Q. I am asking if there is any representative of the Medical Department on the Militia Council?—A. I do not think there is.

Q. The consequence is, I suppose, there is a great deal of delay, is there not, in getting expenditures for Medical purposes through the Militia Council?—A. I would not think that would necessitate any delay at all, sir.

Q. As a matter of fact, do you know whether there is delay or not?—A. I have no knowledge.

Q. Colonel Marlow, in his evidence, stated that he was for a long time endeavouring to get a base hospital in Toronto, and that it took a great many months before he could get one—what I am trying to get at is whether the delay is due to the fact that there is no Medical representative on the Militia Council?—A. I would not think so, and we have not experienced any such delay.

Q. I am merely quoting the evidence of the A.D.M.S.; you think there is no delay?—A. Not in so far as this particular district is concerned.

Q. In so far as this district is concerned there has not been?—A. Exactly.

Q. As far as you know the delay only occurred in the Toronto district?—A. I do not know anything about the Toronto District.

Q. Do you know anything about the Hospitals Commission part of it?—A. No, sir.

Q. You have never had to deal with that?—A. No, sir.

Q. Will you tell me this, who commands the Militia?—A. The Governor General is the Commander in Chief of the Forces.

Q. His Excellency does not give orders, does he?—A. The orders are issued by the Militia Council, through the Adjutant-General.

Q. Then the Militia Council commands?—A. I would say the Chief of the General Staff, and the Adjutant-General.

Q. What about the Minister of Militia?—A. He is the Civil Head.

Q. What about the highest rank General, that is General Sir Sam Hughes? Does he command in view of his seniority?—A. Lieutenant-General Sir Sam Hughes was a soldier before he was Minister of Militia, so it happens that he took an active interest in the administration, outside of the Department at Ottawa.

Q. So that he really did command the Militia, did he not, when he was Minister of Militia?—A. I would think so—

Q. Did he command it in view of his rank, or in view of his position as Minister?
Mr. MIDDLEBRO: What has this to do with the returned soldiers?

Witness discharged.

Lieutenant-Colonel F. S. PATCH, called, sworn and examined.

By the Chairman:

Q. You might state, briefly, your position, your duties, and something regarding those with whom you work?—A. I am Assistant Director of Medical Services, in charge of the medical administration of this district, No. 4. I have charge of this branch of the work, and report to the General Officer Commanding, through the Assistant Adjutant-General of this district.

Q. Do you report to Colonel Potter or to Colonel Thompson?—A. I do not report directly to Colonel Potter, I report through the General Officer Commanding to the Secretary of the Militia Council, who, if it is a medical matter, will refer it to the Assistant Adjutant-General at Headquarters and it goes thence to Colonel Potter. I have nothing to do with Colonel Thompson.

Q. Have you anything to do with the Military Hospitals Commission?—A. Indirectly.

Q. You are not under them?—A. No, sir.

Q. Have you been in charge of the examination of recruits for No. 4 District?—A. From the date of my appointment as A.D.M.S., April 24, 1915, to May 29, 1916, and from January 2, 1917 to date. I was A.D.M.S. here and responsible.

Q. Can you give us any light regarding the 5,068 men who were struck off?—A. I can give you the general figures.

Q. As to the reasons?—A. As to why so many cases of unfitness occurred? My connection with the Valcartier camp from May 29, 1916, to the end of camp, gave me a better opportunity of seeing, and of realizing what were the underlying causes of so many men being rejected.

By Brigadier-General Mason:

Q. You said May, 1916?—A. I was A.D.M.S. at Valcartier, and returned to duty here on January 2, of this year. There are a number of factors which are responsible for the rejection of men; the first thing was, I think, the great interest on the part of the recruiting officers and the commanding officers to get men; and there is also to be taken into consideration in that connection the fact that we had to use civilian practitioners as medical examining officers in some parts of the districts. The result of that was that undoubtedly in the earlier days men were taken in who were manifestly unfit in a military sense, and not in accordance with the regulations. Once the man was in, there was a great deal of difficulty in getting him out because neither the commanding nor the recruiting officer wanted to lose their men.

Q. They put obstacles in the way?—A. They made it very difficult to get rid of them. The first winter, 1914-15, recruits were so numerous as to make it fairly easy to get fit men, but in 1915-16, the question of getting men was a little more difficult; there were a great many units authorized, and there was a great deal of competition between the officers to get their battalions up to strength. The consequence was that a great number of the men who enlisted during the winter of 1915-16, when we got them into camps and in the large centres, where we could examine them, were found to be unfit.

By Mr. Ross (Middlesex):

Q. Were not the regulations relaxed when that occurred?—A. The only relaxation so far as that is concerned is in connection with eyesight.

Q. In the winter of 1915-16, as a matter of fact, was the examination as thorough as it had been previously?—A. It should have been.

By Hon. Mr. Murphy:

Q. Was it? (No answer.)

28277—26½

[Lieut.-Colonel F. S. Patch.]

By Mr. Bennett:

Q. There was no official direction to the contrary?—A. The regulations as they existed at first were the regulations for the Permanent Force, Canada, and they were the strictest of all.

Q. Yes, and practically they got more strict as time went on, as the officers became more proficient in the examinations?—A. Yes, from reports coming from overseas, we realized the necessity of the men being fit in a military and not merely in a civil capacity. A man is fit in a civil capacity and not in a military capacity, and in that case he cannot stand the strain of the trenches.

By Brigadier-General Mason:

Q. As I understand it, a recruit would be accepted locally and then when taken to Valcartier Camp would be again medically examined?—A. In 1915-16, under instructions from Headquarters, the examination of the practitioner, or of the medical officer in the regiment, was considered satisfactory.

By Mr. Ross (Middlesex):

Q. The recruit did not go before a Board at all?—A. In this District, we started what we call the Central Examining Board in Montreal, in the fall of 1915, to which every man, no matter where examined, had to be brought.

By the Chairman:

Q. Have you found that the percentage of men subsequently discharged as medically unfit has been less since that Board was constituted? In other words, has that Board made an improvement?—A. It has made an improvement in the men that came before the Board. The difficulty was in ensuring that Commanding Officers paraded their men before the Board.

Q. Did any units go overseas from here without being boarded?—A. No, sir, not one. In the winter of 1915-16 we had travelling Boards going out, but usually when we came to a place where there were say, 100 men, there might be 50 men away recruiting. I do not mean to infer that these 50 included all the unfit men in that unit. Before the men went overseas, we had really got rid of the unfit as far as this District and Valcartier Camp are concerned.

By Hon. Mr. Marcil:

Q. What percentage have you found unfit?—A. I have not the latest figures. In 1915, it was 40 per cent of men rejected in Montreal.

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. Was it as great as 40 per cent subsequently?—A. I do not think so; probably 25 to 33½ per cent. I have not the figures for 1914.

Q. Your Board has made a difference of 15 per cent?—A. The standard of recruits offering the first time was very much higher.

Q. Were the local medical men who first examined recruits paid so much per head?—A. As far as this District was concerned they were mostly examined by the medical officer of the regiment.

Q. Were they paid?—A. Yes, the pay of their rank.

Q. At the first were they not examined by the doctors in their vicinity, who were paid so much for each recruit passed?—A. Not at the first. The present regulation is that of mobilization centres, which is only an extension of the Central Examining Board, requiring examination by civil practitioner or medical officer in his home town. He is then brought to the mobilization centre—there is only one in this district at Montreal—he is there passed by a Board. He then goes back to his unit and is examined by the medical officer of the unit, and it is only after he gets through these three men that he is attested and given a uniform.

[Lieut.-Colonel F. S. Patch.]

By the Chairman:

Q. Have you any statistics to show whether since that system was adopted the number of men subsequently discharged as unfit has decreased?—A. I think it has. Probably the Assistant Adjutant-General can furnish exact figures.

Q. Can you furnish any figures to show that?—A. I could not give figures that would be exact, sir.

Q. There are one or two things I want to ask you about a Table which appears on page 268 of the evidence. The number of cases in Group H, that is pulmonary tuberculosis, taking them as a whole, represent less than 1 per cent, that is to say the total number of hospital cases shown in that Table covering a period of a year are 55,612, and the percentage of pulmonary tuberculosis cases is less than 1 per cent taking the whole of Canada. You notice, however, that in No. 4 District there are 54 cases of pulmonary tuberculosis or 2 1-5 per cent, more than double the average for the whole country. Can you explain why there has been more than double the average of pulmonary tuberculosis cases in District No. 4?—A. I do not think that it is absolutely correct to say that there has been that percentage of cases. It often happens, in view of the fact that we have the Ste. Agathe Sanatoria in this District, that tuberculous cases will be admitted to our military hospitals, from other districts. I do not think that tuberculosis in this District has really been any higher than in any other District.

Q. You think that many of the cases here did not originate in the District?—A. Did not originate in the District.

Q. I would like you to look at Group I, venereal diseases. The total number of cases in this group, generally speaking, represent about 9 per cent of the whole, taking the figures for all Canada. Of the 55,612 cases for all Canada, 9 per cent of these are in Group I, venereal diseases. If you take the number in No. 4 District, you will see that these cases represent 22 per cent of the whole, instead of 9 per cent, the general average?—A. That is a horse of another colour. That is due to the fact that venereal cases are more prevalent in Montreal than in any other city in Canada.

Q. What steps are you taking to prevent them?—A. We are carrying out educational measures. I have reported the matter to the higher authorities, to see if anything can be done by the city, but apparently nothing has been done. We carry out prophylactic treatment.

Q. In other words, twice as many men are knocked out in this District by venereal diseases as in the average of Canada?—A. Yes.

Q. Looking at the second item there, syphilis, which is the serious item, although this District supplies less men than other Districts it has the largest number in the second item of Group I. Do you admit a larger percentage of men suffering from that trouble than in other sections in Canada?—A. The statistics prove it.

Q. Is your inspection rigid enough on that point?—A. This develops after enlistment.

Mr. BENNETT: They could not get in if they had symptoms of this disease.

The CHAIRMAN: But sometimes men are born with it.

The WITNESS: Most of these men have contracted the disease in Montreal since enlistment.

By Hon. Mr. Daniel:

Q. These would be cases of primary syphilis?—A. Yes, early syphilis.

By the Chairman:

Q. To a very considerable extent, of these 5,068 men who have been struck off as unfit, the cause is due to the diseases in Group I?—A. These men are not struck off; they are treated, if possible, to a cure.

Q. Would any of these be likely to be treated to a cure?—A. Yes.

[Lieut.-Colonel F. S. Patch.]

Q. What percentage?—A. All of them. A few would be tertiary syphilis developing after enlistment. These men, if incurable, would be discharged, but they would not represent more than a half of one per cent of that figure. In other cases it is important, from an economic as well as a military standpoint, that they be treated. They are bad enough already.

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. Some of these are affected with these diseases prior to the time they enlisted?—A. And broke out afterwards? The condition was not discoverable by the officer making the first examination.

By Mr. Sutherland:

Q. You said that about forty per cent of the men offering themselves for service have been rejected. Was that on account of this trouble?—A. Very few on that account.

By the Chairman:

Q. You have charge of the hospitals in No. 4 District?—A. Of the military hospitals.

Q. How many have you in this District? At p. 176 of the evidence Col. Marlow submitted a statement of military hospitals in Canada, which says: "Military District No. 4, None." Is that correct?—A. That is wrong.

Q. Colonel Marlow was not correct in stating there were no military hospitals in No. 4 Military District?—A. Yes.

Q. What military hospitals are there?—A. The Military Hospital at St. Johns, the Station Hospital, consisting of 10 beds, with an emergency hospital of 20 beds. Then we have an emergency hospital in Montreal of 50 beds, the so-called St. George's Home, which we are now using for venereal cases, as the increase in the number of these made it necessary, also an emergency hospital of 20 beds for the care of mumps cases.

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. When was the former opened?—A. Since Col. Marlow's report. However, the report is misleading, because it has never been considered necessary to open a military hospital here for the care of the so-called camp troops. We found that we never had more than 200 or 300 sick in this District.

Q. Where do you keep them now?—A. The acute cases, in the Montreal General Hospital and in the Royal Victoria, and the infectious cases in the Alexandria. We have 19 in the Grey Nuns now, and at the Khaki League we have 95.

By the Chairman:

Q. You have camp cases at the Khaki League?—A. Yes.

Q. You have cases in the Khaki League, the Grey Nuns, and the Royal Victoria?—A. Yes, and in the General.

Q. You have none at the Khaki League?—A. Yes.

Q. Nor at the Hotel Dieu?—A. No.

Q. Have you control to any extent over the Hotel Dieu Hospital in any way, medical or otherwise?—A. We have no patients at all in Hotel Dieu. Do you not mean the Grey Nun Hospital?

Q. Yes, the Grey Nun?—A. I have only control over the medical administration through the medical officer in charge.

Q. You have control over the medical administration?—A. Yes.

Q. Who is your officer?—A. Captain Dunstan Grey.

Q. And he reports to you?—A. Yes.

Q. He is not an officer of the Military Hospitals Commission?—A. No.

Q. How many soldiers are under treatment in Montreal at the present time?—A. On the 12th March there were 692.

Q. Has the number increased?—A. It has lately increased.

[Lieut.-Colonel F. S. Patch.]

Q. How many of these are active cases?—A. 414 are A Unit men.

Q. Overseas men?—A. Not necessarily, but belonging to A Unit, Military Hospitals Commission cases.

Q. 414 are Military Hospitals cases?—A. Yes.

Q. How many of those are active and how many convalescent?—A. 414 are A Unit.

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. What do you mean by that?—A. A Unit Military Hospital men, either returned soldiers from overseas, still requiring treatment, or camp cases whose convalescence has been protracted and for that reason they have been transferred.

By Mr. Bennett:

Q. And have passed out of the active service?—A. Yes.

By Hon. Mr. Daniel:

Q. Do you know how many men you have in the civilian hospitals here in Montreal?—A. In the Montreal General 135 and in the Royal Victoria 30.

Q. That is 165?—A. Yes; in St. George's Home we have 54.

Q. Have you formed any opinion of the desirability or otherwise of treating the active treatment cases in a civilian hospital in preference to a military hospital or vice versa?—A. I am strongly of opinion the civilian hospitals should be used to the best advantage. They offer the best facilities for treating our active cases. There is no doubt about that.

Q. You think in either case the soldier would be better treated in a first class civilian hospital in a city like Montreal—I am speaking of active treatment cases—than he would be in a military hospital?—A. That does not altogether follow. In Montreal it would be so, because we have no military hospital, but if we came to a point where we had so many active cases to treat, we could have a military hospital by using civilian surgeons and practitioners and have just as good hospitals. The Army Medical Corps would have to be expanded.

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. Mr. Marlow was right that you had no military hospitals; M.D. No. 4 has no military hospital?—A. Yes and no.

Q. You have 30 beds in all?—A. 104.

Q. Fifty have been established since that time, but I understood you to say just now that you have no military hospital: that is true?—A. Well, we have and we have not.

Q. We do not want to dispute about that—

By Hon. Mr. Daniel:

Q. The point is whether you are satisfied to have your soldiers treated in the civilian hospitals when they are available?—A. We are, absolutely.

By Mr. Bennett:

Q. It depends upon the medical attendance and nursing in every instance, but these hospitals have the finest equipment of any on the continent?—A. Yes. Unless the number of troops requiring active hospital treatment be increased—

Q. Thereby rendering it impossible to utilize present facilities?—A. Yes.

By Brigadier-General Mason:

Q. How many men have you under training in Montreal?—A. Three or four thousand. Most of the 414 referred to previously represent returned soldiers.

[Lieut.-Colonel F. S. Patch.]

By Hon. Mr. McCurdy:

Q. Some of these men have come from overseas?—A. Yes.

Q. About how many troops have you in Montreal, in your district?—A. I do not think we are going to have more than four or five thousand in this district. The Assistant Adjutant-General can give those figures.

By Hon. Mr. Daniel:

Q. Do you notice that soldiers treated in civilian hospitals suffer from lack of discipline or anything of that kind?—A. I do not think so. The procedure here has been to have a medical officer in charge in each hospital, to whom they are responsible for discipline.

By the Chairman:

Q. These cases are mostly active cases?—A. Yes.

By Mr. Ross (Middlesex):

Q. These 414 are overseas men?—A. Partly.

Q. Do you come in contact with any of their officers?—A. Only from a medical point of view.

Q. From a medical point of view what suggestion have you to make to this committee having come in contact with this number of returned soldiers as to the improvement of the condition of the returned soldiers? What can you do to better their condition? Have you any suggestions to make to the Committee to help us along?—A. I think that the present situation, under which there is a certain measure of doubt in the minds of the people as to who is medically responsible, should be immediately cleared up.

By Hon. Mr. Murphy:

Q. In regard to what?—A. Medical administration, that is the Military Hospitals Commission or the Militia Department.

Q. That doubt as between the Military Hospitals Commission and the Militia Department should be dissolved in the interest of the returned soldier?—A. Yes.

By Mr. Ross (Middlesex):

Q. How does that militate against the treatment of returned soldiers?—A. Because there is a joint responsibility: there is the medical department of the military hospital, and at the present time the A.D.M.S. organizations of the district are technically responsible for the medical administration. If two are attempting to do the same work you cannot have efficiency.

By the Chairman:

Q. Supposing there should be any difference of opinion between Dr. Dunstan Grey and yourself have you the right to over-rule him?—A. Yes, he is responsible to me. I may say I have never found it necessary to do so.

Q. As to the matter of the hours of leave at the Hotel Dieu and Notre Dame hospitals and the disciplinary measures that are necessary there, are these rules promulgated with your knowledge and your consent?—A. I was not consulted.

Q. Who fixes the hours of leave for the men at the Notre Dame hospital?—A. As far as I know the officer commanding the unit, Military Hospitals Commission command.

Q. That would be Major Hall?—A. Yes.

By Hon. Mr. Murphy:

Q. Are there any different hours for the Commission there than anywhere else?—A. In the active hospitals we do not give leave.

Q. It is unusual to give leave?—A. Yes.

[Lieut.-Colonel F. S. Patch.]

By Mr. Ross (Middlesex):

Q. You must have in your head some specific cases where harm has followed on account of the divided control between the Military Hospitals Commission and the Army Service Corps. Can you give us those specifically and draw a general principle in any way?—A. I would not say in the past that the soldiers had suffered any harm.

Q. In what way will they suffer harm?—A. In the matter of preparation for the future, and in the expansion to meet the increased needs of the future.

Q. In your opinion no harm has been done by the divided command, but you think if the number increased there would be harm in the future?—A. Yes.

Q. What is wrong with the Hospital Commission that they cannot do this?—(No answer.)

By Hon. Mr. Murphy:

Q. Or put it the other way, what is wrong with the Army Medical Corps? They were constituted to do it?—A. That is a matter for consideration.

Q. Has that situation not been covered by the statement issued recently by the Minister of Militia?—A. No, no official instructions have yet been issued.

By Mr. Ross (Middlesex):

Q. Have you any suggestions to make, frankly? Cut out all red tape and let us have your suggestions?—A. A decision should be made immediately either one way or the other.

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. You belong to the Army Medical Corps?—A. Yes.

Q. You think they were carrying out all they should have done?—A. I think so.

Q. You are sure of it?—A. Yes.

Q. Then you do not think there was a necessity for the Military Hospitals Commission in so far as No. 4 District was concerned. What do you say as to that?—A. I must say the Military Hospitals Commission has been very useful. They would be most valuable in the matter of vocational training and providing homes, and it can very well be carried out by a provision of that sort, and I think they have done excellent work, but as to the medical treatment of the men, I think it should be carried out by the Army Medical Corps.

Q. You think the Army Medical Corps should have been left where it was as far as the medical treatment went?—A. Yes.

Q. As far as the vocational training went, and as far as the military hospitals are concerned, you think they should have been established?—A. I am not familiar enough with the establishment to say.

Q. You think they have done enough effective work to justify their establishment?—A. I think they have.

Q. You give that as your opinion?—A. Yes.

Q. Then in those two cases you would leave them as they are?—A. Yes, I think I would.

Q. And you would not revert to the Army Medical Corps to take care of those two branches?—A. Now that they have gone so far I think it would be foolish; otherwise you put yourself back in the spring of 1915.

Q. Which you do not think is the proper thing to do?—A. I think we have gone so far we should make the best of it.

Q. You think the last condition is worse than the first?

Hon. Mr. MARCIL: You are speaking from the soldiers point of view?

Mr. PARDEE: Yes, just let the doctor give his opinion.—A. The Army Medical Corps, if the Militia Department had this work two years ago, would of necessity have had to make some expansion, but two years have elapsed, and they have not given any attention to this problem.

[Lieut.-Colonel F. S. Patch.]

Q. Who have not?—A. The Army Medical Corps. Now, to ask them two years later to go back and begin on that, would be putting them at a disadvantage. I think I understand that the statement made by the Minister of Militia is a very satisfactory solution of the problem.

Q. You think the Military Hospitals Commission is a very satisfactory institution?—A. As long as the medical administration——

Q. Is left to the Army Medical Corps?—A. No, I do not say that exactly, but I say it should be left to one or the other to be responsible.

Q. Which do you think it should be?—A. I am in favour of the Army Medical Corps.

By the Chairman:

Q. In the spring of 1915 was the Army Medical Corps in this district capable of handling the problems arising here?—A. We had the nucleus and would have had to expand.

Q. If they had expanded could they have gone on and done the work as well as the Military Hospitals Commission?—A. Perfectly well.

By Hon. Mr. Daniel:

Q. In order to assist in elucidating that question, I asked General Wilson a question or two, and I want to ask you in regard to the same matter. The Army Medical Department, in order to expand, would require to get money for the building of hospitals and places of that kind. The point I want to get at is this: Would there be likely to be greater delay in the Army Medical Corps getting authority to spend money and getting the money to spend from the Militia Council than it is for the Hospitals Commission to get the money which they require to spend?—A. I cannot answer as to how the Military Hospitals Commissions get money. I do not know.

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. As far as the hospitals go, you say that the cases are very largely treated in the civil hospitals: that is right, is it? I refer to both camp cases and those that come from overseas?—A. No, we have only 135 out of 692 in the civilian hospitals.

Q. Where are the rest?—A. There are 95 at the Khaki League Home, 78 in the sanitarium at Ste. Agathe, 256 in the Gray Nuns Home, 11 in the infectious Hospital here, and 33 in the two Military Hospitals at St. Johns, P.Q.

Q. How long have you been with the Army Medical Corps?—A. Do you mean since my appointment as Lieutenant?

Q. No, how long have you been actively engaged, since the war broke out?—A. Since the spring of 1915.

Q. From your experience, do you expect a large influx of men from overseas into Military District No. 4?—A. I have no opinion as to that.

Q. Would you think that there would be more than there has been?—A. Yes.

Q. Do you not think under those circumstances that a large Military Hospital ought to be established here?—A. That just depends on whether you make me responsible for the care of the convalescents.

Q. If you had such a hospital, would you have been better able to take care of convalescent patients?—A. I have nothing to do with that.

Q. But you said, in reply to a question as to the establishment of a Military Hospital, that it depended upon whether or not you were responsible for the convalescents. Now, suppose you did have the care of them?—A. If I had been made responsible, through General Wilson for the care of the returned soldier in the spring of 1915, undoubtedly the best thing would have been to have opened a big Military Hospital in Montreal.

Q. Do you think that the Military Hospitals Commission can as effectively take care of the returned soldier, with the present arrangement, as a Military Hospital could?—A. It depends upon how many more patients are coming in.

[Lieut.-Colonel F. S. Patch.]

Q. Suppose there be a large influx, which is likely to be the case, would you think it would be better to have a Military Hospital here for the care of these men?—A. Under the care of the Military Hospitals Commission?

Q. Yes, under the Military Hospitals Commission if you like.—A. It depends upon the facilities available, and——

By the Chairman:

Q. Well, in addition to the facilities available?—A. Well, all I can say is that up to the present the accommodation here has been more than adequate.

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. Do you say the accommodation has been more than adequate?—A. Yes, in this district.

Q. And in your opinion, will it continue to be more than adequate?—A. Well, I understand they are providing accommodation so as to meet future conditions.

Q. What preparations are they making?—A. I think you had better ask Colonel Smith that question. I only know in an unofficial way.

Q. What you say as a member of the Army Medical Corps is that up to date there has been adequate provision made for these convalescents, and a home provided for those who have taken sick here?—A. I do.

Q. And you think generally that unless there is a great influx, greater than has occurred up to date, the accommodation will continue to be sufficient?—A. I understand also that a new home containing 200 beds has been acquired and is practically ready to be opened. That will be more than adequate until the time comes when additional accommodation will need to be provided.

By the Chairman:

Q. These patients are under the Military Hospitals Commission as it at present exists?—A. Absolutely.

By Mr. Ross (Middlesex):

Q. You have given evidence on one point as to how matters can be improved by settling the question of divided authority. Have you any suggestions to make as to how the lot of the returned soldier can be improved? You have seen a lot of these men; have you heard any complaints from them?—A. As far as this district is concerned I think the returned soldiers have been well cared for.

Q. That is true, but is there any way by which their condition can be improved? Have you heard any complaints yourself?—A. Individual complaints.

Q. What were the nature of those complaints?—A. The amount of pension is one of the common complaints, that the returned soldier did not get a big enough pension.

Q. We have nothing to do with that.—A. Or the man will complain, "I am not getting proper treatment."

Q. In what respect?—A. It is possible he thinks he is not getting proper medicine. The complaints on the whole have been particular and not general.

By Mr. Middlebro:

Q. The same as with civil patients?—A. With civil patients it is undoubtedly the same.

By Hon. Mr. Marçil:

Q. Do you approve of patients being treated in their homes?—A. If the medical officer thinks the convalescent is likely to do better at his home he is allowed to be treated as an out patient and comes only for supervision of his medical treatment.

[Lieut.-Colonel F. S. Patch.]

By Mr. Ross (Middlesex):

Q. You have no other complaint to make, have you?—A. The one great question which has been troubling me as A.D.M.S. for the past ten months is that this matter of defining medical responsibility for returned soldiers should be settled.

By the Chairman:

Q. Definitely one way or the other?—A. Definitely one way or the other.

Q. Is Dr. Mackenzie Forbes under you?—A. He has been detailed since 30th January for employment with the Military Hospitals Commission Command, and would only come under me in the same sense that Major Hall did under General Wilson, i.e. for discipline.

By Mr. Middlebro:

Q. The result of your evidence is, that so far as you know, the returned soldiers in the past have been given all the accommodation required for them. As far as their treatment is concerned there is no complaint? Further, as far as you are aware, the Military Hospitals Commission has at present sufficient accommodation for returned soldiers and is prepared to provide a sufficient accommodation for the future. The one point you complain of is that there has been divided authority in this matter. Now, if the suggestion which has been made by the Minister of the Militia is carried out, that the Army Medical Corps have the direction of these institutions, will you then have any cause for complaint?—A. I will have no grievance at all then.

By the Chairman:

Q. So far as you know, the accommodation provided for returned soldiers has been ample in this respect?—A. Absolutely, sir.

Q. At no time have you not had sufficient beds to accommodate the returned soldiers?—A. No, sir, except possibly that in an individual hospital we may have to make a little adjustment; but the Grey Nuns Hospital has never been fully occupied, there have always been empty beds.

By Mr. Bennett:

Q. I understand you to say that you favour the medical work in connection with the returned soldiers being left in the hands of the Army Medical Corps?—A. I do, sir.

Q. That is your personal view? I suppose you will admit the problem is of a two-fold character. First of all, the physical condition of a man has to be considered?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And secondly, his rehabilitation for civil life, having regard to his physical condition, that is so, is it not?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. It is obvious that he cannot receive the care and attention which should fit him for civil life and for absorption into civil life, in an ordinary hospital? I mean, bearing in mind his vocational training and work of that character. That is obvious, is it not?—A. Not in an ordinary hospital.

Q. I say, not in an ordinary hospital. That is obvious, is it not?—A. I don't think he could get that in an ordinary hospital.

Q. I am asking you the question. It is obvious he cannot receive that care and attention in an ordinary hospital?—A. Yes.

Q. Well, could he secure it in an ordinary Convalescent Home?—A. Not unless the special facilities were provided.

Q. Therefore it follows that special institutions must be created?—A. Or available institutions made use of.

Q. That is the same thing: Special institutions must be created, that is clear, is it not?—A. Yes, or existing institutions made use of.

[Lieut.-Colonel F. S. Patch.]

Q. Now we are agreed up to that point?—A. Yes.

Q. Then the matter resolves itself into a question of (a) The technical side of the medical care, and (b) the technical side of the other branch of training. That is so, is it not?—A. Yes.

Q. And on the medical side one or two things may happen: either he must be taken care of by men who are responsible for those who control the institutions—whether you call them a commission or something else—that is clear, isn't it? Whoever has charge of the medical work must be responsible to those who control the institution?—A. He might be in charge of it.

Q. The proposition I lay down is true, is it not, and you will agree with it?—A. Not necessarily, the Military Organization provides for Command.

Q. I am not talking about that. What I say is, that whoever is charged under the law for the responsibility of the institution must have control of the men who work in that institution or else you are going to get no results?—A. Are you not leading me a little there?

Q. I am not leading you at all. I simply want an answer to a plainly stated proposition.

The CHAIRMAN: Let Dr. Patch say what he has to say, do not cut him off.

Q. I am asking you this, Colonel Patch: You have admitted that a special institution must be created or an existing institution made use of?—A. Yes.

Q. Especially equipped to deal with the returned soldiers problem?—A. That is what I say.

Q. Now, that institution must be under the control and charge of some given authority?—A. Yes.

Q. That is clear, isn't it?—A. Yes.

Q. Then it follows, naturally, as you say it does, that the returned soldier must be cared for in two senses: (a) On the medical side, and (b) On the civil side, regard being paid to his future absorption into civil life. You admit all that?—A. Yes.

Q. Then, is it not essential if you are going to get results, that the authority charged with responsibility for training him for absorption into civil life, should have control also of the first branch, namely the medical care?—A. No.

Q. Then you want the Army Medical Corps to take charge of the medical work of these institutions?—A. I do.

Q. And you want another body to be in charge of the institution?—A. I will take an example exactly analogous to this: The training of the soldier going overseas is just as important as the training of the man who has come back. Now, the Army Medical Corps performs the medical work connected with the dispatch of the army overseas, although it has nothing to do with the training of the soldier for overseas duty.

By the Chairman:

Q. That is a matter of military training?—A. That is a matter of military training. After the man's return the Military Hospitals Commission can look after their training and return to civil life, while the Army Medical Corps attends to their medical care.

By Hon. Mr. Murphy:

Q. That would be making provision for the returned soldier similar to that made before he went overseas?—A. That is right.

By Mr. Bennett:

Q. You do not seriously mean that proposition?—A. I do.

Q. On his return, the man is a casualty case, and one for whom provision must be made for absorption into civil life, is not that so?—A. Yes.

[Lieut.-Colonel F. S. Patch.]

Q. Do you see any analogy between the two cases?—A. I do. The matter of training is the same.

Mr. BENNETT: It is not the same at all.

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. Do you say the matter of training is the same?—A. In a medical sense, the training is the same.

By Mr. Bennett:

Q. You said a moment ago you did not believe in dual control, did you not? Now you have told Mr. Pardee that you do believe in dual control.—A. Not as far as medical administration is concerned.

Q. Then dual control is bad with relation to medical administration, but good as applied to the control of the institution.—A. But remember, in the one case the administration is all under the General Officer Commanding the District. In the other case it is not.

Q. The institution, as such, is in charge of the Military Hospitals Commission. Now, the work divides itself into two classes: the medical side and the other side which is intended to accomplish the man's absorption into civil life. Now, it is obvious that the control of those in charge of the medical work should be vested in those who have control of the institution. But you want the introduction of another authority altogether in the medical control, that is your view and your opinion?—A. I am not concerned in that.

Q. All you are concerned in is, that having belonged to the Army Medical Corps, you believe that corps is the best qualified to deal with the situation?—A. I say that the Army Medical Corps originated in time of peace, and having been organized, I do not see that this, the greatest problem that has arisen in connection with this work, should be taken from it.

Q. You resent the idea that there should be taken from the Army Medical Corps any part of the duties which you say it is capable and competent to perform; that is your idea?—A. Certainly, but my present view, is that there is at present a dual responsibility with regard to the medical administration; the Military Hospitals Commission making certain arrangements, of which I am not aware, and even going into the homes and giving orders that I may not agree with.

Q. You are familiar with hospitals for the blind?—A. Yes.

Q. And that in these schools for the blind there are two sides of the work, the medical staff looks after and cares for the health of the patients, and there is also the highly trained person who teaches them how to read, and trains them for the duties of life. What could you, as a medical man think if the medical superintendent there is responsible to the Provincial Government and the Institution was being carried on by the city of Montreal?—A. I do not quite follow your argument.

Q. I am just putting this to you to see what you think with respect to dual control in connection with the medical care and the training for work of the patients in the schools for the blind? Would it be good either with respect to the patients or the country?—A. No.

Q. Now, what is the difference between having a school for the blind, where the health of the patients is to be cared for on the one hand, and their training on the other, and an institution where the medical health is cared for by the medical staff on one hand, and the physical training by a different staff, on the other? There is not much difference between the two is there?—A. No.

Q. What I am trying to get at is—I have no interest in the matter at all—A. I must say that I do not altogether follow your line of reasoning. For that reason my answers may appear inconsistent. Besides the case is not parallel to the matter under discussion.

[Lieut.-Colonel F. S. Patch.]

Q. What I want to get at, if I can, is why dual control with respect to military hospitals should not be satisfactory when dual control with respect to schools for the blind you say would be all right?—A. The Army Medical Corps looks after the health of the soldiers going overseas and it could, I say, just as easily look after the health of the soldiers under training in these institutions.

Q. The Medical Officer of the Battalion is a part of the unit?—A. Yes.

Q. And the Medical Officer of the unit is under the control of the Colonel commanding the battalion?—A. Yes.

Q. Now you would not have the Medical Service responsible to one Colonel in the unit, and the training of the men under the control of another Colonel? Both the Medical Officer and the officers in charge of the training of the men are responsible to the one Colonel?—A. Yes.

Q. And single control is the essence of the regimental business, is it not?—A. Yes.

Q. Then why should it not be so with regard to the returned soldiers?—A. I think it should; I would add to that the suggestion that the command of the Military Hospitals Commission should be under the General Officer Commanding the district, that is, that each individual unit of it should be under the officer commanding this district instead of being responsible to the central body at Ottawa.

By the Chairman:

Q. Instead of being under Colonel Sharples, it should be under General Wilson?—A. Certainly.

By Mr. Bennett:

Q. Then your view is that it should be under the Militia Department?—A. That is my view.

Q. Do you think it was possible to have had that arrangement in 1915, with respect to treating troops?—A. I think it was possible then.

Q. To have gone ahead and dealt with it in that way?—A. That is my private view.

Q. That it was wholly unnecessary to establish the Commission?—A. I have not all the facts—it was an unusual case, there was an emergency and possibly it was the best means of meeting that emergency; I am speaking now in the light of subsequent experience.

Q. You are speaking now in the light of two years' knowledge, and applying that knowledge to the facts that you did not then have?—A. Yes.

Q. You say at the present moment, there is no necessity for the Military Hospitals Commission to deal with the Hospitals?—A. They are of great assistance, and it is quite possible to make some provision by which they would be under the control of the Militia Department.

Q. And you think the work can be efficiently carried on without the Military Hospitals Commission at all?

Mr. MIDDLEBRO: He said exactly the reverse.

The WITNESS: I would like to have an opportunity of reading over my evidence.

The CHAIRMAN: You will have a chance to read over your evidence.

By Mr. Bennett:

Q. You say it is your opinion at the present moment that the Military Hospitals Commission is absolutely unnecessary?—A. If certain provisions are made it is not necessary.

Q. In other words your view is that the creation of an institution to take control of the returned soldier, specially removed from the Department, is unnecessary?—A. Yes.

Q. Having regard to the fact that the Department is political and the Commission is not?

[Lieut.-Colonel F. S. Patch.]

Hon. Mr. MURPHY: Not the Militia Department, you do not mean that the Militia Department is political?

Mr. Ross (Middlesex): It does not follow that all Commissions are not political?

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. Your whole contention is that the Army Medical Corps could have been so expanded to take care of every part of the work that the Military Hospitals Commission was established for?—A. That is my idea.

Q. The Army Medical Corps could have done all that work, if it had been properly expanded?—A. Yes, that is my opinion.

By Mr. Middlebro:

Q. I understood you to say that while you thought in the first instance that the Army Medical Corps could have accomplished all the work that the Military Hospitals Commission has done, yet, you think, in view of the fact that the Military Hospitals Commission has been in existence two years, it would be a mistake now, to stop it entirely?—A. I do.

Q. Because they have specialized along these lines, you advocate retaining the Military Hospitals Commission in view of the work of re-education of convalescent patients?—A. Along the lines that I understand were laid down by the Minister of Militia, in a recent interview.

By Hon. Mr. Daniel:

Q. Have you any difficulty in filling up the Army Medical Corps in this District—in obtaining medical officers?—A. We do have difficulty, of course.

Q. You cannot get as many as you need?—A. Not for overseas service, and we would have to take in civil practitioners to look after the returned soldiers unless some of the medical men who have gone overseas are brought back.

Q. Supposing the Medical Corps were expanded so as to take up the work of the Hospitals Commission, how would they obtain a supply of medical officers?—A. We have the same opportunities as the Military Hospitals Commission.

Q. Then you would employ civilians?—A. Undoubtedly.

Q. In that case these men would not belong to the Army Medical Corps, and it would not be the Army Medical Corps doing the work?—A. Yes, you could give these men rank, or employ them as civilian surgeons, that is a matter of detail to be worked out.

Q. The reason I spoke about that was Colonel Marlow in his evidence rather complained that the Military Hospitals Commission employed the civilian doctors at a greater salary than I think, even himself was getting as A.D.M.S. He objected to that?—A. I would also.

Q. And his remark was to the effect that if the Army Medical Corps had command of that it would not be done?—A. I would certainly object to that if another man doing the same work as I was were getting bigger pay than I received.

Q. How could they avoid that if they had to employ civilian doctors?—A. Rates of pay should be created for the employment of civilian surgeons.

Q. Supposing you could not get them?—A. I think you could get them. If the need arises for medical men, it will be met, it is not a matter of dollars and cents.

By the Chairman:

Q. As far as No. 4 District you think you could get all the medical men you need at the rates of pay of the Army Medical Corps?—A. Yes—but the pay is not large enough, that of course is understood.

By Hon. Mr. Macil:

Q. Do the men now employed all enter the Army Medical Corps or do they continue in private practice?—A. They are employed as military men, under a recent circular letter which permits a man to engage in civil practice. If he works more than six hours a day he receives full pay and allowances; if he works less than 6 hours a day, he is paid the pay of the rank.

By Hon. Mr. Murphy:

Q. In enumerating the reasons for the number of rejections which took place at a certain period, you mentioned this morning two; one the anxiety on the part of the Commanding Officer to get men, and the other the inexperience of the medical examiners in some instances. Are there any other reasons you wish to mention, I think you were interrupted?—A. My views on that point are contained in the report of a Board of Enquiry of the 118th Overseas Battalion. In that report my views are expressed and that report is, I think, available to you.

By Mr. Middlebro:

Q. Would you agree with the evidence given by Lieut.-Col. Marlow, on p. 227, as follows: (Reads)

Q. Can you suggest any reason why the Military Hospitals Commission was created if the work could be better carried on by the Army Medical Corps? Somebody must have thought the Commission necessary?—A. Well, I could suggest a reason. I do not know how far it is true, but the one that appeals to me more than anything else is that it was a matter of unloading at the time.

Q. Unloading what?—A. Unloading work from the Militia Department which it should ordinarily have done, but because at that time it was particularly busy with many other matters that were pressing, the idea of a Commission was conceived, and the matter was unloaded.

Q. You are of the opinion that, owing to the amount of work in the Militia Department, they thought it was necessary to give the work to the Military Hospitals Commission?—A. To create something else to handle this big problem.

Q. Do you agree with that?—A. I do agree, to a certain extent. That is as far as the administrative authorities were concerned. The care of the returned soldiers is not merely a medical problem, it is administrative as well.

Q. The Commission came to be created because the Army Medical Corps was so congested with work that it could not handle the men returning from overseas?—A. I think it was the administrative; I do not think it is Army Medical at all.

Q. But Col. Marlow refers to the Army Medical Corps, and therefore the Military Hospitals Commission was established. Is that not true of your district?—A. No, sir. We had our command arranged to handle casualties just the same as in Military District No. 2.

Witness discharged.

Lieutenant-Colonel CLARENCE F. SMITH, Chairman of the Relief Committee of the Patriotic Fund and Member of the Military Hospitals Commission, called, sworn, and examined.

By the Chairman:

Q. Are you the Chairman of the Military Hospitals Commission of this locality?—A. We have no chairman here.

Q. You have a local committee, then, so to speak?—A. Yes; Mr. Smeaton White, Dr. F. J. Shepherd, Mr. D. Lorne McGibbon, Hon. Rodolphe Forget, and myself.

Q. You are members of the National Military Hospitals Commission?—A. Yes.

Q. And your meetings are held at Ottawa?—A. Yes.

Q. And you have no local unit?—A. Local questions are taken up with the local members here, and are forwarded on to Ottawa.

Q. What staff have you here, and where is your office?—A. We have two offices in the Drummond Building; we pay $50 a month rent; we have a secretary whom we pay $75 a month, and a stenographer whom we pay $60 a month.

Q. Is that all the staff that comes directly under you?—A. There is the vocational officer, who has charge of Quebec and the eastern section of the Lower Provinces, Prof. Sexton, whose salary is $183.50 a month. He looks after all the eastern section.

Q. What medical men have you under your direction?—A. We have no medical men that I know of.

Q. What duties specially fall upon the quintette of members that you have mentioned as belonging to the Military Hospitals Commission in this district?—A. Supplying homes, the vocational end, and anything dealing with the returned soldiers.

Q. Their medical treatment as well?—A. No, that has been under the A.D.M.S. of the Division.

Q. You might tell us what hospitals you have, what their accommodation is, and what measures you have taken for additional accommodation?—A. At the present time we have the Grey Nuns Convalescent Home, which has a capacity for 300. It has been used for convalescent soldiers, but is now equipped as a bed hospital for active treatment and surgical cases as well. We have there at the present time 229 patients—leaving 71 unoccupied beds. We also secured the Drummond Street property, and have completed it and expected to open it this week, but we are waiting for kitchen equipment, shipped from Toronto early in February, and which has not arrived yet. We have accommodation for 200 there. Then we have the Khaki League Convalescent Homes, two homes, with accommodation for 99, and we have 95 patients in them now, leaving four unoccupied beds. That leaves 275 in these three homes in Montreal, and we also have accommodation, if necessary, for bed cases, active treatment and surgical cases, in the Royal Victoria and General Hospitals.

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. How many vacant beds have you at present?—A. We have 275 beds to-day available in our three homes.

By Hon. Mr. Marcil:

Q. How many beds are occupied?—A. We have 325 occupied.

By the Chairman:

Q. 325 occupied and 275 available, in fact you have a total accommodation of 600 beds in these local hospitals?—A. In Montreal.

Q. What steps are you taking to enlarge that accommodation?—A. We have three options at the present time, offering to us one large building accommodating one thousand, with about forty acres of ground.

Q. Where is that located?—A. About 5 miles from the Windsor Hotel. The building is completed on the outside.

Q. It is in the country?—A. Yes, sir.

By Hon. Mr. Marcil:

Q. At Maisonneuve?—A. No, at Cote des Liesse Road. It belongs to the Grey Nuns, it is completed on the outside, and it is offered to us if we will complete it on the inside, and there are about 40 acres of ground.

Q. It will accommodate about one thousand?—A. About a thousand; and we can also build as many hut hospitals as we want.

[Lieut.-Col. C. F. Smith.]

By Mr. Ross (Middlesex):

Q. What will be the cost to complete the building?—A. About $200,000. We have under option an educational building that the people are leaving at the present time to go to a new building, it will hold 600.

By the Chairman:

Q. What building is that?—A. At Maisonneuve. They are asking $10,000 a year for it and it will probably cost us $50,000 or $75,000 to renovate.

Q. It is an old building requiring adaptation?—A. Yes, and there are about 40 acres of ground about the building where we can also put up extra huts if needed. We have also a letter quoting us on a 1,500-bed and hut hospital at a price of $275,000 with the land, which would be completed they claim in ninety days.

By Hon. Mr. Marcil:

Q. For use in the summer only?—A. All the year round.

Q. They are all situated in Montreal?—A. All those three are.

By the Chairman:

Q. You have recently taken over the Loyola College?—A. Yes.

Q. What accommodation have you there?—A. 200.

Q. Is it occupied yet?—A. On Monday. The headquarters staff are there at the present time—the beds, bedding, etc., are complete, with the exception of the kitchen equipment delayed in transit between Toronto and Montreal.

By Mr. Middlebro:

Q. This is an institution you mentioned before?—A. Yes, sir.

By the Chairman:

Q. Have you any idea as to how many men may be expected back from month to month in the early future whom you will have to take care of?—A. It is very difficult to say. I have not heard how many were expected back, but the average is about 10 per cent of the men come back to Montreal.

Q. Ten per cent of the total number of men coming back?—A. Yes.

Q. What have you averaged per month?—A. There are 1,200 men coming back this week, 120 of them will probably be for our district.

Q. Do you know whether, in sending men back, the matter of distribution is considered at all in preparing the shipload? Is there any consideration on the other side to give you that 10 per cent?—A. No, I don't think so.

Q. Not that you know of?—A. Not that I know of.

Q. You have had on an average then, I should judge, about a hundred a month coming back?—A. We have had 1,500 cases come back to us since—

Q. Since the spring of 1915?—A. Yes. At least, we have had 1,891 report to us. Previous to that we have no record.

By Hon. Mr. Marcil:

Q. How many have been discharged?—A. One thousand six hundred and twenty-one have been discharged. We have at the present time only about 208 overseas in-patients in Montreal and 62 overseas out-patients in our homes.

Q. Have you any cases of soldiers who were discharged as cured who have found out afterwards that their health has not enabled them to work?—A. A few.

Q. How many?—A. Not very many. Most of them we have been able to put back in the hospital again.

Q. Are these cases due to shell shock or tuberculosis?—A. Some tuberculosis. Some men refused treatment, and after talking the matter over with them they decided to go back, and we sent them back. Others had misbehaved themselves and were sent away. We got them sent back or sent to another sanitarium.

By the Chairman:

Q. Are the members of your Commission responsible for the directions as to discipline, etc., of the men in the Grey Nuns and other hospitals under your direction?
—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Have you had any complaints from the men at the Grey Nuns regarding the hours of leave that are granted to them?—A. Not altogether from the men, no, from outsiders.

Q. What are the hours within which men of the Grey Nuns Hospital can go out if they want to?—A. They have a walking parade of an hour in the morning, and another of an hour in the afternoon, and I think they leave at 5 o'clock at night until 10.30 p.m.

Q. Then during the day, with the exception of one hour, they are detained in the convalescent home?—A. Not all of them. A great many of them ask for special passes, and if granted by the medical officers the officer commanding gives them the pass.

Q. What are the hours on Saturday and Sunday?—A. They practically get out, I think most of them, Saturday afternoon and Sunday. There are very few there on Sunday.

By Hon. Mr. Marcil:

Q. What do the convalescent men do?—A. We have vocational training at the present time. We were to have it at the Grey Nuns, but we did not have the space there, but through the kindness of McGill University and the Technical Institute on Sherbrooke street we are now giving them vocational training in both institutes. About 100 men are taking the training in those institutes.

Q. That is an institute under the Quebec Government?—A. The Provincial Government. They gave us two class-rooms and another large room 200 by 40 where we do our educational work.

Q. Most of these men go back to their original trades?—A. A great many of them do, and a great many have taken up a new trade, and some of them have done remarkably well. I think it is the biggest thing we have. Before we had this training we had a lot of trouble, and now the men leave the convalescent homes at 9 and those that are able to walk are paraded to the institute, and those not able to walk are provided with a conveyance, and we bring them back to the home at 12, and back to the institute, and return again at 4, so that 100 of them are out getting the fresh air every day, and others are in there for treatment.

By Mr. Ross (Middlesex):

Q. What have you to say with regard to the complaints made outside as to the conduct of the men?—A. Well, the recreation room of the Grey Nuns, when we were doing the educational work, was occupying about a third of the space, and when we had about 225 men there complaints were made with regard to the smoke nuisance. That is taken care of by the vocational work being done outside, and a third of the room being added to the recreation room. We have also got a room for the non-smokers and the Drummond Street Home will be opened Monday and that will take a large percentage of the men away.

Q. I understood you to say that complaints came in from outsiders in regard to the leave the men had?—A. About not allowing the men out in the day.

Q. Not sufficiently?—A. Yes.

Q. You allowed them out an hour in the morning?—A. Yes, and 5 until half past 10.

Q. And all Saturday afternoon and Sunday?—A. Yes, Saturday afternoon and Sunday they get a pass. Most of the married men get a pass.

By the Chairman:

Q. Would your experience cause you to favour a smaller number of large hospital or a larger number of small hospitals? In other words have the smaller homes taking

[Lieut.-Col. C. F. Smith.]

20, 30 and 40 people been satisfactory?—A. Not at the present time. At the beginning they did very good work. Now the difficulty is in giving medical attendance. We can handle probably 200 patients just as cheaply as if we had 40 or 50.

Q. What do you consider the proper size of a convalescent hospital for the best treatment of the men?—A. 150 to 200.

Q. You think they can be handled better in groups accommodating from one to two hundred than in smaller groups?—A. Very much better.

Q. What do you think about the relative value to the men of an hospital in the city and an hospital out in the country?—A. I think for surgical cases and bed treatment that the city is very much better, because you can get expert advice from the doctors who are very busy at the present time, and for the ordinary convalescent home, I think it is much preferable outside the city, where there is lots of ground, where we can do a little agricultural and vegetable gardening, and so on.

By Hon. Mr. Marcil:

Q. It is proposed to have homes of that kind in this district?—A. Yes.

By Brigadier-General Mason:

Q. What is the character of the vocational training chiefly?—A. Carpentry, mechanical drawing, English, French, book-keeping, motor mechanics, stenography and typewriting.

By Hon. Mr. Marcil:

Q. Who does the teaching of these? Have you teachers employed for that?—A. In Montreal we have special teachers employed.

By the Chairman:

Q. I suppose Mr. Sexton will give us the details?—A. Yes.

Q. Is that all you wish to say with regard to that matter?—A. That is practically all unless you want to know whom we are employing as teachers in this district.

The CHAIRMAN: If you have any statistics which you think would be of use to the committee we would be very glad to have them incorporated in our proceedings.

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. What about the hospitals in England and in France?—A. The hospitals in use in England and France for the last couple of years are wooden hospitals one or two stories high, which are not as expensive as stone or brick, and they can be put up in very much less time.

Q. How many will they accommodate?—A. I think they run in sections of 100. They can put up 100 in the building.

Q. You say they want $200,000. Is there any idea of the commission taking that over?—A. Nothing has been decided on either of those three problems.

Q. You spoke of one hospital costing $200,000, and the other, you said, on Drummond street?—A. No, not on Drummond street, outside five or six miles.

Q. At $275,000?—A. Yes.

Q. Would it be necessary to consider spending that much money for a convalescent home?—A. I think the commission has probably been a little slow in not going ahead and spending money. They have tried to keep it as low as possible.

Q. Do you think an expenditure of $475,000 is necessary for the class of convalescent homes you want?—A. No.

Q. You gave the committee one at $200,000, somewhere, that they offered you if you would complete it?—A. Yes.

Q. And then another on Drummond street at $275,000?—A. Those are options on different properties we have. We would only need one of those three options that I mention.

Q. With regard to your 1,000-bed hospital, which you mention—?—A. There is a figure on the $275,000 for 1,500. We figured 1,000-bed hospital would cost us $200,000.

Q. Where do the funds for the carrying out of this work come from?—A. Through the Governor General in Council and the War Loan, I think it is.

By the Chairman:

Q. On whom do you draw for the money?—A. It comes through the Commission.

Q. Where do you send your account?—A. We send our accounts up to Ottawa to the Accountant.

Q. To the Accountant of the Hospitals Commission?—A. Yes.

Q. Are those placed in the hospitals considered as military patients?—A. Yes, they are under military control.

The CHAIRMAN: I think General Wilson stated that the militia were the only body authorized to make expenditures for the hospital. I think he made that statement in his evidence this morning. They have the power to make similar expenditures for the care of the men to which you have.

By Hon. Mr. Marcil:

Q. Are the orders of the Commission subject to Orders in Council for the payment?—A. Yes.

By Brigadier-General Mason:

Q. You spoke about an hospital you desired to have?—A. Yes.

Q. These men are soldiers who are physically unfit, and the desire is to cure them in the first place, and then train them for some occupation by which they could earn their living?—A. Yes.

Q. Supposing you had an hospital for 1,000 men in that condition, how would you deal with them? Would you send them away to smaller hospitals to get their vocational training?—A. Well, we give them the vocational training while they are in the hospital.

Q. You would take care of 1,000 men in the large hospital?—A. Yes.

Q. I think you said 200 would be a small size?—A. That is a minimum.

Q. But you could not take care of a thousand men in this hospital?—A. Yes, because all the men do not have vocational training, only a certain percentage.

Q. What would be the staff of an hospital of that sort?—A. I am sorry I could not tell you.

By Mr. Middlebro:

Q. You have 275 patients here, and have still available beds for 325?—A. Yes.

Q. You have an offer of a convalescent home at Maisonneuve at a probable expenditure of $65,000, whereby you could get 600 beds more. That would double your accommodation?—A. Yes.

Q. That would be 1,200 beds altogether?—A. Yes.

Q. At the present time do you know whether or not you have had accommodation for every soldier that has been returned to you?—A. Yes, we have more than enough.

Q. Can you suggest to the Committee anything that we can recommend or do with a view to improving the condition of the returned soldier reasonably and at a reasonable cost?—A. Well there are a great many things. The man who is discharged receives 15 days' pay as an allowance, and then he is sent down to the Provincial Employment Bureau to secure a position. I hardly think it is long enough for some of the men. A great many of them are all right, but I think at least a month's allowance should be given the men so as to give them a chance.

By the Chairman:

Q. Do you think that the Patriotic Fund should continue its assistance to the family beyond the date of the discharge of the soldier?—A. I do, sir.

[Lieut.-Col. C. F. Smith.]

By Mr. Ross (Middlesex).

Q. How long?—A. A month I should say.

By Mr. Middlebro:

Q. He should get it as though he were not discharged for a month to enable him to get on his feet?—A. Yes. All men who are discharged receive two weeks' pay and allowance. We give him a chance to get on his feet.

Q. You were going to say something else?—A. That is another point. A great many of the men—under 20 per cent—have a hard time—it is very hard on some of them, and that point should be taken up by the Pensions Board.

By Mr. Ross (Middlesex):

Q. They get a gratuity now?—A. Some do and some do not. It is a small gratuity—$50.

Q. You think every man, whether he gets a large gratuity or a small one, should be paid a month's separation allowance, and that the Patriotic Fund payment should continue for one month to help him get on his feet?—A. Yes.

By Mr. Bennett:

Q. You mean less the amount of pension he may receive?—A. We give his pay right up to the pension. That is where we had our trouble before.

By the Chairman:

Q. You feel that whatever complaints there have been in Montreal have been due to the too sudden cutting off of all financial assistance where men have been discharged from your hospitals?—A. Yes, we have had a lot of trouble that way.

Q. With the returned soldiers who have not succeeded in getting jobs or who have not succeeded in holding jobs, immediately upon being discharged?—A. Yes; and then we have the man who is not very strong, for whom it is very difficult to procure work. A man who has had shock cannot go near a factory where there is any noise. It is difficult to pick out a position that will suit him. Those are the cases we have.

Q. You think the Government pay and allowance and the Patriotic Fund where necessary should be continued for a longer time than they are, notwithstanding the fact that the man draws a pension?—A. Yes. Well, the pay would continue until the pension was given.

Q. Supposing the pay is 20 per cent and the pension is $8 a month, do you think a man who is only getting an $8 pension should be ineligible for any further assistance from other sources?—A. I think he should get it.

Q. A discharge with an $8 pension is almost as bad as being discharged without anything?—A. We have had some difficulty with men coming back with artificial limbs, their legs cut off below the knees, and these men have a $16 pension. Now, one man had three or four children and it probably would take him quite a long while to get used to that leg.

Q. And no pension is given at present for children if a man has less than 60 per cent disability?—A. No, and all that man would have to live on would be $16 a month.

Q. Would you favour a payment for children following on down to the 40 and 20 per cent disability pensions?—A. I think that in a great many cases it would be advisable.

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. Would you not think Col. Smith, taking it by and large, that in all cases that ought to be so?—A. Yes, I think it would be better.

[Lieut.-Col. C. F. Smith.]

By the Chairman:

Q. For example, here is the Pension Commissioners' present scale of pension. If a man has three children and he belongs to Class 1 or Class 2 or Class 3, the three children, according to the pension, will each get $6 a month. That would be $18 for the three children. Would you not think it would be better if the payments were: Class 1, $6, Class 2, $5, Class 3, $4, Class 4, $3, Class 5, $2. That is, grade down so as to go as far as the lowest classes?—A. Well, in a great many cases you have this result; in the case of the man I spoke of, with the artificial limb, he was unable to do anything, practically, it took him a long while to get used to the limb. In the meantime he had a wife and four or five children who were only receiving $16. If you made a grading down so as to give $2 for his four children that would only be $8 more, or $24 a month.

By Mr. Bennett:

Q. Not in that case? As I understand it you provide some payment if the man is being trained?—A. Yes, if he is being trained.

Q. So that if a man is being trained a certain amount is paid to him by the Commission?—A. Yes.

Q. He is discharged and gets a pension, and is re-enlisted on the civil side?—A. Yes, in the case of a man who is being trained, but this man I allude to is not.

Q. I want to ask you, on Mr. Marcil's suggestion, about the case of a man who is discharged, gets a pension and goes out to work. Unfortunately he develops symptoms that prevent him from further continuance in his occupation, directly traceable to injuries he received in the war. Can that man go back to the hospital under the new regulations?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What about his pay and allowance?—A. He goes back on pay and allowances.

Q. Would there be any difficulty in his getting back on the Patriotic Fund?—A. No, the Patriotic Fund is the easiest thing to arrange. If the Government was as easy as the Patriotic Fund it would be a very good thing.

Q. Is there not a danger of certain delays arising?—A. Yes, there have been.

Q. Have there been any cases in which there have been a very great deal of friction?—A. This is one of the big troubles we have: A man in England is about to be discharged. His wife, in Montreal, receives a letter one day from the Government to the effect that her husband is now discharged in England. She has been receiving an allowance and assigned pay. The man may not come over to Canada for two or three months. In the meantime, his wife and children in Canada are without any money except what the Patriotic Fund grants.

Q. The new Order in Council has to some extent overcome that difficulty?—A. Yes, but that is where the man is discharged in Canada. If the man is discharged in England he does not get his pension until he arrives here.

Q. As I understand it, the soldier's pay goes on under the new Order in Council until the first pension cheque comes in?—A. The trouble there, I think is, that if a man is discharged to Canada, for one reason or the other—

By the Chairman:

Q. Do not use the word "discharged." What you mean is that his account with the paymaster in England was closed, without his account with the paymaster in Canada being opened at the same time?—A. That is the expression used in the letter, that the man is "Discharged to Canada."

Q. But that simply means that his account in England was closed. The trouble has been that, at the time when the paymaster's account in England was closed, an account was not opened at the same time with the paymaster in Canada, and there would sometimes be a hiatus of a couple of months?—A. Yes.

THE CHAIRMAN: But under the new Order in Council the assigned pay and separation allowance goes on right up to the time that man actually receives his cheque for pension. The man Colonel Smith refers to is a man leaving England as a convalescent, we will say, but his account has not been opened up here in Canada, while he may be in hospital for six months. The difficulty has been that there has been a gap between the closing of one account and the opening of another.

Mr. BENNETT: And the new Order in Council meets that case.

By Mr. Middlebro:

Q. Here is a case I would like to ask your opinion upon, with regard to our system of pensions; those of our injured who have been permanently incapacitated less than 20 per cent get no monthly allowance at all; the most that can be given them is a gratuity of not exceeding $100. Do you think that a man who is injured permanently to the extent of 19 per cent of his former efficiency should receive at the very most only $100, while the man who is injured 20 per cent permanently gets $100 a year for life?—A. I think it is very unfair.

Q. We had the case of a man who is injured less than 20 per cent, but he was injured to such an extent that he could not resume his former occupation, and he got nothing except a little gratuity. What do you think of that, is it fair?—A. I do not think so. We have a dozen cases of that kind where men whose injury was less than 20 per cent could not return to the same occupation as before.

Q. You think that in such cases the men should be granted a reasonable amount of pension, especially if the injury is of such a permanent nature as to prevent him from carrying on his former occupation?—A. I certainly think so.

By Hon. Mr. Marcil:

Q. Is there any difference between the amount of allowance given this year, and the amount given the year before, by reason of the increased cost of living?—A. The allowance is about the same as last year; at the present time we are giving them a small increase owing to the high cost of living.

Q. But is the Government increasing the pension on account of the high cost of living? Do you know what the difference is between the cost of living now and what it used to be?—A. I do not know exactly, but I know it is very large; 20 per cent here.

The CHAIRMAN: I may say that the Patriotic Fund Committee is considering that question, and, in a number of instances, are increasing the amount on account of the high cost of living.

By Mr. Middlebro:

Q. The reason I put that question is that I had a man in my riding who was discharged, and who was given $25, as he was certified as being injured less than 20 per cent. I put him on as a letter-carrier, and he was physically impaired to such extent that he could not even perform the duties of a letter-carrier. Do you think that is a fair proposition?—A. No, I think that is a case that should be taken up by the Pensions Board immediately. I think that in all these cases—something new is arising every day, and I think that the Order in Council will have to be changed.

By the Chairman:

Q. Do you wish to add anything more to your testimony in your capacity as Chairman of the Relief Committee of the Patriotic Fund for Montreal? How many cases are you looking after at present?—A. About 4,000 cases.

Q. What is your monthly expenditure at present?—A. $62,000 or $63,000.

Q. What is your average per family?—A. $16.

By Hon. Mr. Marcil:

Q. Did you mention 4,000 families or persons?—A. 4,000 families.

[Lieut.-Col. C. F. Smith.]

By the Chairman:

Q. They represent eleven or twelve thousand individuals?—A. A little over twelve thousand.

Q. Have you any suggestions to offer to this Committee as far as the Patriotic Fund is concerned?—A. No, I think we have taken care of that by giving the slight increase.

By Hon. Mr. Marcil:

Q. How much has that increase been?—A. The increase going into effect next month will be about 10 per cent, sir.

By Mr. Bennett:

Q. You are serving the state voluntarily?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And the personnel of the Military Hospitals Commission in Montreal consists of whom?—A. Mr. Smeaton White of the Gazette, Dr. Shepherd, who is a physician, Mr. D. Lorne McGibbon, Sir Rodolphe Forget and myself.

Q. What time do you give to this work, Col. Smith, what part of your time does this Hospitals Commission work absorb?—A. Practically all of it.

Q. Is it not unfair to say that you are a commercial man in a large way in the city of Montreal, that is a fair statement?—A. Yes.

The CHAIRMAN: When the war is not on.

By Mr. Bennett:

Q. You are giving your services voluntarily, as the other members of the Commission are doing?—A. Yes.

By Hon. Mr. Daniel:

Q. You spoke of building a hospital here for a thousand patients at a cost of $200,000. Was that hospital for active treatment cases or vocation re-education?—A. For convalescents.

Q. Not for active treatment cases?—A. No, sir.

Q. Would that be a hut hospital?—A. One of them would be a hut hospital; the other two buildings that we have been offered, one is a concrete building and the other a stone building, and any additions we make would be hut hospitals. There has been nothing decided as yet. These have been options given that will be brought before the authorities in a week or ten days.

Q. I spoke of it because $200 a bed for a hospital was a very low charge?—A. Very low, sir.

By Hon. Mr. Marcil:

Q. Is there anything further you wish to suggest in the interest of the returned soldier that has not been covered in your examination, anything that will benefit the men when they come back especially if disabled?—A. No, I think everything is pretty well covered regarding the hospitals; they are well looked after, also vocational training and employment bureau.

The CHAIRMAN: We will hear about those latter matters this afternoon from Hon. Mr. Simard.

By Mr. Sutherland:

Q. Do you find any difficulty in fixing the line of demarcation as to the authority over the patient between the Military Hospitals Commission and the Army Medical Corps?—A. Yes, a certain amount.

By Hon. Mr. Marcil:

Q. Where is the difficulty?—A. As a layman it is very difficult to say. There is a difference of opinion.

[Lieut.-Col. C. F. Smith.]

By Mr. Sutherland:

Q. Where do you find the greatest difficulty in that respect? There naturally must be some point where the authority clashes?—A. Yes. I think if the medical officer and the O.C. division would give and take a little more we would not have a great deal of trouble with them.

Q. You spoke about calling in expert medical advice as to certain patients?—A. Yes.

Q. Does that come under your jurisdiction or the Army Medical Corps?—A. The Army Medical Corps. The A.D.M.S. has always had supervision over the Hospitals Commission, and I do not think that there has been any change. There was supposed to have been a change. The Hospitals Commission was supposed to control the matter but it never went through so that the A.D.M.S. have had charge of it.

By the Chairman:

Q. Always?—A. Yes.

Q. Has it worked satisfactorily?—A. Yes.

By Hon. Mr. Ross:

Q. Is that embodied in the exercise of that control at all?—A. I do not think so.

By the Chairman:

Q. For example, who is responsible for the selection of say Captain Grey?—Would it be Colonel Patch or the Hospitals Commission?—A. The A.D.M.S., Lt.-Col. Patch.

By Mr. Ross (Middlesex):

Q. There is some friction?—A. Not exactly friction. There has been a little misunderstanding because the A.D.M.S. did not know where it was at and the Hospitals Commission did not know where it was at and it has been patched up and things went along fairly smoothly in Montreal.

Q. Have you any recommendation as to what should be done to make that satisfactory to all concerned?—A. No.

Q. Does it impair the efficiency of the service?—A. No.

By Mr. Sutherland:

Q. While things may have gone on very smoothly in that regard, you can see where it is possible that friction might arise?—A. Yes, we have tried to avoid all friction.

Q. The patients have not suffered?—A. No.

By the Chairman:

Q. Do you think that is due to the good temper of these people or to the flexibility of the system?—A. To both.

By Hon. Mr. Daniel:

Q. You said that Dr. Grey was appointed under the Military Hospitals Commission?—A. No, by the A.D.M.S. of the division.

Q. I was going to say that Colonel Patch said he was under his control but I see he is down here as connected with your hospital?—A. He is the Medical officer in charge of the Grey Nuns.

Q. Appointed by the Army Medical Corps?—A. Yes.

Q. Then he is not responsible to you for his work at all?—A. Not exactly although he comes under us.

By Mr. Bennett:

Q. Stableness and control is always to be desired?—A. Yes, I should say so.

[Lieut.-Col. C. F. Smith.]

By the Chairman:

Q. The statements you have prepared might be filed of record insofar as they are pertinent to the issue?—A. I will hand them in.

Witness discharged.

The Committee adjourned until 2.30 p.m.

The Committee resumed at 2.48.

Dr. F. J. SHEPHERD called, sworn and examined.

By the Chairman:

Q. Are you connected with McGill College?—A. I have retired from that institution and am now emeritus professor.

Q. What position did you formerly occupy?—A. Professor of Anatomy and Dean of the Medical Faculty.

Q. You are now connected with the Montreal Hospital?—A. With both the Victoria and General Hospitals as consulting surgeon.

Q. For how many years have you practised?—A. Forty years.

Q. Then your medical experience, Dr. Shepherd, would qualify you to have positive opinion regarding the care and treatment of men coming back from the front, and this committee would very gladly hear anything you have to say, either by way of explanations, or criticism, or otherwise, regarding the returned soldiers' problem as you see it in your city?—A. I am a member of the Hospitals Commission and in that way have come in contact with these men off and on, but the Militia Department has absolute control of the medical side, and the Hospitals Commission has not had very much to say in regard to conditions of affairs which I have always objected to. I think the whole thing ought to be controlled either by the Military Hospitals Commission or by the Militia Department; there ought to be no divided authority. If the Hospitals Commission is providing for the rehabilitation of the returned soldiers it should have the treatment of them, and especially of the convalescent hospitals. I hold very strong views on that point.

Q. Am I right, then, in concluding that you feel that both the medical and educational treatment of returned soldiers in this district should be under the charge of the Hospitals Commission?—A. The treatment should be under the one control.

Q. Which?—A. I should prefer the Hospitals Commission, of course, but the Militia Department at present has the medical charge and the Hospitals Commission is really only an appendage of the Militia Department.

Q. Why do you think the treatment of returned soldiers would be better under the Hospitals Commission?—A. Because a hospital with divided authority will be no good at all. I have had a good deal of experience in hospitals, and I know that divided authority is an utter failure. That has been the case here.

By Hon. Mr. Murphy:

Q. I do not understand you to insist that the control should be under the Military Hospitals Commission?—A. No, I do not insist at all.

Q. There should be either one organization and control, but only one.—A. The two are incompatible, I think.

By the Chairman:

Q. Do you think the treatment accorded to returned soldiers in this district has been less efficient than it would have been on that account, and that anybody has suffered by reason of the existing condition of affairs?—A. It is very hard to say. I have not entered enough into the details of the treatment to know. As far as I can see the treatment has been fairly efficient, but as the work grows in magnitude it will be much more difficult to obtain efficiency with divided authority. I think there is one thing which can be safely said with regard to hospitals: The Hospitals Commission can appoint the most suitable men to certain positions, whereas with the Militia Department that is not always the case. The question of seniority enters into an appointment, and other considerations come in. There is a tremendous amount of red tape, a thing the Hospitals Commission is trying to get rid of.

Q. You agree then that the Hospitals Commission has had a freer hand——

A. Yes, a much freer hand.

Q. Than the Army Medical Corps?—A. A much freer hand and less prejudice too.

Q. Have you ever had any experience of the other system in its operation?—

A. Do you mean the control by the Militia Department?

Q. Yes?—A. I do not want to criticize the Militia Department, it has done its best.

By Hon. Mr. Daniel:

Q. You have never been connected with the Army Medical Corps?—A. No, I have never served in the Army Medical Corps.

By Mr. Middlebro:

Q. Can you give us any suggestions for the betterment of the returned soldier apart that dealing with divided authority?—A. I think special means will have to be provided for the treatment of special cases, and special hospitals will have to be instituted for special cases. That is only partially done now. I think the orthopaedic side is going to be a very important one. There is an Orthopaedic Hospital in Toronto, which is going to be a very good institution.

Q. Do you think it will be necessary to establish such a hospital in Montreal?—

A. When enough cases present themselves I think it will be very desirable. It should be placed under skilled men who are specialists in that department.

By Brigadier-General Mason:

Q. You spoke of divided authority and of the control exercised by the Militia Department. Will you explain what you mean?—A. The Militia Department has the control of the medical side of the work.

Q. Will you give us a practical illustration of what you mean by that?—A. It is very hard to give an actual case, but there is one example which happened the other day at the Grey Nuns Convalescent Home. I reported the case at the time but I do not know whether it should be mentioned here. I visited the top flat with the Doctor in Charge and came to a room where there were 25 tuberculous patients. The Doctor said he did not know anything about it, he said the matter rested with the Officer Commanding the Military District.

By Hon. Mr. Murphy:

Q. What is it the Doctor did not know?—A. He did not know these tuberculous patients were there.

By the Chairman:

Q. At which hospital was that?—A. The Grey Nuns Convalescent Home.

Q. When did it occur?—A. About a month ago, I should think.

Q. Did the Doctor not know the men were tuberculous?—A. He did not know anything about the men at all. He said it was the O.C.'s business; he had put them there without his knowledge.

By Brigadier-General Mason:

Q. I understand that army doctors treat the patients as well as civilian doctors?—

A. It depends on the medical man, you cannot make a general statement.

Q. Who regulates the doctors who treat the patients?—A. Are you referring to the Militia Department?

[Dr. F. J. Shepherd.]

Q. To both the Militia Department and the Military Hospitals Commission?—A. Well, we have not had any directly under us yet. The Military Hospitals Commission has not appointed anybody. The Military Hospitals Commission has never assumed control of the medical side. It wished to, but the Militia Department would not second the officers.

Q. How does it come about that the Military Doctors go into the Hospitals?—A. They were sent there originally. You see, the Militia Department has always had charge of the Hospitals.

Q. And then the Military Hospitals Commission came in afterwards?—A. The Military Hospitals Commission was trying to get away from the old procedure but it has not succeeded.

By Mr. Sutherland:

Q. Once a soldier enlists he is under the control and management of the Militia Department. How can that control be delegated to a body such as the Military Hospitals Commission?—A. That was arranged for by having these hospital units with Colonel Sharples in charge of the whole organization or command, whatever the right term is. Each Division has a Commanding Officer for disciplinary purposes.

Q. But as a matter of fact the soldier is under the control of the Militia Department until he is discharged?—A. He is practically under the Militia Department's charge, but if he is in the Medical Service he can be under the charge of any medical man who knows his business, I should think. We want to do the best we can for the returned soldier, that is the principal thing.

By Mr. Middlebro:

Q. I would like to follow up a little the statement you made with respect to tuberculous patients in the Grey Nuns Hospital.—A. Very good.

Q. Where did those tuberculous patients come from?—A. Some of them were men who were awaiting discharge from the Ste. Agathe Sanatorium, they refused to take further treatment. Others were going to that Institution for a time, and others, again, were probably insubordinate cases.

Q. Who was treating these men?—A. Nobody was treating them. As I say, some were awaiting discharge and others were waiting to go to Ste. Agathe, but they were under the Officer Commanding, not under the control of a doctor.

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. Was no medical treatment given to them at all?—A. Nothing at all was done for them. They were kept there until transferred to some other place. I do not think the medical officer knew anything about it, he was not told anything about it.

Q. Did the men get into the hospital without the doctors knowing anything about it?—A. I believe so. However, he himself will be able to tell you about that.

By the Chairman:

Q. To whom do you refer?—A. Captain Grey.

By Hon. Mr. Marcil:

Q. From your experience as a medical man, do you think that it is in the best interests of the returned soldier himself that the control of these hospitals should be vested in the Military Hospitals Commission, or would control by the Militia Department be preferable?—A. I think control by the Military Hospitals Commission would be better.

Q. Can you give us any particular reason?—A. The Commission is supposed to be a non-political organization for one thing. Furthermore, they have no traditions to maintain, there is not so much red tape associated with it, and it has a much freer hand.

[Dr. F. J. Shepherd.]

By Hon. Mr. Murphy:

Q. Like the late Mr. Tarte, you would make your own precedents?—A. Yes, make our own precedents. Another thing is with regard to the appointment of medical men. The idea was to employ medical men for this work who had been abroad and had served for a year or 18 months in hospitals in France or England and had performed good service there. A number of these medical men have returned to Canada and are quite willing to do any service they can for the returned soldiers. It is obvious that such medical men would be of great value because they are used to the soldiers and understand exactly the kind of work involved.

By Brigadier-General Mason:

Q. Would such medical men be members of the Army Medical Corps?—A. Yes, let me instance Doctor Keenan, Doctor Archibald and Doctor Hill of Montreal, Doctor Primrose and Doctor Ryerson of Toronto, and others. They have all been at the front and are willing to do all they can for the returned soldiers.

By Hon. Mr. Marcil:

Q. And are they not being employed now?—A. Not by the Militia Department. They have returned to their private practices.

Q. How were these appointments made by the Militia Department?—A. I do not know anything about appointments by the Militia Department.

By Brigadier-General Mason:

Q. Colonel Marlow, giving evidence the other day said the trouble arose chiefly from the fact that some of the Army Medical Corps Officers were seconded and others were not seconded, and there was divided authority. Now, in the case of the medical men who were seconded, would they be taken away from Military control?—A. They would be under the control of the Military Hospitals Commission altogether, except in regard to discipline.

By Mr. Bennett:

Q. I am going to ask you a question or two as to your qualifications. The members of the Committee now present are perfectly aware of them, but there are other members of Parliament who may not be, therefore I wished to have this evidence placed on the record. I understood you to say that you have been actively engaged in the practice of your profession in this city for many years?—A. About forty years.

Q. And during a great part of that time you were connected with McGill University?—A. Yes. I was also surgeon to the General Hospital.

Q. You were Dean of the Medical Faculty of McGill for some years?—A. Yes.

Q. Then I think you were consulting surgeon to one of the Montreal Hospitals, or perhaps two?—A. I was consulting surgeon to Victoria Hospital and Senior Attending Surgeon to the General Hospital for many years.

Q. And you are, like the rest of those who are serving upon this Hospitals Commission, giving your services to the country at the present time?—A. Yes.

Q. And in the light of your experience you are of the opinion, as a medical man, that singleness of control will achieve the best results for the returned soldiers?—A. Certainly.

Q. You have not undertaken to speak with authority with regard to the other branch of the work, but on the medical side of it you speak with authority, naturally?—A. Yes.

Q. And your view is, without discussing the reason for that opinion, that both the medical and institutional work should be under the control of one authority?—A. Certainly, I have no doubt at all about it.

Q. And, speaking as a citizen, in the interests of the soldiers, and in the light of your experience, your opinion is that a non-political commission can do better work than a political department, however well it may be administered, that is your view?—A. Yes.

Q. In the light of your experience that would be your opinion before you went on this Military Hospitals Commission at all?—A. Certainly, it should be under the control of the Commission.

Q. And in the light of what you have seen as a member of the Military Hospitals Commission you have not up to date seen any reason to change your opinion?—A. None whatever, it is in fact stronger.

Q. And having regard to the future operations, and to the increase in the number of men that must come back, singleness of control is of very great importance?—A. Yes.

Q. And you base that opinion on four grounds, as I understand you. The first ground is that under the Military Hospitals Commission you will be able, uncircumscribed by regulation or otherwise, to employ the men best fitted to deal with the medical situation at that particular point. That is a fact?—A. Yes.

Q. And, as I take it, secondly you say that you would be able to pay that man what his services might be worth, having regard to the character of the work which had to be carried on?—A. The question of remuneration is some factor, but not entirely the guiding factor; men have offered to do it for nothing.

Q. Thirdly, the Commission, as such, would have control over these men and would be able to dispense with their services at any time you saw fit without regard to military regulation?—A. Yes.

Q. And another ground, and your last, is that fitness for the position, apart altogether from seniority, or what you designated as red tape, in a general sense would be the guiding factor in employing men for the hospital work, and not any other consideration?—A. That would be very important.

Q. Is it not so that the returned soldier presents a rather difficult case in medicine more so than any other class of men, having regard to the condition of his nerves?—A. In many cases, yes.

Q. And in dealing with it from a medical standpoint, if you are going to achieve the best results regarding that, is that what you mean when speaking of the desirability of being able to employ medical men fitted, by reason of their peculiar experience, they being specialists, or otherwise, to take charge of such institutions?—A. Yes, men who know their job and who have general experience in hospital work.

Q. And in the Army Medical Corps you have to take them as they come regardless of those qualifications in a sense?—A. Yes, as far as I know I am only speaking now from what I have heard.

Q. That is your observation?—A. Yes.

Q. In the Commission you are able to command the advice and assistance of men who are experts as distinguished from a purely political department?—A. Yes, that is what I mean.

Witness discharged.

Mr. ARTHUR R. DOBLE, called, sworn and examined.

By the Chairman:

Q. You are President of the Khaki League, are you?—A. Yes.

Q. When was that formed?—A. In February, 1915.

Q. What are its objects?—A. Rather broad—they are the general welfare of the soldiers.

Q. The returned soldiers, or the enlisted soldiers?—A. Both.

Q. Do you specialize, or is it all classes of soldiers?—A. All classes of soldiers.

[Mr. A. R. Doble.]

Q. Do you take in anything except the Expeditionary Force, past and present?—
A. You mean——

Q. Do you take in the Home Service men?—A. Well, we do not have many Home Service men who have grievances.

Q. Now, as President of the Khaki League and doing very valuable work here in setting up clubs, will you give the committee the benefit of your suggestions and criticisms as to what can be done to make the soldiers' lot a more happy one, as far as this district is concerned?

By Hon. Mr. Marcil:

Q. What is the object sought in the promotion of the League?—A. Possibly I had better give the committee a brief history of the League; I will make it as short as possible. The League was formed two years ago, when it became apparent that some organization to look after the soldiers, some unofficial organization, was necessary. It was in the early days of recruiting and after the first camp at Valcartier closed men came back to the city for the winter and there were various complaints coming in that the newly recruited men were going to undesirable places. Early in the year 1915 the Local Council of Women called a general meeting to discuss what should be done. It was suggested that there should be clubs formed on the lines of the Union Jack Clubs in England, but we could not find out just then what the authorities wanted. Some officers wanted recreation rooms in their barracks, and others did not want them there, but wanted them outside, and between the two nothing was accomplished until the meeting was called by the Local Council of Women. I went down to Ottawa, saw Sir Sam Hughes, and told him all the various difficulties we had experienced in getting started. I asked him if we could get some general charter under which to work, and he said "God bless you, anything you can do for the boys will be acceptable to me." We immediately organized a Khaki Club. The object of that club was to take the men off the street, to provide recreation and refreshment for them, and to do anything we could to enable them to pass their leisure hours pleasantly. We also looked forward to the time when some of our men would be coming back to us wounded. There was also a demand at the time for a convalescent home, for the recruits who were convalescing in hospital.

By the Chairman:

Q. Pardon me interrupting you, but as far as possible we would like you to connect your remarks to the relations of your organization to the returned soldiers. We are not interested in those who do not go overseas.—A. I am coming to that immediately, Sir. We, therefore, established a Khaki Convalescent Home, on Belmont Park, in premises which were formerly the Andrew's Immigration Home, and we equipped it and organized a staff of voluntary aid nurses, and that, I believe, was the first home in Canada which was organized for returned soldiers. This was before the organization of the Military Hospitals Commission. When the first men came back that home was ready for them.

By Hon. Mr. Marcil:

Q. What date was that?—A. About July, 1915. When these men came back to Montreal, it was evident that some organization should meet them at the station, to look after them and show them on their way. We found that some of the very first men who came back required particular attention. One of them, a half-witted man, was wandering around the city, and had no place to go. We took each man to our home. In those early days the members of the Organization met the men when they arrived at the station and saw that they had everything they needed until they took their trains in the morning to go to their homes. When this first Convalescent Home, called No. 1, became overcrowded we established No. 2, which was St. George's Home, and which has since been used for another purpose. Then we established the McTavish Home which was established for shell shock and nervous cases but which unfortunately has not been used to any extent for them. We also established another Khaki Club which deals particularly with returned soldiers, and, perhaps more especially with discharged soldiers. We have found that the recruits and the returned men do not mix very well. At that place we do quite remarkable work for the men who come to us; no matter what his grievance is, whether it is about his pay and allowances, pension, treatment, whatever it is that he is in trouble about, we try to straighten out for him.

Q. Whether he was a discharged or undischarged soldier? Your responsibility does not end with his discharge?—A. No, not at all. In fact very often that is just where trouble commences, because these men when they are discharged are at the most critical period of their life. When they need most our assistance.

By Hon. Mr. Marcil:

Q. When these returned soldiers make complaints to you do you make any representations to anybody on their behalf?—A. Yes, we are continually making representations at one time or another on their behalf. A large number of them come to us for assistance or with grievances at some time or other.

Q. Has there been any complaints about men being discharged before positions have been secured for them?—A. Yes, but in many cases it is because of the man importuning for his discharge.

By the Chairman:

Q. Now perhaps you had better get back to your main story?—A. The difficulty that the soldier experiences on his discharge, is that during his military career he has been able always to go to some one person to get redress for any grievance he has. He has either his platoon commander, his company commander, or his officer commanding to go to; up to the time of his discharge, he is never without some one to go to to get his grievances remedied. When he is discharged all that falls away. There may be half a dozen offices in town. If he wants to interview the Militia Department, he goes to one part of the city; for employment to another; if his family is in trouble, he goes to the Patriotic Fund and finds that the discharged man has no further rights there. In order to avoid that, we have recently organized a co-operative committee which takes charge of these difficulties with a returned man and his family. This committee consists of representatives of all the various unofficial societies, in the city, which are trying to look after returned soldiers. It tries to prevent overlapping; makes inquiries about the circumstances of the men and their families, and tries in worthy cases to provide effective relief.

By the Chairman:

Q. No case can come before this co-operative committee but some member of the committee feels the responsibility of taking care of that case?—A. Yes, we have a permanent secretary Miss Evelyn Armstrong, daughter of Dr. George E. Armstrong. She is a voluntary worker, she looks after all these cases. In the last two months since our committee was established, we have had over 55 cases.

Q. How is this committee constituted?—A. It consists of delegates from the Soldiers' Wives League, two from each, from the Returned Soldiers' Association, from the St. George's Society, and the Khaki League.

By Hon. Mr. Murphy:

Q. How is your League financed?—A. By voluntary subscriptions.

Q. Do you get any government aid?—A. We get 75 cents per man per day for the soldiers in our two convalescent homes, but nothing for the very many men who go through our clubs.

[Mr. A. R. Doble.]

By the Chairman:

Q. Any papers you may care to file for our record, you may refer to and hand to the Secretary, and they will be printed.—A. In our club on Dorchester Street, we served 27,805 meals last year. We give a man a week's hospitality on his return, and if really needed, we will give him more, otherwise we charge a small sum in order to preserve the self-respect of the men. We do not want to make them objects of charity.

Q. What kind of cases has this co-operative committee been particularly called upon to take care of? I suppose they would be the residue cases, those belonging to nobody, they therefore would be the ones where grievances are most likely to happen?—A. I think that is a fair conclusion.

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. Have you these men classified, Mr. Doble, as to what is the matter with them?—A. We have a complete record of every case.

Q. Have you them classified?—A. We have them recorded.

Q. Have you that classification with you?—A. It would take some time to prepare it. I have a complete record of every case that we have investigated.

By the Chairman:

Q. Have you a complete record of the complaints that have been lodged with you by the returned soldiers?—A. I doubt if we have.

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. Have you concrete cases where the man's condition or care could be improved upon?—A. I think I could help you on the lines of the discussion this morning.

Q. Go ahead.—A. For instance, I think that the conflict that has been going on over returned soldiers is one that militates greatly against the welfare of the men, and I think—for instance, you have been discussing as to who should be in charge of these men when they return. It is not really a question as to whether it should be the Military Hospitals Commission or the Militia Department, but whether the objects of putting them in convalescent Homes should be medical treatment or military discipline. Military discipline so far as I know conflicts with medical treatment, and I believe that a medical officer should be in charge of military convalescent homes including the enforcement of discipline. It does not matter whether you make the convalescent home military or not.

Q. By reason of this divided authority, do you know of any returned soldier who has suffered?—A. Yes, I think the soldiers generally suffer.

Q. Tell us how. In what way is their comfort not looked after?—A. For instance, I think that the soldiers have been confined in one institution here under circumstances where their recovery is absolutely impossible.

Q. Where is that?—A. In the basement of the Grey Nuns Convalescent Home.

Q. For what reason?—A. Because the conditions of sunlight and air are such that no man could properly recover. There is not the sufficient air and proper sunlight, which, to my mind, are the greatest curative agencies these men could possibly have.

Q. Who has charge of that hospital?—A. The Military Hospitals Commission.

Q. Would you suggest a change?—A. Do you mean doing away with it?

Q. Yes.—A. No, I do not suggest that change, but I would suggest that there be no divided authority.

Q. Would you be quite content if it were under either one or the other?—A. No, do not think I would.

Q. Which do you want?—A. You want me to go down to fundamentals?

Q. That is what we want to get at.—A. I think the Military Hospitals Commission as at present constituted is an unwieldy and impossible body.

Q. Why?—A. Because they are men gathered from all parts of the Dominion, who are charged with a duty they have not any particular means of performing. I understand there have been no meetings, for instance, since September last. I think that far more effective work could be done under a commission, say, of these men, the best medical man you can get in Canada, the best qualified returned soldier, and the best business man.

Q. You think that would be sufficient?—A. I do.

Q. Coming back to this hospital where there is not sufficient light, have there been representations made to the effect that the sanitary conditions in that hospital are not what they ought to be?—A. Yes.

Q. To whom?—A. To the Chairman of the Military Hospitals Commission.

Q. Who is that?—A. Sir James Loughheed, and to Colonel Thompson.

Q. What did they have to say regarding them?—A. I think they usually acknowledged my letters.

Q. And nothing has been done?—A. I think in the course of time something has been done. For instance, (refers to manuscript) on the 23rd October I wrote to Sir James Loughheed and suggested that the technical training as carried on in the Grey Nuns Convalescent Home was not productive of good results because the conditions there were impossible, and suggested that the men should be trained at the technical schools here. That is now being done.

Q. What I was trying to get at was this: you said it was impossible for the men to recover because the light and air were so bad. Did you make any representation as to the sanitary conditions of that place?—A. Yes, I did.

Q. What did you say?—A. I have not my correspondence here.

Q. Could you get it, Mr. Doble?—A. I will bring it this evening.

Q. I would like to see what you have had to say. What we want to get at is—I don't care where the fault lies, whether in the Medical Corps or the Hospitals Commission—but where is your concrete grievance if you have any. That is what this Committee is here to find out. You represent the soldiers?—A. More or less, but I was not appointed by them.

Q. You are actually before this Committee as their representative?—A. They have not made me their representative. I represent a work going on in Montreal for the last two years on behalf of the soldiers.

Q. Would you undertake to say you are speaking on behalf of the soldiers?—A. I am speaking in their interests.

Q. Have soldiers' complaints ever been lodged with you?—A. They have.

Q. What would they be?—A. They are of various natures.

Q. Well, give us them—A. For instance, they have complained to me about their difficulties with pay and pensions.

Q. Pay and pensions have been arranged. The Government has recently issued an order in council remedying those grievances, so leave them out.—A. I have had complaints of hospital discipline and treatment.

Q. Tell us about them?—A. Well, the men feel, for instance, that in some hospitals the discipline is too strict, that the hospitals themselves bear too penal an aspect.

Q. What hospitals are those?—A. The hospital we have been discussing is, to my mind, too penal.

Q. The soldiers have made complaints specifically about that?—A. They have.

Q. What did they say? Just tell us in your own words and their words.—A. For instance, they object to the fact that punishment is too outstanding a feature there. For instance, the first thing they see when they go into the institution is a row of "clinks".

Q. That is a jail?—A. Yes.

Q. Do they tell you that they are put in the clink?—A. Yes.

Q. Why?—A. I am giving you hearsay things. You are asking me what I heard, not what I know.

[Mr. A. R. Doble.]

Q. Do you think that what you have heard then is worthy of credence?—In a great many cases—

Q. Have you any concrete cases in that line?—A. I have no concrete cases to give you now.

Q. Do you go to these hospitals yourself, Mr. Doble?—A. I do.

Q. What, in your opinion, is the manner in which they are managed generally?—A. You understand that two of the hospitals are hospitals which we ourselves offered the Hospitals Commission, and which we furnished, and for which we supplied the personnel.

By Hon. Mr. Murphy:

Q. Were they accepted by the Hospitals Commission?—A. They were.

Q. What Hospitals were they?—A. The Khaki League Homes.

Q. What do you mean by "provided the personnel", you mean the nurses?—A. The nurses are provided by the Voluntary Aid Detachment. They are all voluntary nurses; none of them have ever been paid, and they have done magnificent work.

Q. Are you quite satisfied with the management of those?—A. Certainly I am, of those two hospitals.

Q. Which two?—A. The two Khaki League Hospitals.

Q. What do you call them?—A. No. 1 and No. 3.

The CHAIRMAN: Belmont Park and MacTavish Street.

Q. They are both in Montreal?—A. Yes.

Q. With those two you have no complaint to make?—A. I naturally would not: they are our own.

Q. What others do you complain of?—A. I am not here to complain of any hospitals. I have told you what men say. One complaint you hear is that, instead of sending men to our hospitals the returned soldiers are not sent there except in small numbers, but are sent to the Grey Nuns, while camp men are put in our hospitals. The hospital we especially provided for returned soldiers suffering from shock, has been filled with men who have not gone overseas, camp men.

Q. Have you inquired about that?—A. Yes.

Q. With what result?—A. The proportion of those from overseas has been increased.

By the Chairman:

Q. Were your two hospitals provided for overseas soldiers or for whom?—A. Any soldier.

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. Was it your idea camp men should not be treated in your hospitals?—A. No, that was not the idea, but I have told you the special facilities which we thought could be given by our No. 3 hospital.

Q. Under those circumstances there is no complaint to make if that hospital established for camp men instead of overseas men?—A. Except we think the returned men should have the first call.

Q. Is it at the Hospitals Commission's request that camp men are put in there?—A. No, I think not. I think they naturally send the returned men to the institution which they completely control.

Q. And the overflow?—A. No. 7. The local military authorities were anxious to find some place that they could put camp men in need of medical treatment and as they filled up our home.

By the Chairman:

Q. Do you find that they do not mix?—A. No, they do not, because the majority of the men being camp men they monopolize the facilities and crowd out the returned soldiers who feel they are entitled to special consideration.

[Mr. A. R. Doble.]

Q. Are the camp men to be sent to the military hospitals under the regular charge of the A.D.M.S., or is it expected the camp men shall be sent to voluntary hospitals equipped by special subscriptions?—A. I cannot answer for that; they are so sent.

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. Besides the question of the clink in the Grey Nuns hospitals, what are the other complaints?—A. I think the practical difficulty is that the discipline is administered by a man who is not a medical man.

Q. Who is that?—A. The officer commanding the division, Major Hall.

Q. The discipline is administered by him?—A. Yes.

Q. In what way do they complain? Is it that the discipline is too strict?—A. They have various complaints. For instance I had a complaint, whether it is well founded or not I do not know, that a man was put in the clink for smoking.

Q. Is smoking prohibited?—A. In the wards I believe it is.

Q. Any other complaints?—A. Well, I have not in mind any particular complaint. The complaints are coming in all the time. I am quite sure you will hear all about those cases when you call the secretary of the Returned Soldiers Association.

Q. But you take up those complaints? That is part of your office to take up those complaints?—A. We endeavour to investigate, but it is not our business to interfere with the administration of another institution.

Q. The only institution you take any responsibility for is your own?—A. Certainly.

Q. Those are only two institutions?—A. Yes.

Q. But if there are any complaints of other institutions would it not be your duty, as President of the Association, to look after them and get at the bottom of them?—A. In the interest of the soldier, if I thought complaints were well founded or there were any grievances, I would try to get them righted, certainly.

Q. Does it come down to this, that the only grievances that you have endeavoured to get righted are that the air and light are bad in the Grey Nuns hospital, that the soldiers have complained that it has too much of a penal aspect about it? I may have forgotten some of the complaints, but those are the only two with the exception of the fact that discipline is maintained; are those the only grievances the soldiers here have against the hospital that are not directly under the Khaki League?—A. I do not know, sir. Those, to my mind, are fundamental complaints, because every man who goes through an institution where he does not receive proper treatment deteriorates, and therefore will become a greater charge on this country for pensions and otherwise, so that it seems to me that is a fundamental matter.

Q. Quite so, but are those the only ones?—A. Those are the ones which I have considered it is particularly important to have corrected.

Q. And have you made representations of all those to the Department or to the Hospitals Commission, or to whoever is the man higher up?—A. So far as I possibly can.

Q. And you have your letters to show that, and you can give them to the Committee?—A. Yes, I have a list of considerable correspondence here, of various subjects that have been dealt with.

By the Chairman:

Q. And is it not a fact that since you have been making those representations a new hospital has been opened which is not open to those criticisms—the Loyola Hospital on Drummond street?—A. I think, as far as the training goes, that those difficulties are avoided by the use of McGill and the Montreal Technical School.

Q. Have you visited the new Loyola Convalescent Home?—A. Not since it was completed.

[Mr. A. R. Doble.]

Q. Have you reason to believe that sunlight and air will be insufficient in that new home that is going to be used?—A. But no, what you must remember——

Q. I want to know whether the Hospitals Commission has not been providing another hospital, very much superior to the Grey Nuns hospital and not open to the criticisms that have been made?—A. The difficulty is not with the wards in the Grey Nuns hospitals. The wards are clean and I believe well lighted, but the men have been confined in the basement recreation room, which is filled up with smoke, where there are from two to three hundred men, pretty nearly all day long, where the conditions are such that they are constantly breathing foul air and never get proper daylight.

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. Have they to stay down in the recreation room?—A. Practically so. You have been given the hours.

Q. Are they allowed to go up into the wards in the day time?—A. I believe they are not allowed to do that.

By Hon. Mr. Marcil:

Q. The building itself is satisfactory?—A. I think the building is satisfactory for the purpose for which it has been used, but I think it is not entirely satisfactory for the purpose for which it is about to be used.

Q. It was chosen by the Hospitals Commission?—A. I think if patients are to be confined in a building which is anything but fireproof that it is simply rank injustice to men who have already exposed their lives for us once, to expose them further to the possibility of death from fire.

Q. Who has control of that hospital?—A. The Military Hospitals Commission.

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. You were going on to tell us that you also had correspondence on other subjects?—A. Yes.

Q. I take it that is a list of the subjects you corresponded about which you have in front of you. What are the other subjects which you had reason to correspond about and make complaint if any or recommendations if any?—A. Do you want me to read the list?

Q. Yes, read it?—A. There is a reference here to vocational training. Some of these are in the way of recommendations and not criticisms.

Q. Give us now any criticism that you have got, and we will get the rest of it later?—A. Well, I find a letter here on the clothing furnished to the men. We furnished during the past year nearly 500 men with clothes.

Q. Returned soldiers?—A. Yes. There might be some others, but a very frequent complaint is that the clothing which they are entitled to receive on discharge is not satisfactory.

Q. Who supplies that clothing?—A. The Government.

Q. Have you had any complaints along those lines?—A. Quite a number of them.

Q. You know of these things of your own knowledge?—A. I know that there have been many complaints; I cannot tell you how many.

Q. You know there have been many complaints?—A. Yes.

Q. What are the returned soldiers furnished with in the way of clothes?—A. When they are discharged?

Q. What are they furnished with?—A. I believe the Government furnishes them with a complete suit of civilian clothes and an overcoat in winter to the value, including the overcoat, of $13.

Q. Is that done through you?—A. No.

Q. Who is that done through?—A. You will have to ask a military man to tell you.

[Mr. A. R. Doble.]

Q. You do not know anything about it?—A. No.

Q. You have some criticism to make on that question of clothing?—A. Well, the men, of course, complain that the clothing is not substantial enough.

By Hon. Mr. Marcil:

Q. Have you seen any of those suits yourself?—A. Yes.

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. What do you think of them?—A. I think, perhaps, they are all you can expect for the money.

Q. Do you think the money is enough?—A. I think you gentlemen realize that $13 does not go very far to provide an outfit.

Q. Then you do not think it is enough?—A. No.

By the Chairman:

Q. What does your experience in clothing men lead you to think?—A. We fit men out with clothes and boots.

Q. What does it cost you?—A. We fit them out with second-hand clothing given to us by kind friends, and occasionally we buy boots, underwear, etc., when we run short.

By Brigadier-General Mason:

Q. Winter or summer?—A. All year around.

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. What do you think is a sufficient amount to fit a man out with clothes and boots?—A. I cannot say.

Q. If $13 is too little how much do you think would do it?—A. That is a hard question to answer. The price of a substantial suit of clothes might vary in different places. Take Montreal, what would it cost?—A. Well, I should say at the very least twice $13.

Q. And you think that should be granted?—A. I think that should be granted.

Q. What other complaints or criticisms are there?—A. Well there are complaints sometimes that men have not been able to get proper medical treatment.

Q. After their discharge?—A. During their convalescence.

By Brigadier-General Mason:

Q. Pending their discharge?—A. Yes.

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. Whilst they are in the hospital?—A. Yes.

Q. In what way has that been lacking?—A. Sometimes men say that there are so many cases in the hospitals and it is impossible for the staff to get around.

Q. Have you heard that complaint made of any specific hospital that is undermanned and not able to take care of its patients?—A. I have heard men say that they had not seen a doctor for a considerable period of time, and they did not know what they were doing there.

Q. What hospital?—A. The Grey Nuns.

Q. Any other hospital than the Grey Nuns?—A. No.

Q. How many of those complaints have you had?—A. I really could not tell you. Complaints of course are frequent. Some are not well founded and one has not time to sift every complaint which may be made to us.

Q. Take any one case you know of a man that has complained that an hospital is undermanned and that he has not seen a doctor for several days. Can you give me any one specific complaint of that kind?—A. I think the Secretary of the Returned Soldiers Association will probably be able to tell you.

[Mr. A. R. Doble.]

Q. You do not know from what he was suffering or anything of that kind? Take any case that you can bring to your mind of the man complaining he was not sufficiently taken care of, can you recall any instance of whether you know what that man was suffering from. Give me one case please?—A. Well, a man approached me yesterday on the car. I did not take his name because I did not want to get him into trouble, as he told me he was out without leave, but he said that it was not much good his being in the hospital because he seldom saw the doctor.

Q. What was the matter with him?—A. I think it was largely nervousness, but he had lost a leg.

Q. Was there sufficient recovery from the leg being taken off to not need the services of a medical man?—A. No, I should think not.

Q. Then that is a case you would put down to neglect or to undermanning?—A. To undermanning, I should say.

Q. And that case came from the Grey Nuns hospital?—A. Yes.

Q. Is that the only case of the kind you can tell the Committee of?—A. If I had my complete records here I could probably give you other cases. As I have already said, I did not come prepared to answer some of these questions, because I understood that cases of complaint of treatment by returned soldiers would be made through the Returned Soldiers' Association, and would be presented this evening by Trooper Brown.

Q. Then if you have no other cases to cite, we will leave the remainder to Trooper Brown. Have you any suggestions to make as to things that are not being followed out in regard to returned soldiers? Have you any information that would aid this Committee in preparing their report? For instance, if you were asked today what more you would do for the returned soldiers, what would you reply?

The CHAIRMAN: The returned soldier who comes back unfit.

Q. To be taken care of.

The CHAIRMAN: Not the demobilized soldier, but the returned soldier who is unfit?—A. Of course, each man is almost an individual problem. The work which we do is quite unlike any other work. We get hold of each man and try to deal with his particular case, it is largely a psychological problem.

Q. There is no doubt about that, but what I want to know is that if you were asked what you would do for the returned soldier, other than is being done, what would you reply?—A. Of course, that is the whole problem.

Q. Certainly it is. That is the whole thing. Now certain things are being done at present, what more would you want to have done?

By Mr. Ross (Middlesex):

Q. What do you want done to improve their condition? Perhaps that is better, what do you want done to improve their condition?—A. I think, for instance, Discharge stations should be established where men would not be subject to the temptations they have to contend with now in drinking. One of the great difficulties we have to meet in dealing with the returned soldiers, is drunkenness, which begins when the men are discharged at Quebec. One of the things I have recommended is that the Discharge Office should be removed from Quebec, because the men when they come back and are discharged through Quebec are almost inevitably subjected to great temptations in the way of liquor.

Q. Where would you have them discharged?—A. I suggest they should be discharged from St. John or Halifax.

Q. Dry towns?—A. Yes.

By the Chairman:

Q. Would you undertake to say from your wide experience of the returned soldiers in the city of Montreal, what percentage, in a general way, of the trouble is due to intoxicating liquor?—A. I think a very large percentage, Sir Herbert. I think their troubles are greatly aggravated by drink. If there were no whisky in Montreal in my opinion one half of our difficulties would be removed.

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. Do not the liquor license regulations prohibit the selling of whisky to returned soldiers?—A. Yes, but——

Q. Or to any soldier at all?—A. To any soldier in uniform, but the regulations do not apply to the discharged man. He goes back into mufti.

By Hon. Mr. Marcil:

Q. Have not prosecutions been executed against those who sold liquor to those in uniform?—A. Our Association is trying to cope with the evil and do the best we can.

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. Were any efforts made to prevent the selling of liquor to soldiers?—A. Yes.

Q. What results were obtained?—A. Special Detectives were put at work and efforts made to discover the places where the law was violated.

Q. What has been the result?—A. I think they are doing the best they can.

Q. Have there been any prosecutions?—A. I have not heard of any.

By Brigadier-General Mason:

Q. Do you think the complaints which you have been hearing from time to time are genuine?—A. Many complaints are not genuine, there is no doubt about that.

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. What else would you suggest in the way of improvements or reforms, having for their objects the amelioration of the conditions for returned soldiers?—A. I would suggest that the dual control, of which mention has been made to-day, be abolished, and that the men be placed under one authority or the other.

Q. That matter has been discussed pretty thoroughly. Is there anything else?—A. I think the proper military hospitals should be provided for the men we are going to get back, especially the bed cases. I have already told you that I do not think the Grey Nunnery is a suitable place for bed cases, or amputation cases. The structure would burn very quickly, and I think there would be extreme difficulty in rescuing these men, some of whom have lost both legs, who will be coming back to us. To get such men out of a five or six story building, lying helpless as they are by rolling them in mattresses, would be an extremely difficult thing.

Q. Do you agree with what has been said here this morning, that in view of the great conveniences in the Montreal hospitals, it would be as well to treat these men in civilian hospitals and not strictly military hospitals, or do you know anything about that?—A. Yes, I think the equipment of the civilian hospitals is so good that it should be utilized in many cases for the returned soldiers, even at the inconvenience of civilians. I think the returned soldiers have the first claim on the country, and a little inconvenience to civilians would be comparatively trifling as compared with the convenience of returned soldiers.

By the Chairman:

Q. Are you referring to Camp cases?—A. No, I am speaking of returned soldiers.

By Hon. Mr. Marcil:

Q. Is the returned soldier given a choice of hospitals?—A. No, he is not consulted as to which hospital he shall go to.

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. Did I quite get to the end of the subjects you have corresponded with the department on?—A. Probably all that would interest you without delaying your programme.

[Mr. A. R. Doble.]

Q. Was this correspondence in connection with returned soldiers?—A. Always in connection with soldiers and mainly in connection with returned soldiers.

Q. To secure the betterment of their condition?—A. Certainly.

Q. What are there?—A. Well, I have a heading here "The Effect of the Treatment of Returned Soldiers on Recruiting." Would that interest you?

Mr. MIDDLEBRO: Tell us what the treatment is, and then we can form an opinion.

The WITNESS: I really think one great difficulty has been, as I said before, the returned soldier has had no one place where he could go and state his case and get proper redress, outside of the work we are trying to develop. He has difficulty in getting a hearing and in getting properly attended to. In the meantime, he is apt to go round and growse and people naturally sympathize with him, and it has done a great deal of harm.

By Mr. Ross (Middlesex):

Q. Do you think the Government should establish an office in the city of Montreal and also one in the city of Toronto, particularly for the purpose of listening to the complaints of returned soldiers? Is that your idea?—A. I think there should be one central place established. We are endeavouring to provide that now.

Q. Yourselves?—A. Yes. For example, when a soldier enlists he sees armouries, recruiting stations and other facilities provided for the man who is going away. But there is very little in the way of such facilities placed at the disposal of the man who comes back. He has so far been unable to find any one place where he could go and state his case and get a prompt hearing.

By the Chairman:

Q. Do you think there should be situated in each military district what might be called a Soldiers' Information Bureau with some person on hand to answer all questions relating to returned soldiers?—A. I think some such thing would be a great advantage, Sir Herbert.

Q. Would you have such a bureau conducted as a regular official department of the Government?—A. No. I think the Patriotic Fund is an example, and a very shining example, of what unofficial effort can do. There are many things that can be better and more economically done, with less red tape to clog progress, by unofficial effort than by official action. Unfortunately there is usually as much red tape about the operation of official agencies. That is what we have found.

Q. Do you think that this Bureau of Information for Returned Soldiers might better succeed under the control of some sort of co-operating committee?—A. Yes, because we find that our own co-operating committee is working extremely well.

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. Where would the funds come from for such work?—A. Well, we find that a good deal is done at present by unofficial effort as a labour of love.

By the Chairman:

Q. Would the Soldiers' Aid Commission do that?—A. There is no Soldiers' Aid Commission in this province, but there is the Soldiers' Employment Bureau. That is under the control of the Hon. Mr. Simard, who will be able to tell you all about it.

By Hon. Mr. Daniel:

Q. Would it not be possible for every returned soldier to get such information at the office of the General Officer Commanding the District?—A. The great object is to restore these men to civilian life, therefore it seems to me you should have for this purpose a non-military and unofficial agency.

Q. What could you have that would be more efficient than the regular military authorities?—A. The contact of the man with his former companions and the touch of human sympathy help to restore him to civilian life and to bring about his rehabilitation.

Q. And many of the returned soldiers are discharged men?—A. As Sir Herbert says, many are discharged men over whom the military authorities have no control.

Hon. Mr. DANIEL: I thought you were referring to the soldier, not to the discharged man.

By Mr. Bennett:

Q. Your report shows that many of the returned soldiers have found employment. That would reduce to a minimum the number of men who are complaining?—A. It is not difficult to find places for men, but it is very difficult to keep the men in the places that have been found.

Q. I have been looking at your figures, and it would seem that you have no unemployed returned soldiers practically, in this district. If that be so, how can there be many men to make complaints. Either there are not many men going around making complaints or the return is incorrect?—A. There are a great many men who are quite incapable of keeping steady employment, and they are practically going around from one place to another and working at each place but a short time.

By Hon. Mr. Marcil:

Q. Has the man lost his position through his own fault, or is it due to a state of health resulting from his services at the front?—A. Very often the man, as a result of his military service is rendered incapable of holding his job.

Q. What do you do for a case like that?—A. We try to fit a job to the man if we possibly can.

The CHAIRMAN: I think the matter of employment can possibly better be discussed when the Hon. Mr. Simard is called to the witness stand.

By Hon. Mr. McCurdy:

Q. How many nurses have you on the staff employed in your hospitals?—A. You are speaking now of our Khaki League hospitals?

Q. In your No. 1 and No. 3 Hospitals?—A. I should say that there are, probably, at one time, six or eight nurses on duty at each place.

Q. Do I understand you to say that they are all Voluntary Aid Nurses?—A. They are in our own hospitals; they are not all graduate nurses, but they have been there doing this work gratuitously and they are doing it very well. There are a number of masseuses nurses there who are giving their services voluntarily.

By Hon. Mr. Daniel:

Q. Those nurses you speak of as not having graduated have instructions in First Aid and matter of that kind, and pass examinations, but they are not what you call graduate nurses?—A. No, they are not graduate nurses, although we have some graduate nurses there, who, like the rest serve voluntarily.

Q. Are not these soldiers who go there from time to time under discipline?—A. The Hospitals Commission have complete jurisdiction over all soldiers up to the time of a man's discharge.

Q. Then the Military Hospitals Commission have a central point to which they can make complaints—you raised that point, and I understand there is a place here to which they may complain?—A. Up till the time of discharge, I understand that they are absolutely under the jurisdiction of the Military Hospitals Commission.

Q. I know in practice that often he is looked after even after he leaves the hospital?—A. After the man is finally discharged?

Q. Certainly?—A. The Government has no control over him after he is finally discharged, he is nominally restored to civil life.

Q. But you do not mean to say that the Military Hospitals Commission do not pay any attention to him after he is discharged. As I am advised every man who goes there, whether discharged, or not discharged, receives attention and his grievances are always listened to, he always meets with a civil reception, and everything is done for him that can be done?—A. As far as I know the Military Hospitals Commission has no jurisdiction over him.

Q. I know that they do not control the discharged men, but do they not in practice deal with every soldier discharged or undischarged, if he has a grievance?—A. I am quite certain that if any discharged soldier went to them with a complaint they would do the best they could to aid him, but it is not their job. They do it as an act of grace and voluntarily.

By Mr. Middlebro:

Q. This is a report of an agreement between the Dominion and the Provincial Governments which says:

By arrangement between the Governments of the Dominion and the respective Provinces, the Government of each Province undertook to appoint a Provincial Commission to consider the best methods and plans to be adopted for the solution of the various problems involved in taking care of and finding employment for the members of the Canadian Expeditionary Force who returned to Canada during the period of the war, and at a conference held between the Military Hospitals Commission and representatives of the provincial Governments, it was agreed—

And among other agreements was one that the various provinces through the Soldiers' Aid Commissions agreed to find employment for discharged soldiers,—
—A. I said that there was no Soldiers' Aid Commission in Quebec, but that the corresponding body here was the Provincial Employment Bureau.

Q. Who is the president of the Soldiers' Aid Association?—A. There is no Soldiers' Aid Association in Quebec; there is the Provincial Employment Bureau, but I think their functions are purely to find employment for the returned soldiers.

Q. You spoke about cells being provided in the Grey Nuns Hospital as if the men were being shoved in these cells against their will. These cells were, I suppose, provided when the building was erected?—A. No, they were put in for this purpose.

Q. And the one person you know of who had been put in there was put there because he had been smoking against the regulation?—A. No, men no doubt frequently have been there.

Q. Have you any complaint of men who have been put there unjustly?—A. Yes.

Q. Can you give us a specific instance of what they were confined there for? Will you tell me the name of some soldier who has complained of being confined there and what he was being put in for?—A. Of course the whole difficulty is as I have told you—

Q. Excuse me, I want you to give a specific instance of a soldier who said he was put in this cell for doing a certain thing?—A. A soldier was confined there some time ago—it is not a question that I want to go into.

Q. I want to know the class of offences for which they were put in there?—A. There are various offences provided for under the military regulations, and if a soldier infringes those regulations there is a scale of penalties attached.

Q. Give me a specific instance?—A. I heard of one case where a soldier was confined in one of the clinks for two days during the summer, he was tubercular, and there were no sanitary appliances.

Q. What was his offence?—A. I cannot tell you what his offence was.

Q. But if you cannot tell what his offence was, you do not know whether his confinement was just or not?—A. No matter what his offence was, he should not have been confined without sanitary appliances. I object to the clink because I think it is unfortunate that when a man comes back from serving his country—

By the Chairman:

Q. What would you do when a man went out at 5 o'clock in the evening, and comes back roaring drunk? What would you do with him?—A. I grant you he should be disciplined, but I think there is a choice of methods.

Q. Would not the best place to put that man be as near the door through which he came as possible so that he would cause as little disturbance as possible to the patients at night?—A. I could not say that.

By Mr. Middlebro:

Q. Let us go further into this. We will probably see in to-morrow's papers the statement that the soldiers are imprisoned in this clink because they broke the rule about smoking. Do you know, of your own knowledge, that the soldier objects to these clinks simply because he does not like to see them?—A. I think from a public point of view they are unfortunately situated.

Q. I grant you that, but supposing that a soldier comes in drunk and disorderly, and you cannot make him desist in any other way and there are 200 other patients in that hospital who want to sleep and cannot because of this inconvenience, do you think because the soldier does not like to see the clink there they should not have it?—A. I think they should be put in some other place.

By the Chairman:

Q. But they are nearest the door through which he came; where would you have them?—A. I think they would be better in the cellar.

By Mr. Middlebro:

Q. Then the only objection you have to the clink is that they are not in the cellar, so that the drunken man would not see them?—A. No, that is not my only objection.

Q. Then what is your objection,—A. I have said that I consider the whole aspect of the institution is too penal.

Q. It is not penal unless they inflict the penalties.—A. I say the aspect.

Q. But if they are not used at all you think that it has a bad influence?—A. I certainly do, yes.

Q. You do not know of any specific offence for which a man has been put in there?—A. No, but the records will show that.

Q. You really cannot say as to whether or not anybody merited the punishment they got?—A. No doubt they did.

Q. Of your own knowledge you cannot tell whether they merited it or not?—A. If you ask me whether the military officers have the right to inflict adequate punishment I suppose they would have; I think the soldiers should be punished when necessary.

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. But you think there are ways and ways of punishment?—A. Certainly. The whole problem is a difficult one. You have a number of these men coming back into civil life and they have to be treated reasonably. Very often these men have been under terrible strain.

By the Chairman:

Q. When you have returned soldiers and camp soldiers, do you think they should be put in the Grey Nuns Hospital on the same rule?—A. I think the two classes of men would be better kept apart, in different hospitals.

[Mr. A. R. Doble.]

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. In your Khaki League Hospitals, have you discipline?—A. Yes.

Q. And do you find that the discipline is as good in your khaki hospitals, No. 1 and No. 3, as it is in the Grey Nuns Hospitals?—A. Yes, I think so far as I am aware, the discipline is administered by the Medical Officer in our hospitals, and I think that should be the case in every hospital.

Q. And good order and discipline is kept there, you know?—A. There is excellent order and good discipline, provided that we have the right kind of non-commissioned officers in charge of these soldiers.

Q. You are not satisfied, apparently, with the non-commissioned officer in charge of the men at the Grey Nuns Hospital?—A. No, I do not say that at all. I am telling you what our own experience has been, that where the non-commissioned officer understands the men and treats them kindly, there is good discipline.

Q. Are you satisfied that there are good men in charge of the soldiers at the Grey Nuns Hospital?—A. I do not know anything about it.

By Mr. Middlebro:

Q. Do you not think that if you had these clinks down in the cellar as you suggest, instead of where they are now, that you would have great complaints from the men that they were imprisoned in the cellar, and then there would be the greatest row?—A. That may be, but I think discipline should be administered by the medical officer.

Q. Then you have no objection to the clinks so much as to the men who administer the discipline?—A. Yes. I think very often discipline is administered by men who have absolutely no knowledge whatever regarding the bearing which that discipline has on the man's treatment. Very often, I think, discipline is administered, which the doctor in charge of the case would not approve of.

By the Chairman:

Q. You think that it should be upon the combined judgment of the medical man and the military officer?—A. No, my opinion is that it should be in charge of the medical officer; that discipline should be administered by the medical officer and not by a combatant officer.

Q. You think that the whole administration of the hospital should be under the medical man?—A. Certainly, from A to Z.

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. Do you have men coming drunk into your hospital?—A. Yes.

Q. What do you do with them?—A. We have to confine disorderly men in the basement; sometimes men come drunk into our clubs—you have not asked me about these clubs; they are the most wonderful places of all.

Q. Tell us about the Khaki Clubs.

By the Chairman:

Q. You had better finish first by telling us what you do with the men when they come in drunk?—A. We try and straighten them up.

Q. Your two hospitals are entirely in charge of the medical men, there is no disciplinary officer in either of those institutions?—A. None, apart from the non-commissioned officers of whom I have spoken.

Q. But those men are under the control of the medical officer?—A. Yes.

Q. What do you do with those cases when they come in drunk?—A. It would depend upon the condition the man was in entirely. If he were roaring drunk, and wanted to smash up things, he would be put where he could not do it.

Q. Would any penalty be inflicted upon him besides incarceration until he became sober?—A. He would be subject to military penalties in case of drunkenness.

Q. Which consist of a fine?—A. Well the military man will tell you what they are.

[Mr. A. R. Doble.]

By Mr. Middlebro:

Q. Have you got authority in the Khaki League Hospitals to put a man in prison?—A. They are subject to exactly the same regulations as in the other hospitals. We are entirely under the jurisdiction of the Military Hospitals Commission.

Mr. Ross: Then you would have authority.

The CHAIRMAN: If there is nothing more the Committee wish to ask Mr. Doble, he may retire, and if the witness has anything to add we will be glad to have him drop in to-morrow morning. Mr. Doble might bring with him the correspondence he has referred to to-day suggesting improvements to the hospitals and homes.

The WITNESS: Yes.

Witness discharged.

Dr. F. C. St. B. HARRISON, Principal of Macdonald College, called, sworn and examined.

By the Chairman:

Q. I understand, doctor, that a number of the soldiers, about one hundred or more, went out to Macdonald College recently, and were taken through the plant?—A. Yes.

Q. Do you think that any considerable number of those men would take training while convalescents along agricultural lines, and have you anything to suggest as to the training of men while convalescent in agricultural pursuits?—A. Well, it would be necessary, first of all, to find out from those men what their previous employment was, and then divide them into two classes. In the first class, would be men who had come from agricultural occupations, and in the second class men who had not been previously engaged in agricultural occupations, but who might wish to obtain information in order that they might engage in them. In the first class, those who had some previous experience, it would be, I think, a good idea to give them further training along those lines. In the second class, those who had not much previous training, but who wished to go into that work, it would be advisable to find out if that occupation would satisfy them, and the only way of doing that is not by giving them an education, but by putting them on a farm with either an accredited farmer, or else having demonstration farms, with other farmers around them, where they may be placed for some time to see if they were capable of going on with the work or not. I may say that when speaking of farming, agriculture is becoming more specialized. By farming I mean general or mixed farming, in such occupations as orcharding, bee-keeping, poultry farming, florist work or market gardening, which are specialized forms.

Q. We have been told at Ottawa that during the convalescent period many soldiers are taught vocations. Can you at Ste. Anne's supply training to men along out-of-door lines that would improve them for earning their own living after discharge?—A. We could employ a number of them. Again, to return to what I have said, I do not think it worth while to employ such men unless they want to go in for farming, or unless they have a natural inclination that way. It is no good forcing them into farming, and it is necessary to find out from each man what his previous training was, and then give him an apprenticeship, otherwise you will have Canada full of misfits.

Q. I was not getting quite so far as that. Supposing the fifty men at the Grey Nuns Home should say in May that instead of learning wood-working or carpentry they would like to spend a couple of months of their convalescent period training in outdoor agriculture. Could you utilize these men?—A. Not to that number.

Q. Could you utilize any considerable number?—A. We could take a certain number provided that they knew something about farming.

[Dr. F. C. St.-B. Harrison.]

Q. Provided they originally knew something about it?—A. Yes, because if it is a question of giving training or work to people who know nothing about it, we have not the facilities in the summer. Our work in summer is divided into a number of departments, each doing certain definite work. From October until the end of May we are teaching. To illustrate: we take no student in our agricultural course unless he has spent a season on a Canadian farm, because we recognize that it is no use taking men who know nothing about agriculture and trying to make farmers of them, unless they know something about a farm first. We expect them to know about ploughing and other branches of farming.

Q. Supposing there were 25 men at the Grey Nunnery who had originally been farmers and who wanted to use their convalescent period in learning a little more about scientific culture. Could you take those men for a few months?—A. We could, yes.

Q. In the same way as they are now getting technical training in other lines?—A. Provided they worked in the various departments, that is to say, be divided into what we may term the outside branches, such as mixed farming, with livestock as its chief industry; the horticultural department, which is largely given up to orchards, small fruits and vegetables, and our cereal department, which tests varieties of all kinds of crops, and, lastly, our poultry department. If a man wanted to learn something about poultry, for example, you could put him to work at that and give him practical experience.

Q. What terms would you make for a man like that, who is in receipt of his pay and allowances, what would you charge him at Ste. Anne's?—A. As regards tuition, nothing.

Q. What would it cost him for his board?—A. The regular charge made to others, $5 a week.

By Mr. Middlebro:

Q. Do you think there would be any general desire on the part of the returned soldiers who have not previously been on the land to go on the land?—A. It depends upon their age and upon their previous training.

By Mr. Bennett:

Q. And where they were born?—A. Yes. You would find some who would like to go in for it. We have had about 150 of our lads go overseas. Some have been disabled and are coming back to continue their course. You will find some special men who will go through their four years' course and graduate. Take men without any previous experience, I think it would be a mistake to put them in any college first until you find out whether they like the life, and the only way to find out is to put them on a farm.

Q. That is true. But my question was: Do you think they would like the life?—A. I cannot say. You find some who do. Sir Herbert Ames has referred to the Khaki Club excursion to Macdonald College.

By the Chairman:

Q. How many men went?—A. 187.

Q. You gave them a day at the college?—A. We gave them a day out there, and tried to entertain them as well as inform them.

Q. Have you had any results from that excursion?—A. I have had one or two letters from some of those men, and I had the opportunity that day of talking to a number. We served them with a light lunch, and there were certain tables. I would go to a certain table and would ask the men what they were doing before the war. I must have spoken to about 20 men in that way. At one table they were all engaged in engineering; one was a locomotive engineer, another a stoker in the navy; all had had some experience in handling engines. I asked them what they would like to work at,

and the reply was that they would like to do something in the line of their former work. I said that the only thing I knew of for them, so far as agriculture was concerned, would be to go into what we might call agricultural engineering; that is to say, we are coming down to an era where we are using more and more the gasoline engine, the separator, the traction engine, and so on. There is a call for such men in the west.

By Mr. Middlebro:

Q. He would not be a farmer?—A. No, a specialist in that line. They are becoming numerous in Manitoba and Saskatchewan.

By Mr. Bennett:

Q. It is the individual factor in every case?—A. Absolutely.

Q. You cannot force the men into farming.

By Hon. Mr. Marcil:

Q. The statement has been made that the open air life at the front has created a desire for the country. Do you find any justification for that?—A. I have not seen it; I do not think the two things would follow with reference to my experience. Another lot of men that I happened to run across were a mixed lot. One had been farming in the West. He said to me: "What I have seen today makes me homesick, I want to get back to it." Amongst that batch of 200 I ran across one or two men like that who had been farming before. This man who had been farming in the West said that he had got homesick after seeing the cattle, and so on.

Mr. BENNETT: The smell of the land.

By Mr. Middlebro:

Q. The tendency is that a man wants to go back to his old associations?—A. That is my impression, from talking to about twenty of these men, I did not have much opportunity to meet more. As Mr. Bennett has remarked, what we have to do is to find out exactly what these men want to do, and if possible get them back into occupations they have had before, or others of a like nature.

By Mr. Bennett:

Q. And your "think" would not be any better than anyone else's?—A. No. We are prepared to help in any way. The best thing would be, if you are going to try to educate them, and they know nothing about agriculture, to have central farms and a demonstration farm in that centre with a first-class man in charge.

Q. It has been proposed that Western farmers should take these men as apprentices for a year and pay them a reasonable wage, and at the end of that time a man could determine whether he has shown such aptitude as to enable one to say with certainty that he should go on the soil. Agriculture is becoming a skilled occupation, just as much so as typewriting or locomotive engineering?—A. Quite right.

Mr. SUTHERLAND: Are you talking about convalescents?

Mr. BENNETT: Yes, and fit men.

The WITNESS: Then of course there are a lot of other things we can help. For instance you want to make a man a specialist on horticulture, growing of fruit, that is one thing and vegetables and poultry, bee-keeping and farm mechanics, etc.

By Mr. Sutherland:

Q. That is very important?—A. Yes, and another in the manufacture of butter and cheese and other special lines, gardening——

By Mr. Bennett:

Q. Truck gardening?—A. Yes, and also, which is closely allied to agriculture, the veterinary profession, if you can go along with it. Another man I ran across the other day had some dental training before enlisting and had lost an eye, and thought his eyesight was not sufficiently good to proceed with dentistry, and we turned him over to a veterinary surgeon, and he started this course. He is fitted up, and has something which is agreeable to him, but the whole matter I think is a question of finding a suitable occupation for each man.

Witness discharged.

Lieut.-Colonel MACKENZIE FORBES called, sworn and examined.

By the Chairman:

Q. What position do you occupy in connection with the Hospitals Commission?—

A. A very anomalous one, sir.

Q. What is it?—A. I was appointed by the Hospitals Commission, Medical Officer of "A" Unit. That is the Unit or Company of returned soldiers here. This nomination, or appointment, of course, had to be confirmed by the Militia Department. The Militia Department have failed to confirm the appointment, therefore, I have simply been acting as a superintendent for the Hospitals Commission, and my work is the re-organizing or re-equipping of the Grey Nuns Institution, which in the past has been a Convalescent Home; but which the Hospitals Commission had hoped to turn into an hospital for acute conditions.

Q. Your present work then, I understand, is in equipping hospitals rather than running them?—A. Yes, because the Hospitals Commission has not yet undertaken the medical or surgical care of the sick.

Q. In whose hands is the care of the sick at present?—A. The Canadian Army Medical Corps.

By Mr. Middlebro:

Q. You mean the care of the returned soldiers?—A. Both the returned and those that have not gone overseas.

By the Chairman:

Q. Had you anything to do with deciding the question whether the Grey Nuns should hereafter be used as a hospital for active cases?—A. No, sir.

Q. I understand it will no longer be a convalescent home?—A. That depends on whether the Army Medical Corps decides on carrying out the plans of the M.H.C.

Q. What difference does it make?—A. The Canadian Army Medical Corps, apparently, from the evidence given by Lieut. Colonel Patch, have decided that sick soldiers should be treated in the civil hospitals.

Q. That the wounded from overseas should go to existing civil hospitals?—A. Yes.

Q. And the view of the Hospitals Commission was what?—A. The Hospitals Commission were converting the Grey Nuns Convalescent Home into an hospital for active surgical conditions.

Q. If that is done will the criticism which we have heard here about the room in the basement being unsanitary cease to obtain?—A. Yes.

Q. Because the basement will not be used?—A. Not for the purpose for which it is used now.

Q. Are the remaining floors of that building in your judgment suitable for an active military hospital?—A. In many respects.

Q. In many ways not suitable?—A. They are suitable as far as the air space and sunlight are concerned.

Q. What unsuitability is there?—A. I do not personally approve of the Grey Nuns institution being used for an hospital.

Q. On what grounds?—A. I consider the building is too old and it is questionable whether it is not more or less dangerous as regards fire. I do not think that we can afford to use any building that is questionable.

Q. You would not put our patients up three or four stories without sufficient fire escapes?—A. The Hospitals Commission have planned a very good fire escape, but even with that fire escape I do not think it is wise.

Q. You think the seriously ill should be in an hospital where they are pretty near the ground floor?—A. No, not necessarily. A more modern and safer building is all that is required.

Q. Do you visit that hospital? Are you superintending the medical treatment?—A. No, not at all.

Q. You have, then, personally, no medical cases under your care?—A. None whatever.

Q. What is your information regarding the present system of housing invalids and convalescents. Could it be improved on?—A. I think so.

Q. In what way?—A. I think the care of the returned soldiers is a very big proposition and has to be studied very carefully. My view is that a small committee ought, originally, to have been appointed to consider what was the best thing to do, generally, for the returned soldiers. I think that committee should have been a committee of experts. It should have been a committee whose members had been chosen because they knew all about hospitals. They should have been chosen because they knew both how hospitals should be organized and administered and also how the ill and wounded should be cared for. I think that one of the first things which this committee would have done would have been to seriously consider what numbers of returned wounded might be expected, and (1) what accommodation was available, also, (2) what accommodation could be made available. In considering what accommodation could be made available, they would naturally have weighed the advantages to be derived by organizing an hospital composed of temporary huts as opposed to the present scheme of leasing public buildings and converting them into hospitals and convalescent homes. In this consideration also the advantages of keeping all returned soldiers together in one settlement would have engaged the serious attention of the commission.

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. On a large area?—A. Yes, on a large area, some huts for those seriously ill, some for those convalescing, and some for those waiting for artificial limbs. All under one command and in one place.

Q. You would be in favour of constructing, de novo, special buildings, rather than renting buildings and adapting them?—A. Very decidedly, if financial considerations permit.

By Hon. Mr. Daniel:

Q. Did I understand the witness to state that in his view it would be better to have all the returned soldiers come to one place—that is all the invalids?—A. All for this district. I am talking only of the District I know about.

By Hon. Mr. Marcil:

Q. This place would be in the country rather than in the city?—A. Unfortunately, you could not have it actually in the country.

Q. Outside the crowded part of the city?—A. It should be as close as possible to Montreal for the reason that you should have eminent medical specialists in attendance, and you cannot expect such to visit a hospital 10, 15 or 20 miles from Montreal.

Q. Would you suggest that this be on the Island of Montreal?—A. Not necessarily on the Island of Montreal, some place immediately adjacent to Montreal, as Montreal West, across the River say at St. Lambert, or even as far as Lachine, but I consider that it's easy accessibility to Montreal to be of prime importance.

Q. I understand a proposal has been made from St. Lambert?—A. I do not know.

[Lieut.-Colonel Mackenzie Forbes.]

By Mr. Bennett:

Q. I take it you think there should be single control?—A. Yes, decidedly.

Q. And your opinion is that somebody answerable to a commission should have control?—A. Yes.

Q. Not necessarily the present Hospitals Commission, but some authority?—A. Yes.

Q. You think it should be an independent organization rather than attached to a Department?—A. Yes.

Q. That is your view?—A. Yes.

Q. As a matter of fact you went overseas?—A. Yes.

Q. Have you practised your profession here for a long time?—A. Yes, 19 years.

Q. You were already a member of the Canadian Army Medical Corps when the war broke out in 1914?—A. Yes.

Q. How long were you on active service?—A. Sixteen (16) months on active service.

Q. You came back and were appointed to this position and it was not confirmed?—A. Yes.

Q. Have you had an actual knowledge of the working conditions at the front?—A. Yes.

Q. You were in what unit?—A. No. 1 Canadian General Hospital.

Q. And you have had all kinds of surgical patients and even ordinary medical cases?—A. Yes.

Q. In the light of that experience and with your knowledge of conditions as they are here now, speaking as an ex-C.A.M.C. officer, what do you think as to the best way this problem can be worked out?—A. First of all I must say that I am still an officer of the C.A.M.C.. My view is that in dealing with so important a question we ought to have a committee of experts to organize and experts to administer our hospitals.

Q. And speaking as a C.A.M.C. man and having regard for your knowledge of all the circumstances and conditions what do you think is the better way to work out this problem; put the C.A.M.C. solely in charge of the working end of it, or try to work it out with the best medical talent you can get in the country?—A. I think it is better to have soldiers in command—when I say soldiers I mean C.A.M.C. officers, but I think these officers ought to be permitted to make use of civil surgeons in order that we may get the best results. I think that it is wiser to give over the care of the returned soldiers to a permanent committee of experts (such as was done in the case of pensions) instead of allowing the C.A.M.C. to care for them, because the C.A.M.C. is a very different organization to-day from it will be when the war ceases. As soon as the war ceases the C.A.M.C. officers will naturally feel their duty has been done, and they will return to their practices which they have left to serve their country.

Q. In many instances at a very great sacrifice?—A. Yes, and naturally and wisely I think they will go back to their practices, and, consequently, we have got to have hospitals, which, although still semi-military in character, are going to be in existence after the war.

Q. And you would use the services of the medical men in the country regardless of the C.A.M.C.?—A. Yes, but I would have a C.A.M.C. man in charge and not do as the Commission Hospitals did, viz., have their discipline in charge of an outside organization. Place the C.A.M.C. officer in charge because we know a man must be head in his own household, and the hospital is the household of the doctors and the patients.

Q. But these C.A.M.C. officers would be attached to this organization?—A. Yes, lent, or seconded, by the C.A.M.C.

Q. Take your own case as one in point?—A. Yes.

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. Do you think the medical end of the work of the hospitals ought to be in charge of the C.A.M.C. and the balance in charge of the Military Hospitals Commission?—A. No, I am very strongly against the idea.

Q. Perhaps you have answered this question already, but I want the point emphasized for my own enlightenment. Do you think the C.A.M.C. could carry on the work better, or otherwise, than the Military Hospitals Commission?—A. No, sir. I oppose the idea of Militia Department control for various reasons, but the principal one is that the C.A.M.C. to-day is very different from what the C.A.M.C. will be when the war has ceased.

Q. I am talking about present day conditions. What would you say as to these?—A. The C.A.M.C. as it is to-day has a great many very good officers, but an outside organization might also secure the services of a great many civilian practitioners.

Q. You say the C.A.M.C. has not yet secured the services of every surgeon?—A. No. For instance, when I was asked to organize for the Military Hospitals Commission a hospital for active surgical and medical affections in the Grey Nuns building, I organized a hospital, a semi-military hospital, whose personnel, I think, would be unsurpassed in Montreal, because I was permitted not only to choose certain C.A.M.C. officers, whom I considered to be of advantage to us, but also a great many men who did not belong to the C.A.M.C., and I secured the very best men from the Royal Victoria, from the General and from each of our hospitals.

By the Chairman:

Q. You were able to exclude such C.A.M.C. men as you did not want?—A. Yes.

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. Then, your idea is this, that there should be now commenced a combining of these two forces to meet your needs?—A. I consider that there should be appointed a small commission, or committee of experts, to decide upon the future policy for the care of the returned wounded soldiers.

By the Chairman:

Q. At Ottawa?—A. I think the headquarters of such a committee should be at Ottawa. I think such an organization should make plans for the treatment of these returned soldiers.

Q. Both medically and otherwise?—A. Medically and otherwise, and that the medical part of such committee should be composed of medical men or men who have spent a great part of their lives actively engaged in hospital organization and management.

By Mr. Ross (Middlesex):

Q. What membership would you give it?—A. A membership of six or eight at the most.

Q. What experts would you select?—A. For example, in administering hospitals we should have men who are "hospital men"—men who have been actively engaged in hospital work.

Q. You would not have all the members of the committee doctors?—A. I would have at least four medical men, because we are dealing with wounded and returned soldiers.

Q. Would this committee not also be dealing with the subject of vocational training?—A. A membership of at least fifty per cent (50%) of the committee should be either medical men, or men who have spent their lives at hospital work. For instance, in the United States they have professional medical superintendents, men who make a profession of being medical superintendents in the hospitals. I should say that such men would be very valuable. They may not of necessity be medical men, although they might be those who had begun life as medical men and found that the administrative part of medical life suited them best, so had given up the practice of medicine and became administrators of hospitals. It might be well to have two such medical administrators also two other doctors who had great knowledge of the care of the sick, and yet were not administrators.

Q. That would be four?—A. For the others you might consider two civilians interested in the rehabilitation of returned soldiers, and lastly two business men.

By Mr. Bennett:

Q. A sanitary engineer would be a very good man, for one?—A. I should think quite possibly a very good man.

By Hon. Mr. Macil:

Q. Should this committee be appointed by the Government?—A. That is a matter of detail.

By Mr. Bennett:

Q. Did I understand there is no doubt in your mind that whoever is responsible for the institution should have supreme control of the personnel of the staff?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Whether they be C.A.M.C. men or any other class?—A. Yes.

Q. But you believe that the C.A.M.C. men, because they have been trained, are especially good men for that class of work?—A. I think that many of them are particularly able men.

Q. Now, the medical work that is being performed for the returned soldier, is that done by the Department of Militia, or is it under the control of the Hospitals Commission?—A. It is under the control of the Department of Militia.

Q. And these medical men are all in the military service at the present time?—A. Yes, sir, the Military service.

Q. There is no civilian called in?—A. No, sir.

Q. They are given certain rank according to the length of service?—A. I am not able to answer that question, because I am an overseas man, and I do not know how things are done here.

By Mr. Ross (Middlesex):

Q. Have you anything to suggest whereby we might better the treatment of the returned soldier?—A. I heard Colonel Patch this morning say that his suggestion was to get an immediate determination as to who really has control of this work. I second that statement. That is the first thing to do. For Heaven's sake settle the question of control. It is not fair to the sick men or to the medical officers to have this divided authority where nobody knows where he stands.

Q. Is there any other suggestion?—A. The second thing I would suggest is that a committee of experts should be appointed, as I have already suggested.

Q. That is the second suggestion. Now, is there anything in the matter of detail? A. As to detail, the first thing that I would suggest is that you ought to have Military Hospitals, because you practically are without these at present in this District. You can begin to-morrow and make either the Loyola College (Drummond St.) or the Grey Nuns a Military Hospital; but, you certainly ought to have military hospitals in this District.

Q. Now, give us your fourth suggestion?—A. My fourth suggestion is that the military hospital be placed under the command of a medical officer.

By Hon. Mr. Daniel:

Q. Are not these hospitals under the command of military medical officers now?—A. No.

Q. Have all the hospitals a combatant officer in command?—A. I will tell you about "A" Unit. I was not in this country when the Military Hospitals Commission was founded in 1915, but I know that this Commission have not yet taken over the medical care of our returned soldiers, although they took over the care of discipline in the spring of 1916. When the Command was formed it was organized as a regiment with units or companies in various provinces. The company in this Division is called "A" Unit. Now that company is in command of a combatant officer.

By Mr. Bennett:

Q. He is a non-medical officer?—A. Yes, a non-medical officer.

By Hon. Mr. Daniel:

Q. Of what rank?—A. He happens to be a Major now, but not long ago he was a Captain.

Q. But he is in command of the Unit?—A. Yes, of "A" Unit.

By Mr. Bennett:

Q. Are you alluding to Major Hall?—A. Yes, he is in command of the patients in the hospitals. Now, it is not fair to ask a general or a full colonel or a lieutenant-colonel to work in a hospital with the soldiers under the jurisdiction of a captain. It does not work, and it cannot work.

Q. In other words, the major commands the whole Unit?—A. Yes he commands the Unit. It is perfectly right for him to command the men of this Unit while they are housed in his own barracks. When he has a sick soldier, however, let him send him to an hospital where there is a medical officer in command.

Q. Has this combatant officer command over the medical officers as well?—A. He is over the men that the medical officer is in charge of. This is the control complained of.

Q. And does he control the medical officers themselves?—A. Well, no and yes. It is a very difficult question to answer in concise form.

Q. He takes the same position then as the medical superintendent of a hospital, he is in charge of the management of the institution?—A. Yes, but the medical superintendent does not control the patients in a civil hospital.

Q. Has this officer charge of the patients?—A. Yes, and the orderlies also. It is perfectly right that there should be some organization of the returned soldiers with an officer in charge of it in Montreal and every other Military District, but this officer should not be quartered in a hospital but outside in his own barracks. If one of his men is taken ill, that man should be sent to the hospital, where he will be under the jurisdiction of the medical officer, whilst he is ill.

Q. Do not the medical officers have control of the orderlies in the hospitals at all?—A. No, sir.

Q. Not even of the ward orderlies?—A. I believe not.

MR. BENNETT: Not as it stands now.

HON. MR. DANIEL: I think they should.

By Hon. Mr. Daniel:

Q. You have been overseas, and you were at the Etaples Hospital, were you not?—A. I was first at Salisbury Plains, and afterwards at Etaples, France.

Q. Was there a combatant Officer in charge of the Etaples Hospital?—A. No, sir, decidedly not.

Q. The hospital was under the control of the Medical Officer?—A. Yes, sir. The same is always true in military service.

Q. Colonel Maclaren, was it not?—A. Yes.

Q. He had complete control of the patients, orderlies and everything else? What was the reason the same course was not adopted in Canada?—A. I cannot understand why the Military Hospitals Commission should have changed this military procedure.

[Lieut.-Colonel Mackenzie Forbes.]

By the Chairman:

Q. Were any of the men in the Etaples Hospital convalescent, or were they all active treatment cases?—A. Some were very serious cases. Others were there only until they could be sent back to the front.

By Mr. Bennett:

Q. How did you classify them?—A. We called them Class A, B, and C.

By the Chairman:

Q. It was really a collecting hospital in the sense that a man who was in for a long illness was sent to England?—A. If his illness was mild enough to permit of him travelling. Class A, for example, comprised cases of a serious nature and a great many were unfit to travel.

Q. Was there any trouble in enforcing discipline?—A. No, sir.

Q. Class C was light cases?—A. Yes, men who were walking about all the time like the convalescent cases here.

Q. Do you think the maintenance of discipline was as difficult as at the Grey Nuns Hospital, Montreal?—A. Yes, it was quite as difficult.

By Mr. Bennett:

Q. There is no large city like Montreal there?—A. That is perfectly true, but there were other adverse conditions.

Q. There was no drinking there?—A. I beg your pardon, sir, there was.

Q. Liquor was not as easily obtained?—A. It was not as easily obtained, but it could be obtained. I was at Etaples a long time and know something about the conditions there.

By Mr. Sutherland:

Q. I understand that under the Government of France, save during medical treatment, the patient is under military command entirely?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Until the liquidation of his pension and his transference to civil life. You are not advocating that here the treatment of the returned soldier should be absolutely under the control of the C. A. M. C.?—A. No, rather the opposite. I think that there should be a re-organized and smaller hospitals commission.

By Hon. Mr. Daniel:

Q. Do the Military Hospitals here carry out the same practice that obtains in France?—A. I have never seen the French Military Hospitals there. As we have said, instead of having a military hospital in this District, in Canada our soldiers, who are seriously ill, are sent to the civil hospitals. We were told this morning that in this district there are two military hospitals, but one of them, you will remember, was at St. Johns, in the Province of Quebec, in which there are probably 10, 20 or 30 beds—I have not seen it. The hospitals in this district are really civil hospitals which are very good ones.

Q. You do not know how it is with the other districts?—A. No. The present system is good in many ways, but the accommodation is too small, in this district, to look after our returned men, if we have a number of them suddenly sent to Canada. We ought to have a military hospital for active cases in this District to provide for such eventuality.

Q. Is it not that which they are providing for in the Grey Nuns?—A. Yes, this was commenced there, but the question came up "who is in control", and, while waiting to find out who does rule, this work of forming a military hospital has been stopped. My judgment is that we ought to get a military hospital as quickly as we can.

By Mr. Sutherland:

Q. Going back to my question, I do not know whether I misunderstand you, or you misunderstand my question. I thought from your arguments you were in favour of the treatment of the soldier, where he was receiving treatment, being under the superintendent of the Army Medical Corps, who should have absolute control over him?—A. No, not necessarily, but I do think that if a soldier is in hospital, he should be under the control of the Medical Officer in charge of the hospital and not under the control of a combatant Officer, as now obtains in our convalescent homes.

Q. The Chief of the Army Medical Service should be the Officer of the Commission?—A. No, I do not go that far.

Q. In France and amongst the French, from the reception of his wound to the end of his treatment, he is entirely under control of the Army?—A. All I can tell you is about the care of our soldiers in France. I do not know anything about the service of the Army Medical Corps of the Government of France.

Witness discharged.

Dr. J. R. BYERS, called, sworn and examined.

By the Chairman:

Q. You are in charge of the Laurentian Inn Medical Sanitarium at Ste. Agathe, Que., are you not?—A. I am in charge of the Laurentide Inn Military Sanatorium and the Laurentian Sanitarium at Ste. Agathe des Monts.

Q. You are in charge of both of them?—A. Yes.

Q. Both of these are for the use of the tubercular patients?—A. Yes.

Q. Are you the officer under the control of the Military Hospitals Commission or are you a member of the Army Medical Corps?—A. I am a member of the A.M.C.

Q. Will you tell us about the care and treatment of your men at Ste. Agathe, especially as to what you do with them while they are under training in the Sanitarium towards fitting them for their return to civil life?—A. Mr. Chairman, on March 15, 1917, I prepared a short report of the inception of the work at Ste. Agathe and of the progress made to date, including some statistics I have, which with your approval I will submit for your information as follows:

“Mr. Chairman and Gentlemen:—

“I have the honour to submit the following report upon the reception, care, treatment, training and re-education of tuberculous troops of the Canadian Expeditionary Forces stationed at Ste. Agathe des Monts in the Laurentian Sanitarium, and the Laurentide Inn Military Sanatorium.

“The first military patient was received into the Laurentian Sanitarium in February, 1915, upon the recommendation of the Canadian Patriotic Fund Committee, and since then 266 officers, nursing-sisters, non-commissioned officers and men have been admitted and treated for variable lengths of time, as shown by the attached medical reports of the two sanatoria above named.

“The Laurentian Society for the Treatment and Control of Tuberculosis seeing the necessity of providing accommodation for tuberculous soldiers and knowing the limitations of the accommodation in Canada decided to devote half the beds of the Laurentian Sanitarium at Ste. Agathe to the needs of the soldiers afflicted with pulmonary disease. In the fall of 1915 the Sanitarium increased their beds by an additional 25 for this purpose, making a total of 40 beds for military patients.

“In December, 1915, I received instructions from the A.D.M.S., M.D. No. 4, to convert the Laurentide Inn at Ste. Agathe, which had been offered by D. Lorne McGibbon, Esq., to the Military Hospitals Commission for the purpose of a sanatorium, into one, and this institution was opened as the Laurentide Inn Military Sanatorium, with a complete staff, and 30 beds on the 1st day of January, 1916. This Sanatorium received 20 patients from the Laurentian

Dr. J. R. Byers.]

Sanitarium on the 3rd of January, 1916, and by May, 1916, it was deemed advisable to increase the beds to 60. In the fall of 1916, an infirmary for bed-cases was added with sleeping porch accommodation for 10 additional patients, making the total accommodation 70.

"During January, 1917, the Laurentian Sanitarium was subsidized by the Military Hospitals Commission, $500, to enable it to add 10 additional beds, making a present total of 120 beds for tuberculous soldiers in Ste. Agathe des Monts.

"The foregoing beds, being available in going Sanatoria, were able not only to care for the soldiers from the Fourth Military District, but in addition many from the Fifth, Sixth and others. Only on one occasion was it impossible to receive a patient, and that lasted but a few days and caused no actual delay.

"Management of Sanatoria at Ste. Agathe des Monts.

"The Laurentian Sanitarium is operated by the Laurentian Society of the Treatment and Control of Tuberculosis, who are acting as contractors to the Military Hospitals Commission and receive officers, non-commissioned officers, nursing-sisters and men; board, lodge, give medical and nursing attentions, supply drugs, and pay for laundry at a charge of $10.50 per capita by week.

"The Laurentide Inn Military Sanatorium (with 30 furnished beds and furniture, dishes, etc., was taken over from Mr. McGibbon, and all necessary additions, furnishings, and equipment added by the Military Hospitals Commission, and the Department of Militia and Defence of Canada. The Sanatorium is given over (outside of the medical and nursing department) to a contractor who furnishes board, lodging, attendance, and laundry at a charge of $1.29 per diem per capita. The contractor is directly responsible to the Military Hospitals Commission through the Medical Officer in charge."

By Mr. Bennett:

Q. Who charges that and what is his margin of profit?—A. The contractor makes the charge—what his profit is I have never been able to learn. The original stock was supplied by the Commission but the contractor has to maintain and make good the wear and tear. We were satisfied that he had a sufficient supply to start with.

Q. But he works under your supervision?—A. Absolutely.

Q. You are there every day?—A. Yes.

"All accounts and vouchers pass through the Medical Officer who is responsible for their correctness. In both Sanatoria perfect harmony in operation has existed, and the service has been excellent as manifested by the lack of complaints by the patients under treatment.

"The Laurentian Sanitarium having been carefully designed by experts, the question of sanitation did not arise. In the Laurentian Inn Sanatorium, however, owing to sudden congestion there were matters regarding sewage disposal, conversion of floors, roofs, cellars, heating, water supply, dish-washing, fumigation, etc., which required attention, and I desire to pay a grateful tribute to the Military Hospitals Commission for the careful attention given to my many suggestions, and for the prompt manner in which the necessary details were immediately remedied, and the protection given their charges. Both institutions were recently inspected by the Military Hospitals Commission's Medical Officer in charge of Inspections, who expressed his complete satisfaction with the sanitary arrangements.

"The location of both Sanatoria is ideal, both are situated on rising ground and overlook the town. The soil is sandy, well drained, and the climatic conditions are probably the best in Eastern Canada, as the altitude is 1,400 feet, mid-seasons short, winters dry, and summers cool. This climatic asset combined with the 'Sanatorium environment' has in the past achieved excellent results in the treatment of pulmonary disease. I do not hesitate to state that the Military Hospitals Commission have acted very wisely in placing their tuberculosis patients from the eastern districts for the present at least in the Laurentide Mountains."

By the Chairman:

Q. Do you keep the men in one building and the officers in the other?—A. So far we have had the officers in the Laurentian because it is a mixed building, taking civilians as well. It is nicely equipped and the officers have been perfectly satisfied.

Then as to the question of educating the tuberculous soldier, the Sanatoria are considered not only as institutions for the treatment of pulmonary disease, but as schools for educating the patients in all matters pertaining to the welfare of the health. From the moment of entrance the patient is made to feel that an attitude of physician and patient exists, and the soldiers confidence gained. All necessary means of protection are offered to the patient and he is immediately instructed in the necessity of sanitation, and the management of his diseased condition. It is remarkable how quickly the patient adopts the practice of these simple sanitary precautions, and it speaks well for the men to state that only one has been discharged for disregarding the sanitary rules of the sanatoria.

By Mr. Ross (Middlesex):

Q. What percentage of your tuberculous patients come from France?—A. From overseas 72 and 72 and from camps 48 and 109.

By the Chairman:

Q. If I understood you rightly you say 85 per cent of your patients have never been to France at all?—A. I have not worked it out. I have not the figures of how many have crossed the channel.

Q. I wish you would let us know how many tubercular cases have been across the channel and how many never got across?—A. Yes, I will procure this information and send it.

By Hon. Mr. Marcl:

Q. Are the majority of your cases in the early stages?—A. No, sir, I regret to state that the majority are in the moderately advanced stage.

"The principles of treatment, and their necessity of application are carefully and simply explained to the patient, rules and limitations are set for his individual case, dietetic and bathing routine given, careful examination of the body systems, and errors where possible rectified especially as regards the alimentary and respiratory canal, teeth and nervous system. The future is placed before the patient and he is encouraged to fight along the quiet lines as laid down in the code of treatment, and all things done to make him feel that he has not only fallen on a health giving place, but amongst friends. As the treatment of pulmonary disease covers every human system no point in the investigation of the patient's physical status is wilfully left unexplored.

"The treatment of pulmonary disease requires that the patient be kept in a state of surgical rest during the acute toxic stage, and that a carefully regulated amount of increasing daily exercise be indulged in as the passive or arrested stage of the disease is reached. It has been my experience that unless some mental diversion be allowed the patient, he will become introspective, neurasthenic, and depressed. This was found to be markedly so in the soldier-patient who became irritable in the rest stage of treatment, and tended to become careless and perhaps dissolute in the passive stage. To overcome this I appealed to the Military Hospitals Commission in 1916 for a workshop in which arrested cases might find enjoyable employment when they were tired of walking or perhaps drifting into places that were out of bounds. This appeal was immediately acted upon by the Commission and the vocational training department of the Commission at once instituted an excellent and fully equipped workshop with instructors at the Laurentide Inn. In addition a series of graded vocational occupations suitable for the tuberculosis subject were arranged upon, so that it is possible to give even the most delicate some interesting work which helps not only to kill the monotonous moments, but adds greatly to his mental and moral calibre."

As an evidence of the rapidity with which some of these men progress in the work of re-education, I might say that one young man after three months training is able to act as my stenographer and typewriter very satisfactorily. That shows the psychical value that was established through the great work that the vocational training department has been able to do in connection with tubercular soldiers.

By Mr. Bennett:

- Q. How old would that stenographer be?—A. Twenty-five or twenty-six years.
Q. He has a chance then?—A. He is getting on fine.

By the Chairman:

Q. So that you are not only restoring the men to health but you are also utilizing their spare time to give them vocational training?—A. When they come to the stage where they can stand it.

Q. And not only as a means of keeping them out of mischief?—A. As a means of treatment.

Q. And equipping them for their future life?—A. Because this exercise is of such variety that it replaces what we formerly used for walking exercises. At the same time they are much happier because their minds are occupied.

By Hon. Mr. Marcil:

Q. Do you have much outdoor exercise?—A. It is all outdoors, the whole cure is in the fresh air, twenty-four hours a day. They sleep in well ventilated rooms. In our climate it is well not to sleep in the open, but in a well ventilated room. There was a tendency on the part of the men to go out of bounds, but I suggested that they should furnish me with a moving picture machine, which was done. Two film exchanges generously offered to send up a show twice a week. We can punish the men now for indiscretion by cutting out the "movies."

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. How many men did you say you had?—A. We have 120 beds available, and today we have ninety odd beds full.

Q. Can bed cases work?—A. We have been giving the bed cases light work to do; they have turned out embroidery, needlework, baskets, and other things that men could rest in a chair and do. It is a nervous relief when they are able to produce something.

Q. Have you any table of your results of treatment?—A. Perhaps the following table will be of interest. (Reads.)

Classification of the discharged cases in:—

	Laurentian Sanitarium.	Laurentide Inn Sanatorium.
	No. %	No. %
Incipient.. . . .	25—27	17—14
Moderately advanced.. . . .	64—68	73—62
Advanced.. . . .	3—3	28—23
Non-tuberculous.. . . .	1—2	1—1
Totals.. . . .	93—100	119—100

Q. Will you state again the length of treatment given to the discharged case?—

A. This table will give the data. (Reads.)

Table showing the length of treatment received by patients:—

	Laurentian Sanitarium.	Laurentide Inn Sanatorium.
	No. %	No. %
1—30 days.. . . .	10—9	47—38
30—60 “	18—20	19—16
60—90 “	15—16	20—16
90 days and over.. . . .	50—55	33—30
Totals.. . . .	93—100	119—100

When you consider that six months is the maximum period, you will see that the large percentage, 55 per cent in the Laurentian Sanitarium and 30 per cent in the Laurentide Inn, took the amount of treatment offered them by the Board which gave them this opportunity to diminish their disability.

By the Chairman:

Q. Do I understand you to say that a very large number of men will not remain long enough to get thorough treatment?—A. I have that information in another statement, which is as follows. (Reads):

Table showing the manner in which the patients were discharged.

	Laurentian Sanitarium.	Laurentide Inn Sanatorium.
	No. %	No. %
Patients who left by signing a release as H.Q. 60-4-8, 9/9/15.. . . .	30—32	55—46
Discharged for bad conduct and crime under H.Q. 649-1-6.. . . .	4—4	31—26
Transfers.. . . .	27—30	9—8
Completed treatment.. . . .	32—34	24—20
Totals.. . . .	92—100	119—100

This shows that 32 per cent in the Laurentian Sanitarium and 46 per cent in the Laurentide Inn left by signing a release.

Q. Do I understand that if a man desires he can leave your institution before he is cured?—A. Under the authority mentioned, any man can sign his release and demand that he leave the institution.

By Mr. Bennett:

Q. At any time?—A. At any time. He then reports to his O.C. and there his discharge is carried out.

By the Chairman:

Q. If a man has been sent up to you suffering from pulmonary tuberculosis, and after being with you two or three months, he wants to be discharged, whatever the result might be on his life and health you are compelled to discharge him?—A. If he demands it.

[Dr. J. R. Byers.]

By Hon. Mr. Daniel:

Q. Is not that the condition with a patient in any hospital in the country, outside of soldiers entirely?—A. He is a free agent, being 21 years of age.

The CHAIRMAN: But he is still a soldier and the Government can retain a man as a soldier for six months after the war.

By Hon. Mr. Daniel:

Q. These men are still soldiers?—A. Yes.

By the Chairman:

Q. I would like to ask whether, in the interest of the public health of Canada, it would not be better for men who are suffering from tuberculosis to be retained by the military authorities until they are cured rather than be permitted to go out at their own desire?—A. You have asked a very complicated question. From the point of view of the treatment of tuberculosis, you cannot cure a case of lung disease if you do not get the co-operation of the patient, and you cannot force this co-operation. If a man refuses, and is forced to take the treatment against his will, he will be indifferent as to the result. It is will power that wins this game; the patient must discipline himself.

By Hon. Mr. Marcil:

Q. Have you had many cases of men sent to Ste. Agathe since the war broke out who have come back cured?—A. A very small proportion are fit. I have the figures here. They are as follows. (Reads):

The result obtained by treatment in cases discharged up to December 31, 1916.

	Laurentian Sanitarium.	Laurentide Inn Sanatorium.
	No. %	No. %
Arrested disease.. . . .	2—2	5—4
Apparently arrested.. . . .	27—30	19—16
Quiescent.. . . .	23—24	17—14
Improved.. . . .	25—28	38—32
*No improvement.. . . .	13—14	39—33
Died.. . . .	3—2	1—1
Totals.. . . .	92—100	119—100

*Under the heading "no improvement" are included those cases who remained less than 30 days for treatment, as such a short stay is of practically no benefit, and are usually classified as "untreated."

Q. If a man submits to the rules of the institution, and puts up the fight that should be put up, can he be cured?—A. Ten years ago I sat out myself and took this cure. I can say that I am cured; I have had no symptoms for ten years. But we have 52 per cent of the cases that have been treated in the Laurentian Sanitarium in the past 8 years who are back in their daily vocations; we know this.

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. That ratio could be kept up with returned soldiers?—A. Yes, if we can get the same co-operation as from civilians. They are being paid $1.10 a day and all expenses to take the treatment that other men are mortgaging their homes, or living on the bounty of other people, to take; and the civilians take it.

Mr BENNETT: And many of the soldiers will not take it.

By the Chairman:

Q. What percentage of the cases that have gone to the sanitarium have left of their own accord before reaching the stage that you would be willing to let them go?—A. 38 per cent.

[Dr. J. R. Byers.]

Q. Is there any advantage then, so far as the state is concerned, in sending a man to you, and having you keep him for six months, and then discharging him in the same condition?—A. The educational value is wonderful. In a day or two we have them observing the sanitary conditions perfectly.

Q. Do you have any trouble in making the returned soldiers obey the rules of the sanitarium regarding spitting?—A. I have only had to discharge one man for absolute violations of the rules of sanitation, and he was a Greek. Whether or not he did not understand, I cannot say; but I got a Greek to translate the instructions to him. I went over them with him again and again hoping he would understand; but when the man did not obey, his mates forced me to discharge him. That speaks very well for the others when only one man had to be discharged.

Q. Then your conclusion as a medical man is that such a large percentage of the men who come to you with fair prospect of recovery insist on leaving before a cure is effected?—A. Undoubtedly, because we consider six months is the minimum time needed for an incipient case.

Q. If a man has a wife and family do you bring them up to Ste. Agathe while he is in the sanatorium?—A. Not unless we think he is likely to die, in that event I like to have a member of the family there. It comes down to a sentimental issue and I think it is right to have a relative there, but as a rule we do not like too much visiting. It breaks the routine of the institution. I made lots of changes in treatment. We never gave a leave of absence, but when a soldier would get a piece of bad news, if we allowed him to go down to Montreal for 24 hours I found it did not do him as much harm as to stay there and worry. He could go down and settle the issue. I found it much better.

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. Would you say that, outside of the educational training that the soldiers receive at your sanatorium it is worth while to treat tuberculosis patients there?—A. Oh, yes, undoubtedly it is.

Q. There is a greater modicum of good, allowing them to be treated in that way, eliminating the educational question altogether, rather than allowing them to go?—A. Yes, absolutely. We have discharged 55 per cent from one institution and 30 per cent from another of the patients, and I believe we benefited them in a manner that will last.

By Mr. Middlebro:

Q. You effected a cure?—A. No, that is a fallacious term. We look after a man and put him in as good a condition as we can but he has to take care of his health. Last week I met on the street a man who had 100 per cent disability, he took his treatment, suffered an operation while under treatment, and he is out now and working, he has gained five pounds since he came to the city, and gets his meals at regular intervals, goes to bed regularly, and he belongs to one of the 50 per cent.

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. You say it is of benefit to the community that these men should go on being treated?—A. Yes.

Q. And that term lasts six months?—A. That is the minimum.

Q. You spoke of 38: that is the minimum treatment of how long?—A. Do you mean of these men that quit?

Q. Yes?—A. In one to 30 days there was 9 per cent.

Q. What do you mean by that?—A. Those men only put in 30 days or less under treatment. Nine per cent were discharged under the short treatment.

Q. Would you say there was a marked improvement in this 9 per cent?—A. No, we did not enter them in our records for 30 days at least. Some of them did improve.

Q. That treatment is wasted?—A. No.

[Dr. J. R. Byers.]

Q. I am talking of the thirty days' treatment, as to arresting the disease?—A. In tuberculosis 30 days' treatment is practically no good.

Q. What is the minimum?—A. Six months.

Q. Outside of that you would not say it amounted to anything?—A. We believe six months is the minimum.

By Hon. Mr. Daniel:

Q. You have advanced cases as well as incipient?—A. Yes. Three per cent in one, and 23 in the other.

Q. Of what?—A. Of those cases we have discharged. I am reporting on cases received and discharged, completed cases.

Q. Are those 3 per cent of cases advanced?—A. I can say that the advanced cases never showed improvement. If they did it was only temporary.

Q. You discharged 3 per cent of them and they were discharged unimproved?—A. Yes.

By the Chairman:

Q. There will be with you after the war in all probability a certain number of chronic cases?—A. Yes.

Q. What do you recommend can be done by the State with these chronic cases?—

A. That is the problem which we are discussing at present, and you have heard Dr. Harris from Macdonald College in regard to the question. You can put men on a farm for a year and endeavour to make them farmers. We have an ideal colonization scheme and we have to find out how many men will accept it. The proposition is to have a colony, take advantage of a suitable tract of land of a large acreage, and have a farm and an infirmary, shops, etc., and have a street drawn across the property, on which would be constructed houses and bungalows and in this settlement we would have an infirmary and houses and shops. These men we are after do not want to leave their families, and if they go back to the environments from which they came they would probably wreck their families. If they could only move their families up to this colony they might be quite content to come and take up a tract of land and do the best they could. They would be under the instruction of an agricultural superintendent. The idea is to keep them in the open air all day long and keep them working and under medical control, and not let them over-do it or under-do it.

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. Your farm would have to be in some climate suitable for men in their condition?—A. Yes. The principal thing is the environment of friends. We have thousands of acres on the Laurentians which are ideal for this condition, and you have in Ontario on Lake Muskoka suitable locations. You have it in every province. There is not a country so beautifully laid out for it as Canada.

By Mr. Bennett:

Q. There is a sanatorium in Calgary placed there on account of altitude?—A. Yes, and there is one near New York and they are getting good results, and also at Saranac Lake and Muskoka and other places. The sanatoria environment is of the utmost importance: not so much the altitude.

By the Chairman:

Q. You recommend the farm colony for your irreducible minimum of chronic cases?—A. That is the ideal if you can get them to accept it, but when it comes down to the practical question we may have another proposition at some time, and I wish to go on record as saying that while we are after running a sanatorium we are only beating the drum at the front door. You have to get at the social conditions. You have to go through the community with social workers weeding out these cases and bringing the patients to the proper places and treating them.

By Mr. Bennett:

Q. And you have to deal with the sanitary conditions in addition to what may be done by sending out the dragnet and gathering up the patients; you have to go further than that and go to the man's house?—A. That is part of the social workers job. The social worker is the big element in stamping out the unsanitary conditions.

By the Chairman:

Q. In connection with the statistics of No. 4 District, there appeared to us to be a very unusual proportion of tubercular cases?—A. 54.

Q. That is double the average, taking the total number of cases as compared with the total number of tubercular cases. Can you give us any reason why there should be more than the average amount of tubercular cases in the hospitals of No. 4 division?—A. I think in a way it is the geographical location and the matter of preparedness. We knew there would be a number of tubercular cases coming back and we realized the condition and we started to prepare beds and keep a margin to the good all the way through, and the result is that this province, particularly the 4th Division, has been handling a large number of cases from outside divisions that did not belong to them. From No. 4 Division there was 68 per cent, from No. 3 Division there were 3 per cent, from No. 5 Division there were 4 per cent, from No. 6 Division, 18 per cent, and from other districts 7 per cent.

Q. So that only two-thirds of these cases really belong to No. 4 District?—A. Yes. In the fall of 1915 the A.D.M.S. telephoned up to me "I have got a report from England; many cases coming, what will you do? Can you give me 25 beds"? And I said yes. Acting for the Laurentian Society I bought these beds, furnished them and placed them in the sanatorium. The next day, Thanksgiving Day, I visited Abbotsford and told the Abbotsford Machine Gun Association of this urgent expenditure on behalf of the soldiers. As they could not buy the gun they gave me the $1,010 to defray the cost of the beds.

By Mr. Bennett:

Q. Are you a Canadian?—A. Yes, sir, from the Province of Ontario.

By Hon. Mr. Daniel:

Q. You say you had 18 per cent of your cases from the Maritime Provinces?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How did you get them up here?—A. In Halifax they had an epidemic of measles in the hospital, and there were a great many lung cases developed. There was absolutely no place in Halifax to put these cases in, so they wired up to the A.D.M.S. for accommodation, and his reply was, "Yes, send them along."

Q. And how many came up?—A. I think there were 17 a year ago this winter.

Q. They are not in the habit of sending their tuberculous cases up here from the Maritime Provinces, are they?—A. At any rate, we get quite a number.

Q. Mr. Pardee suggests that perhaps the reason you get men from the Maritime Provinces here is because they are landed in Quebec, is that the reason?—A. Not in all cases. We get a great many from the barracks and camps who have not been overseas at all, you have only one institution in Nova Scotia for the care of such patients, and that is the one at Kentville. In New Brunswick there is the Jordan Memorial and I think at Fredericton they have the Summerside Home. During last year none of these Homes were receiving military patients, if I am correctly informed.

Q. The Jordan Memorial is not receiving them now?—A. No.

Q. There is no sanatorium in New Brunswick which is receiving military patients so far as I know. There is in Nova Scotia?—A. The institution at Kentville is now organizing to do that.

Witness discharged.

Committee adjourned.

[Dr. J. R. Byers.]

The Committee resumed at 8 p.m.

Trooper VICTOR R. BROWN, called, sworn and examined.

By the Chairman:

Q. You have been on active service at the front?—A. Yes.

Q. You have been on the firing line?—A. Yes.

Q. And you were returned on account of wounds?—A. Yes.

Q. You are the Secretary of the Returned Soldiers Association of Montreal?—
A. Yes.

Q. Will you tell us what are the objects of that returned soldiers' organization?—

A. The object of the association is fraternal and for the general welfare of the returned soldiers, to see that they get a square deal in every matter that comes up, also to help them in any way we can in getting employment, and also to be friendly like we were in the trenches.

Q. Have you a copy of the constitution?—A. I have a copy of the constitution.

Q. Will you read the clause that covers your object?—A. Clause No. 1 reads as follows:—

(1) To perpetuate the close and kindly ties of mutual service in the great war, and the recollections and associations of that experience, and to maintain proper standards of dignity and honour.

(2) To preserve the memory and records of those who have suffered and died for the Nation; to see to the erection of monuments to their valour, and the establishment of an Annual Memorial Day.

(3) To ensure that provision is made for the due care of the sick, wounded and needy among those who have served, including reasonable pensions, employment for such as are capable, soldiers' homes, medical care, and proper provision for dependent families of enlisted men.

(4) To continually inculcate loyalty to Canada and the Empire and unstinted service in their interests.

Q. Is yours a national or local association?—A. It is a local association here, but I might say that it is Dominion-wide. We have no Dominion charter yet, but we are holding a meeting in the near future to discuss having a Dominion charter.

Q. Does your constitution correspond with the constitution of similar organizations in other parts of Canada?—A. Very closely, yes.

By Mr. Middlebro:

Q. Are you incorporated?—A. We have no charter yet, but are applying for one.

By the Chairman:

Q. Who are your officers?—A. We have as officers: Mr. Hollis S. Stevenson, President; Frank Miller, First Vice-President; Napoleon Marion, Second Vice-President; we have Major Anderson, Treasurer; H. K. Tait, Honorary Secretary; V. R. Brown as Secretary and three members of the Committee, viz., Lewis Gabel, R. Seggie and W. B. Scott.

Q. How many of these gentlemen are here to-night?—A. We have the President, the Second Vice-President and Mr. Cleland. I might say we have an extra committee who have had experience on the land question and we asked them to come to the meeting to discuss the land proposition: that is Mr. Cleland, who is here to-day, Sergeant-Major Cleland.

Q. If the Committee desires to discuss the back to the land problem, Sergeant-Major Cleland is here to give his views on the subject?—A. Yes.

Q. How large a proportion of the returned soldiers who have come back to the district are members of your association?—A. Roughly speaking we have 300 members now, and I think there are about 5,000 returned to this district.

Q. There are 5,000 men who have dropped out of the service, who have enlisted in this district, but not 5,000 men who have returned. We have been told to-day there were 1,580 who had returned, that there were 5,068 men who had been struck off the roll?—A. We have, roughly speaking, about 300 members. Of course there is quite a number who have joined who may have gone away to other places.

Q. Are the men who have come back from other parts of No. 4 Military District all members of your association, or is that purely a Montreal association?—A. Within the Montreal district they are entitled to membership.

Q. Does that include the entire district from which the recruiting from No. 4 district took place?—A. Yes.

Q. Does your membership include every man who enlists or only those who have been overseas.

Q. How is your association supported?—A. At the present moment by voluntary contribution. We have not encroached upon the generosity of the public so far as collecting from them is concerned.

Q. You have made no appeal to the public for money?—A. Not at all yet. The idea of the association is to try and be self-supporting, and if we get money it is by entertainment, where we return something for what we get.

Q. Is there any other soldiers' associations in this district?—A. There is another association under another name which is called the Lachine Association.

Q. Nine miles from here?—A. Yes.

Q. Therefore you claim to be representatives of the returned soldiers?—A. Yes.

Q. Do they come to you with their complaints?—A. They do, sir.

Q. Do you think you are in a position to tell this committee what are the complaints of the returned soldiers of this district?—A. I am, sir.

Q. We will give you carte blanche to do so?—A. Do you wish me to make a statement?

Q. Yes?—A. I find here that generally speaking complaints come to me and the association of five or six different matters. Firstly, we will take the complaints in regard to the trip over in the boat. Do you want me to detail the complaints in that respect?

Q. Yes, I would like you to elaborate that trip over on the boat. Tell us all you have to say about that?—A. The complaints from the returned soldiers in regard to the trip on the boat generally comes from men who are crippled, who have lost a limb. These men are kept down in the hold and they cannot get up on the deck to get fresh air. That is necessary for a man who is in that state of health. Of course he is greatly tried by having to climb stairs, if such a thing should happen as the ship being torpedoed. In that case these men, who are probably on crutches, would have to rush up the stairs and they would be greatly handicapped in trying to do so.

By Hon. Mr. Daniel:

Q. You do not really mean they are kept in the hold?—A. I do not mean the hold. I mean downstairs. I mean probably in the third cabin.

Q. Would your recommendation mean that men who are not able to help themselves ought to be in the deck cabins, or in the cabins near the decks?—A. I certainly think so.

By Mr. Ross (Middlesex):

Q. How do you know this?—A. I have met men in the hospitals who told me, and when I came over myself we were down in the hold.

Q. Do you know of your own knowledge that these men were downstairs?—A. Yes.

Q. And it would be impossible for them to get up in case of emergency?—A. Yes.

By Hon. Mr. Macil:

Q. How are the men placed on the ship?—A. All the men are down in the third class and all the officers and N.C.O.'s are in the first cabin.

[Trooper V. R. Brown.]

By Mr. Bennett:

Q. There are no first cabins in many ships that bring troops over, and there are two cabin ships only that bring our men back?—A. Yes. I refer to the Metagama. That ship has two cabins, first and second.

Q. Second and third?—A. Second and third. Well the second is the top deck, and the third is the bottom one.

Q. But the top cabin does not open as you know directly out on the top deck, it opens on the deck below?—A. There is the boat deck up above, there is a promenade deck on top.

Q. There is one class of boat where the cabins open direct on the decks and the others do not. You could not get all your passengers in that class of cabin?—A. I only mean the cripples. I do not mean the man who is able to help himself. I refer to a man on crutches.

Q. Has that not been overcome by the new hospital ships of ours with the Red Cross sign painted on the side, which just went into commission six weeks ago?—A. That may have been overcome to that extent, but all the men do not come over on that ship.

Q. All the cripples and all the men who are unable to care for themselves are now placed on this hospital ship. I am asking for information?—A. That is merely bed cases.

Q. Is it not for all cases—men who have, by amputation or otherwise lost their limbs, so that they cannot walk except on crutches?—A. Not necessarily a bed case. The man may have improved so much that he is able to be out of bed.

Q. A bed case or the other case?—A. Yes.

Q. Do they not all travel on that ship now?—A. They may do so, I would not like to say.

Q. Do you know?—A. I do not know. I think a lot of them come back on troop ships.

By Mr. Middlebro:

Q. What reason do they give for keeping them on that lower deck?—A. They have not given any reason except they keep that other deck for the officers and N.C.O.'s.

By Brigadier-General Mason:

Q. Are the men not allowed on that deck?—A. No.

By Hon. Mr. Daniel:

Q. These men, you say, are quartered below the main deck?—A. Yes, below the main deck. As you look up from the second or third class, whichever it may be, you can see the other passengers walking around and gazing down on you.

Q. There are two or three decks, and in some vessels they are above the main decks?—A. Yes, but there are two decks on the Metagama, for illustration.

Q. I want to know whether if these crippled men have to leave the ship suddenly, they would have to go upstairs or whether they could take the boat from the deck on which their berths are?—A. Of course, it is possible to leave by the lower decks, but in the event of a ship sinking suddenly, what chance would a crippled man have to take to the boats. A man who had the use of his legs might rush upstairs to the upper decks in time to save himself, but not a cripple.

Q. That is the point: whether they would have to go to the top deck?—A. I should imagine in most cases they would have to do so. I have never been on a torpedoed boat, but I surmise that such would be necessary.

Q. Could the men not be got off from the same deck on which their berths are located?—A. They doubtless could, if the vessel did not sink quickly, but there are times when a vessel sinks more quickly than at others, according to where she is hit. A man who has the full possession of his limbs can scramble upstairs and get overboard, where he can be rescued, but a crippled man is badly handicapped.

[Trooper V. R. Brown.]

By Mr. Bennett:

Q. I understand that in the case of the Metagama there are boats on the deck of which you speak?—A. I believe there are, sir. I quite agree with you in that statement.

Q. In that case the men would not have to climb upstairs at all?—A. No.

Q. It is perfectly clear that on that ship the crippled man could get to the boat anywhere without climbing stairs. That is clear, is it not?—A. Quite clear, sir, from that point of view, but even so, the health of a man who is a cripple has probably been impaired and it would be far healthier for him to be on the upper deck where he could get more air and more of the breeze.

By Mr. Ross (Middlesex):

Q. Your contention is that men who are suffering from disabled legs should be put in a safer position?—A. Yes.

Mr. Ross (Middlesex): I think you are undoubtedly right about that.

The CHAIRMAN: Should be put in a position where he could be immediately saved in case of trouble.

By Brigadier-General Mason:

Q. Are there many of these men coming back?—A. Quite a few coming back now, sir.

By the Chairman:

Q. What is your second point?—A. The treatment in the convalescent homes, sir.

Q. What have you to say of the treatment in the convalescent homes in No. 4 District?—A. I refer to only one, sir.

Q. Which one is that?—A. The Grey Nunnery.

Q. What have you to say against the Grey Nunnery?—A. I am speaking from experience because I was there myself.

Q. That is right.—A. I was there myself and I have seen the actual conditions. It is not a case of depending on written communications from other people: I have had the opportunity of being in the building myself, and what I have to say is the result of my own observation. I am going to give you absolute facts as gathered by myself. The Grey Nunnery is not a fit place for sick or convalescent soldiers to be in. My reasons for saying so are these: In the first place, the Grey Nunnery is so walled in, so to speak, that a man who is a convalescent has to remain in a room which is about 92 feet long, 42 feet wide, and 15 feet high. This room has to hold, in the day time, from 200 to 250 men who have to sit there from 9.30 at night till 5 o'clock the next night.

Q. Do not the men get out in the morning?—A. I was just going to explain that there are two parades supposed to be held, an hour's parade in the morning and an hour's parade in the afternoon, for those who are able to walk. Those who are unable to walk, of course cannot go out unless they are given an invitation by outside organizations.

By Hon. Mr. Daniel:

Q. Will you kindly repeat those dimensions again?—A. A length of about 92 feet, a width of 42 feet and a height of 15.

Q. For 200 men?—A. Yes, sir, 200 men. This room is what you may term, below the level. It is a sort of a basement.

By Mr. Ross (Middlesex):

Q. A cellar room?—A. A cellar room.

The CHAIRMAN: Not quite a cellar room, but a basement room.

[Trooper V. R. Brown.]

By Hon. Mr. Marcil:

Q. Is it a sleeping ward for 200 men?—A. No, there are no beds there. This is a recreation room on the ground floor.

Q. The windows are on a level with the ground?—A. On a level with the ground. There is very little ventilation. The light is poor, artificial light is necessary the whole day long, and when you get 200 men smoking either cigarettes or pipes, the resulting conditions must be very unhealthy.

By the Chairman:

Q. There is a piano and two billiard tables?—A. There is a piano and two billiard tables. Conditions are such as to be very unhappy for a sick or a nervous man. My contention is that a man suffering from shell shock, for example, needs absolute quiet.

Q. May I interject here a question as to whether part of the available space has been walled off for vocational training?—A. It was when I was in the institution, sir.

Q. Do the dimensions you gave include the part walled or not?—A. No, sir, it does not. That is extra.

By Hon. Mr. Marcil:

Q. Who organized that institution in such a way, militia officers or the Hospitals Commission?—A. I think it was the Hospitals Commission.

By the Chairman:

Q. Now go on with your description of the conditions?—A. Another thing. My contention is that a man who returns from overseas suffering from shell shock, and needs absolute quiet, has no private place at the Grey Nunnery where he can be quiet. A man who is suffering from shell shock likes to be by himself and get out of the way of any row, and to be in a place where there is lots of air and no smoke.

Q. And plenty of sunshine?—A. Yes, and plenty of sunshine.

By Brigadier-General Mason:

Q. Are there many cases of shell shock?—A. Quite a number. Another thing is this: Some of the men who are tied up in this place may be allowed to go out by special pass, but the greater majority are kept in. In winter time, when they are allowed out at 5 o'clock, it is dark when they get out on the streets. Where is the man to go? To the public houses or bars in the city? He must, because there is no other place to which he can go. The excuse given for this condition of things is that—

Q. Does this condition prevail during the summer and winter?—A. In the summer they may be allowed to go out into a little yard. The excuse given for keeping the men is that if they are allowed to go out two or three of them get drunk, which means that 80 per cent have to suffer for the two or three. Now, there is nothing like fresh air, no matter how the temperature is, for a man who has been in hospital for some time and has come back here to get into shape again. The regulation is in Montreal that the bars should only be open to the soldiers in uniform during the hours from 5 o'clock to eight. But we know for a fact that that regulation is not adhered to, so that soldiers can get into a bar at any time. I don't say in any bar, but there are quite a number of bars in Montreal where the soldier can get a drink of whisky, or anything he likes, at any time of the day.

Q. Is that regulation a provincial enactment or a municipal regulation?—A. It is a military district order by General Wilson, I understand, which came out in military orders.

Q. And the order is not enforced?—A. No, it is not observed at all.

By Mr. Bennett:

Q. It is a prohibition on the soldier?—A. On the soldier.

Q. It is not directed against the sale of liquor by the public house proprietor?—

A. Yes, it is aimed at the public houses. There were orders given to that effect.

[Trooper V. R. Brown.]

By Mr. Ross (Middlesex):

Q. Orders from whom?—A. From the officer commanding Military District No. 4. I think a regulation has also been passed by the municipal council. I think I remember a case quite recently where a man was caught violating the orders and fined $40.

Q. That is an hotel keeper?—A. Yes.

By the Chairman:

Q. To return to the Grey Nunnery, have you any complaint to make in respect to the dormitories, the upper floors that are used as beds?—A. The dormitories are kept very clean and there is quite a lot of space there, but I do not think it is at all a safe place to have a body of men, either sick or convalescent, sleeping in.

Q. Why not?—A. Because I am of opinion that the building is not fireproof. On the contrary, I regard it as a fire trap.

Q. Are there no fire escapes?—A. There are fire escapes, but during the time I was in the Grey Nuns' Hospital the fire escape doors were all kept locked.

Q. But as far as beds and bedding are concerned, and the sleeping apartments themselves, they are fairly satisfactory?—A. Fairly satisfactory, except that I do not consider there is sufficient ventilation.

Q. How about food?—A. The food is fairly good.

Q. You have no complaint to make in that regard?—A. I have no complaint to make as regards food.

Q. Your complaint really goes down to the light and air, and the seclusion in the rest room at the Grey Nunnery?—A. Yes, sir.

Mr. Ross (Middlesex): And the locking of the fire escapes.

By Mr. Bennett:

Q. When did you leave the Institution?—A. About two weeks ago.

Q. How long were you there?—A. I was only there for a period of four weeks.

By the Chairman:

Q. You were re-committed there?—A. Yes, I was.

Q. You broke down after you came out?—A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. Bennett:

Q. You were there for four weeks and then went back?—A. No, sir, I was not there before. I reported there on my way back here from the West; I came down with the 103rd Calgary Regiment.

By Brigadier-General Mason:

Q. Why were the fire escapes kept locked?—A. Because they claim the men used to get in at night by means of them when they out-stayed their passes.

By Mr. Bennett:

Q. It is perfectly clear that the men were not drunk if they got into the building by those fire escapes?—A. It certainly is quite clear, sir.

By Mr. Sutherland:

Q. You consider that living in such conditions has the effect of driving the men to drink?—A. I certainly do, sir.

By Mr. Ross (Middlesex):

Q. They would certainly need some stimulant after being in that atmosphere?—A. I think that caused most of the trouble.

[Trooper V. R. Brown.]

By the Chairman:

Q. What do you consider from the men's point of view would be the best hours for them to have their outing?—A. I consider it would be far better for them to go out in winter when the sun is shining rather than at 5 o'clock when the sun has ceased to shine.

Q. Now, what is your third complaint?—A. My third complaint is in respect of the treatment of the patients, the lax way a man gets treatment there.

Q. Do you mean lax medical treatment?—A. Yes, sir. I want to say in this respect that I am not making any personal complaint as regards myself. I am making this complaint on behalf of the returned soldier.

Q. From what you have been told?—A. From what I have seen. A man who is a patient in the Grey Nunnery does not know where he is at; he does not know when he is going to receive treatment—why? Because he is told to do one thing by one officer, and to do another thing by another officer, and the consequence is that a great many patients are neglected through one party overruling another.

Q. Are these officers belonging to the Association?—A. They do, sir, one is an officer of the Hospitals Commission and the other is an A.M.C.

Q. They are both medical men?—A. No, they are not both medical; I have been an outpatient for a short time, and I went back to report to the medical officer. When I got there I reported, he had a book in front of him.

By Mr. Ross (Middlesex):

Q. Was that the Hospitals Commission Medical Officer?

By the Chairman:

Q. You mean Dr. Dunstan Grey?—A. Yes. When he was just starting to put down my name in the book, the book was sent for by another officer.

Q. By Major Hall?—A. Yes. He is not in the Army Medical Corps.

The CHAIRMAN: He represents the Military Hospitals Commission Command, and Captain Grey is the Medical Superintendent at the Hospital.

Mr. BENNETT: Under the C.A.M.C.

The WITNESS: This book was sent for, and the delay was so long that the different patients had to leave because they could not wait any longer, it was dinner-time, and the medical officer wanted to get home and have his dinner.

Q. How long did they wait?—A. An hour or two hours.

Q. And no explanation was given?—A. No, sir.

By the Chairman:

Q. Is the conflict of authority as between Major Hall and Captain Grey?—A. No, I do not think so, I have not seen any, I could not make any statement on that point.

Q. Neither of them know just what their authority and jurisdiction are?—A. No.

By Brigadier-General Mason:

Q. Are there a sufficient number of medical men at the Grey Nunnery?—A. I do not think there are enough.

By the Chairman:

Q. Are there any medical men that sleep in the building?—A. No, sir, not that I know of, none that stay in the building at any time.

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. Are there cases in that building that might require the attendance of a medical man at any time?—A. Many of them.

Q. What are they?—A. Fits and cases of epilepsy.

Q. Who takes care of those cases when they happen?—A. The nurses.

Q. And the orderlies?—A. And the orderlies.

[Trooper V. R. Brown.]

By Hon. Mr. Daniel:

Q. Do I understand that there is only one medical officer in the whole place?—A. No, sir, there are two or three medical officers.

Q. How many medical officers attend the Grey Nunnery?—A. I know of four, and Captain Grey, five with him.

By Brigadier-General Mason:

Q. Are they all Medical Corps men?—A. All Medical Corps men.

By Mr. Marcell:

Q. Can you give us the names of those gentlemen?—A. I just know the names of two, Captain Gurd and Captain Grey, and there are two French officers and another officer.

Q. How many patients were there during your time?—A. About 200 or 250 men.

Q. How many of them were bed cases?—A. I could not tell you how many.

Q. Were one-half of them bed cases?—A. No, sir, not half, about 20 or 30.

Q. Are the doctors in attendance sufficient to look after the patients?—A. I think they are sufficient, but they are acting as a medical board.

By Mr. Ross (Middlesex):

Q. How many epileptics were there?—A. I could not tell you that.

By Hon. Mr. Daniel:

Q. Is the medical service at the Grey Nunnery divided among these five officers?—A. I do not think so, they take different turns as orderly officers.

Q. The whole five do not go there every day?—A. I do not know, they may do so, I would not be absolutely certain about that.

By the Chairman:

Q. You were speaking about the lack of medical treatment there?—A. Yes.

By Mr. Ross (Middlesex):

Q. Can you give any specific instance in which men have suffered from lack of medical treatment?—A. I would not like to say they actually suffered, but I have heard men come up and say, "I have not seen a doctor since I have been here."

Q. Perhaps they do not need to see one?—A. It was a pretty badly-crippled man.

Q. Do you know of cases where men have been calling for a doctor and the doctor was slow in getting there?—A. I know of an outside case in which that happened.

Q. But he was not living in the Grey Nunnery?—A. He was working under the Hospitals Commission as an orderly.

Q. And you know that he could not get a doctor within a reasonable time?—A. I know that he died before the doctor got there.

By the Chairman:

Q. There was no doctor there at the time?—A. I do not know about that. A telephone message was delivered at 10 o'clock, and the man died at 10 minutes after 12. The doctor arrived at 10 minutes after one.

Q. What is the name of the man?—A. His name was Appleby, and he had seen twenty-one years' service, and wore several ribbons.

Q. Was it a case of sudden illness?—A. He was out on Saturday and was taken with bronchitis on Sunday; on Monday he was looking much worse, and when the landlady went up to see him she told him to stop in bed and she would telephone for a doctor, which she did. She telephoned at 10 o'clock, the man died at 10 minutes after 12, and the doctor got there at 10 minutes after one.

Q. How far did the doctor have to come?—A. I do not know.

[Trooper V. R. Brown.]

Q. Was he accessible?—A. Yes. The message was delivered to the Grey Nunnery, and instead of sending a doctor, two orderlies were sent to see if the man was sick enough to be taken to the hospital. His trouble was bronchitis and congestion of the lungs.

By Brigadier-General Mason:

Q. How many nurses are there in that hospital?—A. All that I can remember there were two nurses in the dispensary and the night nurse for each of the A, B and C Sick wards, and the matron.

By Hon. Mr. Daniel:

Q. In regard to this man that died what doctor was sent for?—A. I do not know if any special doctor was sent for. They 'phoned to the Grey Nunnery and asked them to send the doctor immediately.

Q. Was there any doctor there at the time?—A. I could not say, I was not there.

Q. You do not know what time the doctor did actually receive the message?—A. I could not tell you that. The only information I got was from the landlady. I was the only soldier present at the funeral. The man who did go there did not go from the Grey Nunnery at all, but from the barracks.

By Mr. Middlebro:

Q. Was this man employed at the Grey Nunnery?—A. He was an Orderly at the Belmont Hospital.

By the Chairman:

Q. And presumably he was a well man?—A. Yes—of course for his age and past experience.

Q. I mean that he was not a patient at the Hospital?—A. No, sir, he was not a patient.

By Hon. Mr. Daniel:

Q. He had not reported himself sick?—A. No, sir, he had not.

By the Chairman:

Q. Are you through with the Grey Nunnery?—A. Just one more matter please, in connection with that. It is with regard to the discipline there, the carrying out, the administration of the discipline.

Q. You mean the punishment awarded?—A. Yes.

Q. What, as a rule, is the crime that has to be punished?—A. Generally, being absent without leave, or drunkenness.

Q. The chief cause of your trouble is men coming home drunk?—A. Yes.

Q. What is the discipline given to those men?—A. If they are in a bad state they are put in the guard-room.

Q. That is they are put in the cubicles in the corridor?—A. Yes.

Q. In sight of the front door, is it?—A. There are five or six cells on the left side which are screened by one or two planks.

Q. Generally speaking how many men are confined?—A. I do not think there are very many.

By Hon. Mr. Daniel:

Q. Is that guard-room warm in the winter?—A. No, sir, it is very cold. It is composed of sort of cells, I should imagine about 8 or 9 feet long and 4 feet wide.

Q. Is it kept cold purposely?—A. I do not think it is kept cold purposely, but it is right opposite the door, which is being opened all the time.

By Mr. Ross (Middlesex):

Q. You say it is about 4 feet wide?—A. A little wider than that.

Q. Is the building heated by steam?—A. Yes.

[Trooper V. R. Brown.]

Q. What guard have they there?—A. The guard is composed of a sergeant, a corporal and three men.

Q. Furnished by whom?—A. By the Military Hospitals Commission.

Q. Where do the guards stay?—A. They have a little office off the recreation room next to the technical training department.

Q. That is properly heated, I suppose?—A. That is properly heated.

By Mr. Sutherland:

Q. Are these soldiers exposed to the view of the public coming and going?—A. No, sir, they are not. There is a sort of corridor there and the doors open in.

By the Chairman:

Q. If you did not know what they were as you come in from the street, you would not suspect they were there at all?—A. There is no door facing the entrance, you can see from the outside down the narrow hall, and it would be quite possible for anybody who had not been in the building not to notice them. My complaint is not in regard to these cells, but the way the men are treated, I think they are treated a little too harshly.

Q. What do you say should be done with these men?—A. I think that the very least they could do to the sick soldier, no matter how drunk he is, is to give him a bed to lie on and not to allow him to lie on the floor, when he is under medical treatment with only one or two blankets to cover him. It is a wooden floor.

Q. Is the floor level?—A. The floor is level, but it is of wood and he has only one or two blankets, with nothing to lie on but the floor.

Q. Sometimes you have several men in these cubicles?—A. I do not know of any instances where they have been in the same cubicle. There are about eight or nine cubicles.

By Mr. Ross (Middlesex):

Q. You said there were one or two there to-night?—A. I do not know whether there are any more there now.

By Mr. Middlebro:

Q. There are men though who are not so badly wounded that they cannot go down town and get drunk?—A. I do not protect these men at all; I think they should be punished; but I certainly think a little more kindness should be shown. It may have taken ten weeks to get a man into shape, where, under ill treatment, he will probably need another month or two to arrive at the same convalescent condition.

By Hon. Mr. Daniel:

Q. These men should be furnished with a mattress. If a drunken man were put on a bed, he might roll off onto the floor during the night?—A. In that case he would have no kick coming against the authorities.

Q. A mattress would be all right?—A. That would be very comfortable, sir.

The CHAIRMAN: I have seen the place, there is just a plain wooden floor.

By Mr. Bennett:

Q. Your view, I take it, is the same as mine: the most effective method will be prohibition?—A. That is absolutely my view, sir. If not entirely prohibition, I say cut out whisky. There are so many rotten little hotels in this city, making a fuss over these returned soldiers, trying to get them in, giving them doped drinks, trying to get their buttons and their discharge papers from them, and every bit of their money. I have been down town, and have picked up men lying in the streets.

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. Why do they want their discharge papers?—A. To sell them, sir. They are used for collecting money and begging, sir.

[Trooper V. R. Brown.]

By Brigadier-General Mason:

Q. Are they all in uniform?—A. Sometimes they are in uniform, and sometimes, if discharged, in "civies."

Q. If he is not in uniform, the bartender could not tell if he is a soldier?—A. He has his button on.

By the Chairman:

Q. The worst enemy of the returned soldier in Montreal is drink, then?—A. I think so, sir, I certainly do.

By Mr. Middlebro:

Q. You mentioned that they sell their discharge papers?—A. They get them taken from them, and the men who take them sell them.

By Mr. Ross (Middlesex):

Q. To whom do they sell them?—A. They go around to different people.

Q. They use them as a fake?—A. Yes.

By Brigadier-General Mason:

Q. If the man loses his button, you cannot tell whether he is a soldier?—A. No, and he cannot get another.

Q. They would not hesitate about giving him a drink under those circumstances?—A. Not if they knew he was a soldier.

By Mr. Bennett:

Q. You have not got your silver button yet?—A. Not yet, sir.

By the Chairman:

Q. The only button you have is the Patriotic Fund button?—A. Yes.

MR. BENNETT: The others are on the way. They have been issued in England.

By Mr. Sutherland:

Q. You would advocate having the discharge depot in a prohibition district?—A. It would greatly help matters.

By Mr. Bennett:

Q. You would recommend the enforcement of prohibition where there is a discharge depot rather than removing the depot to prohibition territory?—A. Where there are no bars, the men would be only too glad to have it cut out. In the case of wounded men, some of them want a little something to brace them up, and they go to a saloon, and the bartender puts a few drops of dope in the liquor. That is done every day in this city.

By the Chairman:

Q. Trooper Brown, do you think that the men themselves would be pleased if instead of being taken to a convalescent home in the centre of the city they were at a home a few miles out of the city?—A. I think that is the only solution.

Q. For the salvation of the men?—A. Absolutely, sir, for several reasons. There is nothing to do for a man but to walk around the streets in the city. In the country he could have some sort of games. Here all he has to do is to come into contact with a lot of roughnecks.

Q. The men would be out of danger away from the city, besides being away from drink?—A. Absolutely, sir.

Q. Have you anything more to say on the matter of discipline?—A. I witnessed an occurrence which I have been told to illustrate. I was asked to keep it quiet. But on behalf of the soldiers, I think I should speak of it. During the time I was in the

[Trooper V. R. Brown.]

Grey Nuns Convalescent Hospital, I saw a very unfortunate thing happen. I was in the recreation room and I saw an argument take place between the corporal of the guard and a private.

By Brigadier-General Mason:

Q. A private of the guard?—A. No, a patient. This private was having words, they were talking together, and I heard the corporal tell the private to sit down. Now, the whole thing started through a little matter as regards the men who were taking physical training, what we call physical jerks, not being allowed to go to an entertainment which was given by some ladies at the Ritz Carleton in the afternoon for the reason that they were taking physical training. The argument seemed to get hotter every minute, and then I heard the corporal tell the private that he had had to carry him upstairs in a drunken condition several times. The private on denying the statement to the corporal aroused the anger of the corporal of the guard. The corporal of the guard rushed at the man, grabbed him, and threw him on the ground, then the sergeant of the guard came out and caught hold of the patient, twisted his arm behind his back, and with the help of another corporal dragged him into the guard room. There was an uproar at once.

Q. Was he a wounded patient?—A. He was badly crippled, he could not walk without the use of sticks.

By Mr. Ross (Middlesex):

Q. Three men attacked him?—A. Yes.

By Brigadier General Mason:

Q. Was he sober?—A. Absolutely sober. There was an uproar, the men all rushed toward the cells demanding his release. He was put in the cells, and the sergeant of the guard ordered one of the privates of the guard to fix bayonets to keep the other men back.

By Hon. Mr. Marcil:

Q. How long did he remain in the cells?—A. Not very long, sir. I was in the midst of the crowd, and I asked them to wait until we got in touch with the O.C. They would have pulled the place to pieces if we had not. The Sergeant-Major came down afterwards, quieted the men down, and asked me to send in a report which I did.

By Mr. Bennett:

Q. What happened?—A. I have the report here, and will read it if you wish.

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. What happened on the strength of that report?—A. There was an investigation, sir, just after this was put in. The sergeant was sent to another convalescent home at Belmont. The corporal was kept there, and the patient was kept upstairs. This happened on Friday the 16th day of February. On Saturday afternoon there was an investigation held by Major Hall, and there was the sergeant, the corporal, the private in question and myself as witnesses. The sergeant and corporal were severely reprimanded for their conduct.

By Mr. Ross (Middlesex):

Q. Were they dismissed?—A. They were dismissed, and the sergeant was told that the reason he was sent to the Belmont hospital was in no way to humiliate him.

Q. The sergeant guilty of the offence was sent to another hospital?—A. Just transferred, sir.

Q. That was no punishment at all?—A. None at all. The man who holds a cigarette in his hand gets two days C.B., and his pay stopped.

[Trooper V. R. Brown.]

Q. What became of the corporal?—A. He is on duty there now.

Q. They were not dismissed?—A. No.

By the Chairman:

Q. I understood you to say they were dismissed?—A. The action was dismissed.

Mr. BENNETT: The charge was dismissed.

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. What was the finding of that court?—A. They found the sergeant and the corporal were guilty by giving them a severe reprimand.

Q. Was the man immediately released?—A. Yes.

By Mr. Ross (Middlesex):

Q. Did his health suffer on account of his treatment?—A. Yes, for two or three days he trembled like a leaf, and his stomach was in bad shape.

By Mr. Bennett:

Q. Where was he wounded?—A. In his right side, near the stomach.

By the Chairman:

Q. What was the name of the non-commissioned officer transferred to the Belmont?—A. Sergt. Hornet.

Q. What is the name of the corporal who was detained?—A. Corporal Vigar.

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. Who was the man who held the investigation?—A. Major Hall.

By Mr. Sutherland:

Q. Who is responsible for the discipline in that case? The Army Service Corps?—A. No.

Q. Or the Hospitals Commission?—A. The Hospitals Commission.

Q. And these men were appointed by the Hospitals Commission?—A. Yes, discharged men, but taken on again.

By Mr. Bennett:

Q. They were physically fit for that purpose?—A. Yes, very much so.

By the Chairman:

Q. The penalties were meted out by Major Hall?—A. Yes.

By Brigadier-General Mason:

Q. Are there printed regulations for that?—A. Yes, printed and typewritten.

By the Chairman:

Q. Have you anything further to say about that?—A. No.

Q. Go on with No. 3?—A. The next thing I have you may say you have covered. It is in regard to discharges, pay and pensions. In my case some of them are not adjusted, if I may be allowed to say that.

Q. Your own personal case?—A. All the cases I have before me.

By Mr. Bennett:

Q. Are they in process of adjustment?—A. That I could not say. They have been in abeyance a long time.

Q. In process of adjustment?—A. Yes.

Q. Those are the ones that have to be adjusted under new regulations?—A. Yes.

Q. Would you file with us the list of cases and we will have each one of them investigated by the proper authority?—A. Yes, I will file this report: that is the best way.

[Trooper V. R. Brown.]

Q. Read these cases?—A. This is a résumé of the service of No. 764, Private A. R. Baldock, P.P.C.L.I., Enlisted 12th August, 1914, discharged at Quebec, P. Que., 6th August, 1915. Pension granted by Order in Council, dated 28th January, 1916, Ottawa, H. Q. 649, third degree, i.e. $132 per annum for one year from 7th November, 1915.

By Mr. Ross (Middlesex):

Q. Was he a married man?—A. Yes.

Q. Did he not get his pay?—A. I come to that presently. He entered Royal Victoria Hospital 29th February, 1916.

By the Chairman:

Q. Recommitted?—A. Yes.

Q. A month after he was first committed?—A. Yes. He was discharged from there 6th April, 1916. His pension was granted by Order in Council dated 13th May, 1916, Ottawa headquarters 649-B-15, first degree, i.e. for one year from 7th November, 1915, of $33 per month.

Q. Eighty per cent disabled?—A. Yes. Re-examination by Medical Board, Montreal, 14th November, 1916, first degree pension granted for one year from 7th November, 1916, to be then re-examined. Re-adjustment of pension Ottawa, 21st December, 1916, from old scale to the new scale, 1st March to the 15th July, 1916, inclusive. Whilst under treatment four and half month's separation allowance at $20 per month, $90. As per ruling of Military Hospitals Commission Command, published in the press, i.e., any man discharged, and it was found he was too sick to follow any occupation, would be put back in hospital for treatment, and at the same time would also be put back on pay and allowances for such period. I have tried to collect my separation allowance for that period and up to the present have not been successful.

Q. You mean tried to collect arrearages for that period?—A. Yes.

Q. But that Order in Council did not go through. He could not collect for time prior to the Order in Council being passed?—A. I do not know.

Mr. BENNETT: Yes, under the terms of the Order in Council he was entitled to that. What date was that?

The WITNESS: That is at the present moment.

By Mr. Bennett:

Q. When was that taken up with the Pensions Department? The Order in Council is only recently?—A. I do not think it has been taken up within the last two weeks.

By the Chairman:

Q. Finish reading the statement?—A. The statement reads—"I am therefore entitled to know, as I was put back into hospital, as per the ruling, why I did not get the separation allowance for my wife, as during the time I was laid up she had to be supported just the same." Then I have put a query, why should a man enlisted for home service, laid up in hospital, be receiving full pay and separation allowance for wife without any trouble at all, and another man, a member of the First Contingent, wounded at Ypres in January, 1915, being returned back to Canada, discharged, having to re-enter hospital suffering from (1) myccarditis, (2) vegetative valvular endocarditis, the X. Ray examination shows the heart enlarged both to the right and left. The Electro Cardiogram shows prolongation of the P. R. interval, (3) Oedema of the lungs and (4) Chronic nephritis, not be able to collect the separation allowance that is due to him during the period he is under military medical treatment." Then query, "why should I be paid $18.75 for subsistence through an error as from 7th to 31st August, 1915, inclusive, to have same deducted by Ottawa on the 4th March, 1916, out of my first instalment of pension." That is signed by A. R. Baldock.

The CHAIRMAN: The new regulation is in force now, and I think these statements had better be sent to Ottawa with the request that an explanation be given on the part of the military authorities with reference to that allegation.

[Trooper V. R. Brown.]

Mr. BENNETT: There are many things with regard to which we will require an explanation.

By Hon. Mr. Marcil:

Q. Is there any man in Montreal to whom this man could make his complaint?—A. I find in regard to pensions that we have established a local office under the management of Mrs. Ross who will look into pensions and get a reply within three days.

Q. Has this ever been submitted to Mrs. Ross?—A. No, I do not think so. I have another statement here which reads as follows:—

No. 24636, Lance Corporal P. O'Sullivan, 13th Battalion, C.E.F., was discharged 29th September, 1915. He was recommended at Quebec Discharge Depot for no convalescence.

By Mr. Ross (Middlesex):

Q. What is meant by that?—A. That he is fit for work. The statement continues:

He started to work and worked for two months but his leg broke out and he was unable to continue work.

Q. He was wounded in the leg?—A. Yes. He further states:—

He reported to Lieut.-Col. Patch who recommended him to the General Hospital. On reporting to the General Hospital he was examined by the doctors and X rayed; he was then transferred to the Grey Nuns Convalescent Hospital. He was a bed patient for five months and then he was held for two months until he was able to work. He wants to know why he was not paid for period in hospital.

He was wounded and gassed, and after being in convalescent for three months he received a pension check for $11, which was all the money he received while he was in the hospital.

By Mr. Bennett:

Q. Was he married or single?—A. I think single. He further states:—

He was recommended in England for a pension for one year, third class. He received pension for only six months in Canada and then was cut off without being re-boarded and has not heard since from Pensions Board.

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. When did he get his last pension under that?—A. I understand when he returned to Canada was in September and he got paid six months after that. He got paid for six months.

Q. That would be in March?—A. Yes.

Q. He has had nothing since?—A. No. He was discharged. When he got to the depot he was told by Col. Sharples that he did not need any convalescence.

By the Chairman:

Q. And he broke down afterwards and went in again?—A. Yes.

By Mr. Bennett:

Q. The man was eight months in the hospital without pay and was discharged as man not requiring any pension afterwards?—A. Yes.

By Hon. Mr. Marcil:

Q. How is he now?—A. He claims he is not fit for work now.

By Mr. Bennett:

Q. He wants re-boarding now?—A. Yes, I told him he could. He has tried his best to work.

Q. How long was he in the service?—A. About a year.

By the Chairman:

Q. Give us the next one?—A. Pensioner No. 3613. Pte. 24799, James Dunn, Abercrombie, 13th Batt., R. H. C. This man was discharged from the C. E. F. on September 22, 1915, as physically unfit for further service, having lost the entire use of his right arm. He was given three months pay i.e. $150 pending settlement of his pension. He was awarded a first degree pension for six months i.e. $22 per month. At the expiration of this period he was again examined by the medical board and pension was continued at the same rate for a further six months.

On December 13th, he was again examined by the Medical Board and was rated as three-quarters disabled, which under the new scale of pensions meant an increase on his pension. On January 16, 1917, he was notified by the Pension Commissioners that his pension had been reduced to $16 per month. He also received a cheque for $111.67 to cover the difference between his pension for 1916 under the new scale.

From January, 1916, to February, 1917, the above pensioner was receiving treatment for his wound, the greater part of this time being spent in hospital where he underwent seven operations, being unable to follow any occupation during this period he considers himself entitled to full pension for same, viz., $480. He also considers that his pension should be raised according to the finding of the medical board.

He has already taken the matter up with the Pension Commissioners, but up to the present has received no satisfaction.

Q. Why was this man discharged?—A. I could not say.

By Mr. Ross (Middlesex):

Q. Have you confirmed any of these?—A. I have seen the man himself.

Q. Have you any more of these cases?—A. The next is along the same line, the man was discharged in Montreal, No. 25608, 14th Battalion. The memorandum reads as follows:—

Was discharged in Montreal, was granted $8 pension per month and only received two cheques. The first was for $8 and the second for $12.10. A letter was received saying that owing to being overpaid on L.P.C. money was being stopped out of pension grant.

Matheson is now working with the Customs and has been in their service for five years and has given every satisfaction. Making now $750 per year. Men working at the same place, under same rate and who had not been overseas were given a rise of $50 and some $100 and still kept Matheson on at same rate—$750.

The CHAIRMAN: We will communicate with the proper authorities in regard to each one of these.

By Mr. Bennett:

Q. Where are the men?—A. Right in town.

Mr. SUTHERLAND: We should have these statements direct from the parties if they are available.

The CHAIRMAN: I think we should first submit these statements to the military authorities and see what they have to say in the matter, and we can then judge as to where the equities lie.

Mr. PARDEE: We might get the authorities report in Toronto by Wednesday next and we might get these men to report to us in Toronto and place their case before the Commission.

[Trooper V. R. Brown.]

By Hon. Mr. Marcil:

Q. How many are there?—A. I have given four or five cases, and I have some original letters here. I can have copies made of them.

By the Chairman:

Q. We will take any further complaints you may have if you will furnish us with copies?—A. I will do so.

By Mr. Middlebro:

Q. You have never taken up any of these complaints with the Militia Department before they passed this Order in Council?—A. I would not say that I have.

Q. They may be all covered by that Order in Council?—A. All we want to see is that the men are protected. There is a letter here which I would like to read to the committee. On the first cheque which I received, April 6, 1916, the sum of $8.60 was deducted. This sum was overpaid me on some cheque which I received on discharge. The question is if a soldier signs his discharge papers and the authorities hand him his papers, is that not a clearance to both the man and the authorities, and should the man have to suffer on account of an error of the paymaster, whoever it may be, because they have made a mistake and overpaid him?

By Brigadier-General Mason:

Q. Perhaps he should not have got the money?—A. The man did not know that, he was not aware of it at the time.

By Mr. Ross (Middlesex):

Q. If he was not entitled to that much money why should he want to keep it?—A. He did not know he had been paid too much. It was paid him on the acquittance bill.

Q. If you had been paid $30 when you were only owed $20, would you not give back $10?—A. I would if I were absolutely sure I had been overpaid; but under the rules as now followed, the men are unable to be absolutely sure whether they are getting the full amount coming to them or not.

Q. I presume you will not contend that if the man had been overpaid he should not return the excess?—A. Not if the man knew he had been overpaid.

By Mr. Bennett:

Q. I presume that having surrendered his pay-book and other documents, you think it unfair that the man should not be given an opportunity to verify the amount coming to him?—A. I certainly think that a man should be allowed to see his own receipts.

By Hon. Mr. Marcil:

Q. Was no explanation given as to why the amount had been deducted?—A. The $10? The man was simply told he had been overpaid on his pay cheque.

By the Chairman:

Q. What was the man's name?—A. Private McGilton, No. 25973.

Q. Your contention is that when a man has been discharged from the service and begins to draw a pension, no overpayment which may have been made to him could be deducted from that pension?—A. That is, without letting the man look at any receipts he has signed for money to ascertain whether he has been overpaid or not.

By Mr. Bennett:

Q. The man has a pay cheque?—A. Certainly.

Q. That is your evidence of the money you receive?—A. Yes.

Q. And of the money you are entitled to?—A. Yes.

Q. And when you part with that you have parted with the evidence as to the amount of money you have received?—A. Certainly.

Q. When you have abandoned that cheque you think the department should not deduct overpayments from the pension?—A. Certainly not, unless there is absolute proof of the overpayments.

By Mr. Middlebro:

Q. Is the man satisfied he was overpaid?—A. He claims he was not overpaid.

Q. Have you seen him?—A. He handed me that letter.

Q. Did he say he was not overpaid?—A. Yes. When a man's pay book is taken from him he is paid by the Acquittance Roll, and he has to sign in triplicate. He does not keep that; that is kept by the paymaster, or whoever pays him, and sent to Ottawa, to the Paymaster General, or whoever it may be, but one copy is kept in the paymaster's office. Now, my contention is that a man who has had no education and is not quick at figures, and who, when he gets to the discharge depot, is handed $150, does not know whether there is really $200 or $300 due to him. I do not say that the department or the paymaster do this thing on purpose, but I do say that when there are errors in overpayment there may be errors in underpayment, and that man should be given a chance to see those documents, which will convince him of the correctness of the procedure.

By Hon. Mr. Marcil:

Q. Was there no statement furnished to this man as to how this money was made up?—A. No, he was only told that he had been paid up in full. I think the only solution of the difficulty is to let the party affected have access to the documents.

Q. Was there not a statement as to how the amount was made up?—A. Even if there had been he could not check it up if he did not have his pay book.

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. Would he not have a pretty fair idea as to what amount was coming to him?—A. A man does not keep a record other than his pay book.

By Hon. Mr. McCurdy:

Q. What is the practice? Are these pay books given up when the men are discharged?—A. Some of them are and some of them are not. His last payment to him in England is made at the London Pay and Record Office. When he comes to Canada there are two or three further payments to him—his pay going on until his discharge—but then he is not paid in accordance with the pay book, but on the acquittance roll.

Q. What is that?—A. It is a form got out by means of which to pay the men, sort of sheet. He has to sign when he receives payment.

By Hon. Mr. Marcil:

Q. A pay sheet?—A. A pay sheet.

By Hon. Mr. McCurdy:

Q. And does that pay sheet not agree with the balance due on the pay book?—A. It is supposed to, but a man cannot say that if he does not see his book.

Q. Was a request made for a duplicate copy of this man's account?—A. I would prefer myself that the man should be allowed, if he finds any mistake, to go up and see his record.

Q. But, has a request been made for a duplicate of the man's account?—A. I do not think it has.

By Brigadier-General Mason:

Q. Has the man asked for evidence or proof that he was overpaid?—A. He claims that he had not been overpaid.

[Trooper V. R. Brown.]

Q. Did he ask for evidence or proof when the deduction was made?—A. I cannot say that.

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. Did you say that this pay book you have spoken of is taken from the soldier before his acquittance sheet is made out?—A. Sometimes it is. Sometimes it is taken from him in England, and he comes back without a pay book.

Q. Sometimes it is taken from him over here or in England?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Does the officer, or whoever it is takes his pay book away from him, check the pay book and make the acquittance sheet up in accordance with the pay book?—A. I think he checks it in accordance with his L.P.C. This is the last pay statement sent over from England.

Q. And if a man who is getting money paid to him wishes to check up the payments made to him, he cannot do so from his pay book or any other source?—A. He certainly has no chance of seeing—.

Q. No chance of seeing the pay book?—A. The documents or the pay book.

Q. No chance whatever?—A. None.

Q. Your complaint is that either when a man leaves England or comes to Canada his pay book is taken?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And the sheet is made up without any oversight on the man's part?—A. It is, sir.

Q. And he is handed whatever that officer desires to give him, without check on his part?—A. Yes. I have a pay book which I can bring to you, if you desire, by way of illustration, where a man figured he had something like $68 coming to him, and all he received was $1.60.

By Hon. Mr. Maclell:

Q. Did he appeal to anybody?—A. He went to the Adjutant in the Grey Tunnery Hospital, who figured out that he ought to receive something like $50.

Q. How long has this thing been going on?—A. Quite a long time.

Q. Have the soldiers not yet got wise enough to hang on to their pay books?—A. I am one of the unfortunate ones. I figured when I left England that I had a balance coming to me, but when I got here the sum of $60 was deducted.

Q. Have you made no representations to the authorities with regard to it?—A. I have not made any representations yet.

Q. Why not?—A. Because I wanted to see what they would do when I got my last pay.

By Mr. Bennett:

Q. Does not your L. P. C. show that?—A. No, sir, it does not.

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. When did they take this pay book from you?—A. They took it from me at the hospital and sent it to the Pay and Records Office.

By Mr. Bennett:

Q. Has the question of exchange anything to do with the discrepancies between what the soldiers believe they ought to get and what they actually receive?—A. I think the rate of exchange is something like 15 cents on the £.

Q. That might account for the $8.60 in the case you spoke of?—A. I would not like to say. It is not my case. My own case is rather a peculiar one. When I was in service I assigned $20 of my pay to my brother.

Q. Did you not make a memorandum when you gave up your pay book?—A. My credit was, roughly speaking, about three pounds when I was last paid, which is perfectly O.K.

Q. That would be about $15?—A. Yes.

[Trooper V. R. Brown.]

Q. And there was $45 still coming to you, on your contention?—A. There was more than that sum of money coming to me.

Q. And yet they debited you?—A. Debited me at Quebec, and did not give me a cent. I was at my own expense coming back here.

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. And you have not got anything back?—A. Not a cent. All I received was two pounds on the boat, and I received no money in Quebec to take me to my destination. All I have received from the Canadian Government since July, 1916, has been $115. My discharge dates from to-day. It is a simple discharge.

By Hon. Mr. Marcil:

Q. Was that money paid from Ottawa?—A. I paid my own expenses.

Q. What I mean is, was the $115 paid from Ottawa?—A. Yes.

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. What was the extent of your wounds received at the front?—A. I was slightly wounded in the legs and back, and became paralyzed on the right side.

Q. And you have not been able to do anything?—A. No, sir.

Q. How much pension do you receive?—A. I have not been rated yet. I have not received any pension. The last money I got was three weeks ago, when I received $50.

Q. When did you arrive back here?—A. In August of last year.

Q. And the sum of $115 is all that you have received since July, last year?—A. That is all I have got.

Q. What pay are you supposed to draw?—A. About $33 a month.

By Mr. Bennett:

Q. There is a regulation now that the pay books should be handed back to the men as souvenirs?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. To every soldier, by the Pay and Record Office in London?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And if this has not been carried out it is because the regulation has not been observed. You do not know to what extent it has been carried out?—A. No, sir.

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. Have you been before the Board?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How often?—A. I have been before two Boards since I was down here.

Q. How long ago was that?—A. Quite recently, since I left the Grey Nunnery.

Q. Yes, but how long ago is it?—A. I could not tell you the exact day, it was three weeks ago.

Q. And you have been before two Boards since then?—A. No, one Board since then.

Q. When was the former Board?—A. There are so many dates in my head that I do not remember the exact date, within the last few months. Mine is rather a peculiar case, I would prefer to submit the facts in writing rather than speak about it.

By Hon. Mr. McCurdy:

Q. How do you happen to be in this country?—A. That is what I would like to explain to you. I made application for a commission in England and was advised to return to Canada to get one. I paid my own expenses and came here to report to my Military District.

Q. That is, Military District No. 13?—A. No. 13. I reported to the Sarcee Camp and made my application for a commission. I was told there were too many officers waiting, that there were about 2,000 waiting to be posted, and I would not be able to get a commission. I have recommendations from people in England and also from my Officer Commanding. Then I saw Colonel May—I endeavoured to see General Cruikshank but he was not there—who told me to go right back. I got $40 and $25 but my expenses back and my fare on the boat were paid by myself. The expenses of my journey to the west were also paid by myself.

By the Chairman:

Q. You incurred that expense because you wanted to secure a commission? And you returned voluntarily offering to come back at your own expense?—A. Yes.

By Hon. Mr. McCurdy:

Q. Within the last month or so you were pronounced unfit for service?—A. I reported when I came back, and I found that they only granted me six weeks to get my commission, knowing that if I got a commission I should be detained to take my course. I found the impossibility of getting a commission—so I returned. I was suffering from trench mouth, and when I got to Montreal I reported to the transportation officer and asked what boat I could go on on my return journey. I had to stop off at Medicine Hat to get treatment for my mouth. I asked the transportation officer at Montreal what boat I could take. He told me I could go on the Missanabie, which left the next night. I was feeling very sick and I reported to the Grey Nunnery and they told me that I was a case for the Dental Corps, and it would take three months to get cured. I have been here ever since at my own expense. I was taken for inspection and got my discharge.

Q. What service were you in when you were on the other side?—A. The Strathcona Horse.

Q. How did you get detached from that corps?—A. When I was sent home wounded.

Q. And you came back to Canada to get a commission?

The CHAIRMAN: He was sent to Ireland first.

By the Chairman:

Q. But you came back to Canada at your own expense?—A. Yes, I offered to come back at my own expense.

By Mr. Sutherland:

Q. What was the reason that no advance was made to you when you got back to Quebec?—A. The reason was, I was told, that I was $60 overdrawn.

By Hon. Mr. McCurdy:

Q. You were transferred to England and got six weeks' leave with permission to return to Canada?—A. Yes.

Q. And since you have got back here you have been found medically unfit, and you are at the present time unfit?—A. Yes.

Q. How did you expect to get a commission if you were unfit?—A. I thought I was fit at that time; I was feeling much better than I am now.

Q. And you have been discharged as permanently unfit?—A. Yes.

Q. Would you take a commission now if you could get one?—A. If I was fit I could be quite willing to, if I could.

By the Chairman:

Q. Will you put in a written statement on your own behalf, giving your own case?—A. I will.

Q. Are there any further conditions that you wish to criticize?—A. None. There is just one thing I would like to say in closing. I want it perfectly understood here that I am representing the Returned Soldiers' Association, and that I made no kicks about anything except their interests.

Q. Your own case has not been taken to Headquarters yet?—A. No, I have not got done that.

Q. Do you not think you should make representations to Headquarters and that if you do so they will receive consideration?—A. I am quite sure of that, Sir. With reference to the question of re-employment of the men, I have been looking after that part of it, and have been working in conjunction with the Khaki League along that line. I find that the greatest difficulty is to get the man who has been in office life to go back to office work. Another thing is that for the man who has been before engaged in rather heavy work and is now unable to do that I quite understand that the question has been taken up by the Military Hospitals Commission regarding the re-education of men who will learn different trades. The greatest trouble in Montreal at the present moment is the munition plants. The men all want to work there, because they can get higher wages. What I try to do is to get them to take some steady job at, say, $60 per month, rather than working at the munitions, because the war will not last for ever, and when it ceases they will be thrown back on our hands again. I understand that the men are being taught to become mechanical draftsmen, and learning shorthand and typewriting, which is very good, but I would think that a man would be on your hands for three or four years before he will become a mechanical draftsman. If I might suggest some attention should be paid to carpenter work, blacksmithing, gardening, furniture-making, and all that sort of thing.

Q. In other words, so that they will not be required to come into competition with the more skilled men?—A. Exactly so, Sir. If the Committee will excuse me, there is just one thing I have overlooked, which is rather interesting. It is this: a man writes here a letter—

Q. Who is it from?—A. The letter is written by G. Lajoie, No. 25963, and it reads as follows:—

2593 St. Denis St., March 6th, 1917.

Trooper BROWN,
Secretary, R.S.A.,
Montreal.

DEAR SIR,—My complaint is as follows. When I received my discharge from Major Hall, of the Grey Nuns, my character was described as "Good while in Hospital. Documents not available." This description does not say anything about active service record, and regarded in that light, it is not a commendation.

Hoping to hear from you soon in this matter,

I remain

Yours truly.

By the Chairman:

Q. You showed me the other day a case that came up here in Montreal where a man is marked "insane" on his discharge paper. You might fyle that paper also.—A. I haven't it here.

Q. Then you might give us the effect of it?—A. It was a man named Hamel, who is at present in Toronto, I have written to him but have had no reply. His discharge paper read "insane".

Q. Which you say would interfere greatly with his getting employment?—A. I certainly say it would, sir.

By Hon. Mr. McCurdy:

Q. Was that description an improper one? Did it improperly describe the man?—A. I would not like to guarantee that, but, I say that he should not be discharged for that.

By Mr. Middlebro:

Q. If the man is insane does he not get a pension?—A. I understand that if a man is insane the pension does not go to him directly, but to his family.

Q. Or the Institution which takes care of him?—A. Yes.

Witness discharged.

[Trooper V. R. Brown.]

Mrs. BUSTEED, called and testified.

By the Chairman:

Q. You are the President of the Soldiers' Wives League I understand?—A. Yes, the Soldiers' Wives League of Montreal.

Q. And that League has had a good deal to do with the Returned Soldiers. Will you give us the benefit of your advice with respect to the treatment of returned soldiers. What would you like to tell to the Committee with respect to that matter?—A. Well, it is almost impossible for me to say what I think should be done for the returned soldier.

Q. Will you give us your opinion, from your own experience of the cases that have come under your immediate notice with regard to the returned soldiers?—A. You see our work is directly for the wives and the children and we expect the returned soldiers to be dealt with in another way by other organizations. However we think that in many cases the great problem we have to deal with is the returned soldier in the interim while he is waiting for employment.

Q. That is after he has been discharged?—A. Yes.

Q. You deal with him for the sake of his family?—A. Yes.

Q. Do you assist him if he has no family?—A. If he has a wife, yes.

Q. You would not assist an unmarried man who had no one depending upon him?—A. It just depends upon the circumstances if the man is out of employment for some time we do.

Q. Have you found that the period after the man is discharged and before he gets employment is particularly trying?—A. Yes, we do not look into that very much, we simply deal with the family. While he is out of employment we give an allowance to the wife and the family. We do not give an allowance to any man.

Q. Have you to help a great many families in Montreal of discharged men?—A. Yes, a great many.

Q. Why?—A. Because they do not get employment at once, and for various reasons, I really cannot say why.

Q. Have you had many cases that the men themselves did not make good use of their money?—A. A great many.

Q. You have had a great many cases where you had to help through the fault of the men themselves?—A. In many cases, we cannot tell always why a man cannot get employment immediately; we cannot go to the very bottom of that question, but we will not allow any women or children to suffer in the meantime. We may have assisted families, perhaps unwisely, but we will not allow any woman or her children to suffer, once we know anything about the case and have the money to assist them.

Q. You work through committees of ladies that are attached to each Militia Unit?—A. Yes.

Q. The ladies for example, connected with the Fifth Royal Highlanders, look after the families of that corps?—A. Yes. They come to us for assistance when they are unable to support these cases.

Q. The returned men are the only ones you are interested in?—A. Yes.

Q. On what do you depend for your funds?—A. Our resources are varied. We have an annual fee from our members, and we have collections from entertainments, and benefits and collections here and there, and the goodwill of our friends.

Q. It is a purely voluntary organization? How many families are you assisting at the present time?—A. We have at present about 175 families on our list.

Q. All families of returned soldiers?—A. No, because we have some families of men on home service.

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. Why do the families of Home Service Soldiers require assistance?—A. Because $1.10 per day is not sufficient to keep them.

[Mrs. E. B. Busteed.]

Q. If the man had not enlisted for home service, would he have been able to earn a living?—A. Possibly not, but he is a soldier at present, that is all we take into consideration, he is in uniform.

Q. How many families of returned soldiers require helping now?—A. We have about 45 on our list.

Q. Out of that 45, what percentage of them are families of men who are returned soldiers, but who cannot support them out of their pension?—A. I think about 20.

Q. Are they totally disabled men?—A. No, not entirely, some are, and some are not.

Q. Of the totally disabled men do you know how many families you are supporting?—A. Of totally disabled men? I could not say, I think we have about two that we know of, totally disabled.

Q. What are these men doing now?—A. I cannot answer that. Some of them claim to be sick. We do not know whether their claim is right or not.

Q. Do you look into their circumstances?—A. Surely.

Q. When you say you do not know whether they are sick or not, do you mean—
A. They claim they are sick; they have been discharged, and have been taken off the hospital list.

Q. Do you get any medical certificate to satisfy your society?—A. No.

Q. You take their word for it?—A. Take their word for it. We visit them regularly and keep in very close touch with them for some time.

By Mr. Middlebro:

Q. Even if a returned soldier can work, or won't work, you look after his family nevertheless?—A. That is a question. We get a great deal of help from the other organizations in the city. We are not going to help any man who is fooling or playing on the Fund, but we have a good many cases where we endeavor to help the women and children, and keep the help away from the man.

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. Can you do that?—A. To a very great extent. If we send food to the family we cannot vouch for the fact that the man will not get some of the food. As far as we can, we prevent him from getting any assistance we give to the women.

By Mr. Bennett:

Q. To what extent would you say that drink is a factor?—A. It is a very great factor.

Q. What proportion of your cases do you attribute directly to drink?—A. Perhaps eight or ten. We can trace it in nearly all cases.

Q. Direct or indirect?

By the Chairman:

Q. In most of the cases that you have to help of returned soldiers the root of the trouble lies in drink?—A. I think so, Sir Herbert.

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. Are these discharged men?—A. Yes, a number of them are.

Q. Are they all in civilian uniform?—A. Most of them are.

Q. Is there any way you can suggest for discharged men to be so ticketed that they would not be able to get drink?—A. No, we have not thought of that at all.

Q. You do not think it would be possible?—A. I hardly think so.

By Mr. Bennett:

Q. Except as they are doing in Alberta, by passing a prohibitory law?—A. That is what we would like.

[Mrs. E. B. Busteed.]

By Mr. Ross (Middlesex):

Q. You say that two of those families are men who are totally disabled, and who have been given pensions, and you are assisting them. Is that because their pensions are not sufficient to maintain them?—A. That is the reason.

Q. They are men with particularly large families?—A. Yes.

Q. But they get an allowance for each child?—A. I am aware of that.

By the Chairman:

Q. A man totally disabled gets $480 a year and $250 for attendance, plus $6 a month for each child.—A. I know that. We have only two cases, the cases we are helping are where they have got into debt, or have had sickness in their families and have run up a large doctor's bill. In these times it is almost impossible to get a doctor to visit the families.

Q. The Government pension of a totally disabled man with a wife and children may run as high as $1,000 a year.—A. We have only two such cases.

Q. A totally disabled man should never require assistance.—A. These cases we are helping, we do not expect them to continue; we are giving only temporary help, that is to say the cases will drop off the list as they are adjusted, and as their pensions are adjusted. We are helping all sorts of people. It would be almost impossible to tell of the variety of cases we assist.

By Mr. Ross (Middlesex):

Q. Their pensions are not adjusted?—A. No.

Q. And you are trying to pay up their back debts?—A. We are helping them. It is an awful problem to assist them.

Q. You think when their pensions are adjusted they will get sufficient to maintain their families and themselves?—A. We think so. In some cases the pensions are very small. We have a case of a man—I must speak of a specific case to make you understand what I mean—with a wife and four children, getting a pension of $12 a month, who thought he was well enough to work, and finds he is not.

By Mr. Bennett:

Q. It is only a 20 per cent disability case?—A. That is one case that comes into my mind.

Q. He is entitled to be re-boarded?—A. We have tried to do all these things. Our office is very well run.

Q. The pension is not subject to attachment?—A. I know that.

By the Chairman:

Q. Have you anything to suggest to the Committee that might be done that has not been done to make conditions better?—A. Sir Herbert, I have a great many cases that I could speak of, but which I do not think it is proper to mention, as I have not positive proof.

Q. Have you any general recommendations to make based on your experience?—A. Well, I think that some cases might be reconsidered. We have a case at the present moment that has been dealt with by the Patriotic Fund and the Khaki League. The wife and children have come back to us, and we exist for the purpose of helping women and children. This is the case of a man who has gone out of his mind; it is claimed that it is not the direct effect of the war in as much as he was in South Africa and went out of his mind after being through the war there. That man has a wife and three children. We are giving her an allowance of so much a week. We received word yesterday that the man's case cannot be reconsidered. Cases such as this we think might be reconsidered. There are several such cases. But the information comes from Ottawa that the man is not suffering from insanity as the direct cause of this present war, because he was insane once before. In the meantime his wife has used up all the money she saved while he was away.

Q. If there had not been this great war he might have been insane now?—A. He was quite sane when he enlisted for this war.

Q. He did not get to the front?—A. Oh, yes.

Q. To France?—A. Yes.

Mr. ROSS (Middlesex): That man's case should be reconsidered.

Mr. BENNETT: The statute will have to be changed, as it stands now he is not entitled to anything for that cause.

The WITNESS: His family are not eligible for anything from the Patriotic Fund, and no separation allowance of any kind.

By the Chairman:

Q. Do you think the Patriotic Fund should extend the time a little longer for helping families after the man is discharged?—A. Yes, I think so.

Q. Would 30 or 60 days longer cover most cases?—A. I think until the adjustment of the pension is made.

Q. It does now, as far as that is concerned, under the new regulations.—A. I did not know that.

Q. Do you think it should carry a discharged man a little longer?—A. Certainly it is very short.

Q. 30 or 60 days longer?—A. I should go a little longer if it was possible.

By Mr. Bennett:

Q. You have had a good deal of experience, Mrs. Busteed, in looking after conditions in a city like this. Having regard to your own experience, is the suffering among the families of the returned soldiers because of greater or less poverty, or is it about the same as is to be found among other families of about the same position in life financially?—A. I think just about the same.

Q. You do not see much difference?—A. No, I do not.

Q. It is the sort of thing spoken of in Scripture: The poor we have with us always?—A. If these people are free from sickness all through the time their husbands are away, they are able to get along. But they are not provident; they have not anything put away, they live from day to day; they do not know how to spend their money, and they do not know how to handle it very well. In a great many cases we only assist with food and clothing; we do not give money at all.

Q. As I understand from what you have said, the cases most pressing upon you are those that arise because of the improvident condition the families find themselves in at the time the husband comes back?—A. In some cases, but in a great many not at all. We have many splendid cases where something happened to them, for instance they are sick; it has happened so.

By the Chairman:

Q. As a rule, you get the submerged tenth anyway?—A. Oh, yes.

Q. The people able to take care of themselves do not come on your Fund at all except in emergency cases?—A. We have an emergency committee that visits every case within 24 hours, and assistance is given on the spot whether right or wrong, whether good or bad.

By Mr. Bennett:

Q. It is a fact that when the war broke out a considerable number of men went to the war from necessity, and others because of adventure. So far as those who went from necessity are concerned, I take it perhaps their position is a little better than before they went?—A. Some are considerably. The families of those who went from our regular regiments are not the kind that want so much assistance.

[Mrs. E. B. Busteed.]

By Hon. Mr. Daniel:

Q. You spoke of some of these cases suffering from ailments and sickness, and having doctors' bills to pay and that sort of thing. Is it your suggestion that these people in addition to having their pension might also be entitled to free medical attendance?—A. Yes, we would be very glad of that if we could get it, but we cannot get it.

Q. Is it a suggestion of yours that it would be advantageous for them, and in a way perhaps necessary that they should have it?—A. It would be very desirable, we have wished for that quite often. There might be a medical man who would care for the cases of the various Leagues, perhaps one man could do it.

Q. You would be inclined to make that suggestion?—A. Yes, I would be very glad. I think it is very necessary.

Witness discharged.

Mrs. W. RUTHERFORD called, sworn and examined.

By the Chairman:

Q. You are the President of the Westmount Soldiers' Wives League?—A. Yes.

Q. Do you also deal with returned soldiers' families?—A. Yes.

Q. And discharged men?—A. Well, we have not had a great deal to do with the men. Where we have come in contact with cases that needed assistance we have worked in co-operation with the Khaki League. We have looked after the families that needed assistance, and the Khaki League have looked after the men.

Q. Do you look after the families of the returned soldiers, after they have been discharged, who require assistance?—A. Yes.

Q. What has been your experience in dealing with cases of that kind?—A. We have not had a great many cases of that description.

Q. What are the reasons why you have had to give supplementary assistance to families of returned soldiers?—A. We feel when all their pay and different allowances stop, and they are still waiting for their pension to come, they need assistance.

Q. The new arrangement will not stop the pay until the pension commences; that difficulty will be covered, but how about the men who are discharged, but who have not yet commenced to get into a steady job? Do you carry them?—A. As I say, we have taken the men over to the Khaki League to look after, and we help their families if they need it.

Q. Have you anything to suggest as to an improvement in the method of dealing with the families of returned soldiers?—A. No, I cannot say that I have.

Q. The experience your organization has had does not lead you to make any suggestions to the committee?—A. No, I do not think I can offer any suggestions.

Q. I suppose you agree in the main with what Mrs. Busteed says?—A. Yes, on the same line, but we have not nearly as many men under our care.

Q. Have you any idea how many soldiers you are looking after at the present time?—A. No, I cannot tell you that.

Witness discharged.

The committee adjourned until 10 a.m. to-morrow.

EXHIBIT No. 1.

DEPARTMENT OF MILITIA AND DEFENCE,

OTTAWA, CANADA, March 9, 1917.

DEAR MR. CLOUTIER,—With reference to information desired by the Committee as to the number of Class "E" men in England awaiting discharge, I would say that a cable has just been received from England, that the number of such men is 1,216.

It will be remembered that Class "E" includes all men ready for discharge, whether wounded, invalided, or for any other reason.

The cable states that all Class "E" men have done military duty, so that they have evidently been found useful in England for some military purpose.

It is stated that there are 147 men who have not yet been classified at all, and there may be some Class "E" men in this number, but this would not materially affect the figures.

Yours very truly,

C. S. MACINNES.

Clerk of Returned Soldiers Committee,

- How many casualties?.. . . . It is impossible to tell, as no information is furnished by headquarters, except that given in militia orders, where killed, wounded and missing, belonging to all districts, are placed together according to the date on which the casualty happens. The various districts are not shown separately.

(a) also discharged in England. The number of discharged men, known, is 5,028, but these figures do not include the First Contingent, as owing to the rush no records were then kept. This number also includes those discharged as unlikely to become efficient or desirable soldiers. (a) No information is received regarding those discharged in England.

8. Men who never got to the front. Impossible to tell, as we receive no information from Ottawa as to the number of men who are retained in England for duty there, or who have been discharged, having never reached France.
9. Special Service Company, number and its total. Composed of men enlisted for overseas and found unfit. What the special reasons for unfitness were. What our procedure is in the matter of releasing a man who has applied. Number 4 Special Service Company. Total as at February 28th, 2 officers, 94 other ranks. Distribution as at that date: 11, G.M.P.; 52 on picket and guard duty, 7 men in hospital, 9 men as clerks and orderlies, 13 men doing fatigues and furnaces, 5 deserters. These men are released under H.Q. 297-1-31, wherein it lies within the power of the G.O.C. District, on the recommendation of the officer commanding the unit, to discharge any man who is not likely to be fit for overseas service, or if he is not likely to make an efficient soldier for duties here, also for family reasons. It is considered that none of these men will become fit for overseas service, but those who had minor defects were transferred to units whose lower physical standard would permit of their being taken, such as forestry and railroad construction units. The principal causes of unfitness of these men are hernia, flat feet, weakness of heart. In most cases these defects should have been discovered by the doctors making the original examination.

WINDSOR HOTEL, MONTREAL,
Room 129,

March 16, 1917.

The Committee met at 10.10 a.m., the Chairman, Sir Herbert Ames, presiding.

Dr. THOMAS WALKER, St. John, New Brunswick, called, sworn and examined.

By the Chairman:

Q. Dr. Walker, you are, I understand, the head of the Military Hospitals Commission, particularly in New Brunswick?—A. I am.

Q. Will you tell the Committee what provision is being made for the care of returned soldiers in New Brunswick?—A. That is a pretty large question. In the first place when a steamer arrives——

Q. I do not mean so much the machinery, that we understand pretty well, but I would like to know the local provision which is peculiar to New Brunswick, that is, the part of the work which tells what New Brunswick is doing?—A. In St. John we have a Convalescent Home, in which we have a school to instruct these returned soldiers. Now, for instance, the other day I went out there, and a man who lost the use of his right hand had been learning to write with his left, making remarkable progress. We have three teachers in the school.

Q. Will you tell us how many institutions you have in New Brunswick; give us a general survey?—A. We have the Park Convalescent Home, in which we can accommodate about 30 patients, and if we had another room fitted up for a school-room, we would be able to put in five additional beds.

Q. What else have you in St. John?—A. There is a military hospital in St. James Street, and another one in Pitt Street. The Military Hospital in St. James Street is capable of holding about 80 patients, I think, and the one in Pitt Street, which is used for contagious diseases, will accommodate about 26 or 27. That is practically all we have. Of course, there are cases, occasionally, we send to the General Public Hospital, where they are looked after by our own men.

By Hon. Mr. Daniel:

Q. What about the Armoury Hospitals?—A. That is not in commission yet.

Q. It will be in a day or two, will it not?—A. I doubt very much; there are no beds, or anything of that kind in it.

Q. How many is that supposed to accommodate?—A. That, I suppose, will accommodate anything from 500 to 700 men. But I understood I was to speak of what accommodation we had now, and that, of course, is not being used.

Q. Of course, that might be the idea of the Chairman, but I was asking for my own satisfaction?—A. Yes, of course; that is not in commission yet.

Q. Was there not an announcement of some sort about an institution on the west side?—A. That is not used now. The Commission leased and took over the Bank of Montreal, there are four stories in that, but that was only used as a discharge depot.

Q. Was there any provision for tubercular cases?—A. No.

Q. None at all?—A. No.

By the Chairman:

Q. We were told yesterday in the evidence by Dr. Byers, that he had a large percentage of the New Brunswick cases at Ste. Agathe?—A. Yes, we have sent some cases to Lake Edward and some to Ste. Agathe.

Q. You have no facilities for the care of tubercular cases in New Brunswick?—A. No, except that we might get a case or two into the St. Johns County Hospital, and might get a case or two into the Riverdale Hospital, the one is the Provincial institution, and the other the Municipal Institution in St. John.

Q. The Riverdale Hospital is not open to our soldiers?—A. I think they have one or two there. The Riverdale will not take the advanced cases, that is their policy, but I interviewed the local Government with regard to that and they agreed that the Commission would fix up a building there which really was a coach-house, and in which, when fixed up, they would take all cases whether advanced or not.

Q. What is the total accommodation for active and convalescent patients at present in New Brunswick?—A. Those 35 beds are all we have at present.

Q. Is that accommodation filled?—A. Yes.

Q. Have you accommodation enough to provide for all convalescent cases?—A. No, we want another building. I propose to go up to Ottawa and interview Sir James Loughheed with regard to the purchase of a building in St. John which will be admirable and will accommodate 120 patients.

Q. You think that the convalescent patients are as likely to be as happy and as healthy down by the sea as they would be if they were in a convalescent home somewhere inland?—A. Some of us live a long time down by the sea.

Mr. BENNETT: And hope to live even longer.

The WITNESS: On the 20th of this month I will celebrate my 77th birthday and I am looked on as a boy down there.

By the Chairman:

Q. My meaning is that where there are convalescent cases would it not be better to have them in the country rather than in the city down by the sea?—A. I think that is a matter that would apply to any case, especially in summer time. I think it would be far better to have them in the country.

Q. Have you any convalescent home with rural or agricultural surroundings where the man can do some outdoor work on the land?—A. No, we have not.

Q. Nothing of that kind?—A. No. But I think with tuberculous cases the climate makes no difference. They do just as well in one place as in the other.

Q. Have you anything more to tell us?—A. Yes. With regard to the policy, I would like very much to see us cut off from Halifax, and to have a unit of our own with regard to the military authorities. For instance, a man in St. John in the convalescent home is examined by a board and recommended for discharge. The papers of recommendation have to go to Halifax; then they have to be chewed over by the military authorities in Halifax, and then sent, I do not know whether to Ottawa or not; but at all events this procedure is a great trouble to us. For instance, last week or the week before that, there were three men in the convalescent home that were recommended by the Medical Board for discharge. The papers were sent to Halifax, and they were so long in getting back that the men elected to go home and pay their own expenses.

Q. The three Maritime Provinces are included in "B" Unit, the headquarters of which are at Halifax?—A. Yes.

By Mr. Bennett:

Q. Your idea is that for the purpose of dealing with returned soldiers there should be a unit for each province?—A. I think so, yes. The men are anxious to go home and they growl and grumble and walk off. There was a case last year of a man from

[Dr Thomas Walker.]

St. Stephen, 75 miles from St. John, who had to wait four weeks, and he became so disgusted that he started off himself.

By Mr. Ross (Middlesex):

Q. If your unit consisted of one province instead of two that would not remedy the delay if the papers had to be forwarded to Ottawa rather than to Halifax, would it?—A. Yes, it would.

Q. Would there not likely be as much delay at Ottawa as at Halifax?—A. The delay is at Halifax. To give you an idea of it, there were two men in a convalescent home that I wanted to send out; one man was to go up to Toronto to be fitted for a brace for his leg, and the other man was to go to Cobourg, he had certain head symptoms. I got word from Col. Thompson in Ottawa that these men had been recommended to go to Ottawa, and the transportation had been sent to Halifax. Now, we ought to have had some authority in St. John that that transportation could have been sent to. These men waited three, four, five and six days after I got this letter from Col. Thompson, and there was no word of the Halifax people acting at all, and we had to wire them to know what was the matter and why the transportation was not sent. I take it that that transportation ought to have been in our own hands. We have men in the military service that are just as capable of doing that work as the people in Halifax.

By Mr. Ross (Middlesex):

Q. I was wondering if the delay did not occur at Ottawa. What do you say as to that?—A. No, it did not.

Q. And whether you should not be able to do that off your own bat without communicating with Ottawa at all?—A. That is what I think we should do.

By Mr. Middlebro:

Q. The Halifax people are slow, you think—A. They are slower than molasses in cold weather.

By Hon. Mr. Daniel:

Q. I wish to ask you if you know of any complaints that are made by returned soldiers as to their treatment, or of any method in which the treatment of returned soldiers could be improved. I do not know whether you have any evidence to give on that?—A. There were certain complaints. We had a local election in St. John the other day, and one stock argument of the opposition—now about to become the government—was that a returned soldier who applied to the employment committee for a position could not get that position unless he promised to vote for the local government. I took that matter up with one of the candidates, who was reported in the papers as having made the assertion, and he did not deny it. I demanded of him that he should give me the name of the soldier who had been refused employment because he would not promise to vote for the government and also the name of the person who had tempted him, and I wish that I had brought his letter with me, but he just begged the question and he said he did not wish to make these people uncomfortable. I think it was a downright lie. I have not heard of any such case at all. There has been no complaint in regard to that.

By Mr. Middlebro:

Q. I suppose you know there has been an order in council passed giving preference to returned soldiers?—A. Yes, and I think our Soldiers' Aid Committee of which I am a member have strictly acted up to that. Mr. Robinson, who is here to give evidence, I think does everything he can to give preference to returned soldiers irrespective of any politics altogether.

[Dr. Thomas Walker.]

By Mr. Bennett:

Q. You think you should have more accommodation at St. John: that is really your view?—A. Yes, it is a burning question there now. We have a staff in the convalescent home of three people. There is a head man Mr. Tibert, and a lady who teaches shorthand and typewriting, and I do not recollect the name of the woodworker.

By the Chairman:

Q. Mr. Sexton can tell us all that?—A. Yes, and it is admirably conducted, so far as that is concerned, but these men could just as well teach a hundred as they could teach 30, as far as I can see.

By Mr. Bennett:

Q. The pressing necessity is to add accommodation?—A. Yes.

Q. And that you should be authorized and empowered to issue transportation for the movement of men from that centre?—A. Yes, I would like to have it made a separate unit, so that we would not have to wait.

Q. If they had power to issue transportation warrants, it would avoid delay?—A. Yes, so that the papers would not have to go to Halifax, and be vised by them and be sent to Ottawa, and that we would have the power to do that.

Witness discharged.

Mr. CHARLES ROBINSON, secretary of the Returned Soldiers Aid Commission for New Brunswick, called, sworn and examined.

By the Chairman:

Q. How is the Returned Soldiers Aid Commission appointed or created?—A. It was appointed by the local Government Council.

Q. Who is its chairman?—A. Thomas Bell, St. John.

Q. How many members are there on the Commission?—A. About 15.

Q. Are you incorporated by Act of Legislature?—A. No, the Commission was created by Order in Council.

By Hon. Mr. Marcil:

Q. Is it a non-political body?—A. A non-political body. Both parties are represented on it.

By the Chairman:

Q. How often does this organization meet as a Commission?—A. As a Commission it has met four times.

Q. Are questions of policy determined by the Commission?—A. Yes, by the Commission.

Q. Are you an executive officer of the Commission?—A. The secretary is on the Executive.

Q. Do you give your whole time to the work?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Have you an office in St. John?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Have you correspondents in different parts of New Brunswick?—A. All over New Brunswick, sir.

Q. What do you particularly undertake to do for returned soldiers?—A. We particularly undertake to secure what positions they would be able to fill.

Q. How do you go about that? Do you make an attempt at an inventory of the vacant places in the Province?—A. Yes, sir. From the different business offices we find out what men they will need, and also when the civic authorities have anything to offer they communicate with me. If there are appointments under the Dominion or local Government they ask if there is a man who can take the position.

[Mr. Charles Robinson.]

Q. Does the Provincial Government and the local Municipal Government give the preference to the returned soldiers?—A. In all cases, sir. The Dominion Government also does the same.

Q. Are there any questions asked as to how they vote?—A. No such question has ever been asked.

Q. You heard Dr. Walker's statement this morning? Did you ever hear of the complaint?—A. I heard of it probably four months ago.

Q. Did you investigate the matter?—A. As soon as I heard it I went to the Veterans' Association meeting and asked before the whole meeting if any man had been refused a position on the ground that he was a Liberal or Conservative. Every man spoke up and said that no man had ever asked them such a question.

Q. So there is no politics in it at all so far as these positions are concerned?—A. No politics at all.

Q. What is the political complexion of the Commission as far as it is disclosed? Are the members about evenly divided?—A. About evenly divided, I would say.

Q. How many returned soldiers have come back to New Brunswick?—A. Approximately about 450.

By Mr. Middlebro:

Q. That is, returned soldiers?—A. That number of soldiers have returned, but 75 or 80 of them have re-enlisted.

Q. In what kind of units?—A. In different units. Some of them have gone overseas and some in the 62nd Regiment.

Q. They have re-enlisted in combatant units?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Some of them have gone into the Forestry Battalion, I suppose?—A. Some in the Forestry Battalion, some in the Engineers and some have gone right into the fighting line.

Q. How many have you found employment for?—A. Directly, between 180 and 225, that is with the help of certain business houses as well.

Q. Are those employed entirely in St. John?—A. No, all over the province; the majority of course is in St. John.

Q. What class of employment do you get for these men?—A. Some men take a book-keeper's job, some a watchman's job, and others go into the Customs and Post Office and other jobs of that description.

By Hon. Mr. Marcil:

Q. Do any of them take work on the farms?—A. It is a very hard thing to get a returned soldier to go on a farm. I have only one exception to the rule, that of a young man who is waiting until this provision is made by the Provincial Government which is going to supply them with farms and assist them in starting.

Q. Did any of these returned soldiers come originally from the country districts?—A. They come from all over the province, the country as well as the city. Of course, the returned soldier who comes back, and who has been farming with his father all his life, in many cases may have gone back to the farm, but in other cases, of course, they want positions in the city.

By the Chairman:

Q. I suppose that the boy who had been on the farm with his father before he went overseas would probably on his return go directly to the farm, and not pass through your hands at all?—A. Some of them do not want to go on the farm at all, and some of them would go.

Q. But if the returned soldier had his old position on the farm open to him when he came back he would probably go directly to his home on the farm, would he not?—A. No, if he is an invalided man he would come through me. I do not think there have been more than 10 or 15 cases who have gone directly home to the farm; they are looking for something else.

[Mr. Charles Robinson.]

Q. Those men who come from the farm you say as a rule are looking for something else?—A. Yes.

Q. Do you try to get them to go on the farm?—A. I have tried to get them to go on the farm, and I have done my best to show them the advantages and the benefits of taking up farm work, but they want to go to the city, they say there is more life there.

Q. There is more excitement in the city than there is in the country districts is the contention of the men?—A. Yes.

Q. But is there not really more advantage to the man to go back to the farm than there is to go to the city?—A. I would say so; I think they would be better off farming.

By Mr. Middlebro:

Q. Out of 400 men who have returned to your province how many have elected voluntarily to go back to the farm?—A. I do not think you could count more than about 15, and those would only be men who had been on the farm before with their fathers.

Q. Out of all that have gone from your province how many who came from the cities have, on their return, changed and gone to the farm?—A. I could not say.

Q. We have had an experience along these lines from Alberta, where out of 600 men who have returned, only six have expressed a desire to go back on the farm. What is the objection offered by the men to going back to the country districts?—A. They do not make any particular objection, but when it is suggested to them they use an expression of their own with an adjective to it. They do not give any other objection than that they would rather have a little more life than is to be found in the country districts.

Q. Apparently the experience which they get, spent in the trenches and being in the open all the time is not conducive to a desire to return to country life when they get back?—A. No, they would rather take a job in the custom house or some inside work.

By Mr. Sutherland:

Q. What provision is being made in New Brunswick to induce the men to go back on the farms? Are the men adopting a sympathetic feeling towards the proposal?—A. Quite a number of the men have been waiting to see what the new policy of the Government will be along these lines, whether it is proposed to give them central farms with other facilities which would make farming attractive.

By the Chairman:

Q. You are referring to the new policy of the New Brunswick Government?—A. Yes, they are waiting to see whether they will have central farms set apart for them with decent access to the city and good facilities for disposing of the crops that they may raise. There is no doubt that if the policy which has been suggested is carried out by the Government, we will be able to get a number of returned men to take up farms.

By Hon. Mr. Marcil:

Q. As a matter of fact, farming is now a very profitable industry in your province.—A. Yes, it is very profitable.

Q. Has that fact been brought directly to the attention of the men?—A. Oh, yes, hours have been spent in talking and explaining that matter to them.

By the Chairman:

Q. Do I understand that the Provincial Government have expressed their intention of enacting legislation for the purpose of inducing the returned soldiers to go on the farm?—A. The Government that have just gone out of power have expressed that intention.

Q. And the new Government have not yet expressed their views upon that point?—A. Of course the new Government are not yet in power.

By Mr. Middlebro:

Q. Has the question of co-operative farming been taken up?—A. Yes.

Q. Something along the lines the Ontario Government are suggesting?—A. Mr. Tilley can tell you all about that.

By the Chairman:

Q. About how many men have you on your waiting list now for jobs?—A. On the waiting list, I really have not any men who are waiting for a job, but have men temporarily working who are expecting to get changed.

Q. Have you been able up to the present to place all the men who want positions?—A. All that are capable and were willing to take the jobs offered,—quite a number of them have not held the positions permanently.

Q. Have any great percentage of your men been unable to hold the position to which they have been assigned?—A. Not a great percentage, but there have been quite a number who have failed to do so.

Q. What was the reason—why?—A. By their own actions.

Q. That is by intemperance, or something of that kind?—A. Along that line.

By Hon. Mr. Marcil:

Q. Do you notice that intemperance is more general among these men than it was before they went to the front?—A. You mean among the returned soldiers?

Q. Yes. A. Well, I could not say as to that, I notice it more now, because I am in closer touch with them than I was before they went to the front.

By Mr. Sutherland:

Q. Have you any means of keeping check on these men who prove unsatisfactory?—A. Yes. If you have a man who has been working with you, and he cannot hold his job, and another man is getting his place, we keep a record of it, so that when any one comes in and wants a man, I know whether that soldier would be the right man to send to fill the position. If you come to me for a man, in justice to you when you come to me I should be able to tell you if the man is likely to suit your requirements.

By Mr. Middlebro:

Q. Have you any suggestions to make with a view to improving the condition of the returned soldiers? Is there anything that you think of that can reasonably be done along that line?—A. In taking up the matter of pensions there seems to be some dissatisfaction on that question. A young man will come to me and say: "Here I am, all that I have ever earned, I have earned with my hands, by hard work, and I have lost my left hand. Here is another man who has been in the trenches with me, he is an officer, and he gets a pension of $24, and yet I am only getting $8." This young man feels that his disability is greater because of his losing his left arm than is the disability of the officer, who is an accountant, and he can earn his living as well now as he could before the war, and he is getting a much larger pension than I am."

Q. The objection is to the officer getting more than the rank and file?—A. They do not look at it from the standpoint of the officer, but the standpoint of a man who has to earn his livelihood.

By Hon. Mr. Marcil:

Q. On the other hand the officer is not supposed to be obliged to do the same work as the young man you have referred to?—A. No, he has his own work to do, and that he can do as well when he came back to civil life as he could before.

By the Chairman:

Q. Your criticism is that the officer's pension is greater than the private's pension for the disability which he has sustained?—A. Yes.

By Brigadier General Mason:

Q. Have you a club-house for the returned soldiers?—A. The returned veterans have a club of their own, and a number of societies throughout the city have places where they can meet. The business men of the city, in fact all the men of the city, have been always ready in all cases to do whatever there was a chance to do for the benefit of the returned soldiers.

By Hon. Mr. Daniel:

Q. Do you find in that desire, or otherwise, on the part of the returned soldiers, to get back into active civilian life; how do you find them, are they anxious to return to it?—A. I find that the man who always was anxious to get ahead is ready to take any job he can get and to work at that until such time as a better one offers. But the man who was only accustomed to getting a few days work a week, or was not in steady work, always wants to get to the top of the ladder at once.

By Hon. Mr. Marcil:

Q. Do you think that military life improves the man from the point of view of disciplining him, or is it the reverse?—A. I do not think it has improved the man whose civil life was not well disciplined.

By the Chairman:

Q. You find that the weaknesses of civil life that the man had before he enlisted still obtain?—A. It still obtains and I think he is a little weaker than he was before he enlisted.

By Hon. Mr. Daniel:

Q. You think that the effect of military life, and its customs and excitement, does not depart immediately, and that it interferes to some extent with the desire to get ahead with the ordinary occupations of civil life?—A. Yes, they are looking for something higher, something more than they are really able for, until such time as you could educate them up to that point.

By Mr. Ross (Middlesex):

Q. They want something easy?—A. They want something easy with big pay. I can give you a case by way of illustration: I wanted an ordinary man, yesterday, for a watchman, at $2.25 per day of 8 hours. I had a man who had been, before the war, working among the lumber, and at times he would certainly earn $3 to $3.50 per day. I asked him to take that job, and as soon as a better one offered, he would get it. But he absolutely refused. He was a lumber surveyor. There have been a number of similar cases. The civil authorities have been giving us every chance, they have appointed no man without first coming to us and asking for a man who would be able to do the work.

By Hon. Mr. McCurdy:

Q. What is the total number of soldiers returned to civil life in New Brunswick?—A. I think it would be 350, around there.

Q. I thought you said that 450 had returned?—A. 450 would be the number returned altogether through the depot.

Q. These are all discharged men?—A. They are not discharged, because there would probably be about 180 of these men not discharged, in the hospitals and out-patients.

Q. The total number returned from overseas is about 450?—A. About that.

Q. About how many of those 450 were discharged?—A. There would probably be around 300.

[Mr. Charles Robinson.]

Q. And of that 300 discharged, how many came to you and asked you to aid them in getting employment?—A. There would be over two-thirds of that number who came directly to us.

Q. That would be 200?—A. There would be quite 200

By the Chairman:

Q. And you, thus far, have been able to place all of them?—A. I have no trouble in placing all of our men.

Q. Have you any irreducible minimum of men who never stay in places that you get for them?—A. Yes.

Q. What do you suggest should be done for these men?—A. I do not know what can be done—I keep on putting them on other jobs as fast as they come back.

Q. How many men come back to you for other jobs?—A. There are quite a number. I have some men who have come back to me ten or twelve times. I had one yesterday whose record was nine times. My idea is to keep on placing those men until they get some job where they will remain.

Q. Supposing they keep their habits and never get steady?—A. I will have to keep them on until I get orders to let them go.

Q. How can they be looked after by the State until they prove themselves capable of holding a job? Would you have a soldiers' home in which the irreducible minimum of men who could not be steadied down could be cared for?—A. There should be a home with work-shops where these men would be kept pretty well occupied and forced to either learn a trade or work.

By Hon. Mr. McCurdy:

Q. I understand you to say that 200 of the 300 employed have applied to you for assistance in getting employment?—A. Yes, about that, I could get you the exact figures.

Q. Have you on your list now anybody not employed?—A. No, I could not say, I have not on my list any not employed to-day. I tried to get four men yesterday and could only get two. There may be some men not employed out in the country, but by the time you can get them in for the position, the position might be filled.

Q. How many positions have you secured for the two hundred men who applied to you for employment and who re-applied?—A. Of course, the positions I fill—I filled pretty nearly 200; but some of these men have been re-employed over and over.

Q. Can you give the Committee this information: How many men have had positions secured through your efforts? In the first instance, how many positions have you secured for these 200 men who have applied? You said in some cases you secured positions five or six times. I would like to ascertain if possible how many of these 200 returned soldiers have applied to you more than once for your assistance?—A. I would have to take my books to tell you.

Q. Have you that information?—A. I have not it with me now.

Q. There is another question I would like to ask. In the case of the men who come back to you to be employed a second time, what is the reason that they get out of work, what is their besetting sin as you find it in St. John?—A. In some cases they might say themselves: "I did not like that work." Another man might call me up and say it is impossible to hold a certain man.

Q. He is not fit for the work?—A. Yes. Another man may say: "I cannot stand it, the place is too hot." For instance, a man at the sugar refinery, as the sugar passes over the scales he marks the weight down on the books. That man might complain after a while that the work is too hot for him. Another man may be working at a fairly good job, and will hear of another returned soldier getting a position in the Custom house; he gets dissatisfied and says he cannot stand the work he is at.

Q. He wants to go to the Custom house?—A. Yes.

Q. One of the witnesses last evening, in connection with the re-employment of soldiers, said that temptations were put in their way in a city of this kind which sometimes led them astray?—A. Well, temptations are put in their way in this way. A returned soldier may meet some one on the street who will ask him to have a drink. If he is a man who has been shell shocked, as far as I can understand, if he gets a drink he is apt to take another.

By Hon. Mr. Marcil:

Q. Do you still have saloons in St. John?—A. We have them just the same.

Hon. Mr. McCURDY: Until the 1st of May.

By Hon. Mr. Marcil:

Q. Have your operations been confined to St. John or do they extend to the north shore?—A. All over the Province, sir.

Q. Have you had the opportunity of dealing with men who have enlisted from Bonaventure or Gaspé Peninsula in New Brunswick battalions?—A. I never see much of them after they go through the discharge depot.

By the Chairman:

Q. I suppose you have correspondence with men in Restigouche County?—A. All over the province. A man sent me word, for instance, that there was a certain position in Campbellton on New Year's Day. I went up there that night, and before I went away I filled the position.

By Hon. Mr. Marcil:

Q. Do you find a willingness among the people to give returned soldiers employment?—A. I have had no refusals, where the men are the men they want, and where they want the men.

By the Chairman:

Q. Have you any idea how many men come back each month for you to place? Is there any sort of regularity about it? Do you get anything like an average number each month?—A. With each boat that comes in, it is about an average for New Brunswick.

Q. About how many do you get for New Brunswick from each boat?—A. If there were 40 on each boat for the Maritime provinces, we would get probably 16 or 17. As a rule, Nova Scotia gets the majority.

Q. Nova Scotia gets two-thirds and you get one-third?—A. We get a little more than one-third. There may be a vessel where we would get an equal number. But Halifax has had the most.

Q. You have to provide for how many a month as a rule?—A. I could not just tell you.

Q. I mean 25 or 50 on an average?—A. These men, when they come back go to the convalescent homes, or some may be out-patients. It is not often that a man comes back if he is discharged from the steamer. It would only be a discharged man that we have to handle that way. The convalescents will not be ready for four, five or six months.

Q. You begin to negotiate when they leave the convalescent homes?—A. The moment they come to the discharge depot.

Q. So that by the time they are discharged they will be ready for you?—A. Yes.

Q. Do you fit them to some extent for the job they have in view?—A. That is what they are doing at the convalescent homes. In some cases the Military Hospitals Commission have sent them to private colleges.

Q. Mr. Sexton could tell about them?—A. That is Mr. Sexton's line. We look after claims where a man did not get his check for three or four weeks. In very few cases we get immediate answers either in writing to Halifax or Ottawa.

By Hon. Mr. Marcil:

Q. Are the men satisfied with the clothing they get?—A. As far as I know. They can take either the money or the clothing, the man has his preference.

Q. Which do they take generally?—A. At St. John they have taken the money.

By Hon. Mr. Daniel:

Q. Do you know how much money they get when they do not take the clothing?—A. The winter clothing is $13, the summer is less.

Q. Is that $13 sufficient to buy clothing?—A. No, it is not sufficient.

Q. How much do you think they ought to have?—A. I think they ought to have at least $20. If they got that amount it would make quite a difference.

Q. Does the $13 include the suit of clothes they get? Is it a poor suit, an inadequate suit?—A. It is really not a suit of clothes fit to give the men.

By Hon. Mr. Marcil:

Q. What kind of a suit is it, a woollen suit or shoddy?—A. I would call it very poor shoddy.

By Hon. Mr. Daniel:

Q. Do you think they ought to have at least $20?—A. $20 or a suit of the value of $20.

By the Chairman:

Q. Where are the suits bought?—A. Not at St. John. Since I came in, there have been no suits furnished this year. The men have taken the money.

By Hon. Mr. Marcil:

Q. Probably the clothes are of inferior quality?—A. Probably the men have heard about the clothes.

Q. Is it in the interest of the soldier that he should be provided with clothes rather than money?—A. Give him clothes to satisfy him, and I think he would take the clothes.

By Mr. Ross (Middlesex):

Q. Why should he not retain his uniform?—A. The only object in giving the clothes is that he can get out of his uniform.

By Hon. Mr. Marcil:

Q. They cannot wear the uniform after being discharged?—A. They can wear it for a month afterwards.

Witness discharged.

Mr. L. P. D. TILLEY, M.L.A., called, sworn and examined:

By the Chairman:

Q. Mr. Tilley, are you a member of the Soldiers' Aid Commission in New Brunswick?—A. No, Mr. Chairman, I presume I was asked to come here having been Chief Recruiting Officer in New Brunswick for twelve months and having been all over the province and in close touch with the men we have recruited.

Q. To what extent have criticisms of the treatment of returned soldiers affected recruiting?—A. Well, that is a pretty large order. There are individual cases which arise that have hurt recruiting in a certain locality which did not affect it in another part of the country or province, little things sometimes that affected individual cases. Sometimes it is a regimental or battalion matter which causes the trouble and sometimes it is not.

Q. Do you think that any grievances on the part of returned soldiers which they have spoken of have had an unfortunate effect on recruiting?—A. Before I came up here I thought it was the proper thing to consult the returned soldiers themselves. We have an organization there, and the executive called to see me, and I told them that I was to give evidence in this matter and asked if they had any suggestions to make that might be beneficial; because these are really the men we are supposed to look after, and these are the men I thought suggestions should come from.

Q. You are really appearing before this Committee as a delegate of the returned soldiers?—A. Unofficially. I asked for their suggestions and they gave me some.

Q. We will be glad to have them.—A. They mentioned one thing in regard to the matter of pensions. They thought that some readjustment might be made in regard to pensions; in this way, some cases—not their own cases—but cases of returned soldiers in the Association—where the men have been badly disfigured or cut up, and did not receive the same proportion of pension as did some other men whom they felt were not so badly cut up or injured. For instance, they quoted one or two cases.

By Brig.-Gen. Mason:

Q. You mean disabled to the same extent?—A. Well, they thought that they were disabled more than some of the men who were getting a higher classification.

By Mr. Middlebro:

Q. It is a question of classification?—A. Yes. For instance, one man, Lallicheur, who was still using crutches to some extent, has been given a position with the Customs house in St. John at $800 a year. He is very badly wounded about the legs and is receiving $8 pension.

By the Chairman:

Q. That is, he was considered to be in the 5th Class, 20 per cent disability?—A. Exactly. They thought he should be given a better pension.

Q. You are aware of the reboarding arrangements?—A. I am going to deal with that in a minute if you will allow me. Then Colahan—these men I know personally—whose face is disfigured so that his jaw is turned around sideways; he is disfigured for life. He has a Government job as tide waiter in the Customs House. He is getting $850 salary. He is getting $8 pension.

Q. Does his disfigurement interfere with his ability to earn a livelihood?—A. I should say no, it would not. But you put a man who loses his nose in a good deal higher class.

Q. What was Mr. Colahan earning before he went to the war?—A. I do not know. He is a son of a tailor in the north end.

By Brigadier-General Mason:

Q. Is he a married man?—A. I do not know.

By the Chairman:

Q. Would you be good enough in each case to give us the regimental number and the name of the man?—A. Yes. Lance-Corporal Louis Lallicheur belonged to the signal corps with Major Powers, wounded April 23rd, 1915, at the battle of St. Julien, leg badly smashed and partly paralyzed, walks on crutches; appointed preventive officer Customs House at $800 salary, pension $8 a month, laid off for about a month. He has been laid off from time to time on account of this leg, which troubles him.

By Hon. Mr. McCurdy:

Q. Did his pay cease when he was disabled?—A. I have been told it did cease, and that is what I think should be remedied.

[Major L. P. D. Tilley.]

By Hon. Mr. Marcil:

Q. He is not a permanent employee?—A. No. If he were a permanent employee his pay would not cease.

Q. Would you favour the appointment of these returned soldiers to permanent positions?—A. Certainly. Why not?

The CHAIRMAN: When they prove themselves fit to occupy them.

By Hon. Mr. Marcil:

Q. Is he going through a stage of probation? When he has filled that position for some months would you say he should be appointed permanently?—A. Certainly, sir, if he is fit for the position, I certainly would.

Q. But it has not been done up to the present time?—A. I could not say.

By Mr. Bennett:

Q. Those cases are covered by the statute. They are put on temporarily, and are made permanent later on if they are found fit for the job?—A. That is one case. Those cases are given me by the returned wounded soldiers.

By the Chairman:

Q. In that case he is only awarded a fifth-class pension?—A. It should be higher.

Q. Give us the next?—A. Private W. J. Cahole.

Q. What is the number?—A. I have not his regimental number, a St. John man, enlisted in the 3rd Battalion, wounded in the face, dislocated jaw, all his teeth knocked out, bullet in hip, also discharged 24th November, 1916, wounded at Festubert May 23, 1915. He is a landing waiter in the customs house under salary of $850, pension $8 a month. It is suggested his pay should be increased.

By Mr. Ross (Middlesex):

Q. He is a permanent officer?—A. I do not know.

The CHAIRMAN: He would not be permanent until he had been tried out. They go through a probationary period.

Hon. Mr. MARCIL: They are taken on for six months before they are permanent.

By the Chairman:

Q. Give us the next one?—A. Private George Henderson, 55th Battalion, C.E.F. This is rather an extraordinary case, and I do not know that there is any provision made for it, but these are the cases the men give me, and they arrive from time to time. This man was returned to Canada—

Q. Give me his regimental number?—A. 55th Battalion. It was originally started as a New Brunswick battalion, but I think most of the men in it are Nova Scotians are they not?

Hon. Mr. McCURDY: The 55th Battalion was largely New Brunswick men. The 64th was composed largely of Nova Scotians.

The WITNESS: Yes, that is right. The medical report declared this man insane. While he was a soldier he had his palate removed. His right side is partially paralyzed, and he is deaf in both ears. He was for a short time placed in an asylum in St. John. He has been discharged from the asylum. He has a wife and family, and while he is not now absolutely insane or in an asylum—

By the Chairman:

Q. What pension?—A. No pension, and he is a public charge, to put it frankly.

Q. That is a case for re-boarding?—A. Now that man is in such a state that he cannot really look after himself.

By Mr. Middlebro:

Q. He had his palate removed?—A. Yes.

By Brigadier-General Mason:

Q. He is in a desperate state?—A. Yes.

By Mr. Ross (Middlesex):

Q. How was he before he enlisted?—A. I do not know.

Q. Was he a whole man before he enlisted or a little off?—A. I have not sufficient knowledge to give an opinion on that point.

By Hon. Mr. Daniel:

Q. Was this man at the front?—A. I do not know.

Q. Was he ever across?—A. I could not say, sir.

By Mr. Middlebro:

Q. Was he ever insane before he enlisted?—A. I do not know that.

By the Chairman:

Q. Has he made application for pension?—A. Not that I am aware of.

Q. Then where does any criticism come in?—A. I am not criticising except it is a public charge. I do not know whether he has made application or not. Perhaps Mr. Robinson could tell you that. The men say that this man is adrift and a public charge on the community.

Q. Unless he has made some application for pension and has had it refused, there is no grievance?—A. I presume he has. These men are well versed in these matters, and I imagine he has made an application. These men are all conversant with pensions and applications for pensions.

Q. What is the next?—A. Private Fred. Hyatt of the 55th Battalion. He was a great Socialist and one of the first men to enlist in St. John. He enlisted and went over to the front, and he became physically unfit and was returned, suffering from locomotor ataxia and has gradually grown worse.

Q. Never at the front?—A. Yes, at the front, invalided from France and discharged 31st July, 1916, granted $100 gratuity. He has a wife and three children. For seven months he has hardly earned a thing: he is getting worse every day. When he was working before he went to the war he was earning $75 a month.

By Mr. Bennett:

Q. Has he applied for a new board?—A. I believe he has. I do not know but I understood he had.

By Hon. Mr. Marcl:

Q. He is getting nothing at all from the Government?—A. Not now as far as I know.

By the Chairman:

Q. Are the members of your association thoroughly conversant with all the recent orders passed about recruiting?—A. No, they were not conversant with another suggestion which I am making here, which is a new order in council and which I pointed out to them I understood had been passed, which was one of their main grievances, the over-lapping between the time of the payment of the salary for the soldiers and the division that had been provided for.

Q. That has been remedied?—A. Yes, they are very much pleased with that. These are individual cases that they asked me to mention. Now this is a point which they wish me to mention to you: they say that when a man is wounded in France and returned to England, in an hospital, a board of from three to five sit on his case, and, as they say, it is a very thorough board, and they arrange the classifications and pensions for the men. They come out to Canada and another board sits on the case.

By Hon. Mr. Marcil:

Q. Is that English board made up of Canadian physicians?—A. I do not know that. They tell me it is made up as a rule of a colonel, lieutenant-colonel and a medical officer and a legal representative.

By Mr. Middlebro:

Q. They would be Canadian officials?—A. I imagine they are. Then they come back and have another board sit on them at Halifax, Quebec, or wherever it may be.

By the Chairman:

Q. It may be a month or two later?—A. Yes, and they say the inspection they get in England seems to be perhaps more thorough than the one they get here. In any case they say that in many cases their recommendation from the Board here is for a less pension than they were recommended for by the board that sat in England. That is one of their grievances.

Mr. BENNETT: That is not a fair statement, because each case depends upon the facts in each particular case, depends upon the man's condition. They have the report of the board in front of them, and they deal with a man's condition as they find him. There is nothing in that complaint at all.

The WITNESS: I am giving it to you for what it is worth. I happen to know of a case myself personally, where a returned soldier came back and passed the board at Halifax, and was discharged on the 7th August, and he was troubled with varicose veins. It broke out and he was afterwards reinstated and put in an hospital and he had medical treatment. That is one of the things that may happen; but at the same time if that man had been stripped the second time and his legs examined they would have seen it. I saw it myself.

By Mr. Middlebro:

Q. That is liable to break out?—A. Yes, those are things you cannot help.

By Mr. Ross (Middlesex):

Q. Perhaps that man wanted to be discharged?—A. No, he did not. He was very anxious to hang on to his pay. He would have been very glad to have been kept right on with his pay.

By the Chairman:

Q. Have you further cases?—A. Yes, I have. This is a memorandum handed me by the Young Women's Patriotic Association in St. John, a very live association.

Q. Mrs. Kuhring's association?—A. No, this is another association altogether, the Young Women's Patriotic Association of St. John, a membership of 300. They are young women that go into the largest moving picture houses, the Imperial and so on, and give their services as ushers free—at least not free; they take their pay and give it all to the fund for returned soldiers, and there are 350 of them. It was an organization we started last summer and was very effective. I just mention this case and it will cover perhaps other cases of the kind. Then here is another case: Private Angus McVicar in the convalescent home since June, 1916, wounded, shrapnel pressing on the brain, operated on in the public general hospital within the last couple of months. He paid $2 a day and the government allowance is $1.50 a day. The balance of $14 he paid himself.

Q. Private ward, I suppose?—A. I presume so.

[Major L. P. D. Tilley.]

By Mr. Bennett:

Q. One would have thought the hospital would have paid that 50 cents?—A. They paid the difference for this man and thought the government should stretch a point and do it themselves.

By Hon. Mr. Daniel:

Q. He was being paid $1.50 and the hospital charged $2 a day: is that it?—A. Exactly.

Q. That is the hospital charge for a private room?—A. Yes, and also $10 for operating room.

Q. He was charged as a private paying patient. He should have been treated absolutely free if he had not come in as a private paying patient?—A. Yes.

By Brigadier-General Mason:

Q. Go back to that case where the man is a public charge. Do I understand the man is not getting the pension and no effort made to obtain the pension for him?—A. That is the report I have received.

Q. Should not something be done by the Soldiers' Aid Commission in a case of that kind?—A. In what way?

Q. To make application for a pension for him?—A. I do not know. I imagine there may have been some application.

Mr. Middlebro: He could make an application to be re-boarded.

By the Chairman:

Q. Have you any criticism to make of a general character as to the efficiency and sufficiency of the existing organization for the care of returned soldiers; nothing that you would suggest by way of improvement?—A. Might I point out one other case which seems a little too extraordinary to be possible: there may be other cases of this kind that occur, and while it is not a returned wounded soldier, it is a man who volunteered for overseas and was with one of the units going overseas.

Q. He never enlisted?—A. Yes, he enlisted and was a member of the battalion.

Q. But never went overseas?—A. No. It is a case that I would not really know how to handle myself hardly, because it was one that was peculiar in that way. A recruiting party of the 145th Battalion were recruiting in Albert County and were going down into the county in eight or ten automobiles. One of the automobiles went over the bank and three of the men were injured; one was so very seriously injured that I doubt if he ever recovers. There were payments in connection with that man's treatment and operations which Headquarters, Halifax, informed me amounted to nearly $900. Now, that man did not go overseas and was not wounded.

By the Chairman:

Q. Who paid the bill?—A. The last time I heard of the case I do not think the bills had been paid.

Q. To whom are the bills owing?—A. They are owing to doctors, nurses and the hospital.

Q. Do you mean the hospital at Halifax?—A. St. John. He went to St. John for the operation.

By Hon. Mr. Daniel:

Q. Was this man a private soldier?—A. Yes, Senator, he was.

Hon. Mr. DANIEL: If he went into the hospital at St. John as an ordinary patient he would not be charged one single cent, the Government would pay the bills.

THE CHAIRMAN: If he had taken advantage of the accommodation the Government provides for injured men, there would have been no cost to him.

[Major L. P. D. Tilley.]

Hon. Mr. DANIEL: Not in the hospital at St. John, but there might have been in the case of the Moncton hospital.

The WITNESS: At any rate, the man was very seriously injured and he had to have an operation performed on him.

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. Do you say that he was a recruit?—A. He was a member of the 145th Battalion, and at the time of the accident they were recruiting for their battalion. Mr. Robinson was asked a minute ago what the Provincial Government had mapped out for the returned soldiers.

By the Chairman:

Q. Can you give us the name of the man who was so seriously injured?—A. I am afraid I cannot remember it just at the moment, but I will procure the name and give it to you. I saw the poor chap getting on the train a month or two ago and he was in very bad shape. Anybody who looked at him would have readily said that the bill for his treatment and operation should be paid even though it was $1,000.

Q. It depends upon whether the bill be reasonable or not?—A. Quite so.

Q. If the doctor is charging him $500 for his services the bill ought not to be paid unless it is a reasonable one.—A. I think that is the reason the bill has not been paid. The charges are being looked into.

Q. It is not so much a lack of sympathy for the poor fellow as it is a question whether the accident should be made an opportunity of overcharging on the part of the people who served him?—A. Quite so.

Q. You were going to tell us something about the Government proposition for dealing with returned soldiers.—A. The bill which embodies the Government's plan was passed at the last session of the Nova Scotia Legislature, but it has not become effective yet, and I do not know whether it will be made effective in its present form, because a change of Government has occurred in the Province of New Brunswick and the new Government may adopt a different policy. This bill was passed as, "6 George V, Chapter 9, Legislative Assembly, 1916."

Q. Will you tell us very briefly what the meaning of the bill is, and then give a copy to the secretary for insertion in the record?—A. This copy, which I will file, was given to me by the premier at my request, and it deals with what we call "The Group System of Farms for Returned Soldiers". The Government have worked out a plan by which Crown Land shall be given to the soldiers free, in sections of from 10 to 100 acres. In other cases, where the returned soldiers are purchasing land from private individuals, the Government will buy it and sell it to the soldier at the actual cost price, making him an advance on it, he paying 5 per cent down and the balance to be payable in 19 years.

Q. I think we will be glad to have that put into the record.—A. The whole matter is set out here very fully. (Indicating copy of bill.)

The CHAIRMAN: Just at the present time we are not studying the demobilization problem.

Mr. MIDDLEBRO: There is no use putting this on the record unless it is going to be enacted.

The WITNESS: It is the law now, but it may be amended or changed, by the incoming Government, or they may work out some different scheme.

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. Do the returned soldiers who take advantage of this plan get absolute title to the land at once under that Act?—A. No, not for ten years, Mr. Pardee.

[Major L. P. D. Tilley.]

By Hon. Mr. Daniel:

Q. The organization of soldiers, that you had a conversation with before you came up, is it what is known as The European Veterans' Association?—A. Yes. Over 100 strong. There are, I think, about 150 returned wounded soldiers in St. John, and over 100 are members of this Association.

By Mr. Sutherland:

Q. Does this organization represent the returned soldiers for the whole province, or merely those in certain localities?—A. The organization covers the city and county of St. John, but there are different subsidiary branches. There is one, I think, in Fredericton.

By Hon. Mr. Daniel:

Q. It is a Provincial Institution, is it?—A. Yes. It has branches all over the Province.

Witness discharged.

MRS. KUHRING: St. John, N.B., called and examined.

By the Chairman:

Q. I understand you are connected with one of the organizations in St. John, which has a good deal to do with the care of returned soldiers?—A. I am President of the Women's Canadian Club and belong to other Committees. The representations which I felt I might perhaps make in response to the invitation of the Committee have to do with the reception and care of returning men by voluntary workers. I think all our Patriotic Societies are doing something to promote the welfare of the returned soldiers.

Q. We are particularly anxious to have you tell us wherein your experience has shown that the present measures for caring for the returned soldiers are not sufficient, or efficient. The Committee are particularly anxious to get any suggestions you have to offer as to the way in which the care of returned soldiers can be made more successful than it is at present.—A. In my invitation to appear before the Committee I was asked to state what we were doing in the way of reception and care and how far the men are being made comfortable.

Q. Very well, you can do that.—A. I think it would be easier, perhaps, for me to give you the information in my own way. I happen to be the President of the Women's Canadian Club in St. John. A Convalescent Home was opened for the returned soldiers by the Hospitals Commission, and we were invited by Dr. Walker, who is one of the Commission, to be a sort of House Committee, and to make of it as much of a home and as little of an institution as we possibly could, just as is being done at the other Convalescent Homes. We did so, and have continued to add little luxuries and comforts in the way of furnishings, amusements, outings, entertainments, supplies of fruit and other things that appear to us to be necessary. We do whatever we can with the help of our citizens, to promote the comfort and welfare of these men. In the Home our workers endeavour to support authority while helping to keep the men cheerful and contented. These voluntary workers assist in the care of the dormitories and recreation rooms in many other ways under the direction of the Matron.

Q. Do you mingle the men who have returned from overseas with the men who are going overseas?—A. I do not think the Home is refused to any convalescing soldier.

Q. You admit anyone who is in khaki?—A. Of course the institution is a Commission Home. We have not established the institution; we simply provide the extra help and so forth along the lines I have mentioned. The matter of admission is dealt with by the Commission. I do not know what their policy is in that regard. We simply go to the institution and do what we can for the men who are there. The Home at present is full to capacity, there being about 30 inmates. Any drawbacks which we encounter are due to the small size of the Home.

Q. Do you take both camp cases and returned soldiers, or only the latter class? —A. I have nothing to do with that subject, sir, and do not know how that is arranged. We are only voluntary workers, you see. We do not question the men as to whether they are returned soldiers or not. The Voluntary Aid, of course, are doing work that they are doing at other centres. They attend to the recreation rooms and dormitories and so on, and maintain a cheerful atmosphere. We have a very good Soldiers' Club in St. John, where the returned men are sometimes entertained on special occasions. But they do not appear to want to come to the Soldiers' Club to mix with the men who are going overseas. They go very largely to the Discharge Depot.

Q. Your work is with the men going overseas?—A. The work I speak of is to make the men happy, contented and cheerful, in the Convalescent Home, and I find that they are so as a rule.

Q. You come in constant contact with the men in the Convalescent Home? Are they as a rule satisfied with the treatment they get?—A. Yes, except that sometimes they do not feel that they see enough of the doctor. Even when the doctor's presence may not be absolutely necessary, it seems a pity they could not have him see them, hear what they have to say and question them, so as to make them feel more contented. No doubt there are some things which they are suffering from which only time will cure. I mean to say, in fact, that I believe any discontent or complaint is largely due to our not being a large enough institution to demand sufficient capable supervision by proper officers.

Q. How many are there in the Convalescent Home?—A. 30 at the present time. This does not include the number that go in and out for treatment. A very good vocational outfit has been provided and the men may make a choice of an occupation in which they desire instruction. Of course the men need a good deal of incentive to induce them to take up some of these studies or vocations. We help by selling the articles they make and in other ways.

Q. Do you help to get employment for the men?—A. No. Mr. Robinson, Secretary of the Soldiers' Aid Commission attends to that, but we do all that lies in our power to make their lot easy.

Q. Have any complaints been made to you in regard to any matters other than what you have mentioned?—A. Some of the complaints of the men are due to an excess of ambition and lack of efficiency. We are doing all we can for them, the opportunity is there to improve themselves, and so far, Mr. Robinson says there has not been any lack of suitable positions for them to fill when they are ready. They are to improve this, and there has not been any lack so far, for suitable patients.

Q. Has there been any lack of accommodation whatever at the Convalescent home? —A. No, I think they have been a little crowded sometimes, perhaps.

Q. Do you consider that the provisions that are at present to be found in St. John are dealing adequately with the situation as regards the returned soldier?—A. I think so. I think if we had a larger institution if it was so that there were more men to be accommodated there, I have no doubt there could be an effort made to provide better conditions; I mean with regard to medical supervision. It is hardly likely that a doctor could be assigned to a Home to come frequently if there are only 30 men there.

Q. The accommodation is now ample, but if there is to be a considerable influx of returned men you would be crowded?—A. Yes, we are filled now to capacity. There would not be any room now, at the present time, for more. We have a very enthusiastic reception committee for returning soldiers. We give a personal greeting to the men on the wharf as they arrive. I suppose 3,500 men have been greeted by the Committee on the wharf in this way and each one handed a little parcel of fruit, tobacco, candy, etc., done up in patriotic fashion with ribbon and flags.

[Mrs. Kuhring.]

By the Chairman:

Q. Those are the men who are going away?—A. No, the men coming back.

Q. You have not had 3,500 men returning, at St. John?—A. Yes, I think we have had that number. We have a committee of citizens appointed by the Mayor and by different societies, of which I am a member, we have Mr. Herbert Mayes as Chairman, and the members of that committee go down to the wharf and to the station.

Q. Of that 3,500 men who have received a greeting at St. John from your committee, many have been scattered all over the Dominion?—A. Yes, they do not all remain in St. John. We have personal communication with every man who comes off the steamer; as he comes down the gang-plank, no matter what the hour or the weather, the business men and the ladies gather there to cheer them when they arrive and see them to the different cars that will take them to the points where they are going. When they are in the cars we go in with a basket filled with parcels, done up with patriotic flags, etc., and give every man a parcel. I do not think there is a more cheerful party of men than those men who are pleased to be home, and we give them a little greeting from Canada, and there are no complaints from the returning men. We just want to assure you that there are no men who are returning to Canada who will not receive a greeting on their arrival, no matter when they come. We take a number of newspapers and magazines, we try to get newspapers from all parts of Canada so that each man will be able to get a paper from his own town, when he arrives.

By Hon. Mr. Daniel:

Q. You speak as if all these men came back by steamer; is it not a fact that they also come by train as well as by steamer?—A. Yes, some of the soldiers come by train from Halifax, and some from Quebec, and we have notice of their arrival—the only difficulty has been that of getting notice. But whenever notice has been given the men of our Committee secure motors, decorate them with flags, and meet these men and take them to their homes. Every returned soldier that comes through St. John is greeted by the citizens, that is the members of this Committee, and the work seems to be very thoroughly carried out. They also have a similar committee at Moncton, where every soldier's train going through, whether containing men going overseas, or returning, no matter what the hour or the weather may be, is greeted by the Brass Band at the station. This greeting is very much appreciated. We have an organization working at the discharge depot the members of which do any work they can there, and the Young Women's Patriotic Association is very glad to have any suggestion made to it. I might mention by way of illustration of the work which that association is doing that a man in the convalescent home wanted a particular operation, which he thought would be of great benefit to him; he had epilepsy, and he thought there was a probable chance if he had a very expert operation performed it would put him on his feet again. The Young Women's Patriotic Association, when informed of the circumstances, very gladly took charge of the case and had him taken to the hospital where the operation was performed. I regret to say that it has not done him any good.

By the Chairman:

Q. Have you anything further to add to your statement?—A. No, except that when the men have complained to us, we pass them on to the official authorities and they have always seemed to be perfectly satisfied. We have occasionally communication with the War Veterans Association.

Q. Their dissatisfaction, is, I understand, generally on account of the pensions?—A. Sometimes on account of the pension, and sometimes because they do not understand how many associations are working for their benefit. I have sent them to the other associations, and I think if there could be some kind of co-operation in that way we would clear away a great deal of misunderstanding which sometimes arises.

Q. It has been suggested in Montreal, that there should be a co-operative Committee, which should meet every month, or every week, as may be necessary, for the purpose of getting the different associations to work together with a view to preventing overlapping. Have you anything of that kind in St. John?—A. Everything goes to Mr. Robinson. It might be well if there could be some intercommunication between his office and the other organization.

Q. You think it would be better to have some kind of clearing house, in order to prevent overlapping?—A. The difficulty is to avoid meetings, that is what we are trying to avoid, but it would be well to have communication between Mr. Robinson's office and the different patriotic societies, as to the complaints that may come in.

By Hon. Mr. Daniel:

Q. Do you know how many societies there are actively engaged in the work of looking after the returned soldiers?—A. The Patriotic Visitors are thoroughly active and well-informed about every case of enlisted men and their families.

Q. How many associations are there among the ladies?—A. That is the first one and the leading one. The Patriotic Fund Visitors are very systematic and regular in the performance of their work. In addition to that we have the Soldiers' Wives League who do not dispense money, but who are very actively engaged in their own particular sphere of sympathy and help. The Women's Canadian Club is concerned with everything pertaining to the individual soldiers' welfare. There is also the Young Women's Patriotic Association, and the Daughters of the Empire all ready and glad to do anything they can to help in the work. The War Veterans, of course is a body of their own, and I think, if the War Veterans would come into touch more with the Voluntary Societies perhaps they would benefit. The duties of the Returned Soldiers Reception Committee cease at the wharf, although, of course, there is a connection very often formed, and the men come back to the members of that committee for various assistance and advice.

Q. That would make six associations that are operating. Do they overlap one another in their efforts?—A. I do not think they do because they chiefly answer appeals, and the appeals are, I think, very seldom made to two or three different people on one case.

Witness discharged.

Mr. W. B. MacCoy, K.C., Halifax, called, sworn and examined.

By the Chairman:

Q. I understand you are the secretary of the Returned Soldiers' Employment Bureau of Nova Scotia?—A. Yes, and I am giving my time to the work at the Discharge Depot as my contribution to war purposes.

Q. Is that an organization created by the Provincial Government?—A. Yes, under the Order in Council.

Q. Who are your officers?—A. The Hon. Mr. MacGregor, President, Senator McLennan, Mr. Justice Harris, Col. McDougall, Mr. Thomas J. Brown, of the Nova Scotia Steel, Mr. G. Fred Pearson, Mr. W. R. Wakely, Mr. J. T. Joy, Sir Frederick Fraser, Mr. Frederick Sexton.

Q. They are all appointed by the Government, but it is an absolutely non-partisan Commission?—A. Yes.

Q. It is composed of members of both political parties, working together, entirely diverse from politics?—A. Yes.

Q. The Hon. Mr. McGregor, and Mr. MacDougall, did not come up?—A. No, they could not get away.

Q. And you are here to speak for the Commission?—A. Yes.

Q. Will you tell us what your work consists of?—A. Mainly at its inception, two things, welcoming and employment. Of course it has, since its inception, enlarged its sphere very materially.

[Mr. W. B. MacCoy.]

Q. What are the powers given you by the Order in Council?—A. I can give you a copy of the Order if you wish.

Q. You might place that on file as an exhibit if you like?

(Order in Council filed and marked Exhibit No. 1.)

Q. How many men have come back to Nova Scotia?—A. 729.

Q. How many of those are in hospital to-day or are still undischarged?—A. 324.

Q. Leaving 405 who have evidently been discharged?—A. No, sir, not altogether. Of that 405, there will be 319 placed in positions, 5 have died, 16 have taken vocational training, and 19 are either farmers, or farmers' sons. There are 11 that we have been unable to locate as yet, and there are unemployed 41.

Q. That is you have found positions for three-fourths of that 400?—A. Yes.

Q. And you have 41 waiting to be employed?—A. Yes.

Q. How long have these 41 been on your hands?—A. Less than ten days, they all came back on the last ship, and have not yet asked for employment though written to.

Q. Prior to that had you all your men placed?—A. All but one.

Q. Now then, will you tell us your experience in placing these returned men. Do you succeed in getting any considerable number on the farms?—A. No, sir, I find, as a rule, that although I ask them—I might say in passing that I also have to do with the discharge depot at Ilalifax, and therefore come in close touch with the returned men of the Maritime Provinces, and particularly the Nova Scotian men, and either myself or my representatives throughout the province have inquired of them if they will be ready to go in for farming, or to go back to farming, whichever it may be. The percentage, while I have not made it up, is very small.

Q. Has any legislation been passed by the Provincial Government similar to that in New Brunswick, with a view of endeavouring to put returned soldiers on farm lands?—A. No. We have legislation however, called the "Land Settlement Act", which has been on the statute books for a few years, whereby any person coming into the Province, or a farmer living within the Province, wishing to purchase a farm, 80 per cent of the purchase price is advanced by the Government through a loan company.

Q. Though not especially passed for returned soldiers, that legislation is available for them?—A. That is it; and the Government are considering a proposition at the present time.

Q. What class of occupations do you get for your men?—A. General, all kinds.

Q. Do you find that the major portion of them are manual labourers?—A. Yes, I think so. Perhaps it would be safer to say half and half.

Q. Have you had fairly good success in placing men in positions and have them retain them? Have you any considerable percentage of men who afterwards come back on your hands again?—A. Yes, I have. One man who came from Calgary, an exceptionally good man I may say, an Englishman by birth, I have had him placed in five positions. I must say in all fairness to the man that he was gassed and is very restless, and as yet has not settled down.

Q. Does he not want to go back to Calgary?—A. I hardly think that he does.

Q. Do you find that you can get all the vacancies that are necessary for the men who come back?—A. Yes, Sir Herbert, we do. My trouble is probably the same as that of other secretaries throughout Canada: The greatest trouble is with the labouring man who has had no education. The greatest trouble is to place that man if he has had any severe disability.

Q. That is, a man whose intellect goes with a pick and shovel, but whose physical characteristics will not carry him through the pick and shovel work?—A. Exactly.

Q. What do you do with those men?—A. At the present time we get them very light jobs, watchmen, porters, elevator men, occupations of that kind.

[Mr. W. B. MacCoy.]

By Hon. Mr. McCurdy:

Q. What proportion of your men have gone into the steel and coal industry?—A. The Dominion Coal Company have taken back 30 men, and the Nova Scotia Steel Company 25 men, that is approximately.

By the Chairman:

Q. Have these men been able to do the heavy work required in these industries?—A. Not altogether, sir. The Dominion Coal Company and the Nova Scotia Steel Company have been exceptionally good. At the commencement of our organization they notified me immediately that they would be willing to take back all those men and give them employment that they were physically fitted for.

By Hon. Mr. Daniel:

Q. Constant employment all the year round?—A. Yes.

By the Chairman:

Q. Has your experience as secretary of the Returned Soldiers Employment Commission of Nova Scotia made you desirous of offering any suggestions to the Committee as to the way in which the lot of the returned soldier can be improved?—A. Well, there are some; but the one particularly that I would suggest would be that we would have a permanency of medical boards. On account of our being at the discharge depot we have unfortunately no continuity of medical boards.

By Mr. Bennett:

Q. The personnel differs in every case practically?—A. Yes, pretty nearly.

By Hon. Mr. Marcil:

Q. Who selects these boards?—A. The A. D. M. S.

By the Chairman:

Q. Do they come down from Quebec?—A. No.

Q. They are local boards?—A. Yes.

Q. The personnel of that board changes from month to month and from ship to ship?—A. Up to some time ago, when we had a permanent board, I think, for three ships. Now it is changed again.

Q. That causes a lack of uniformity in the findings?—A. A great deal, because a new medical board coming along does not get the hang of it for a while with the result that the findings of the board themselves vary a great deal.

By Hon. Mr. Marcil:

Q. What is the object of changing them so often, why not employ the same men regularly?—A. Well, there are difficulties in the way.

Q. Do the doctors themselves object to giving their time?—A. Some of them I think, possibly.

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. Have you made representations along these lines?—A. I have.

Q. What was the reply?—A. The reply has been that it would be attended to, and it was attended to for a while.

Q. And then it drifted back to the old way?—A. Yes. Since these new regulations have come around—

Q. Is there a new regulation?—A. It is new and old. These boards are always under the A. D. M. S., but the Military Hospitals Commission practically nominated them until a short time ago. Now, the Army Medical Service has come back again into its own.

Q. Now, it is the A. D. M. S. and last week it was the Military Hospital Commission, is that right?—A. Practically.

[Mr. W. B. MacCoy.]

By Mr. Ross (Middlesex):

Q. The soldiers are discontented with the findings, one man thinks he is not fairly treated as compared with another man?—A. Not so much that, as the men themselves do not understand the classes, one, two or three. It affects them in this way: when they come for pension, the Pension Board looks at the findings of the Discharge Depot Board to some extent.

Mr. Ross: That is what I mean.

By Mr. Bennett:

Q. The same Board examines the same ship usually, and in making up the board it depends upon whether a given man is busy at the particular moment he may be required?—A. That practically is it.

Q. And there is no permanent board charged with the responsibility of looking after these returned men and you think there should be?—A. Yes.

By the Chairman:

Q. How often do the ships come back?—A. We average about two a month.

Q. So that I suppose this board is very busy for three or four days and has nothing to do for ten days?—A. Yes.

The CHAIRMAN: That is where the difficulty comes in.

By Mr. Middlebro:

Q. If they knew they were going to be employed for each ship, it would be all right. They do not get the same assistants?—A. They do not, and it militates against the men a great deal.

By the Chairman:

Q. That is a very valuable suggestion, the necessity of continuity in the case of the boards. Have you any further suggestions to make?—A. I think the others I had in my mind are being worked out, Sir Herbert, I do not think it is worth while mentioning them.

Q. These recent regulations have done away with the criticisms you were going to make?—A. Yes.

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. Have you anything to do with the hospitals, Mr. McCoy?—A. Yes, indirectly, for the C.E.F., and even Home Guard men. We look after Home Guard men.

Q. As well as C.E.F.?—A. Yes.

Q. Do you have anything to do with them in your capacity as secretary?—A. Yes, and for employment. I often get letters asking me to help them out with arrears of pay, or something like that.

Q. Are your hospital accommodations and arrangements quite satisfactory from the returned soldiers standpoint?—A. Decidedly not.

Q. Why?—A. Well, my answer to that, if you will allow me to refer to my documents, is that up to the date of this tabulated report, February 22, we have had 274 men—

Q. In hospital?—A. No, not in hospital, but who should be in hospital.

By Hon. Mr. McCurdy:

Q. Out-patients?—A. They are out-patients, but not in the sense of that term.

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. Where are they now?—A. They are scattered all over the province; some are in their homes. When I say that, I am speaking of the date of my report. They are broken up in this way: 19 were receiving hospital treatment; 87 were supposed to go to a convalescent home; and 53 into a sanitarium. You might say we have no sanitarium. True, we have a sanitarium at Kentville, but it is overcrowded with civilian patients, and we can only get a few soldiers in it.

Q. The soldiers could not get in?—A. No. For instance, to quote from the actual recommendations of the board: here is a man who is recommended for treatment in a convalescent home for three months. He is at home. Another, recommended to a T. B. sanitarium for three to six months, he is at home, and so forth throughout the report.

Q. How many hospitals have you?—A. We have no hospital in the sense that you are asking me. We have two convalescent homes. The Ross Home at Sydney which will hold about 30, and the Clayton Home which will hold probably 25 at the outside.

Q. Outside of the military hospital, these are the only ones you have? Do you consider that these men are being badly prejudiced in the way of health by not receiving proper treatment?—A. I certainly do, and I made a report to the Committee.

Q. Have you that with you?—A. Yes.

Q. Will you give us a synopsis of it and put it on file to be printed?—A. Yes.

By Mr. Middlebro:

Q. What date is the report?—A. February 22.

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. This year?—A. Yes.

By the Chairman:

Q. A report from you to your Committee?—A. Yes.

Q. It contains nothing of a character that you or your Committee would regard as private?—A. Not at all.

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. What is the synopsis of that report?—A. I think the easiest way would be for me to go through the correspondence giving it as it is. In March 1916 I asked what convalescent home provision was to be made in Nova Scotia.

By Hon. Mr. Daniel:

Q. Whom did you report to?—A. The Secretary of the Military Hospitals Commission, Mr. Scammell. I received a letter from Mr. Scammell in which he said: "At the present time the home at Sydney is capable of accommodating all the men for whom convalescent home treatment is needed." He also stated that it was the intention of the Commission to arrange for more convalescent homes in Nova Scotia when they were required. That was in 1916. He also refers to two ladies having called at his office in regard to convalescent homes. In September, 1916, Colonel Sharples and Colonel Thompson visited Halifax, and they went over Admiralty House and made a recommendation that Admiralty House should be taken, and arrangements made in the city for that and we thought it was going through, but it did not.

By Mr. Middlebro:

Q. About how many would that accommodate?—A. About 400. It is being now converted by the naval people for their own use.

By the Chairman:

Q. Have you not taken over Dalhousie University?—A. No.

Q. Don't you intend to take it over?—A. No. I will come to that presently.

Q. Mr. Scammell says in his evidence Dalhousie will use a part of the present building, and they have another part of the present building, and that the total accommodation they will have in Halifax will be about 350. Do you say that is not correct?—A. It was correct when he gave his evidence because it was thought at Ottawa that they would likely use Dalhousie, but when Senator McLennan and others were down there they changed their plans.

Q. What did they substitute for it?—A. They substituted the two Pine Hill cottages which Mr. McCurdy suggested which will accommodate 125. The present accommodation which is now proposed is made up as follows, Ross' 35, Moxom Home—that is a large residence at Sydney—100, Pine Hill, 125, Clayton Home, 25. The proposed extension which is nearly finished, of the Kentville Sanitarium, 100, and the Convalescent Home proposed at Camp Hill, 304, making a total of 689.

By Mr. Bennett:

Q. What is the accommodation that you now say is available?—A. 689.

Q. But before the present contemplated arrangements were completed?—A. About 60.

Q. How near completion is the rest of the contemplated arrangement?—A. Just started.

Q. All of it?—A. Yes.

Q. What about the Kentville Sanitarium?—A. Other than the Kentville Sanitarium. It is the only one near completion.

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. How long before the others will be completed?—A. I should think it would take Camp Hill three or four months.

Q. How about Pine Hill?—A. It will be ready in 12 days or a fortnight.

By Hon. Mr. McCurdy:

Q. It will hold how many?—A. 125.

By Mr. Bennett:

Q. And Moxom's 100?—A. They say 100.

Q. Where is that?—A. It is a large residence, formerly belonging to Mr. Moxom. It is outside of Sydney.

Q. What have they to do there?—A. Considerable remodeling. I suppose it will be finished in a fortnight.

Q. Then there will be enough to take care of all the patients and give a surplus of 50 at present?—A. No.

Q. There is accommodation for 100 at Kentville?—A. That is for T. B's only.

Q. There will be enough to take care of the whole lot in the next fortnight?—A. Yes.

By the Chairman:

Q. Although the present accommodation is inadequate sufficient additional accommodation is being added to take care of them all?—A. Yes.

Q. And you think it will be sufficient?—A. Not looking to the future.

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. It would only be a temporary arrangement?—A. Yes, depending on the number of casualties.

By the Chairman:

Q. I suppose the Ross and Moxom Home are only for Cape Breton casualties?—A. Not necessarily.

Q. Do you send men to the other provinces and bring them back?—A. We have sent men to Ste. Agathe and other places.

Q. Tubercular cases?—A. Yes.

[Mr. W. B. MacCoy.]

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. You say you are content with the hospital arrangements as contemplated?—
A. Yes.

Q. Would that be right?—A. Yes for the present.

Q. What do you think ought to be done in order to meet the situation likely to rise in Nova Scotia as it will in all the provinces, when the influx becomes great? How many men have you recruited from down there and sent overseas?—A. I could not say.

Q. How many do you get back on an average in a month?—A. I get the heavy end of it every time. Mr. Robinson comes off better than I do. Last time I got 65.

Q. That you had to take care of?—A. Yes.

Q. How many of these were hospital cases?—A. 60.

Q. Were you able to place all those?—A. No. The most of them had their homes, except four or five that had been placed.

Q. Is 65 about the average per month?—A. Pretty nearly.

Q. That is what is contemplated now. Will you be able to provide for those that come in from month to month with your Pine Hill home and so on?—A. That depends a good deal upon how many of this 274 that are on the tabulated reports, and others that come in from time to time, are discharged from the convalescent homes.

Q. Taking it as it comes day by day and month by month, what do you think, having in view of what has preceded?—A. I think it would be well to have a place where we could have it ready for any possible emergency.

Q. What would you suggest?—A. I have not thought enough of that, but I would say offhand that it would be well to have another place on the style of the Camp Hill proposed convalescent home.

Q. Like the Camp Hill?—A. Yes.

Q. Does your report recommend that?—A. No, my report was simply as to the conditions at the date of the report. I recommended nothing.

Q. And the conditions are as you have told us to-day?—A. Yes.

Q. Are there any recommendations that you reported on further than that you were short of adequate room? Are your hospitals well ventilated and managed and so on?—A. My report was dealing entirely with the convalescent homes and was not referring to military hospitals.

Q. As to convalescent homes, is there anything else wrong except that you had not adequate room?—A. No.

Q. Outside of that it is all satisfactory?—A. Yes, except that I would like to see some improvement in the military hospitals.

Q. Tell us about those?—A. I say that in connection with the military hospitals at Cogswell Street the conditions are not what they should be by any manner of means.

Q. In what way?—A. For instance a man came back on the hospital ship the other day who was said to be insane. The doctors said that he should have the benefit of the Cobourg institution. He was sent forward and returned because the medical board elsewhere decided that he should be sent to his provincial asylum which would be the Nova Scotia asylum. While the board was deciding whether the last named board was or was not correct they put him in the detention room at the military hospital. This is a room not more than 10 by 12 I think, has seven or eight beds in it, and there are no lavatories except buckets in the corners. It is a detention room with iron bars on the outside window, no lavatories or toilets.

By the Chairman:

Q. A regular clink?—A. Yes, it is worse than that.

By Hon. Mr. Marcil:

Q. A Canadian institution?—A. Yes.

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. Go on with that story?—A. I got him re-examined by the doctor of the asylum and he recommended that he should be sent to Cobourg and he came forward yesterday. He is now in Cobourg.

Q. What do you complain of in that?—A. I complain in regard to that that the conditions in the military hospital at Cogswell Street are inadequate for either the returned soldier or the ordinary every-day soldier. If he is to be detained in a detention room it should be a sanitary room and a decent living place.

Q. There is nothing wrong with that except the room he was detained in was not fit for people to go into?—A. Yes, and secondly because the man was supposed to be mentally weak although not insane, and he should not be put in a detention room amongst the ordinary every-day prisoners where the accommodation was bad, and this might tend to make him hopelessly insane. That is not my own idea. That is the doctor's.

Q. How many more men were there in that room at the time?—A. Five.

By the Chairman:

Q. Who were undergoing detention for misconduct?—A. There was one other man hopelessly insane, chattering all the time, who had to be kept under guard for fear he would do something.

Q. Those men were in there for misconduct?—A. Yes.

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. How long was this particular man confined there?—A. This man came in on Sunday, and left on Wednesday.

Q. And was in the guard-room constantly all that time?—A. Yes.

Q. Without being allowed out?—A. Yes.

Q. With those other men?—A. Yes. The food conditions at the Cogswell Hospital are bad.

By the Chairman:

Q. Is that a military hospital of the permanent force?—A. Yes.

By Hon. Mr. Daniel:

Q. I presume this room you speak of was a punishment room?—A. Yes.

Q. Guard-room?—A. Yes.

Q. It remained in that condition—in fact it had been in that condition from the time this military hospital was started?—A. I expect so.

The CHAIRMAN: And a long time before. It was a regular military hospital.

By Hon. Mr. Daniel:

Q. Has that old military hospital in the other part of it been properly provided with lavatories and baths and all the modern plumbing conveniences?—A. Partially. There are some latrines that are not always in the best condition.

Q. But this punishment room was never taken in as part of the hospital. It is a separate building from the other?—A. No, it is an outside room. It is within 20 feet of the main door.

Q. It could be very well included in the plumbing arrangements?—A. I should think so. I would not say positively.

By Brigadier-General Mason:

Q. Is it a Military Hospital Commission building, or independent of it?—A. Independent of it.

By Hon. Mr. Daniel:

Q. It is independent of military hospitals?—A. Yes.

[Mr. W. B. MacCoy.]

By Mr. Ross (Middlesex):

Q. Is there anything else you wish to speak of?—A. I do not think it is very pleasant, the way the food is served to the men there.

Q. Why?—A. Well, take the bread, for instance; it is simply brought out in a tin dish and handed out to the men who are in bed.

By the Hon. Mr. Marcil:

Q. The food is served under contract?—A. I do not know that.

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. Is the bread good?—A. Yes, it is good all right.

Q. The only thing you have against it is the service of it?—A. Yes.

By Hon. Mr. Daniel:

Q. The hospital is run by the C. A. M. C. entirely.

Q. It is provided I presume, with qualified trained nurses, or is it?—A. Yes.

Q. Not V. A. D. nurses?—A. No.

Q. With regard to the cooking, have they a qualified chef?—A. I have never heard any complaint in any way about the cooking of the food, and I have heard no complaint about the medical attention.

Q. That is the professional attention?—A. Yes.

Q. But you have heard complaints of the mode in which the food is distributed?—A. Yes, I have seen that myself.

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. Are there any other complaints?—A. No, that is all.

Q. Is there anything else you could suggest to the Committee that would be helpful to the returned soldier?—A. I do not know of anything.

By Mr. Bennett:

Q. There are only two Military Hospitals Commission's hospitals in Nova Scotia, the Ross Home and the Clayton Home.

Q. And what you have said as to the hospital on Cogswell Street refers to this hospital which has been there for 15 years?—A. Yes.

Q. And belongs to the permanent force entirely?—A. Yes. The other two hospitals are entirely satisfactory in every way.

Witness discharged.

Major W. P. PURNEY, called, sworn and examined.

By the Chairman:

Q. You are the President of the Returned Soldiers' Association of Halifax?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is that a Provincial or a local body?—A. At present it is only a local body covering the city of Halifax and the surrounding country—in fact I might say Halifax County.

Q. What sort of charter have you?—A. We have no charter, but we are about to apply for one.

Q. To the Provincial Legislature?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Are the objects of your association identical with those of Returned Soldiers' Associations we have heard of from other parts of Canada?—A. The only Association with which we have been in touch so far has been that of Ottawa. Apparently our object is the same as that Association, although I could not vouch for the fact.

Q. Does your membership include men who have never been overseas, or is it confined to men who have crossed the ocean?—A. So far membership is limited to men who have crossed the ocean and returned.

Q. In that respect your membership is similar to that of the Ottawa Association?—A. I think we will consider the advisability of taking in others.

Q. That is, camp cases who are discharged?—A. Yes, of course a great many of the men feel they will have very little in common with those men. On the other hand there is a spirit of fairness developing, I find, which I think will result in these men being included in our membership if they desire to come in.

Q. You do not think that extension of membership would weaken your standing as a community as a whole?—A. I think a man who has volunteered for service overseas and has been prevented by accident or disease from doing his duty there has a right to our consideration.

Q. Were you authorized by a Committee of the Returned Soldiers Association of Halifax to come here and present views?—A. I was not especially authorized.

Q. There was no meeting held at which you were selected and asked to come?—A. No, but I consulted the Executive.

Q. Are you the bearer of a certain number of suggestions or criticisms which you can lay before the Committee?—A. Any suggestions which I may make will be chiefly those founded on statements made by the men individually and collectively. First of all there is the matter of pension and pay.

Q. You may just take up one by one the things which you feel might be improved upon.—A. I feel that there should be a permanent Standing Medical Board for the examination of those men who are applying, or are eligible, for pensions.

Q. A permanent Standing Medical Board at Halifax?—A. Possibly one at Halifax, and another at Cape Breton, but Boards composed of the same men.

Q. That is the Board that examines men after they get off the ship?—A. I am not speaking of that Board, sir, but the one which deals with examinations with respect to pensions.

By Brigadier General Mason:

Q. Are men re-examined in England before they leave for pension purposes?—A. No, sir.

By the Chairman:

Q. What Board examines today for pensions the men from Nova Scotia who do not go West?—A. As I understand it, any of the ordinary Medical Boards, they practically assemble from day to day.

Q. Any of the ordinary Medical Boards?—A. That is as I understand it.

Q. You think there should be a permanent Provincial Board to prepare all evidence for the Pension Commissioners in Ottawa?—A. I do. I think that would be in the interest not only of the men themselves but of the public as well.

Q. That is a valuable suggestion. Have you anything further to suggest?—A. In the matter of pay we think the man should not be cut adrift too quickly. In a great many cases men have been receiving in the form of pay and different allowances for the support of their families much more than they have earned before enlisting. To be cut off quickly from that military pay and allowances is a condition which is hard to meet in a great many cases.

Q. What would you suggest, that when a man is discharged, or going to be discharged, his pay should be gradually diminished in amount?—A. That is my suggestion. That covering a period of three months the payment should be: For the first month, full pay, for the second month 75 per cent of that pay, and the third month 50 per cent. Also that there should be a similar sliding scale with respect to the Patriotic allowance.

[Major W. P. Purney.]

By Mr. Ross (Middlesex):

Q. I suppose that should also apply to separation allowance?—A. Yes.

By the Chairman:

Q. You think it should apply also to the Patriotic allowance for the man's family?—A. Yes.

Q. Your experience goes to prove that the cessation is too sudden?—A. Too sudden.

Q. And what result does that have, speaking from your experience and representing the men. What are the evil effects of the present system of discontinuing the pay?—A. If my suggestion were carried out it would result in those interested, with families, gradually settling back to their former scheme of life. In a great many cases people have more cash to spend than before the war, and possibly certain tastes have been developed.

Q. To any considerable extent have the people who have had more cash to spend saved money?—A. That is a question I cannot answer, I can only give my impression. Probably it would not amount to very much.

Q. The people of Nova Scotia,—had they not increased their scale of living would have saved money?—A. Of course, when I say that families have been in receipt of greater incomes than before the war, I am not speaking generally, there are a certain number of people to which that would apply.

By Hon. Mr. Macril:

Q. In the city of Halifax?—A. I am speaking of the Province generally. Then there is this other fact to be borne in mind: conditions of living are different to what they were before the war. Food is higher, and there is also the fact that when the soldier returns, after serving some months at the front, it will be a long time before he is restored to the same condition mentally and physically that he was in before.

By the Chairman:

Q. You are referring now to men who have come back unfit for further military service?—A. Yes. They find it difficult to settle down to their occupation, and there will be a great deal of unrest so far as they are concerned, for some months. A man of this class may take a job, and perhaps it will be some months before he can settle down to it in good shape. He may be able to work for a day, and perhaps have to lay off for a day; it will be some time before he will be back to a normal condition.

By Mr. Middlebro:

Q. How many members are there in your Association?—A. About 100.

Q. How many have expressed a desire to go on the land?—A. I have not heard of any.

Q. How many of the 100 lived on the land before they enlisted?—A. Members of our Association belong mainly to the city.

By the Chairman:

Q. Have you any specific cases which you want to submit to the Committee for investigation?—A. No, sir, we have no special complaints beyond those mentioned.

Q. Generally speaking your returned soldiers are fairly well satisfied with the treatment they are receiving?—A. Yes. And I may say that the Employment Bureau has done good work. Of course, we let them retain the responsibility altogether. We do not interfere with them in any way, except that we keep ourselves before the public, and if we have any information which may be of use we pass it on to the Employment Bureau.

[Major W. P. Purney.]

Q. Do you find that when your Soldiers' Association and yourself and your Secretary communicate with the Soldiers' Aid Commission of Nova Scotia and with the authorities at Ottawa, do you get satisfaction?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you really have no serious grievance so far as Nova Scotia is concerned?—A. No, sir.

By Mr. Ross (Middlesex):

Q. You have made the suggestion that the pay be continued two or three months longer on a sliding scale?—A. Then there is the 20 per cent disability matter in connection with the pensions. The men do not like that, and probably some injustice often results through the operation of that provision.

By the Chairman:

Q. Do they object to the small sum of $8 a month, or do they object to the gratuity offered them on their discharge when under 20 per cent disability?—A. The gratuity.

Q. They do not like that?—A. They do not like that.

By Mr. Middlebro:

Q. If a man is injured to an extent of 19 per cent he is entitled to pretty nearly the same pension as the man who is injured to the extent of 20 per cent?—A. And with this change in the personnel of the Medical Boards you can readily understand that without intention some injustice may result.

By Brigadier-General Mason:

Q. Were you examined by a Medical Board in England before you returned to Canada?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. For what purpose?—A. To see whether I could be discharged from Hospital.

Q. Not for pension purposes?—A. No, sir.

By Mr. Sutherland:

Q. Your experience is that the average returned soldier finds some difficulty in adapting himself to the changed conditions for a few months at least.—A. Yes, sir. That would be my opinion.

Q. And you suggest that he should continue to receive pay for a certain length of time after his discharge?—A. I said three months. I consider that long enough with a sliding scale.

By Hon. Mr. McCurdy:

Q. You heard Mrs. Kuhring's statement this morning, have you similar arrangements at your port of debarkation for the returned soldiers?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. What is your observation as to the temptations which returned soldiers meet on land?—A. I do not know that they would meet any temptation in Halifax at present. You never see a man there now under the influence of liquor.

By Mr. Ross (Middlesex):

Q. Are the returned soldiers given any preference in the matter of employment by the owners of munition factories in the Province of Nova Scotia?—A. I am not in a position to speak as to that.

By Hon. Mr. Marcil:

Q. How many of your members have been appointed to Government positions, either federal or provincial?—A. Personally I only know of one mail carrier.

Q. Have any appointments been made to the Custom House?—A. I do not know of any.

Q. Generally the men go back to the calling they had before they went overseas?—A. They prefer that, of course, but my opinion is that the man who has been on the land before the war broke out is not anxious to go back there immediately. Of course he may modify his view in the course of time.

By Hon. Mr. Marcil:

Q. That is because his physical condition is altered?—A. That is because he has been physically impaired, and to a great extent because he has been out in the world.

Witness discharged.

Dr. J. G. EVANS, Kingston, called, sworn, and examined.

By the-Chairman:

Q. You are the Secretary, I understand, of the Veterans' Association, Kingston, Ont.?—A. I am the Commandant of the Association.

Q. Will you give the Committee, briefly, for we have only a few minutes before lunch, any suggestion that you have to offer regarding the improvement of the lot of the returned soldier in your Military District, No. 3?—A. I am prepared to do that, but I could not do it in a few minutes. I came here with certain matter and data which I would like to lay before this Committee carefully.

Q. You might give us an outline of it, and you can have your data filed for the information of the Committee.—A. I would much prefer giving it myself, if I may have that privilege.

Q. We will give you fifteen minutes. I think, Dr. Evans, you can give us in fifteen minutes a general outline of it, and then you can file your statement and we will be very glad to have it printed.—A. Do you want anything about the machinery at present in operation at Kingston?

Q. In your District, yes.—A. We have in the City of Kingston, the Elmhurst Home, for the reception and treatment of convalescent soldiers with about 42 beds; it is capable of accommodating 42 men. The building is beautifully situated on the lake front, with a very pleasant environment, and everything in connection with the building itself and with the administration in the Home is perfectly satisfactory, as far as I know, to the returned soldier. We have passed through the homes in the city of Kingston, since the commencement of the return of these soldiers some nine hundred and sixty-five men, and I have been brought into close, direct touch with these men. Then we have the Richardson Home, with accommodation for 27, the Mowat Memorial Hospital, recently turned over to the Commission, with a capacity of 100, not quite complete, but as far as it has gone it is most satisfactory, and it will turn out to be one of the best institutions in Canada. This hospital is entirely for the treatment of tubercular cases. Of course, in Ottawa there is the Sir Sandford Fleming Home and the Home at Cobourg, which is a clearing station for mental cases for nearly the whole of Canada. They have at present 44 cases, and they have passed through that institution nearly 200 cases sent out to institutions all over Canada. Some cases are treated at the Eastern Hospital at Brockville, which has now some three cases. The Rockway Hospital at Kingston now has eight mental cases and cases requiring active treatment are sent to the Military Hospital in the city of Kingston, which is under the C.A.M.C. and directly under the A.D.M.S. of the District. There is one case at Belleville, and two tubercular cases in the Royal Sanatorium in our District, and a large portion of Queen's University, consisting of Grant Hall and Arts Building, are now being prepared for a hospital. Altogether, with the Court House at Kingston, there will be a capacity of somewhere about 1,000 beds. The Court House will be used entirely for the accommodation of the staff of the hospital proper, which will be in the other building. I find that the first complaint, perhaps, that comes from the returned soldier is in connection with his pay or dealings in Kingston and this is due to the delay in sending his last pay certificate from England. In some cases the delay is has developed, not only into weeks, but into months. I have one case in mind, Pte. Jones, whose last pay was received on the 10th day of June, 1916, and who received no further pay until some complaint was made about it, and notwithstanding the fact that he had two or three motherless children, he never received one cent of pay until recently. This was due to the paymaster of his unit going overseas, and not leaving his last pay certificate. The fact stands that the man, from the 10th of June, 1916, until a few weeks ago, was without pay. This is one of the largest causes of complaint, and the delay in sending the last pay certificate is provoking trouble and dissatisfaction.

By Mr. Middlebro:

Q. That is due to a poor paymaster not looking after his business?—A. Then there must be many poor paymasters.

By Hon. Mr. Marcil:

Q. Are there many of such cases?—A. A great many, possibly six out of every ten men complain. There is a very general complaint about the last pay certificate, the non-receipt of which makes it impossible for the casualty paymaster to make any advances whatever.

By Mr. Ross (Middlesex):

Q. Would that certificate come from the Pay and Record Office in England?—A. Yes, to the paymaster of the unit to which he belongs. It may be that the paymaster of the unit to which the casualty belongs was responsible for not sending it to the Pay and Record Office from France or Belgium.

By Hon. Mr. Marcil:

Q. In the meantime, while waiting for their pay, they have to rely upon assistance?—A. They have to rely upon such an Association as ours to advance, or loan, or give them money, or go without.

By Mr. Ross (Middlesex):

Q. How could the paymaster of the unit be responsible, I do not quite understand?—A. He is responsible for returning the last pay certificate on leaving Canada. He should return it to the District in which his unit was organized. If in the case of a casualty, he should return it to the Pay and Record office in London, that is if the man is a casualty in France or Belgium or England.

Q. The delay is due to the paymaster on the other side?—A. Or perhaps in not sending it at all.

By Hon. Mr. Marcil:

Q. Does the soldier carry anything with him that would be of assistance to him in that respect?—A. Yes, and the second trouble we have is, that the account book is taken away from the man at the hospital in England, or at the Pay and Record Office there, and if he manages to get away from both of these and take his account book on board ship, on the way over his account book is taken from him unless he smuggles his book over by saying he has lost it. Otherwise he has no means whatever of convincing the Paymaster of Casualties as to his financial standing.

By Mr. Ross (Middlesex):

Q. Why should the account book be taken from the man?—A. There is a regulation which says that if he is an inmate of a hospital during the period he spends in that hospital he must surrender the book, but that it should be returned to him when he leaves the hospital.

[Dr. J. G. Evans.]

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. He arrives here absolutely with nothing to indicate his financial position?—A. Yes, in many cases and in the case of men who have been killed, it has been absolutely impossible for the widow or the dependent to secure the account book so as to know the standing of the husband or son at the moment he was killed, and in most cases they are credited as being in debt to their unit at the time of death.

By Mr. Ross (Middlesex):

Q. What object could a man have in taking that account book from the private while on board ship? Is there any object of fraud?—A. There would be an opportunity. I do not say there has been.

Q. How would it work out, how could a man by getting that book gain? Is there any object in the officer or man taking that book away?—A. I cannot see how the officer on a ship could possibly profit by it; but if the account book was taken away from the man in England, I could see how somebody might profit in England, how the paymaster of the unit might profit. I do not say that has been the case, but it might be. There is a possibility.

Mr. Ross: We want to find out where there may be loopholes.

By Hon. Mr. Daniel:

Q. To what department does the officer belong who takes away the book from the soldier?—A. The medical officer, if he is in hospital, and if at the Pay and Record Office, whoever was in charge of the man at the time.

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. Who would take it on board ship?—A. The officer who accompanies the casualty.

Q. What does he do with it?—A. We have never been able to find out.

By Mr. Ross (Middlesex):

Q. You cannot see any object of personal gain in the officer taking it on the ship?—A. No, I have found this: that the men on returning here, on getting the account from headquarters, most of them dispute that account and say that if they had the account book they could easily establish the fact that they are entitled to more money. This may be due to their defective memory or inability to recollect their correct standing.

By Hon. Mr. Daniel:

Q. Without the book he cannot prove it?—A. If the soldier says: "I have lost my account book," he manages to bring it home. Some have managed to bring their account books home.

By Hon. Mr. Marçil:

Q. Have you called the attention of the Department to this state of affairs?—A. Not to the account book complaints, it is more recently that I have had complaints about the account book being taken away.

By Hon. Mr. McCurdy:

Q. What is your ground for saying that the account book is taken away from nearly all the soldiers? How many cases of that do you know of?—A. I have had direct dealings with 965 men that have passed through the local homes. I do not think that out of that number I can locate 50 men with their account books.

Q. Do you say that 915 men have had these books taken from them?—A. No. Since the matter has caused so much complaint—the matter was brought up in a largely attended meeting—recently I have been unable to account for more than 50 books.

Q. Even supposing that what you say is true, that you have not been able to account for 915 books out of 965, does that prove that the books were taken from the

915 men?—A. No, it would not prove that. But there is no question about the fact that most books have been taken.

Q. Your statement is so remarkable, and does not coincide with any statement we have had before.—A. There is a regulation to that effect, so far as the casualty command in hospitals is concerned.

Q. He is entitled to get the book back when he leaves the hospital?—A. However remarkable the statement may be, I am in a position to prove it. We have a membership of 460 returned soldiers; out of that we have 350 C.E.F. men, the others will be from all campaigns, from the Crimean down. I have the word of most of these men which I am prepared to take.

Q. That is a very general statement. A. It is easily corroborated.

By Hon. Mr. Marcil:

Q. Have you the text of that regulation under which this book is taken away?—A. I have not it with me. It is pasted in every account book. It is easy to corroborate the statement. Any paymaster of casualties will tell you that this is one of the difficulties that stands in his way of dealing satisfactorily with the returned soldiers pay. Take the Paymaster of Casualties at Kingston, Capt. Peters, an efficient man, and he will tell you that the last pay certificate he has been unable to get without much waiting. Any Paymaster of casualties will tell you that.

Hon. Mr. McCURDY: What is your experience in that regard, Mr. MacCoy?

Mr. MACCOY: That is not my experience at all. Sometimes the L.P.C. is missing but seldom the man's pay book as he has that himself or it is in his documents.

Hon. Mr. McCURDY: I would like Mr. Robinson to speak with regard to his experience.

Mr. ROBINSON: In New Brunswick the man's pay book is returned to him in the discharge depot.

The WITNESS: That is not the case in my own district.

Mr. PARDEE: Trooper Brown said exactly the same thing.

The CHAIRMAN: I think the general statement can go down that it is a cause of complaint that the soldiers in No. 3 district in many cases do not have their account books given to them on coming home.

Hon. Mr. McCURDY: I think we should have Col. Merritt, who is in charge of the Discharge Depot at Quebec, appear before us either here or at Toronto. If this condition exists it should be rectified.

The CHAIRMAN: We will later on certainly hear what the Paymasters' Department has to say in respect to this. We cannot get Col. Merritt here this afternoon.

The WITNESS: The paymaster is handicapped in some ways. I have had occasion to go to the paymaster and other officers and I have found every officer on the staff very obliging and willing to listen to my complaint, and willing to take action where it is possible; but a man goes to the paymaster and he has absolutely nothing to go by. The paymaster has not the last pay certificate, and no account book, and of course the paymaster has nothing to go by, and what can he do in this case? His hands are tied as far as helping the needy soldier at the moment.

The Committee adjourned until 2.30 p.m.

Q. Even supposing that what you say is true that you have not been able to account for 915 books out of 965, does that prove that the books were taken from the [Dr. J. C. Evans]

At 2.15 the Committee resumed.

The examination of Dr. J. G. EVANS was resumed.

By the Chairman:

Q. Have you anything further to say?—A. I find in the city of Kingston that one great difficulty in connection with the administration of the affairs of the convalescent home is due to a conflict of jurisdiction between the Military Hospitals Commission and the C. A. M. C.

Q. That was thoroughly gone into everywhere?—A. I have one or two cases that should have the attention of this Committee.

By Hon. Mr. Murphy:

Q. What are they, briefly?—A. The first difficulty we had was in getting a definition of a convalescent home, and when the Judge-Advocate-General was in Kingston some months ago I put the question to him, and he defined a convalescent home as an hospital. In England they are called auxiliary hospitals. It was necessary because we were having trouble, and a great many of these complaints were interfering with recruiting, I am satisfied.

Q. What is the bearing of it? What was the trouble?—A. That men were being punished whilst they were patients in convalescent homes contrary to King's regulations.

Q. And he objected to it?—A. Yes. A convalescent comes home all battered and shattered, and if he gets five days in cells he would object to it, certainly, and if it is an hospital then no punishment can possibly be administered to a patient until the period of his convalescence has ended, when a charge may be laid against him and he may take the consequences, but not during the period of his convalescence, and much of the discipline until a good officer of casualties in Capt. Birdsall was appointed.

By the Chairman:

Q. That has been remedied now has it not?—A. It has been partially remedied, but it is impossible to remedy the thing completely until the jurisdiction of the A. M. C. is entirely removed from the convalescent home.

Q. You mean until the convalescent home becomes entirely under the control of the Hospitals Commission?—A. Absolutely.

Q. Which do you favour?—A. I favour the Hospitals Commission, and the entire organization I represent favours the convalescent home being under the Hospitals Commission.

Q. Absolutely?—A. Yes, absolutely.

Q. And not under the A. M. C.?—A. No.

By Hon. Mr. Murphy:

Q. Would you object to it being under the A.M.C.?—A. Yes.

Q. Or would you object to separating it?—A. It would be impossible to separate it.

Q. Nothing is impossible?—A. With two distinct organizations claiming equal jurisdiction it would be impossible in this case.

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. Supposing we do not go into that. Be good enough to say why you favour the Military Hospitals Commission?—A. For the reason that the men have received every sympathy and consideration from the Military Hospitals Commission and its members, but unfortunately this is not true of the A. M. C.

Q. That is the reason?—A. That is the reason. There is a case on record in Kingston of a member of the 21st Battalion, who, because he committed the frightful crime of going to bed in his underwear, being unable to take them off because of his sick condition, was threatened and abused by the Deputy A. D. M. S., Captain Richardson, who went to his bedside between 12 and one o'clock and compelled him to get out of bed and threatened to assault him saying the most brutal things to him because he committed such a crime.

[Dr. J. G. Evans.]

[Dr. J. G. Evans.]

By Mr. Ross (Middlesex):

Q. That was not the fault of the system. That was the fault of the man?—A. Yes, the wrong man and wrong system.

Q. It was the fault of the man administering discipline there. It was not the fault of the Army Medical Corps?—A. Yes, because this Army Medical Officer claimed control of all patients.

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. The Military Hospitals Commission would claim control in the same way. Somebody must have control?—A. The O. C. of Casualties should have entire control.

By the Chairman:

Q. That is the fault of the individual rather than of the system?—A. Not altogether.

Q. If you had the right individual you would have none of that?—A. We have had none of that since Captain Birdsall took charge.

By Hon. Mr. Daniel:

Q. Was it supposed in that particular case that Captain Richardson had been dining out?—A. I could not tell you where he dines.

By Hon. Mr. Murphy:

Q. You do not happen to know the habits of the Senate?—A. No, sir, nor that of this particular officer.

By the Chairman:

Q. Proceed?—A. The next was complaints in connection with the Medical Board on Pensions and continuity with the Pensions Board is absolutely impossible.

Q. You heard the other evidence about that?—A. Yes, and in my opinion it is absolutely impossible under the present system because there must necessarily be changes in connection with the composition of the A.M.C. The A.D.M.S. may have three members of the board one week who cannot possibly be members a week later. It is perhaps necessary for him to send the men overseas or off on other duties.

Q. You think each district should have a permanent pension board composed of the same men continually?—A. Yes, and men of maturer years, not the student just out of college, and where it is possible that this board should be composed of officers who have served overseas, men of sympathy, as well as men of experience.

Q. Then what is the next?—A. Then, as to the employment of soldiers in Kingston, we have had no difficulty. We have been very fortunate. We have a very energetic, sympathetic member, W. F. Nickle, M.P., in the city of Kingston and for Frontenac county, Dr. J. W. Edwards, who have at all times done everything they possibly could to obtain employment for returned soldiers, and this is true of the general officer commanding, Brig. Gen. Hemming; wherever there is an opening preference is given to the returned soldier.

Q. You have a branch of the Soldiers Aid Association?—A. Recently organized, but unfortunately it has no returned soldiers in its composition.

Q. It is composed of men who are in touch with the industrial life of the community I suppose?—A. Yes, but I do not find these men very much inclined themselves to employ the returned soldiers. The standard of efficiency is such that they want the men who can do the biggest day's work, and that is not the returned soldier, but in all government positions there has been no difficulty whatever in placing the men. However there are some openings along this line for returned men. For instance in all Casualty companies the officers should be made up of returned soldiers. That is not true today but it should be so, and it is possible to make up the Casualty companies of returned officers.

[Dr. J. G. Evans.]

Q. You mean insurance companies?—A. No, I mean "Casualties companies": it is the proper designation, we have been calling them Casualty companies. For instance the officers commanding the convalescent homes is the officer in charge of the casualties. The paymaster of convalescents is the paymaster of casualties. He is designated as the paymaster of casualties.

Q. But the men who have to deal with returned soldiers should be returned soldiers?—A. Yes, and the staff in all convalescent homes should be returned soldiers.

Q. Do you not see a danger is this: that all that work is temporary, and the returned soldier wants to get in a permanent job. If you place your man in a temporary job and the war comes to an end, he is out of a job?—A. It is the temporary job he requires in many cases. He is not fit for a permanent job.

By Hon. Mr. Murphy:

Q. You want to cover the transition period?—A. Yes.

By the Chairman:

Q. You are postponing the time when ten men will be employed where one is employed now?—A. You cannot expect convalescents to be satisfied under the thumb of a person who could go overseas, is fit to go but does not do so. This is the cause of much trouble and discontent.

Q. Are you a returned soldier?—A. No, I am an ex-Imperial soldier. Then they might be employed in special companies, the command of special service companies, and all officers engaged in special service companies should be made up of returned men.

Q. There again you have the same criticism, that you are providing temporary employment, and whenever the special service company is disbanded, as it undoubtedly will be, you have to find other jobs for all the men?—A. But we have hundreds of men who are unable to do anything else, and here you are up against the same proposition. If a person is in command of a special service company, and this person is fit to go overseas but has not been over, how can you hope to get the men who have returned from overseas to be satisfied when they see that man occupying such a position.

By Hon. Mr. Marçil:

Q. You find the returned soldier does not take to civil life?—A. I find his appetite has been so whetted that his desire for civil life seems to disappear.

Q. You think he is more fitted for military than civil life?—A. In most cases they would be.

By Hon. Mr. Daniel:

Q. Do you think returned soldiers would be satisfied to become members of a special service company?—A. Not as soldiers, but if many of these men were promoted and made non-commissioned officers and some promoted and given commissions, then they would be satisfied, but they would not be satisfied to go to the special service company as a private soldier, on $1.10 a day.

Q. But it is only as commissioned and non-commissioned officers that you are referring to now?—A. Yes, that preference should be given to the returned soldier in this particular.

By Hon. Mr. Murphy:

Q. What next?—A. In civil employment I must say that as far as Kingston is concerned we have not found a great deal of willingness on the part of corporations or individuals to employ returned soldiers for the reasons I have given you. Vocational training has not been started yet in the city of Kingston, but they are making preparations for it at the Elmhurst and Mowat Homes. About the only thing that has been offered the returned soldier so far in the way of education, has been typewriting, and the average soldier thinks that is an occupation for a girl rather than for a soldier, and does not take to it kindly.

[Dr. J. G. Evans.]

Q. What is your suggestion?—A. I think many of them would take to telegraphy if a school of telegraphy were started. The expense would be very small. Again many of them have an inclination to want to drive motor cars. Some of them have considerable mechanical ability.

By the Chairman:

Q. And is there any training provided for that?—A. No, not for that, and if these men were trained to run motor cars, the mechanical transport in connection with the district staff and work could be entirely operated by these men.

Q. That is being done in many places?—A. Yes, and this would release the eligible men and make it possible to send them overseas.

By Brigadier-General Mason:

Q. Most of the motor car drivers in England are ex-soldiers, or were before the war?—A. Yes. We found the readiest concern in the whole city to employ the returned soldiers to be the street railway company, Mr. H. C. Nickle, brother of the member has been always willing even when he had no place for them, to take returned soldiers where possible and train them for running street cars. The men are objecting very strongly to being compelled to give up altogether the wearing of their uniform. An order in council was issued sometime ago prohibiting a returned soldier from wearing at any time or under any circumstances the uniform of a soldier. We find this a hardship. For instance in the last five or six weeks we have had possibly four or five funerals in connection with our association. Members of the association would like to turn out to a military funeral wearing their uniform. We are approaching our second anniversary celebration of the Battle of Langemarck, and our returned soldiers would like to sit around the banquet table wearing the uniform they wore on that memorable occasion. At present they are not permitted to do that.

By the Chairman:

Q. I suppose that if power was given to the officer Commanding the District to permit the men in special cases to wear the uniform, that would be satisfactory?—A. Yes, that would be satisfactory.

Q. Now, what else?—A. I find there is a great deal of dissatisfaction in regard to the difference between the pension paid to a private soldier of $480 and that paid to, say, a captain, which is $1,000.

Hon. Mr. MURPHY: We have already had that subject before us.

The WITNESS: The men consider that the difference in payment is too great.

I would like to bring to the attention of the Committee a case which came to my notice a few days ago. It is in connection with a returned soldier of the 67th Battalion, Private Reis. He was permitted to leave the Elmhurst Convalescent Home on his first leave to go to his home in the northern part of Hastings County. He was able to travel on the railroad as far as Maynooth, and then he had to drive seven miles to his home at Peever Settlement. One side of his face and head was badly battered with shrapnel—his whole side, in fact was affected. At Maynooth he failed to find anybody, even though he was able to pay the price, who would take him to his home, notwithstanding the fact that there are two livery stables there and nearly everybody owns a horse. This poor fellow was unable to find anybody to drive him from Maynooth to his home in Peever Settlement, although the distance was only 7 miles.

By Hon. Mr. Macil:

Q. Why did they object?—A. I do not know what the objection was. At any rate, the man is dead.

By Hon. Mr. Murphy:

Q. What happened?—A. He contracted a heavy cold which developed into pneumonia, and on the 4th day of March he died. The "Bancroft Times", published [Dr. J. G. Evans.]

within 16 miles of the dead soldier's home, calls attention to it by saying that "circumstances attending the death of Private Charles H. Reis appear to us to call for investigation. If this is the sort of treatment that men who have risked their lives and suffered untold privations are going to receive, it will not help recruiting much in this section."

By the Chairman:

Q. Who is to blame for it?—A. I do not know who is to blame for it, but somebody is. That took place in Ontario, not in Quebec.

By Hon. Mr. Marcil:

Q. In what constituency did that take place?—A. In North Hastings.

By the Chairman:

Q. To whom does any blame attach?—A. I am not attaching any blame to anyone, Sir Herbert, I am merely calling the attention of your Committee to it.

Q. How can a case of that kind be possibly prevented by the Government or anyone else?—A. First, by investigation, which was started in Kingston before I came away by Colonel Ogilvie, A.A.G. For instance, if there was a recruiting station, or any part of a military unit, located there, something might have been done for this man.

By Hon. Mr. Daniel:

Q. Did the man apply for any assistance to get to his home after he left the terminus of the railway?—A. Yes, the paper says he made efforts to get somebody to take him home.

By the Chairman:

Q. It would look as though the people of that community were heartless, but I do not see how you can blame the Government?—A. I am not blaming the Government for this.

Q. What could be done to prevent it?—A. I think perhaps a recurrence of such cases might be prevented by giving publicity to the circumstances and bringing them to the attention of this Committee so that the press would get hold of the facts and give them wide publicity.

By Hon. Mr. Daniel:

Q. We are not in possession of the facts, and therefore cannot form any conclusion. I have no doubt that the man would have been able to hire a conveyance had he thought to do so?—A. The newspapers are usually reliable. However, in this case the man is dead.

By Hon. Mr. Murphy:

Q. Have you anything else to bring to the notice of the committee?—A. I would like to say, before I leave, that we have had the co-operation of every officer in our district from Brig.-Gen. Hemming down, in placing soldiers and doing anything they possibly could for them.

The CHAIRMAN: That is a very good thing. We thank you very much for your evidence.

Witness discharged.

Hon. GEORGE A. SIMARD: called, sworn and examined.

By the Chairman:

Q. You are, if I understand rightly, President of the Soldiers' Employment Commission of the Province of Quebec?—A. Yes.

Q. How was that organization created?—A. By order of the Lieutenant Governor in Council dated November 10, 1915.

Q. Will you be good enough to place a copy of that Order in Council with our Secretary for insertion in our minutes?—A. Yes.

(Copy of memorandum filed.)

The WITNESS: I may say that this Order in Council was passed on a memorandum adopted at the Inter-Provincial Conference held at Ottawa in October, 1915, under the presidency of the Prime Minister of Canada, as you are all aware. The Order in Council was passed in accordance with this understanding. I will also fyle a copy of that memorandum.

(Copy of memorandum filed).

By the Chairman:

Q. Briefly, what does your organization attempt to do?—A. At the first meeting, which was held on the 26th November, 1915, it was resolved that the duties of the Commission should be: Firstly, to assume the responsibility of endeavouring to find employment for discharged soldiers, who, upon their return to Canada, are physically and otherwise fit to assume such employment. It was further resolved that the Commission should also furnish to the Commission in Ottawa a detailed statement of the institutions and facilities within its borders which will be available for the purpose of taking care of and providing for the different classes of incapacitated soldiers. That resolution was adopted after discussing the Order in Council. The Commission came to the conclusion that it was all that we were asked to do and that we should live up to that agreement between the two Governments.

Q. So that your duties consist in finding employment for returned soldiers from the 4th Military District, or do you take in the entire Province of Quebec?—A. The entire Province.

Q. And have you branches in various parts of the Province?—A. We have Commissioners in Three Rivers, Sherbrooke and Quebec, and are authorized by the Government to extend—

Q. As the needs require?—A. As the needs require.

Q. I understand your Commission only looks after the employment of the returned soldiers and not their general welfare?—A. That is all we have been asked to do. We have tried to live up to that and not go beyond it.

Q. How many men, to your knowledge, have you found employment for?—A. On March 10, 1917, inclusive, the names of 2,707 men who had returned; applications for work, 1,645; number of men placed, 1,640; number for whom suitable work has not yet been found 5.

The CHAIRMAN: That is a good showing.

By Hon. Mr. Marcil:

Q. What is the nature of the employment of most of these men?—A. As we all know, there is a good demand for all kinds of work today.

Q. Manual labour, I suppose?—A. Manual labour and a great many are needed in munition work of various kinds.

By the Chairman:

Q. Have you any figures which show in classification the employment which you have been able to get for these returned soldiers?—A. It was never thought necessary [Honourable George A. Simard.]

that we should do that, because we fail to see how we can arrive at the real fact. Because a soldier for whom we find employment today, say in a store, may leave it to-morrow and go into some other kind of work.

Q. When you say you have placed 1,640 men out of 1,645, do you mean that the men are satisfied with their occupations?—A. I do not believe they are satisfied, because they change their employment so often.

Q. You get a good many jobs for them and they leave?—A. Yes.

Q. Do they come to you a second time?—A. Several times. For your information I will give you one or two instances. These were taken at random, I did not select the best examples.

By Hon. Mr. Murphy:

Q. They are not specially selected instances?—A. No. We will call this one Private No. 1. (Reads):

No. 1.—Enlisted at Montreal May 6, 1915, returned by Metagama Dec. 26, 1915, discharged on account of myalgia and defective vision. His Form No. 2 says he would like to secure a position in the Post Office. Occupation previous to enlisting was that of a chaffeur. Character "good."

March 17, 1916.—Sent to Bell Telephone Co., who had asked this office for some men. Returned to this office saying what they wanted was young boys, and that pay was only $1.25 a day.

March 22, 1916.—Sent to Bank of Ottawa, Montreal, for position as elevator man; returned a few days later saying this job had been filled before he reached there. Next day we were advised by the Superintendent that soldier No. 1 had been engaged but had only worked a few hours on the 23rd of March, and had left without notice.

March 25, 1916.—We had a demand from the Dominion Bridge Co. for a man to serve lunches ($50 to $60 a month), and offered same to soldier No. 1; he refused, saying he was starting to work at Post Office on the 27th of March, 1916.

April 4, 1916.—He could have got a job at Clark's, manufacturers, Amherst Street, but said the nature of their work did not suit him. Pay was about $2 a day.

April 13, 1916.—Was given a letter to the Operating Superintendent of "The Cedar Rapids Mfg. Co.," for a position as wheelman at their power house. He returned on the 17th of the same month and reported he could have secured that position but did not want to go to Cedar Rapids.

April 17, 1916.—Was employed at National Bridge Works, Longue Pointe, in munitions, by Major Chipman, but left this job after working for about ten days.

June 6, 1916.—Secured job with "The White Motor Car Co."

October 11, 1916.—Started to work for Thos. Davidson & Co. in the morning, and left about 10 a.m.

October 16, 1916.—Called at this office and was given an open letter with which he presented himself at The Canada Cement Co. Employer complained about this man and discharged him.

October 21, 1916.—Informed by soldier No. 1 that he had passed his examinations for Civil Service.

Employed at Post Office during Christmas season, temporarily, then taken on permanently as mail clerk. Complaints from Postmaster General's Office, Ottawa, and, finally, this man (soldier No. 1) had to send in his resignation.

By Mr. Sutherland:

Q. You have stated that the man was taken into the Post Office in the permanent service on your recommendation?—A. Yes.

Q. How could you recommend a man with such a record for a position of that kind?—A. We may be blamed, sir, for doing that, but we feel that this man should be given every possible chance. We go as far as we can, and we try to impress upon the employer the fact that the nerves of these men are more or less upset, and that with limitation they might succeed in picking themselves up and holding their positions. I wish to call your attention to the fact that the record of the man's character is good and one would judge by his outward appearance that he was certainly fit for work.

Q. The record after the time he came under your control was such that you could not very well give a recommendation for his permanent employment in the Civil Service?—A. It is the opinion of many that we should not do it. Now, after receiving the complaint from Ottawa, from the Postmaster, I sent a letter to Private No. 1, and told him what we had done for him and stating that I was sending a report to the Postmaster General about what we had done for him, that if he was not able to hold that position it was useless for him to come to our office any more. The man on receipt of my letter, came to my office and saw me, and he was by no means pleased that I should write such a letter. I told him there was no more work from us for him, that we were through with him, and he walked out.

By the Chairman:

Q. And did he go to the newspapers the next day?—A. No, I do not know whether he went or not. We have been very careful about the newspapers, several times reporters have called at the office, and I have given instruction to the staff to refer the reporters to me. My reason for doing so is this: there are certain to be soldiers that will be dissatisfied, who are going to reporters, and the reporters might be glad to hear his side of the case, and publish it, sometimes for a sensation, or for some other reason. Now I have asked the reporters to take the soldier's side of the case, but before publishing anything to be good enough to call at the office; I have told them that the office was a provincial Government office and therefore it is the office of everybody, and that they could go through the record of each man who was complaining and if, in their opinion we had failed in our duties I suggested it was their duty to call public attention to the fact. If, on the other hand, the soldier was to blame, it was better to say nothing about it, because it would be a source of dissatisfaction to the employers, and to the public and it would not be productive of good to the soldier.

Q. And you have found that the newspapers treated you very well in that connection?—A. Yes, very well.

By Mr. Sutherland:

Q. What was the nature of your recommendation to the Minister, when you recommended him? Did you give the Minister a history of your connection with him?—A. No, sir. The fact that the man was taken on at our recommendation is explained in this way: During the holidays at Christmas time, we were requested to send several soldiers for temporary employment, and this man was one of them. It is supposed that the Postmaster took that as a recommendation for permanent employment. I have no recollection—I am speaking from memory, of having written an official letter to the postmaster in regard to this man but I do remember very well that the Postmaster stated in his letter, that the man had been taken at our recommendation.

Q. And you knew, at the time you recommended this man for employment, that he was a particularly bad case?—A. The record is here but I do not think it contains anything against his character.

By Brigadier-General Mason:

Q. Was he a temporary man?—A. Yes.

[Honourable George A. Simard.]

By Hon. Mr. McCurdy:

Q. Have you any further experience with him?—A. No I have other cases similar to that.

By the Chairman:

Q. In a case of that, would it not be wise for you to inform the returned soldiers committee that, in respect to this man you have used every possible effort to place him and failed, and that if they want to know the reasons you will be glad to let them see the record. I think they ought to know when you have cases like that. It might prevent them from taking up a case of that kind, and making out that it is a hard case, thus gaining public sympathy, and then finding that the man has had chance after chance and has thrown it over. If the Returned Soldiers' Organization is very anxious to be of real service to the men, I think they should also be informed of men who are not worthy of having their assistance, as an organization?—A. While on that subject of overlapping we would be only too pleased to work in harmony with the Returned Soldiers' Organization. As an illustration, if the Soldiers' Employers Association would work with the Soldiers' Employment Commission—remember, gentlemen, that all information regarding soldiers is sent us by the Military Hospitals Commission as the official organization—if the Returned Soldiers Association would, when a man goes there for employment, come to us, and also the Khaki Club, we would place at their disposal all the information we have, and we would tell them just what we had done for that man, if he had been to our office, and then report back to us if they had employment for him, we would give credit to that organization, or to any other benevolent association who secure employment for returned soldiers, upon our records. I want to emphasize the necessity of all these benevolent societies and organizations reporting to us every time they find employment for any returned soldier and we will at once enter the fact in the folder of that soldier, so that his record may be complete.

Q. Your request to all these other organizations, who are doing friendly work for the returned soldiers, is that they report to you regarding each soldier, so that there will not be overlapping?—A. Certainly.

Q. You ask the Khaki Club, the Returned Soldiers' Association and the Soldiers' Wives League, and similar organizations to report to you?—A. Every time they place a soldier.

Q. And you can then turn up to the folder, and give them such information as it is necessary for them to have in reference to that particular man?—A. Certainly, and we want them to understand that our Committee is willing to give each organization full credit for everything they do. The object of obtaining that information is that when the Military Hospitals Commission asks for a report on any returned soldier, we will be able to turn to a complete report for every man.

By Hon. Mr. Marcil:

Q. In connection with the case you have just explained, do you attribute the actions of that man to any thing resulting from his service at the front, or was he a shiftless character, or suffering from nervous disease which rendered him incapable of performing his work?—A. He was discharged on account of myalgia, and defective vision. The myalgia was contracted after enlistment, if it was a case of being diseased before enlistment it would be so stated in his discharge paper, because we have a case here, where the discharge papers stated that the man had been an epileptic since childhood, and that the disability since enlistment was none as compared with his capacity on enlistment.

Q. Did this man ever go overseas?—A. Yes, he is an overseas man, and his report is that his case was not aggravated at all by reason of his service overseas.

By Hon. Mr. Daniel:

Q. A man could not have that disease for years without being mentally defective.—A. That is a different case, No. 1 was not an epileptic.

By Hon. Mr. Marcil:

Q. Is it not reasonable to suppose that exposure overseas would more or less aggravate the disease in that case?—A. I can only speak of what is on the forms here.

Q. Soldiers in perfect health are not returned from the front.—A. No, Sir.

By the Chairman:

Q. Do you find that the people of the city and district are willing to take returned soldiers?—A. Yes.

Q. Have you found that any of the manufacturers, after having had one or two unfortunate experiences with returned soldiers are unwilling to repeat them?—A. Some of them say nothing, and some of them pronounce themselves on the subject.

Q. Are they willing to try again, if in the first instance, the man is a failure?—A. Yes, they are.

Q. You find a good feeling on the part of the public?—A. Yes, I am glad to say that is the case.

Q. The public realize that some of these men have suffered from hardships and they are willing to make more allowances for them than they would if they were not sick men?—A. We find in many cases, when asking the foreman under whom they have been working about them, that the reply is: "Oh yes, they did this and that, but they are not themselves."

Q. Where are the places in which you find positions for the greatest number of men here?—A. Speaking from memory I think it is the Dominion Bridge Co.

Hon. Mr. MARCIL: That is owing to the high wages paid.

By the Chairman:

Q. There are about 200 returned soldiers at the Dominion Bridge Co., I understand?—A. There must be as many as that, at least, unless they have left. Of course, we place a soldier with the Dominion Bridge Co., and he may work there for two or three nights or days, till he could get something better suited to his requirements, and when he leaves the Bridge Company he does not report to us; that man is re-absorbed in civil life, and we do not hear anything more about him.

By Hon. Mr. Marcil:

Q. What about agriculture, do they express a willingness to go to farm work?—A. I have figures here now. Although the Commission were not requested to do anything in regard to this land proposal, I took it upon myself to have slips printed, such as I have here, and requested the staff, as much as possible, to put the following questions to the discharged soldiers. The reason for doing that was that so much has been said about the land question for returned soldiers and so much will be said about it, that this information would enable me to form an opinion when the time arrived. These are the questions and the results:

1. Should the Governments decide to give farms to returned soldiers after the war, would you take one and work it?

Yes, 173. No, 173. Would not answer, 50.

2. Have you enough capital for the supply of requirements, implements, etc., or do you think you will have by that time?

Yes, 31. No, 142.

3. If you have not sufficient capital, would you accept financial assistance from the Government for the provision of working capital, bearing interest at a fair rate?

Yes, 158. No, 15.

4. Would a ready-made farm suit you better? By this we mean a farm all ready to cultivate with house, stable, etc.?

Yes, 110. No, 12. No answer, 51.

[Honourable George A. Simard.]

5. What part of Canada would you prefer?

Western, 61; Quebec, 36; no preference, 15; no answer, 61.

7. Have you had any experience in farming? If so, what kind of farming?

Yes, 122. No, 200. No answer, 74.

9. Married or single?

Married 177. Single, 169.

Then there is the following note:

So far, we have placed two soldiers on farms, privates D—— and R——. Private D—— only worked about two days and left. We have several good openings in the Eastern Townships for men who work on farms, $20 to $30 a month and board.

When we offer these positions to men who have had experience on farms the complaint is that the pay is not enough, they would rather work in the city and get more money.

By Hon. Mr. Marcil:

Q. The cost of living has increased in the city, has it not?—A. Yes, it has.

Q. Judging from the experience that these men have had overseas, do you not think it would be to their advantage to take up outdoor life in preference to city life with all its drawback?—A. That is a general opinion, mostly everybody agrees with that. The question is whether we can make the men go. Could a plan be arrived at by the different Governments to induce them to go?

By the Chairman:

Q. Your idea, when speaking of the Governments, is the Provincial Governments? You expect the Provincial Governments to work out the land scheme?—A. I am not prepared to answer that, sir, but you will see that in this memorandum this question was brought up in Ottawa when the Provincial Conference was held.

Q. That is the organization meeting held in Ottawa on November 15, last?—A. At that time it was stated that this problem is so complicated that it would necessitate another meeting. May I read the paragraph in the list of suggestions entitled "Future Problems." (Reads):

In the above suggestions the conference has attempted to deal only with those problems which are pressing for the moment. There are, however, two other problems which demand attention. The first of them relates to the advisability of devising a practical method of placing returned soldiers on the land, under such conditions as will enable them to provide comfortably for themselves and families. This problem is so complex in its character that it would seem advisable to make it the subject of a special inquiry to be instituted by the Federal authorities, etc.

The other problem relates to the finding of employment for the large number of soldiers who will come after the war. You see that in regard to this problem of land settlement, the desire expressed at the Provincial Conference was that the Federal authority would take up the whole question.

By Hon. Mr. Marcil:

Q. The scheme would be general for all Canada. In the Western Provinces the land is under the jurisdiction of the Dominion Government, and it stands to reason that the Dominion would have to adopt a general scheme?—A. That may be what they had in mind.

Q. You have mentioned five cases that you were unable to find employment for. Have you any explanation to give about them?—A. By those, we mean that the men will come to us today—speaking of the day on which the report was made, March 10th—we offer him a position here and there, none of which suit him, and he is in no immediate hurry and will come back. He goes down on our list as a man not placed, for whom satisfactory work has not been found.

Q. He may find employment himself in the meantime?—A. Oh, yes. We identify them with an open letter stating that their character is good, that they are honourably discharged, etc.

By Hon. Mr. Murphy:

Q. You co-operate with the Military Hospitals Commission?—A. Yes. We tell the men to take the evening newspapers, and see if there is any position advertised that might suit them, and they go there with the letter, which helps them a great deal. It opens the door to them, so to speak.

By Mr. Sutherland:

Q. Are the Crown lands in the Province of Quebec under Federal or Provincial jurisdiction?—A. Under Provincial jurisdiction.

Q. Have the provincial authorities offered any special inducements to returned soldiers in the way of colonization?—A. I do not think so.

Q. They have offered inducements?—A. I do not think they have offered them yet.

By Hon. Mr. Marcil:

Q. Is there not an offer of land in the region of the Transcontinental which would be available to soldiers as well as to civilians?—A. Yes, sir, under the ordinary law of the province.

By Mr. Sutherland:

Q. But no special inducements are offered specifically to soldiers?—A. No.

By the Chairman:

Q. There is no special Act for them?—A. No.

Mr. BENNETT: A conference has been held at which a representative of the Province of Quebec was present, and the matter is under consideration.

By Mr. Sutherland:

Q. It would appear that a very large proportion of men in the Province of Quebec has signified their preference for the land rather than for the city. That is something different from what we have found in other provinces so far?—A. That may be accounted for by the fact that Quebec province is more agricultural than industrial.

Q. I would judge from the figures you have given to the Committee that nearly one-half of the men who have returned to the Province of Quebec have signified a preference for the land.

The CHAIRMAN: No, only one-half of the men who replied to the questions.

The WITNESS: Exactly.

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. Do you find much overlapping in No. 4 District of the various societies with your own?—A. I can only speak, sir, of the Commission with which I am concerned. I do not care to express any opinion on any other branch of the Military Hospitals Commission, or any other organization.

Q. I am not asking you that. But do you find much overlapping in the way of endeavouring to get employment as between your organization and the others?—A. Yes, I have already stated that I would be very glad—and I am here expressing the opinion of the Commission—if all these benevolent institutions would report to us.

Mr. PARDEE: That is what I am trying to get at. This overlapping is coming from the Khaki League.

[Honourable George A. Simard.]

By the Chairman:

Q. That is, in an unauthorized way they are endeavouring to do the work that you are doing as a Government institution?—A. They have an employment bureau.

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. Do you find much overlapping between them and your Commission in the way of getting employment, each working with the same men for the same end?—A. It has happened in many cases. I am not able to tell you how many, sir, but on occasion we have called their attention to it.

Q. To the fact that you are both after the same thing?—A. Yes.

Q. How many of these societies are there in Montreal?—A. I could not say. There is the Khaki League and the Returned Soldiers' Association, which has only started lately, I understand. There is the Provincial Employment Bureau, which is the regular organization for civilians. They report to us. We have blank forms which we send to the Provincial Bureaus, because those who have been in the habit of using these bureaus before enlisting would naturally go back to them. We ask these bureaus to fill out a blank form which we send them, which they do very ably. We give them credit for the men placed. We do the same thing with the Khaki Club, also with the large concerns, such as the Imperial Munitions who employ a lot of returned soldiers. In each case the report is placed in the folder of the soldier so placed.

By Hon. Mr. McCurdy:

Q. Are these forms returned direct by the employers?—A. They were, until recently. Someone at the Khaki Club League went to the Imperial Munition office and asked for them.

By Hon. Mr. Murphy:

Q. How do you mean—asked that they be returned to them instead of to your Commission?—A. Yes.

Q. Was there a request of that kind complied with by the manufacturers?—A. Yes. When this occurred, I sent the Secretary to make enquiry as to what was the necessity for it. We failed to see the necessity of having that done, that the soldiers placed by our recommendation from our office should have been returned to us directly instead of by another institution. The forms might get lost and mixed, and we would know nothing about them. The man in charge at the Imperial Munitions told him that it was at the request of the Returned Soldiers' Association, but I must say that the Returned Soldiers' Association, I think it was Trooper Brown, came to the office and delivered a bunch of their applications.

By Hon. Mr. McCurdy:

Q. Reports?—A. Reports, in which he had marked those placed by the Khaki Club, and the others returned as made up by the Imperial Munitions.

By the Chairman:

Q. You have no objections to having the Khaki Club place men, but they should report to you, so that you will not be looking for a job for men who have been placed?—A. We are ready to give the Khaki Club credit for the good work they are doing, and we appreciate it. We do not care if they place every returned soldier, but as we are the official body accepting the responsibility of endeavouring to find positions for returned soldiers, and as we will be called upon to make a report to the Military Hospitals Commission of the number of men placed in the Province, we think the reports should be made to us.

By Hon. Mr. McCurdy:

Q. Have you made an error in saying that Trooper Brown is connected with the Khaki League? Is he an employee of the Khaki League?—A. My understanding is that those two institutions are in the same building, working together, and that the Khaki League has organized lately a department of employment of which Trooper Brown will be in charge. That information is contained, I believe, in a letter.

By the Chairman:

Q. Trooper Brown is Secretary of the Returned Soldiers Association. Your contention, I understand, Mr. Simard, is that the Returned Soldiers Association and the Khaki Club and all other organizations trying to find jobs for returned soldiers should report to you so that your Commission would be the clearing house for them all?—A. That is it.

By Hon. Mr. Marcil:

Q. Among those applying for employment do you find that a large number come from the country districts, or are they largely from the cities?—A. From the city, sir. We seldom hear of those that have enlisted from the municipalities or rural districts, farmers' sons or village boys. We have had but very few cases applying to us for employment, as they go back home to their fathers in the country.

By Mr. Sutherland:

Q. Following up Mr. Marcil's question you heard Mr. Evans' evidence here with regard to a certain party who went out into the outlying districts from Kingston. Do you find that you have facilities for placing and looking after men in the outlying districts, or do you lose track of them once they go out into the outlying districts? I think the evidence before the Committee is that the soldier is pretty well looked after when he comes to the large centres, but so far as I gather he goes out into the rural districts or the smaller towns and villages and the machinery is not as efficient as it is in the large centres. Do you find that to be the case in your province?—A. We have had no complaints as to that. We are prepared to open up bureaux in any district wherever the necessity will be shown. As I said we might have had two or three complaints—I do not believe more—of soldiers who were out of work, who wanted work in a mill close to their place. We asked these soldiers to go and see the mayor of the municipality and have him take up the case with us, and they immediately take up the case with their mayor and we have found them very willing, and we think this, so far as least, is the best way, because in all these rural towns the mayor takes pride in a soldier who has gone to the front, and he will see he is taken care of, he knows him, knows the father and mother and the whole family.

By the Chairman:

Q. All through the Province of Quebec there are municipalities, and every municipality has its mayor. There are some 12 or 13 hundred municipalities. When you want to place a man in the country you communicate with the mayor do you not?—A. First we must have the demand from the soldier.

Q. Supposing a soldier says he wants to go to Marieville to find a place there, it is through the mayors you work?—A. Yes, if a soldier says "I want to work at a certain mill in Marieville" we will take it up that way.

Q. Through the mayor?—A. Yes, and we get answers.

By Mr. Sutherland:

Q. How many branches of your association have you in the province?—A. Three outside of Montreal.

By Hon. Mr. Murphy:

Q. Where are they?—A. Three Rivers, Sherbrooke and Quebec.

By the Chairman:

Q. Is there anything else you want to tell us?—A. No.

Q. Can Mr. Pye add anything to what you have given us?—A. No.

[Honourable George A. Simard.]

Q. Is there any use calling?—A. I do not think so. I keep in very close touch with all the work. I am there and my personal office is close to the commission office.

Q. You are giving a great share of your time to this work?—A. A great deal of it. I am there every morning and afternoon and I do a great deal of work by telephone.

Q. You have given us a very useful contribution?—A. I have been very glad to do it.

Witness discharged.

So as to supplement my evidence before this special committee on returned soldiers, I beg leave to propound the following views:—

1. Taking for granted that during the coming year England, France and Italy will have to import from foreign countries two-thirds of the wheat needed for the feeding of their inhabitants, I would advise the re-enlistment of the soldiers already discharged and medically fit and the keeping under the colours of those who will come back when the war is over. All of them would be put to work upon the Crown lands in the Western Provinces and would receive the same pay and the same allowances as heretofore. As occasion arises, they would gradually re-enter civil life and devote themselves to other callings. There would be no compulsion. Those asking their discharge would have it. Then, they could no more complain or grumble. Naturally, preference should be given to single men. Soldiers lately returned would have a limited furlough to visit their families and attend to urgent business. Of course, the first result of such an experiment would be the growing of wheat. But in my opinion, there might be another result of far more import. Having been paid for breaking the land, the soldier might take a liking to farming and settle upon a homestead which would be so much the better for himself and for the country. Thus could be established in several Western districts settlements of returned soldiers. The Government would, as a matter of course, provide all the requisites, horses, tools and implements of husbandry. These could be re-sold either to the settlements or to individuals. Should the soldiers refuse to re-enlist or to serve any more, they would have only themselves to blame if they found no other employment since the Government would have made a generous offer to them.

2. As some may truly say that among the returned soldiers a great many would be unwilling to devote themselves to agricultural pursuits, these could be set to work under the above mentioned system on a transcontinental highway. The opening of such a thoroughfare is the common topic. Everybody, it seems, is for it. When our soldiers come back and the four thousand munition workers are thrown out of employment, time will be ripe for the carrying on of such an undertaking. Our hardy sons, our patient toilers would benefit by it and a difficult problem would be solved. Moreover, the interned aliens should be liberated in such a manner that they would not unduly compete with our own unemployed, that they would not encumber an already congested labour market.

In conclusion, let me say that there are undoubtedly many other ways to provide employment for our returned soldiers, especially during the transitory period, when the former munition workers and the discharged soldiers will all be clamouring for work. But the necessity of an early decision is what I am driving at. The problem should be promptly solved in order to avoid considerable unpleasantness later on. The more so should it be decided to open a transcontinental highway. The proper authorities of the different Provinces should meet at once and agree upon a survey, because the location of the road would require a certain time. Time flies swiftly and not a moment should be lost.

Dr. F. H. SEXTON called, sworn and examined.

By the Chairman:

Q. You are vocational officer of the Military Hospitals Commission?—A. Yes.

Q. What is the district over which you operate?—A. Quebec and the Maritime Provinces.

Q. What previous training in vocational work have you had?—A. After I graduated in Mining Engineering from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, I taught there for a year in metallurgy. Since then I have taught for three years at Dalhousie University in mining engineering and metallurgy, and since that time I have been for 12 years Principal of the Nova Scotia Technical College and Director of Technical Education for Nova Scotia.

Q. At the time of accepting your present position you were Director of Technical Education for Nova Scotia?—A. Yes, and still carry on the work of that office.

Q. You may describe for the Committee, perhaps, taking it province by province, the work that is being carried on in the way of giving Technical Education and vocational training to returned soldiers: take Nova Scotia first, then Prince Edward Island and then New Brunswick?—A. If you do not mind I would like to take it in chronological order. On the 3rd April, 1916, we started simultaneously at the Ross Military Hospital in Sydney and the convalescent homes in Montreal, Vocational Training for the returned soldiers, in a very simple way.

Q. Just define in a word what you mean by Vocational Training?—A. This Vocational Training, is supplementary to the medical treatment in a convalescent home, and was introduced into the homes principally for therapeutic value.

Q. Vocational Training and Educational are two different things?—A. Quite different.

Q. Tell us about the Vocational Training?—A. Vocational Training was provided in the homes for its therapeutic value. It is to cure a man more quickly by keeping him busy and also for its disciplinary value; making a man more amenable to the rules of the home, because he is not sitting around idling away his time. We started simply by offering instruction in general subjects: arithmetic, English, mechanical and architectural drawing and woodwork. Since that time the subjects have been added to, and the work extended and intensified. This work has to be supplementary, as I say to the medical treatment, and if a man is called for a medical board, a medical parade or for massage treatment, he loses his time in the classes. The work which the men do may be suspended at any time by the medical officer, if it is thought the effort the man is making in the class is not beneficial to him physically or mentally. That has happened in some cases, especially with tuberculosis cases.

Q. As between the two, the medical exigencies govern?—A. They are absolutely supreme. The idea is to make this work just as practical as possible, otherwise it would not interest the man and would be of no value to him in increasing his wage-earning power when he gets out of the home. Sometimes a man is only in classes for a month, sometimes three, or five months, usually not longer than that, and anybody who has had any experience with educational work knows how little you can give a man in that short time, when he occupies only four or five hours a day. Some of the results however that have been obtained are remarkable. We have placed many men on their feet and given them the idea that they do not know enough to succeed in life. We stimulate their ambition and make them conscious of their power to go out and take up civilian occupations again and have really directed them into the proper channel of industrial activity by our Technical Training.

Q. Do you find a man who has had a long convalescence is timid in re-engaging in civil life and requires to get his confidence back again?—A. I find that condition in most of the returned men. They have had a long period of convalescence in Great Britain and France and when they come back here they are mentally sluggish. They do not react to ordinary stimuli as readily as they did before they went away, and they have to be interviewed again and again and encouraged and helped along in the work until their interest is aroused. Of the men who come back, perhaps one-third are ambitious and are easily persuaded to enter the classes. Another third comes with some encouragement, and the last third are very difficult to secure in any of the instruction we can offer.

We have extended the vocational training from the time we started. It was introduced into the Parks Convalescent Home at St. John, N.B., April 24, 1916, at Savard Convalescent Home, Quebec, June 13, at Laurentide Inn for tuberculous patients, at Ste. Agathe des Monts, Quebec, in the middle of November, 1916, at the Lake Edward Sanatorium, Lake Edward, Quebec, on the 15th January, and at the Dalton Sanatorium, Prince Edward Island on the 1st March, so that there has been a continuous steady progress. The procedure is this: When a man comes into a convalescent home from abroad, he is allowed two weeks after he reports to the home for treatment in which he has physical exercise for four half-hour periods each day. He does not have to take up any classes at first, and very often does not take up any instruction until that two weeks' period is finished, and simply browses around in the classes. He sees the other men working in various ways, and he has a chance to observe the kinds of work offered and decide what he wants to take up. The Military Hospitals Commission promulgated an order saying it was compulsory for men to take classes in the Homes during their period of convalescence during a certain number of hours each day unless excused by the medical officer, but the vocational department has never thought it worth while to force that issue to its ultimate limit, because a disinterested student, or one who is dragged into the class by force is not very satisfactory himself and tends to depress the spirit of the class. There is some difficulty in the convalescent homes in providing a rounded-out training for the men, because they come there for varying periods. One class may have in it a man who is learning to read and a college student who may be studying Latin composition for a high class of Civil Service. As I say, they are being discharged out of the class all the time, and new men are coming in, so that the instruction is on an absolutely new basis. You cannot have recitations as you do in public schools, one reason for that being that the men themselves do not want to get up before their fellow soldiers and perhaps exhibit some ignorance they are not supposed to have. At the present time we teach these subjects. French, English, arithmetic, preparation for the Civil Service examination, mechanical and architectural drawing, stenography, typewriting, bookkeeping, motor mechanics, agriculture, machine tool operating, shoe repairing, woodworking and novelty work.

Q. You do not teach all these occupations at each place?—A. No, a small Home will only justify the expense of two or three teachers.

Q. Take the Grey Nunnery, for example, how many of these occupations will be taught there?—A. All except agriculture.

Q. All at the one place?—A. Yes.

Q. When you move into Loyola College will you have accommodation there for your classes?—A. As far as we know we will have accommodation for the convalescents in Montreal at present and for perhaps three months more. There is ample accommodation, so far as we know now.

Q. I understand you are giving a certain number of men a training at the present time in the Technical School and in McGill University?—A. That is right.

Q. How are those experiments working out?—A. We have only been at McGill for a week and at the Technical School less than that, so that we are barely on our feet there yet, but the results are highly encouraging.

Q. How many men are taking in these two classes?—A. I will have to refer that question to Lieutenant McCullum, who has the daily figures.

[Dr. F. H. Sexton.]

Lieutenant McCULLUM: There are 75 in attendance to-day.

The CHAIRMAN: At the Technical School?

Lieutenant McCULLUM: And at McGill University.

The CHAIRMAN: Do these men walk from the Convalescent Home over to the classes?

Lieutenant McCULLUM: All the men who are able to do so. Those who are unable to walk go in a bus.

The CHAIRMAN: How many hours a day are devoted to these classes in the Technical School and McGill University?

Lieutenant McCULLUM: 4½ hours.

The CHAIRMAN: You may now continue, Mr. Sexton.

By Brigadier-General Mason:

Q. Before you do so, there is one occupation which has not been referred to and which may be considered of great value, and that is the printing trade. At the Convalescent Home at Ramsgate, England, there is a complete printing outfit, and the soldiers who are there as convalescents are able to supply the local needs in the matter of printing?—A. I think it is a very suitable class to start. The only thing which has prevented us has been the initial cost of the plant, and if we sent the soldiers into any ordinary printing shop to take instruction there would not be enough machines idle to enable us to keep them by themselves.

Brigadier-General MASON: In the case I spoke of expenses are paid and a little profit derived.

By Mr. Bennett:

Q. A witness here yesterday expressed the fear that mechanical drawing would not fit a man very well for civil life, because of the lack of demand and the competition of more highly skilled men. What do you say as to that?—A. We cannot usually carry men far enough in mechanical drawing to make them draftsmen in the time available, but the fact of adding drawing to the knowledge of skilled machinist, or a man who is engaged in building construction will substantially augment his wage earning power. We do not try to carry the students far enough to make them draftsmen, but to give them that practical kind of mechanical drawing, which would enable them to read blue prints. We had one man who had an aptitude, a latent aptitude, for mechanical drawing. He had had a desire all his life up to that time to take a course. In six weeks he developed such ability that he was engaged by the Government as a semi-skilled draftsman.

Q. That was an outstanding case?—A. An outstanding exceptional case.

Q. I suppose when you find that latent aptitude in a man you find out for what occupation he is best fitted before you give him training?—A. We do, sir.

By the Chairman:

Q. What percentage of your men willingly take the opportunities afforded them for vocational training?—A. Do you mean with persuasion?

Q. Even under persuasion?—A. I would say that in small homes where there is a better chance for the instructors to get at them than in the large homes, or a collection of homes as in Montreal, we get 80 or 85 per cent.

Q. What percentage of the men at present in the Grey Nunnery are taking vocational training?—A. Owing to our present disturbed condition it would be hardly fair to take that as an indication of exactly what may be expected in the next month, but there were 75 out of 240 men, only about 30 per cent. We have had no classes in the Grey Nuns Home since last Saturday. We have just completed the quarters out at the Technical School. Everything is at the Technical School.

[Dr. F. H. Sexton.]

Q. Then you will move the appliances now in the basement of the Grey Nunnery over to the basement of Loyola College?—A. No, sir, to the Technical School.

Q. Are you teaching any men at Loyola College yet?—A. Not at Loyola College, but at the Technical School. Everything is at the Technical School.

Q. Now continue your statement, Dr. Sexton?—A. I would like to emphasize the importance of this kind of work in restoring the confidence of the man in his mental and physical power. As I said, they are sluggish when they come back from the front, and over half of these men believe that they are not fit to return to their former occupations; they think that they are worse off than they really are. If they get interested in one of these classes and devote a certain amount of time to receiving instruction every day, they soon begin to pick up confidence in their power to meet the demands of civil life and go back to their old occupations or to other pursuits of a similar nature. Through one, two, three or four months' instruction this man picks up his physical strength, his mind gets started again in the direction of civil life, and he goes back to his job more or less inclined to take up his old occupation or some other lucrative position.

Q. There is a tendency, as a result of this instruction, to make the men self respecting and desirous of being self supporting without relying upon outside assistance?—A. I think, sir, that is unquestionable.

By Hon. Mr. Murphy:

Q. It diminishes the number of men who simply settle down and expect the state to support them. Do you not think so?—A. I do. I think there is a great psychological as well as physical benefit from these classes. As a matter of fact, work is the basis of the German treatment of invalids; salvation through work.

By Mr. Bennett:

Q. That is, diverting the mind from consideration of one's own physical difficulties?—A. That is right, sir.

By the Chairman:

Q. Have you any recommendation to suggest that will tend still further to increase efficiency?—A. I can submit some figures respecting an investigation undertaken at the instance of Colonel C. F. Smith and carried out by Lieutenant McCullum.

By Hon. Mr. Murphy:

Q. What is the general tendency of the investigation?—A. Showing the attitude towards agriculture and also in respect to the number of men who seem to have a grouse against the Military Hospitals Commission. Lieutenant McCullum interviewed 167 men at the Grey Nuns Convalescent Home, and those men signed statements which I have here and which you can see if you wish. Out of the 167, 155 were satisfied with their treatment and 12 were not. These latter had minor complaints which were very easily remedied and could have been remedied earlier if the men had applied to the proper authority.

Q. When were those signed?—A. They were signed during the last two weeks.

Q. Have you a list of the 12 complaints?—A. Yes. Lt. McCullum would be the better man to tell you about them as he handled the cases personally.

Q. Go on with your statement?—A. 70 per cent of these men stated at the time they were interviewed that they did not intend to return to their former occupations.

By Hon. Mr. Macail:

Q. Were they city men or did they come from the country?—A. Largely city men.

By Mr. Middlebro:

Q. Were they largely men who have been wounded or disabled?—A. Practically all those men in the Grey Nuns Home are overseas men. Now, in connection with the attitude of the men toward agriculture, I presented a question which reads like this: "Did you ever work on a farm"? 40 per cent had worked on farms, 60 per cent had not. Of the men who had worked on farms 50 per cent did not intend to return to farm life. When asked whether they would go and work on the farm if the Government were to assist in procuring it, 20 per cent said they would. Of the men who would take up farms, two-thirds had been on farms from two months to thirteen years. When asked, "Would you be willing to take some training in agriculture to prepare you for the farm"? 23 per cent said yes. To the question, "Would you then make farming your life work"? 22 per cent said yes.

Q. 22 per cent of the total number?—A. 22 per cent of the total number interviewed and two-thirds of the men who had had previous farming experience.

Q. 22 per cent out of 167, is it?—A. Yes. That is 35 men out of 167.

Q. Have you figured out the number of men who were not previously farmers who desire to go on the land?—A. Yes, sir, one-third.

Q. One third of the men who were not farmers before they enlisted now desire to go on farms?—A. One third of the men who say they would go on farms have had no previous experience.

Q. In other words, one third of what class of men?—A. One third of 39 men said they would take up farms if the Government would provide them.

By the Chairman:

Q. 13 out of 39 men who had no farming experience would go on the land?—A. Yes. I carried out an investigation of 20 men at Savard Park Home at Quebec, where we have been teaching agriculture for about 4½ months, and the figures are substantially the same.

Mr. BENNETT: That is very strange.

By Hon. Mr. McCurdy:

Q. Will you elaborate that a little further and tell us what percentage of the total number interviewed were willing to return to the farm?—A. I have just given you that information, sir.

By Mr. Middlebro:

Q. The information you have given would indicate that the men from the city do not want to go on the farm, and that those who have come from the farm do not want to go back in great numbers as before?—A. That is what we might reasonably infer.

Q. And the number of farmers will be less than before by reason of this disinclination on the part of returned soldiers?—A. That would seem to be so.

By Hon. Mr. McCurdy:

Q. Were the 167 who were taken selected as being likely to go on farms?—A. Not at all.

Q. That embraces all who were interviewed?—A. Yes. The 167 were simply taken as they could be secured for interviewing from the 240 men in the Home.

By Hon. Mr. Marcil:

Q. Do these men belong to the Province of Quebec?—A. All to the Province of Quebec.

Q. Is the same thing true of Savard Park, Quebec?—A. The men interviewed at Savard Park were practically all from that vicinity.

By the Chairman:

Q. Have you any idea of the proportion of French or English native born who are willing to go on farms?—A. I could not tell you, except that at Savard Park, as I remember the list of students at present—over half of them had French names.

[Dr. F. H. Sexton.]

Q. Consequently they were natives of the country?—A. They were mostly camp men.

Q. You do not know what proportion of the 167 were native born?—A. I could not tell you that without looking up the record.

By Mr. Sutherland:

Q. Is it not possible that when things become normal again a larger number of these men will want to go back to their former occupations with less disinclination than they entertain at the present time?—A. I think that is so, and when they come back they have the idea, which they have received from the recruiting officer who signed them up and from the treatment they have received in England that some sort of special thing is to be done in the way of providing occupations for them on the basis of their service to the country, and they are ready to take full advantage of the provisions made for them in that regard.

By the Chairman:

Q. They all expect something to be done for them above the average man?—A. We find that every man thinks some other man's job is better than his own. When a man separates himself from civil life and enters military life, and then comes back to civil life again, he generally seems to think he would like to go back to some other line of work than that in which he was previously engaged.

By Mr. Sutherland:

Q. Do you not think that, to some extent, the unsettled state of these men is the absorbing interest which they now take in the progress of this war. They all want to keep in touch with the news from day to day, and they think they can do that more easily in the large centres than they could in the country districts. Is not that partly the reason why the men do not want to go on the farm?—A. I would not say that is the dominant motive; I think that some of them have lived in such close contact with other men, in large numbers, for two or three years, that they do not now want to go to country life, where they might have less opportunity of association with their fellows.

By the Chairman:

Q. They do not want the solitary life of the farm?—A. I think that is so.

By Mr. Sutherland:

Q. It is just possible that after the termination of the war that feeling will pass away?—A. Yes, and the general changes in the industrial condition in the Dominion will also tend to change their attitude. If generous provision is made for men whom we wish to get back to the farms, it may attract a certain number of those who are in the city now.

With regard to re-education we have not done much in Montreal. One reason for this is that the organization of the Military Hospitals Commission has been incomplete and until this question of single control is settled, there cannot be much done along that line.

Q. I think Mr. Kidner explained to the Committee pretty much what your plan is as to re-education; what we want from you is the local characteristic in connection with the work at Montreal?—A. All the blinded ex-soldiers are supposed to be trained at St. Dunstan's, but three men, one of whom came here from Valcartier Camp, and the other two from overseas have necessitated attention here in Montreal. The man who came from Valcartier Camp took his training at the School for the Blind, in Montreal, and has made a good living ever since that time. I have a letter from the firm for which he is acting as agent, informing me that he is doing very good work and had recently earned $28 by three days effort. Another man who came back here has been sent to the School for the Blind at Halifax to learn to be a masseur. Another man who came to us two weeks ago will be trained here as a brush-maker or broom-maker. Each man is trained for the occupation for which he seems best fitted.

[Dr. F. H. Sexton.]

Q. Is the proportion of blind men very large?—A. No, the proportion of blind among the disabled is very small. The question of re-education is really a reparation to the man for the loss of his earning power, in addition to the pension. That is, his pension is based upon his physical disability. Take the case of a miner who has partially lost his hearing. He receives only 20 per cent physical disability, but his industrial or wage-earning disability is practically 100 per cent at his old calling. If we re-educate him he will be able to earn practically what he earned before, in such a position as that of a colliery official. There are a large proportion of cases which re-education will put on the same wage-earning plane as the man occupied before his injury.

By Hon. Mr. Murphy:

Q. But there will be a certain percentage who cannot be re-educated?—A. There are probably 20 per cent of these men who will not be capable of re-education, and what will be done with them I do not know.

By the Chairman:

Q. There is a residue for which we can do nothing along that line, and the country will have to take care of them?—A. That is so.

Q. Will it be necessary to have a soldiers' home for the care of such cases?—A. I do not see how we can avoid it.

By Hon. Mr. Macil:

Q. Who decides upon the line of re-education which a man shall receive? Does the man decide it himself?—A. He has to make the final decision, so that he knows he has something at stake in pursuing his re-education. You cannot take a man and force him to accept re-education along any line; one can counsel him, and one can give him advice as to the industrial conditions, the chances of promotion and so forth, but he finally has to make the decision.

Q. If you are satisfied that he will not be a success along the line that he has selected, what do you do?—A. We guide him into something else; he virtually accepts our advice, but he himself has to make the decision.

By Hon. Mr. Daniel:

Q. Are you referring to this district, or to the whole of Canada in your remarks with reference to the Soldiers' Home?—A. I imagine that it will be on the same basis as the distribution of returned invalids, that is, there will be provincial centres so that the man will not be too far removed from his old home and associations.

Q. Do I understand your idea of a Soldiers' Home as being for those who are unable to earn a living for themselves and especially perhaps as they advance in years. Is the idea you have in mind something like the Chelsea Hospital in the Old Country?—A. I have an idea of a home where there will be productive work carried on, and a farm colony with some manufacturing plant such as they have at the Guelph Prison Farm which is now being converted into a convalescent home.

Q. That is an entirely different idea from that of the Chelsea Hospital?—A. That is primarily a place of rest for men with little productive capacity. Most of them are old before they are admitted.

Q. And your proposition is to have a working home?—A. Yes.

By Mr. Bennett:

Q. Your idea is to have a home in which the men will not be idling, but where there will be employment; you do not want to make them dependent in any way?—A. That is my idea.

[Dr. F. H. Sexton.]

By the Chairman:

Q. Have you any idea with reference to the question of the discharge of a man from the homes when he is physically fit, but before his re-education is completed?—A. Yes, I feel very strongly on that point. The men have been sent to the Convalescent Homes, usually for a certain time for the purpose of giving them medical treatment. We try to plan a course of training for them covering the time estimated by the medical board at Halifax, St. John or Quebec. They go to those homes to get the most of it but when they are pronounced medically fit by the Board at the Home, they are discharged sooner than expected.

Q. Because the fact that a man's education is not yet completed renders him eligible to be kept in the home a longer time with advantage, but if the medical man declares that he is fit for discharge, under the present system he will be discharged, but should he not be kept until his education is complete regardless of his physical condition?—A. That cannot be done unless you go beyond the established military precedent and custom. In view of the great lack of technical training in Canada, and in view of the fact that some of these ambitious men are getting very much out of the training which is being given them at the institutions, I think that the vocational officer or instructor should consult with the medical and military officers, before this man is sent out into the world in order to see whether it is not justifiable to keep him there a little longer and give him the necessary education which will make him a better producer and citizen.

Q. That is that the recommendation of the vocational officer if it should indicate that the man's power of self-support would be considerably increased by a stay of a month or a month and a half longer, for the completion of his education you would like to have it possible under the Military Regulations, that he should be retained for the additional period although physically fit?—A. Exactly.

Q. You would in specially promising cases where an extension of the period would greatly increase the man's productive power make it possible for him to remain for that purpose?—A. Yes.

Q. Have you anything to fyle, any statement that you would like to put in?—A. I think it is important, Gentlemen, to use such pressure as is possible to get some early decision on the policy of land settlement. I have many inquiries coming to me right along from soldiers who are discharged and who would like to know what opportunities are to be offered them if they should start farming.

By Mr. Bennett:

Q. Of course you know that, except in the case of the three Prairie Provinces, it is essentially a provincial question with which this Committee has nothing to do?—A. There are a number of soldiers from this district who would like to go to the West, and who would like to know what will be done there in the way of concessions and encouragement to the returned soldiers to go into agriculture.

By Hon. Mr. McCurdy:

Q. What is your opinion upon the question, where discipline in the Convalescent Home should rest?—A. You mean military discipline?

Q. Yes?—A. I am not a military man, and I don't think my advice upon that point would be of much value.

The CHAIRMAN: You are an official of the Military Hospitals Commission.

By Hon. Mr. McCurdy:

Q. There is this point, should it rest with the medical officer, or should it be military?—A. It is my opinion it should be handled by a military officer, but the fatigues and crimes should pass through the medical officer who can say from his knowledge of the man's case whether or not that punishment should be carried out. I think that the medical officer has quite enough to do now in looking after the health of all these men, without having in addition to be responsible for all the petty details of discipline.

Witness discharged.

Sergeant MURRAY called, sworn and examined.

By the Chairman:

Q. Mr. Simard, in his evidence, stated that the Dominion Bridge Company were employing several hundred returned soldiers, and had been very successful and very helpful in helping him to solve this problem. I understand that you are the welfare officer, is that the title, of the Dominion Bridge Company?—A. I am the Intelligence Officer.

Q. Will you tell us, very briefly, just what the principle and the practice of the Company is in the matter of employing returned soldiers, and what is your experience?—A. I would prefer, sir, that Mr. Armstrong, the works manager, who is present at the meeting, should give his evidence on that point.

Witness discharged.

Mr. P. C. ARMSTRONG called, sworn and examined.

By the Chairman:

Q. You are connected, Mr. Armstrong, with the Dominion Bridge Company, I understand, and have had considerable to do with employing returned soldiers. I wish you would tell us briefly what your experience has been?—A. About eleven months ago we were doing some heavy recruiting for overseas at the Bridge Co., and at the same time we began to have several applications from returned soldiers for employment, so we obtained at the time the services of Sergeant Murray upon the recommendation of the Headquarters staff, and used him first of all in recruiting for overseas service, and, as soon as we thought he had done all he could in that way, we asked him to act as employment officer and to look after returned soldiers. Since then I have taken a good deal of personal interest in the subject. We have employed 625 returned soldiers.

Q. At what kind of work?—A. In everything, sir, inspecting shells, labouring, machining, watchmen, clerks, every kind of occupation.

By Hon. Mr. McCurdy:

Q. How many are with you at the present time?—A. On March 12 there were 212 in the factory.

By the Chairman:

Q. About half the men have left you?—A. Rather more than that.

By Hon. Mr. Marcil:

Q. Why?—A. In many cases because they have obtained sufficient training with us to be able to look for better positions, and found it easier to accept these than to wait for promotion in our shop. A man goes out sometimes after a month or so with us to work somewhere else as an experienced inspector. Another reason is that some of the men have found that their health would not stand the work. That has taken care of some. Others have used us more as a stopping place. We take the returned soldier in and do not object to his working a couple of months and going away.

[Mr. P. C. Armstrong.]

By the Chairman:

Q. You are quite willing to be used as an educational institution for the returned soldier for a short time?—A. Yes.

By Brigadier-General Mason:

Q. What do you pay these returned soldiers?—A. The average day wage is 30 cents per hour. We use quite a number in the better class of occupation. They are not employed as truck hands.

By Hon. Mr. Marcil:

Q. Do they work ten hours a day?—A. Yes. And the piece workers, those who have graduated into piece workers, make $4 to $5 a day.

By the Chairman:

Q. Do you shorten their hours or make things any easier for them than for your regular men?—A. It is not possible to do that.

Q. You do not discriminate?—A. No. You see we have 5,000 men in the two companies I represent, the Dominion Bridge Co. and the Dominion Copper Products Co.

Q. At Lachine?—A. At Lachine.

Q. What has been your experience with the men themselves? Have you found them a good class of men to handle and appreciative of what has been done for them?—A. My opinion is that generally the returned soldier is a citizen like other citizens, only if he has been overseas he is a little better. Their military training gives them an advantage. We get a lot of floaters among our ordinary workmen. The percentage of floaters is no more among the returned soldiers than among ordinary citizens.

Q. You regard military training as a benefit?—A. We try to run our factory on the same principles of fair dealing and even handed justice that they have in the Army, and I think a soldier has had a little experience of even handed justice in the Army.

Q. Have you a welfare department?—A. No, sir, not a definitely organized welfare department. Mr. J. N. Doyle, of our Accident Insurance Department devotes a great deal of time to the organization of First Aid and Safety First work. We provide special facilities for first aid to the injured and the officers of the Company, including myself, give a good deal of personal attention to general welfare work. Special welfare work among returned soldiers is in the hands of Sergeant Murray in a general way. But we recently found that the soldiers needed more attention so we arranged an organization and I am President of the civilian section of it. We use that largely as a welfare department for returned soldiers. We are equipping a boarding house there.

Q. Have you found that the proportion of accidents has been greater among soldiers than among your regular workmen?—A. We had to send two returned soldiers to the hospital with apoplectic fits. Another soldier lost two fingers. The first case might be due to army service, the second would not.

Q. Have you found that the employment of soldiers entails extra liability, or insurance? Is the returned soldiers liable to cost the employer more?—A. Yes, sir. We broke our standing rule against the employment of one-eyed men by employing a soldier who had lost an eye. Under the law it is impossible to make an agreement with a one-eyed man to avoid the extra liability arising from a possible loss of the second eye. That militates to some extent against the employment of soldiers by smaller manufacturers, and is a more serious problem in their case.

Q. It does militate against the employment of returned soldiers in small places?—A. Yes, unless the employers are broad minded enough to make exceptions. In that case I would strongly recommend that the provincial authorities look into the question of enabling a soldier with one eye to make a legal agreement with his employer so that in the event of his remaining eye being lost it would not involve paying for both eyes. It is now the practice of the court to award compensation on the basis of its amounting to the loss of both eyes and no agreement can now be made to cover this.

By Mr. Bennett:

Q. That is the loss of the second eye is considered the total destruction of his sight?—A. That is it.

By Mr. Middlebro:

Q. Have you a Workmen's Compensation Act in Quebec?—A. Yes, and the common law rights as well.

By Hon. Mr. Marcil:

Q. Do the returned soldiers do the same work as other workmen?—A. Yes. I went through the shop this morning and had my foreman show me some of the returned soldiers. He pointed out one as the best inspector we have in the place, another as the best machinist, another as the worst man we have in the place, and so on.

By Hon. Mr. Murphy:

Q. You can strike an average?—A. As I understand it, the returned soldier is a returned soldier until he is discharged; then he is a citizen, similar in every way to other citizens.

By Hon. Mr. Marcil:

Q. Has military service affected the soldiers' physical condition?—A. At the present time the returned soldiers have been discharged from the army for physical reasons. Later on, the average ability of those not discharged for physical reasons would be very much higher.

By Mr. Middlebro:

Q. Was the man with one eye given the same wage as the men with two eyes?—A. We cannot make any difference at all. This man was working at piece work. He was with us in the days when the Government paid large prices for shells, and he made good pay. Since then he has obtained a position in England.

Q. Is the practice the same in Quebec as in Ontario that the liability of the employer is based upon the amount a man is receiving at the time of an accident?—A. To some extent.

Q. Do these injured men receive as large pay as the others?—A. Yes.

Q. In case of accidents they would get as large an indemnity as the unimpaired workmen?—A. I expect that he would get the same indemnity.

By Mr. Bennett:

Q. What would be the effect of the termination of the war upon the employment of the major number of your men?—A. I tried to answer a form from your department on that subject the other day. I do not know.

Q. Will the 4,500 men in your employ who have been engaged in work that was essentially war work be employed with you when the war orders cease?—A. That again depends on certain things. Before the war we were engaged in the manufacture of structural steel for bridges and so on, and since the war commenced we have equipped large shops for doing war work. In my opinion, this is a matter for our Board of Directors who will probably find it necessary to continue certain mechanical lines of production, work similar in type to shells, in order to satisfactorily employ the buildings that have been erected and the machinery they are equipped with.

Q. Was the largest number of the men that you have mentioned employed in the new shops or in the old bridge works?—A. In the new shops. Our old bridge shop has only about 15 per cent of our total staff at the present time.

Q. I take it that none of these returned men have been employed as riveters or in the fabrication of steel, using these words as being the general description of your bridge works?—A. Except where they were men who enlisted from our service.

[Mr. P. C. Armstrong.]

Q. So far as the evidence you have given is concerned, the termination of the war will mean the release of those men from employment unless your company undertakes some work similar to the manufacturing processes it is now carrying on?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. In the absence of the fabrication of steel, you have not been able to use them as riveters?—A. Not many, sir, for several reasons. One is the limited amount that that work is of our total activities. Another reason is that the returned soldier objects to going into the bridge works but would rather work in the higher paid shops.

Q. The number of your employees has vastly increased by reason of the war?—A. There were 800 men paid by the hour in the works in July, 1914. Since then, ours and the new associated companies that we have with us employ 5,000 men.

By Brigadier Gen. Mason:

Q. On munitions?—A. Yes.

By Mr. Middlebro:

Q. Can they be employed by you after the war is finished?—A. We hope to find occupations for them.

By the Chairman:

Q. The returned soldiers, however, will be the last to be discharged from your works?—A. As far as I can arrange it, they will be the last to go, with the exception of skilled mechanics and those citizens of Lachine, men who have been employed with us for a long time and have their homes in Lachine.

Q. The fit men who did not go will be let out first, before the returned soldier?—A. The employment department have instructions from me to prepare lists based on seniority and efficiency, and the returned soldier is given a certain allowance for being a returned soldier on this list.

By Mr. Middlebro:

Q. Before the war, you had approximately a thousand men employed in your normal fabrication of steel?—A. Yes.

Q. And today you employ five thousand, making a difference of about four thousand who are employed on munitions, which is extra work due to the war?—A. Our bridge work has shrunk, while our munitions work has increased.

Q. What I mean is this: unless you can procure some new work for these 4,500 men, when the war is over they will be out of work?—A. Yes.

By Mr. Bennett:

Q. You must supplement your pre-war activities with new work, or else these men will have to go?—A. Yes.

By Mr. Middlebro:

Q. How does that proportion you have given us compare with the proportion in other establishments which have gone into the manufacture of munitions?—A. I think that is true of all of them.

By Hon. Mr. McCurdy:

Q. Have you considered the question of the necessity of going into new lines of manufacture after the war?—A. We have employed certain salesmen, and they are looking into the question of other activities.

Q. Are they employed outside this country?—A. We have one in England; he has also been in Russia.

Q. Have you any in South America?—A. No, we have not done much in regard to the outside trade. We have obtained some work for India and Australia. The outside trade has not been developed much lately on account of the difficulty in obtaining bottoms.

[Mr. P. C. Armstrong.]

Q. You have spoken of new lines after the war and the market will naturally be the market held by some of the countries who are not doing business now?—A. Yes.

Q. So far you have not been able to enter these markets?—A. No, that is not in my jurisdiction and I really know nothing of it except what has been told me.

By the Chairman:

Q. Is there anything further you would like to say?—A. I would like to say one thing: that is that I think a great mistake is made in treating the soldier as an object of charity or too much sympathy. He is a citizen who has done his duty to the country and has come back and the sooner we make a civilian of him the better, and I strongly suggest that one of the most useful possible measures would be to look into the organization of Returned Soldiers' Associations for the men to develop concerted action among themselves, to keep their military career fresh in the minds of the people and to help them to feel that they have backing behind them and give them a great deal of self-confidence in that way. We have a Returned Soldiers' Association out there, and the Association is divided into two parts, the civilian section and the military section. There is a group of business men in Lachine who give their time to organizing for the benefit of the returned soldiers, but our hope is that they will be able to turn that over to the soldiers at an early date, and it seems to me that that organization can do a great deal of work. When a soldier comes to me with a complaint against the Military Hospitals Board or the Patriotic, or any other organization, we take it up and we have never found any Department of the Government that will not right matters as quickly as possible. Pension cases are adjusted as quickly as possible and in every case we find sympathy for the returned soldier, but having a Returned Soldiers' Association we are in position to give returned soldiers advice about these matters. When a soldier complains about his pension not being received at the proper time, we give him money and eventually he gets his pension. We prevent him from getting angry. I have met only one who had a genuine grievance, who had been given a bad discharge. It may have been justified from the stories I heard from other people. Outside of that case I know of no soldiers that have had a real grievance. I think it is a bad thing for the soldiers to think they have a collective grievance.

By Mr. Bennett:

Q. Your idea is to maintain pride in their past and hope for the future?—A. Yes, and get them away from the idea that they are the objects of any sympathy. I urge the necessity of a National Returned Soldiers' Association with a civilian section consisting of business men, to assist the soldiers to be organized throughout the country and that this Association be given practically the handling of the returned soldier from the time he leaves the special institution, whether hospitals or convalescent homes or vocational training institutions, and that the Returned Soldiers' Association after that be expected to look after the returned soldiers' interests. That is the way to get them interested in their own future.

By Brigadier-General Mason:

Q. You do not believe in a soldiers' union?—A. It will not become a soldiers' union if you put in sufficient business men to direct their energies in the right way.

By Mr. Middlebro:

Q. One of the objects of this Committee is to ascertain what we are going to do with the unemployed after the war. You have stated that at least four-fifths of the men that are employed now will not be employed after the war?—A. Yes, unless other outlets can be found for their activities besides munitions.

Hon. Mr. MURPHY: A large proportion of them are not soldiers.

[Mr. P. C. Armstrong.]

By Mr. Middlebro:

Q. About how many men are there employed in Canada working in munition factories and other work who will not be employed after the war?—A. That is beyond me.

Q. I am told 400,000.—A. I should think that perhaps that figure is not out of the way.

Q. And at least 250,000 men will come back from the war who will go into industrial occupations?—A. Perhaps.

Q. I should think 250,000 would be a fair average of the number who would go into industrial occupations?—A. Yes.

Q. There will be perhaps 550,000 men out of employment after the war. Have you anything to suggest to the Committee as to the method to find employment for those men?—A. I can only suggest, sir, that we will have to increase the output of goods from Canada.

Q. In what way?—A. Take measures to increase the agriculture of the country, and an active campaign to endeavour to absorb the markets previously held by the enemy or neutral nations before the war.

Q. What will we do with these men in the meantime?—A. I think we should do this right away.

Q. Efforts should be made immediately?—A. I think so.

Hon. Mr. MURPHY: In other words imitate the Dominion Bridge Company?

Witness discharged.

Captain H. S. DUNSTAN GREY, called, sworn and examined.

By the Chairman:

Q. You are a member of the Army Medical Corps?—A. Yes.

Q. Are you in command at the Grey Nunnery?—A. I was placed there in December, 1915, as Medical Officer in charge of the Grey Nuns Convalescent Home.

Q. Under whom?—A. Under Lt.-Col. Patch, A.D.M.S.

Q. You are there now?—A. Yes, I am there now, but I do not consider I am medical officer in charge any longer.

Q. Why?—A. The reason for that is that the Military Hospitals Commission's command have taken over the charge of the convalescent home. I am simply medical officer in charge of the medical care of patients.

Q. You are not responsible for physical conditions there?—A. I am indirectly responsible as medical officer, because I take it that my standing there is medical officer of the battalion or regiment, not medical officer in charge of the convalescent home.

Q. Who is responsible for the discipline and for the physical condition of the place?—A. The officer commanding A Unit.

Q. Major Hall?—A. Yes.

Q. Have you anything to say? You were here most of the time yesterday when you heard a number of criticisms from returned men and others regarding conditions at the Grey Nuns Convalescent Home. Have you anything to say on that point?—A. Well, if you will permit me I would like to state that up to August 1 last year or some time after that I would be responsible for the conditions complained of. When the Military Hospitals Commission's command took over they gradually absorbed the control of that convalescent home. On several occasions from the 1st August to the 11th January, 1917, I verbally protested to my superior medical officer with regard to the condition of affairs gradually developing. I was told that a complete change of the administration was daily expected, and no action was taken. Things went on until

[Captain H. S. Dunstan Grey.]

I felt that I could not continue, in justice to myself, and in justice to the orders that I had received from my superior officer, Colonel Patch, when he put me in charge of the home. I wrote to the A.D.M.S Military District No. 4 in which I protested.

Q. What is the date of that letter?—A. January 11, 1917. I will read you some extracts from that letter and the answer I received from the A.D.M.S. My letter reads as follows:—

SIR,—I have the honour to inform you that upon several occasions since August 1, 1916, when the Military Hospitals Commission Command took over the charge of Returned Overseas Men in the Home, I have verbally protested to Headquarters about the manner in which the Medical Officer in charge has been shorn of his authority over the men, and that as a result he could not be held responsible as a Medical Officer in charge of Convalescent Home usually is. Owing to the fact that a complete change of administration was daily expected, no action was taken, but to-day as months have passed and the change has not come, in justice to myself I have to go on record and draw your attention to the following facts:—

The first paragraph has nothing to do with the matter before the Committee. The letter continues:—

2. The cleanliness of the Home is under the O. C. "A" Unit.

3. The Men are no longer under my orders for anything but Medical treatment. They are crimed and paraded before the O. C. "A" Unit, by the Sergeant of the Guard without my knowledge, and it is only after they are sentenced that I become aware of the fact. This leads to a loss of all influence over, and knowledge of the Men by the Medical Officer in charge in the Home.

4. The Guards' reports are never seen by me, and so I am not aware of what is going on in the Home.

5. Men are detained in the Home, who have been discharged by me upon your order, to O. C. "A" Unit.

6. Tubercular patients from Ste. Agathe and Lake Edward are held in the Home, pending discharge or sentence, and are allowed to mix with the other Men at mess.

7. The presence of Men in the Home, who are not patients, mixing with patients leads to confusion.

8. The conditions at present existing have changed Convalescent Home into barracks. I am unable to handle nervous cases, and am obliged to obtain for them, through the O. C. "A", outpatient passes to allow them rest and quietude.

By the above you may conclude, Sir, that I feel that I have to go on record as being placed in a position that renders me unable to accomplish the duties of a Medical Officer in charge Convalescent Home, and therefore it is impossible for me to be held responsible for the Men in the Grey Nuns Convalescent Home, as I am Medical Officer in charge in name only.

The WITNESS: That was written to the A. D. M. S., Colonel Patch.

Q. What was the reply?—A. The reply was on February 16 from the A. D. M. S. to me, and reads as follows:—

SIR,—I have the honour to acknowledge your communication of the 11th ult., relative to the marginally noted subject. Your report with covering letter from the A. D. M. S., M. D. No. 4, and from the G. O. C., M. D. No. 4, have been forwarded to Secretary, Militia Council.

2. I am to say that the situation as set forth by the A. D. M. S., M. D. No. 4, is fully appreciated and every effort is being made to reach a decision in [Captain H. S. Dunstan Grey.]

this matter in order that the A. D. M. S. may know definitely the duties for which he is responsible. You will be further advised at the earliest date possible.

This is signed by Colonel Patch.

By Hon. Mr. Daniel:

Q. He communicates direct with the Militia Council?—A. Yes.

Q. It does not go through the Director-General of Medical Service?—A. It gets to him in an indirect way according to regulations. It goes first to the Secretary of the Militia Council and to the A. G.'s office and from there to the Director-General of Medical Service.

Q. It goes to the head of the Medical Service in an indirect way only?—A. I believe that is the line the correspondence is carried.

Q. In the first place would you not think it should go to the head of the medical department and go from them to the Militia Council?—A. Well, being in the service, I have no criticisms to offer.

By Hon. Mr. Murphy:

Q. What answer did you get to that?—A. I got no further reply.

Q. Any action taken?—A. No action taken.

Q. Any decision rendered yet so far as you know?—A. No.

By Brigadier-General Mason:

Q. What was the date of the answer?—A. February 16, 1917.

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. Is there any more correspondence?—A. No, that is all the correspondence I think on that.

By the Chairman:

Q. You have charge of the medical treatment only of the patients?—A. As a result of this letter, you can realize that I have abstained from any active work in the direction of the home, and confined my activities to the strictly medical care of the patients that were there.

Q. Who assisted you in your medical work?—A. I have at the present moment detailed to me by Colonel Patch seven medical officers besides myself, and one medical officer who busies himself with urinalysis and bacteriology.

Q. Are they all members of the Army Medical Corps?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Like yourself?—A. Yes.

Q. So that they are all under the supervision of Colonel Patch?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Through you?—A. Yes, sir, I am responsible.

Q. Is there a Medical Officer at the Grey Nuns Hospital all the time, night and day?—A. No, sir.

Q. There are times when there is no medical officer there at all?—A. Yes, but owing to the nature of the cases there it is not considered necessary that a medical officer should be in residence continually.

Q. What would happen if there was a case taken suddenly ill?—A. The nursing sisters are all graduated nurses and members of the C.A.M.C., and one of these officers that I have enumerated to you is detailed by me as an orderly officer of the day. That officer's name is known to the nurses and he is called.

Q. We have had complaints from some of the men that they rarely saw a doctor and that no medical examination or care was given them while they were in the Home. Is there any foundation in that?—A. It depends upon the angle from which you view it. The great majority of cases we handle there are convalescents. There will be some which will be examined upon admission, but it is not always possible to examine all when 15, 16, 20 or even 40 cases are admitted, which oftens happens, on the one day. But they will be examined as quickly as possible.

Q. If 40 to 50 cases a day are admitted, how long would it be before each patient would have at least one examination?—A. Possibly some of the least serious cases might be examined in five or six days after their admission.

Q. Would it be possible for some of those 50 cases to be in the Hospital a week before being examined at all?—A. It would, sir, but that case would be one that did not require any immediate care, because I as medical officer in charge have in my possession what we call "The Pink Sheet", which is a copy of the Medical Board which is held at the Medical Depot at Quebec. In that is stated the cause of the disability and a short description of the man's condition. If that man is one that did not require immediate attention we would devote our attention to the man who did require it.

Q. When a group of 50 men come in, are they sorted out and the really urgent cases taken first?—A. Usually it works out in that way, because the cases are allotted to the different officers who are in charge of different conditions.

Q. Do you not think the beneficial effect on convalescents of having the doctor frequently inquire as to their condition is of some value?—A. It is, sir.

Q. Do you not think that if a man forms the impression that he is being neglected and that a doctor does not visit him for long periods it is likely to have a discouraging effect upon him?—A. It might, in some cases. There is always a man wishing to see the doctor at the home, and according to the regulations governing the men he can present himself on sick parade.

Q. And can any man be seen then by the doctor if he wishes it?—A. He can be seen and if he is in actual ill health he will be visited as soon as the medical officer can get to his bedside.

Q. Can he be seen by a doctor every day if he desires?—A. If he desires a sick parade he can have one in the morning and one in the afternoon.

Q. He has got to declare himself ill?—A. He has got to ask for a sick parade.

By Brigadier-General Mason:

Q. How many medical officers are there to the hospital?—A. At the present time there are eight.

Q. How many take part in the examination of convalescent patients?—A. These cases are distributed. One medical officer is a specialist on the ear, nose and throat. To him would be referred cases of ear, nose and throat trouble. I have another officer whose special line is neurology, that is cases of nervous condition, shell shock and so on. The folders dealing with such troubles would be placed on his desk. Then I have two men whom I look upon as caring for the general internal conditions. The cases pertaining to that branch would be placed before them. There is one man for surgery who deals with surgical cases and another man for orthopaedic cases. Some of the most important cases we have to deal with are the orthopaedic cases.

By the Chairman:

Q. Where do you get your artificial limbs in Montreal?—A. The Military Hospitals Commission have an institution in Toronto for the purpose of supplying limbs.

Q. Then the limbs supplied for men are made in Toronto?—A. Yes, the men are forwarded to Toronto to have their artificial limbs fitted there.

Q. Is that true in all cases?—A. In all cases at the present time.

Q. A soldier has complained to me that his artificial limbs were fitted very badly.—A. Possibly. If that was a private by the name of Forbes that man's leg was furnished here. He was at the Grey Nuns Convalescent Home here and the artificial limb was furnished to him on the authority of the A.D.M.S. by a manufacturer named Martin.

[Captain H. S. Dunstan Grey.]

The CHAIRMAN (to Sgt.-Major Marion): You are acquainted with the circumstances of the man whose artificial limb was badly applied. Can you tell me the man's name?

Sergeant-Major MARION: That man is in the hospital. I could not tell you his name.

The CHAIRMAN: But you have the letter containing the details of the case? Let me have that letter, please.

By the Chairman:

Q. Here is the letter, Dr. Grey, and you can inform yourself as to the circumstances. A. (After examining letter) This does not refer to an artificial limb, sir. This letter deals with the case of a man named Emile Colpin, if I remember, but I only speak from memory. This is a case where strengthening braces were required for his leg, and he complains that the metal portions of it are not nickel. That question had been taken up, and I personally thought it was extravagance to have the metal portion of what you might call the hinges of the brace made of nickel when it was to be used only temporarily.

Q. What is the man's grievance?—A. It is stated here in French that for the sake of economy we did not ask the manufacturers to nickel the iron portions, but that they are galvanized.

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. Your position in the hospital is the same as it was when you wrote this letter in January, 1917?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You were then, and are now, Director of that hospital?—A. The hospital at the present time, as far as the running of the institution goes—that is, looking after the expenses of the place and the housekeeping—is under the Military Hospitals Commission Command.

Q. Then the Military Hospitals Commission Command have the control and discipline of these men?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Does the Commission have the placing of the various men who were tubercular cases with the other patients?—A. No. I wrote a letter with regard to that, and allotted in the Home a certain ward for the care of these tuberculous patients that were in Montreal, possibly on the way to sanatoria, or who had been returned from the different sanatoria for discipline.

Q. So that matter has been arranged?—A. That has been arranged.

Q. Then as to the complaints of these men. How many have you got altogether in the Grey Nuns Hospital?—A. My "Morning State of Sick" for to-day is 258 cases.

Q. Was it not possible under ordinary discipline to have every man paraded every morning to be examined or to make his complaint?—A. Any man who has any complaint can ask for a parade.

Q. Any man who wants to be examined can ask for a parade, you say, in the morning?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Would it not be better with a lot of sick men in a military hospital to have them paraded every morning?—A. You ask me whether it would be a proper thing to do?

Q. Yes.—A. I do not think so.

Q. Would it not be a very easy way out of the difficulty?—A. I do not think it is necessary.

Q. Why not?—A. Because there is such a thing with convalescents of a neurotic type of apparently putting too much stress upon their condition.

Q. Yes, but even if you only provided a daily medical examination for only one of the men, would you not be better off in the last case than in the first?—A. Possibly.

Q. Now, I ask you, under the circumstances, would not a morning parade of the sick men in this institution be a good thing?—A. Yes, but it would be difficult to arrange, because these men are at their vocational training or physical training, and it would have to be done very early in the morning.

Q. Could not the men be taken in consecutive relays, so that every man in the hospital might be paraded before you every day?—A. I have thought of such a thing, but did not provide for it for the simple reason that the medical officers are not giving their full time to the work of the hospital.

Q. Do you not think they ought to give their whole time?—A. It is impossible under the present conditions.

Q. All these men, including yourself, are under salary, are they not?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. First of all, you are?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And is your time supposed to be devoted to the men who are in the hospital?—A. Not in its entirety.

Q. How much time are you supposed to give to this institution?—A. I am supposed to give three hours a day.

Q. How much time are the rest of these medical men supposed to give?—A. Three hours a day.

Q. Each medical man?—A. Each medical man, with the exception of one who is just going on duty, and is prepared to give his whole time.

Q. Each one of your medical men at that institution is supposed now to be on active service?—A. No, sir.

Q. You are not?—A. No, sir, I am on active militia service.

Q. What does that mean?—A. I am simply drawing the pay of my rank.

Q. And carrying on your private practice besides?—A. I am.

Q. So that you just give so much time per day to these men in the hospital?—A.

Yes.

Q. Can it not be easily arranged with a staff of eight medical attendants to parade 300 men each day?—A. Surely.

Q. Then, do you not think if such an arrangement were put into effect in the Grey Nuns Hospital it would do away with these complaints?—A. It would, to an extent.

Q. Would it do away with them wholly?—A. I do not believe, sir, that there is any method of handling men that would not leave an opening for complaint.

Q. I quite admit that. These men are all human, only some are a little more human than others. But such an arrangement would do away with the complaint that has been made.—A. It would, sir.

Q. No man could then say he had not seen a doctor for weeks? He could make no such statement as that if there were a parade ordered every day?—A. I take exception to any man stating that he has not seen a doctor for weeks.

Q. I will say two days if that will help the argument,—but it would do away with that?—A. It would.

Q. Do you not think that ought to be put into force?—A. It is practicable.

Q. And it would do away with one of the causes of complaint.—A. It would.

Q. I take it, of course, that you are an Army Medical Corps man?—A. I am.

Q. And you believe that had the Army Medical Corps gone on and chartered this Hospital the patients would be in a better condition than they are today?—A. I would not say that.

Q. You think that with an expansion of the Army Medical Corps it would be possible to handle these hospitals?—A. Yes, and possibly with less friction.

Q. Then your whole complaint is that either one of these bodies might handle it, provided there were no conflict of jurisdiction?—A. Provided the jurisdiction of each is clearly defined.

Q. Then there might be a possible line of demarkation drawn defining the authority of each of these bodies?—A. Yes, just as there is co-ordination in an Army Corps.

[Captain H. S. Dunstan Grey.]

which is composed of various services, each knowing their respective work, the line of demarkation being clearly drawn and all working together unitedly towards a common end. Now we do not know where we are at.

Q. That condition has existed for some considerable time previous to January, 1916, and it still exists?—A. It began on August 1, 1915.

Q. And you would say that such a condition of affairs militates strongly against the proper care and well-being of these soldiers?—A. I would not go as far as that; I would simply say that it renders their proper care more difficult. I do not believe that the medical care of the men has materially suffered by the conditions existing at present, but it is a fact that the giving of this care to the men has been made very difficult.

Q. But still they have got that care right along?—A. They have got the care of the medical Corps.

Q. But the disciplinary care, has that been as good as it ought to be?—A. The discipline has been good.

Q. Now, just one more question: We have heard some evidence here regarding the men in their recreation room, it has been stated that there is not light enough, and not sufficient air, do you consider the Grey Nun's Hospital a proper place for these men?—A. I do, sir, for convalescents.

Q. You think it is what it ought to be?—A. I think it is well adapted to the use to which it is put at the present moment, that is a Convalescent Home.

Q. Well, it is not wholly occupied by convalescents, there are active cases there. A. There are just the active cases which develop amongst a body, we would say, of 250 men, who at present are convalescent.

By the Chairman:

Q. How many active cases have you there among that number?—A. I would judge speaking from memory, that in Ward "C" we have probably six out of 258 patients. I have more men confined there, some of them I have confined in Ward "C". I have put them to bed, as bed-patients, because they have been drunk.

Q. And for these cases do you consider that the Grey Nun's hospital is a proper place?—A. I do, sir, because they are such cases as acute bronchitis, and laryngitis, neuritis, and some cases of rheumatism.

Q. I take it, from your evidence, you do not think it is a proper place for men who are wrecks from nervous troubles?—A. Not under present conditions.

Q. What militates against its use for that purpose?—A. At present it is the Headquarters of "A" Unit.

Q. What is the nature of that Unit?—A. That is the administrators' portion of that unit, it is made up, as you probably know, of the men convalescent returned from overseas, and camp men, undergoing prolonged convalescence. These men are under the jurisdiction of the officer commanding this unit. There are the Belmont Park and the McTavish St. Homes, the Grey Nuns, and the Savard Park Hospital at Quebec, the Sanatoria at Lake Edward and Ste. Agathe all under the control of this unit and that naturally entails a considerable amount of going and coming and considerable work in connection with the changing of these men and in correspondence.

Q. Now, in what way does that inconvenience the man who is suffering from nervous trouble?—A. The noise and the confusion caused by the constant coming and going, the continual movement that is going on in the place all the time. Sometimes again a unit has no clink, and the men who misbehave in that home, are sent up there for confinement; for instance, if a man gets drunk in the Khaki Home or in any of the other homes in the city, a guard is sent up to take charge of him and he is brought down there.

Q. Would you recommend that the men suffering from shell shock and nervous troubles should be removed from the Grey Nun's Hospital?—A. I may say that yesterday the Headquarters of "A" unit were moved out of the Grey Nun's Hospital and transferred to Drummond Street.

[Captain H. S. Dunstan Grey.]

Q. So that everything is alright now?—A. Not completely, it is still used for disciplinary purposes. To my mind the Headquarters of "A" Unit should be in a separate building, away from the Convalescent Home. There it would be on the same footing as that possessed by the Casualties which are now put into a Casualty Battalion. As it has now been called the Military Hospitals Commission Command, the Headquarters of which is in Ottawa, there would be headquarters for this district in this province, and "A" unit should be in a distinct building and the Officer Commanding the Unit should take such men as I would discharge on instructions from Ottawa. I would discharge them to the Officer Commanding "A" Unit.

Q. What does the Committee understand, in this last complaint of yours?—A. I am not complaining.

Q. This last criticism then.—A. I am not criticizing.

The CHAIRMAN: This statement—

The WITNESS: It is a statement of facts I am giving.

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. Put it any way you like; if the "A" unit business were entirely gotten rid of you are content with the Grey Nun's Hospital?—A. Yes, I am, as a building for the purpose for which it is used.

Q. Do you not think that with 300 convalescents in that hospital a case of emergency may occur at nearly any time?—A. Yes, they might crop up anywhere.

Q. And with eight men on the staff of the hospital, would it be out of the way that one man at least should be there each night in the event of an emergency occurring?—A. Not necessarily from a medical point of view, from the nature of the cases there. The home is situated in the centre of the city, and one of the eight members of the staff can always be reached by 'phone, and will soon be there. The nurses who are on duty can handle an emergency for half an hour until the medical man can reach the hospital, and the patients would not be without attendance and care in the meantime.

By Hon. Mr. Daniel:

Q. I think the basement of the Grey Nun's hospital is used for recreation purposes by the men, and it has been stated that the dimensions of that room are 92 by 42 by 15, and that 200 men were kept there almost all day. That would give 98 cubic feet per man?—A. The 200 men said to be there would dwindle down considerably during the day, considering that there are probably 35 patients from outside who would report there for treatment.

Q. The statement, as I remember it, was that they had to be there for a considerable time?—A. It has been overcrowded for the last two or three weeks, but prior to that there was plenty of room. Mr. Sexton asked me if it would interfere with the ventilation of that room if a portion were divided off for vocational training. I told him that it would be quite sufficient with the number there at that time, but that if the number of men were increased we would have to take that portion back again. Again the statement is made that the recreation room is in the basement. I would like the word "basement" defined. Is a basement considered to be a room underground or below the ground?

Q. It was stated afterwards that it was not below the ground. There was another statement made to the effect that when these men got permission to go out it was after 5 o'clock in the evening?—A. Yes.

Q. And that it was dark at that time in the winter, and they had nowhere to go except to the public houses and places of that kind and the consequence was that it was a great temptation to them and that if they constantly came back drunk it was not to be wondered at. Why should they not be allowed out in the early part of the day?—A. These instructions with regard to leave were issued by the O.C. of the

[Captain H. S. Dunstan Grey.]

Military Hospitals Commission Command, and were forwarded to the different units. The men are not allowed out till 5 o'clock, but there is a walking-out parade from 10.30 to 11.30 in the morning, and in the afternoon there is another walking-out parade of an hour's duration.

Q. After 5 o'clock?—A. Before 5 o'clock.

By the Chairman:

Q. Are these hours peculiar to Montreal, or is it a general order relating to all convalescent hospitals in Canada?—A. I understand that it is a general order by the O.C. of the Military Hospitals Commission Command at Ottawa, and forwarded to the various units.

Q. Issued by Colonel Sharples?—A. Yes.

By Hon. Mr. Daniel:

Q. You say there is a walking-out parade in the morning and another in the afternoon; do you mean they all have to go out together?—A. Yes. In some cases they are taking physical training, possibly some men who are suffering from cardiac troubles are not required to participate in the walking-out parade. Those men who are taking the technical training can take it if they wish.

Q. That is under Major Hall, it is not in your Department at all?—A. Yes, my duty simply consists in stating whether a man is fit for training or work.

Q. The five o'clock leave is personal, they can go out where they like?—A. Yes, and the hour has been extended to 10.30 at night.

Q. And that is done by an order coming through the Military Hospitals Commission Command and Major Hall?—A. Yes.

Q. And you have nothing to do with that?—A. I have nothing to do with the regulation of those hours. I may say that any time that I have found it wise to have a man get the morning air or the afternoon air I have put through a request to the O.C. of the unit and the leave has been granted that the man might be out from, say, ten to twelve o'clock in the morning and two to four in the afternoon.

The CHAIRMAN: Well, Capt. Grey, we will let you retire now and thank you for your evidence.

Witness discharged.

Mrs. JAS. WILLIAMSON ROSS, called and examined.

By the Chairman:

Q. You are the representative in Montreal, if I understand rightly, Mrs. Ross, of the Pensions Board?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And your duties are to visit all the families?—A. Yes, we have to pay one official visit a year, Sir Herbert, but we really do the investigating.

Q. You do the investigating for the Pensions Board?—A. For the Pensions Board. We listen to all the grievances of the soldiers.

Q. Do you have to look after both the men who are wounded and the widows of those who have been killed?—A. Yes.

Q. So you listen to all grievances of the soldiers and the widows?—A. Yes, and forward them to Ottawa.

Q. In the cases where Ottawa is preparing material on which they decide on the pension, all that material is investigated by you here?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you find very much complaint on the part of the returned soldiers and their widows as to their pension treatment?—A. Well, we have not started our systematic visiting yet. We have not got our full records, so that everybody we see really has a complaint, every man who comes in has one.

[Mrs. James Williamson Ross.]

Q. Only those that have complaints come to see you now?—A. If they are satisfied, they do not encourage us by letting us know that they are.

Q. You are acquainted with all the rules and regulations with respect to pensions and can explain these to them?—A. Yes.

Q. Can you generally satisfy them?—A. Generally, yes.

Q. Have you instances where you could not satisfy them?—A. Most of the men who receive only gratuities are very much dissatisfied, those having under the 20 per cent disability. Every one of those that I have seen so far has been dissatisfied.

Q. Those damaged up to 19 per cent, and who, instead of getting a monthly allowance, are given a sum of $50 or $100 and told that that ends it, you find them dissatisfied?—A. Every one of them. For instance, a man with total deafness in one year gets only a gratuity, and he feels that he should receive a regular monthly pension. I had one such man who refused to accept his gratuity. If he accepted it he thought it would mean that he was satisfied, and he asked me to return it to Ottawa. He was not a bit antagonistic, but thought he had been unjustly dealt with.

By Hon. Mr. Daniel:

Q. Was he well off?—A. No, he was earning $90 a month before going overseas, and he has just now taken a position as messenger with a bank at $50 and is not satisfied yet that he is able to hold it.

By Mr. Middlebro:

Q. Have you met many disabled men less than 20 per cent who by reason of that disability are not able to carry on their previous occupation?—A. They feel they are much more disabled than they are pensioned for.

Q. Do they claim they are not able to carry on their previous occupation?—A. They all claim they cannot do what they did before. Under 20 per cent they are supposed to be paid off. This man yesterday returned the cheque. He felt that if they gave him even the smallest amount monthly he would be satisfied, but he wanted something.

The CHAIRMAN: Of course, as Mrs. Ross has said, on account of not being organized so that she could have visited those in receipt of pensions as she expects to do each year, she gets only those who are dissatisfied.

By the Chairman:

Q. Can you give us any idea as to the number of complaints you have handled of those dissatisfied with the amount of pension awarded?—A. I have kept track, Sir Herbert, I write up perhaps—I should say I have not seen more than 15 or 20 altogether.

Q. Fifteen or twenty have come to you?—A. Yes.

Q. As a rule are the widows satisfied?—A. Any widows I have visited—I have not done the regular visiting yet—but I started out and saw ten families in one week who had been receiving pension for some time to familiarize myself with conditions. Every home I went into they were well satisfied. Their homes were all clean and they seemed to be getting along nicely.

Q. Do the married men who are disabled get an allowance now for their children?—A. If they are disabled under the first three classes, anything above a 60 per cent disability, they get a pension for themselves and an allowance for each child.

Q. Are the pensions on account of the children coming regularly now?—A. Sometimes they do not go through with the first pension cheque, and the man makes a complaint, and he is asked for the certificate of his children. They are forwarded to Ottawa and there is an adjustment made.

Q. Ottawa is now paying both the pension for disabled men and the pension for the children as well?—A. In every case.

[Mrs. James Williamson Ross.]

Q. So that a man disabled to the extent of 60 per cent with three children would get 60 per cent of $40, which would be $24?—A. $24 and $18 for the children.

Q. $42 a month for himself and his three children?—A. Yes.

Q. Do you think that is the best way to have the children in Classes No. 1, 2 and 3 cases paid $6, or would it be better to grade it down to $6, $5 and $4 respectively?—A. I think a man getting $24 should get the full $6 for each child; I do not think it should be reduced.

Q. Do you think the children of Class 4 or 5 cases should get anything? There is a great drop, for example, in a Class 3 case with three children and a man in Class 4 with three children. Would you make it any less?—A. There is too big a drop.

Q. Your main criticism is about the gratuities?—A. In nearly every case.

By Mr. Middlebro:

Q. You have mentioned one case of deafness. Can you mention what the other disabilities were where they were classified under 20 per cent?—A. I think an index finger is under 20 per cent, and the other troubles are not specified. It is some condition of bronchitis or rheumatism.

Q. Which they claim is permanent?—A. Yes. Another great trouble is with men who have been accepted for the service and who come home with a disability not due to the service. They are much dissatisfied because they feel they have a disability.

By Mr. Ross (Middlesex):

Q. They never should have enlisted in reality?—A. Yes, and it is hard to explain that to them.

By Mr. Middlebro:

Q. Were they well when they enlisted?—A. They all claim they were.

Q. And were so certified by the medical officer?—A. Apparently, or they would never have been accepted.

Q. Do you think a man who has lost his index finger should get a small pension rather than a gratuity?—A. I think so.

By the Chairman:

Q. You do not like the idea of a gratuity. If a man falls below full efficiency, he should get a varying pension?—A. Yes. They could use the gratuity in the case of a widowed mother who is not entitled to a regular pension for instance where there is another son overseas. When the soldier's pay stops I think she could be given a gratuity in recognition of her son's service.

THE CHAIRMAN: Are there any further questions? Mrs. Ross is the local officer on behalf of the Pensions Board. Her office is in the Drummond building and all matters regarding pensions are referred to her, and she visits all the families in receipt of pensions.

THE WITNESS: May I leave lists of the district officers, with the scale of pensions, in ready reference form for the members of the committee?

THE CHAIRMAN: We will be glad to have them.

Witness discharged.

NAPOLÉON MARION comparaît et est assermenté.

Interrogé par l'hon. Charles Marcil:

Q. Quel est votre grade militaire?—R. Sergent-major—warrant officer.

Q. Vous faites partie du personnel de l'Hôtel-Dieu?—R. Des Sœurs Grises.

Q. Etes-vous membre du corps médical?—R. Non, monsieur, je suis convalescent.

Q. On m'informe que vous avez certaines plaintes à faire, certains rapports à produire?—R. D'abord, la première plainte que j'ai à faire m'a été donnée à propos des membres artificiels. On prétend—d'abord, moi-même, là où j'ai été pour avoir quelque chose, le monsieur—que je ne puis mentionner dans le moment—m'a dit qu'il avait reçu une lettre d'Ottawa lui demandant de faire le travail, soit des supports en fer ou autre chose, autant que possible au plus bas prix. Ensuite, on m'a fait rapport à ce sujet là, par écrit, et j'ai cru bon de présenter cette plainte là, parce que quand un homme part avec deux bons pieds et deux bonnes jambes, je ne crois pas que le gouvernement devrait essayer à mettre au plus bas prix les articles qui sont alloués aux soldats pour remplacer les membres qu'ils ont perdus.

Q. Avez-vous porté plainte à quelqu'un à ce sujet là, ou avez-vous fait rapport à quelque officier supérieur?—R. C'est arrivé vendredi dernier, et la lettre m'est arrivée hier.

Q. Avez-vous référé la question à quelque officier supérieur?—R. Pas encore.

Q. Avez-vous l'intention de le faire?—R. Oui.

Q. Quel est cet officier?—R. Le capitaine Gray, celui qui est en charge des convalescents.

Q. Avez-vous autre chose à nous raconter sur ce qui s'est passé à l'Hôtel-Dieu, de la part des soldats?—R. A propos de l'hôpital, je crois qu'il est assez grand, et il y a assez de commodités pour les hommes, pour le nombre qu'il y a là; seulement, il faudrait un peu plus de ventilation.

Q. Maintenant, pour les Canadiens-français, il devrait y avoir parmi les membres du staff quelqu'un qui parle le français.

Par l'hon. M. Murphy:

Q. Y a-t-il des médecins Canadiens-français?—R. Il y en a deux.

Par l'hon. M. Marcl:

Q. Quels sont les médecins canadiens-français qu'il y a là?—R. Le capitaine Chabot et le docteur Ostiguy.

Q. Le capitaine Gray parle bien le français?—R. Oui.

Q. Les autres membres du personnel ne parlent pas le français?—R. Non. Ils sont sous le commandement du major Hall.

Par l'hon. M. Murphy:

Q. Est-ce que la plupart des soldats ne parlent pas l'anglais?—R. Les canadiens français?

Q. Oui.—R. Il y en a quelques-uns qui parlent l'anglais, mais la majorité ne le parlent pas. Il y a au delà de soixante-deux canadiens, et je pense qu'il doit y en avoir dix ou douze qui parlent l'anglais.

Q. Les cinquante-deux autres ne peuvent pas se faire comprendre?—R. Du tout.

Q. Ils sont obligés d'avoir recours à des interprètes?—R. A des sous-officiers. Plus souvent qu'autrement c'est moi. Cette plainte là se rapporte spécialement aux nurses. Sur les nurses qu'il y a là il n'y en a seulement qu'une qui parle le français.

Q. Ce sont des gardes-malades?—R. Oui.

Q. Les religieuses n'ont rien à faire avec cela?—R. Non; les religieuses voient la nourriture, aux repas.

Q. Maintenant, parmi les gardes-malades il n'y en a que deux qui parlent le français?—R. Seulement qu'une qui parle français.

Q. Et quand elle n'y est pas, celle-là?—R. Il n'y a plus personne.

Q. Avez-vous porté plainte à propos de cela?—R. Pas encore, parce qu'on ne m'a présenté les plaintes que le douze mars.

Q. Avez-vous l'intention de référer ces plaintes là?—R. Oui.

Q. Vous avez eu une assemblée des soldats?—R. Le 12 mars, oui. C'est la même chose, la même organisation que la "Returned Soldiers Society", seulement c'est local français. Ce soir même on doit avoir une autre assemblée pour jeter les bases de l'association.

[Sergeant-Major N. Marion.]

Q. Avez-vous choisi un nom pour votre association?—R. Pour le moment c'est "L'Association Canadienne-française Retour du Front". Mais je dois dire que l'association comprend non seulement ceux qui sont de retour du front, mais ceux qui sont de retour d'outre-mer.

Q. Maintenant, à propos des autres plaintes que vous avez à faire?—R. Nous avons à nous plaindre non seulement pour ce qui se passe ici, à l'hôpital, mais aussi quand les soldats arrivent à Halifax, ils ne rencontrent là personne qui parle le français. Ils sont envoyés à Québec "Canadian Discharged People", ou il n'y a, je pense, qu'un M. Pagé qui parle le français. Et encore, je l'apprends aujourd'hui qu'il y a quelqu'un qui parle français, hier on me disait qu'il n'y avait personne qui parlait français.

Q. Il n'y a personne attaché au personnel de Halifax qui parle le français?—R. Non.

Q. A Saint-Jean non plus?—R. Non.

Par sir Herbert Ames:

Q. Il y a l'un des médecins du bureau à Québec qui parle français?—R. Je crois qu'il y en a un. Quand je suis passé là pas un seul ne m'a parlé français.

Q. Généralement il y en a un?—R. Je ne pourrais pas l'affirmer. Je sais, dans tous les cas, que partout où l'on va c'est une grosse difficulté pour les soldats qui ne parlent pas l'anglais de se faire comprendre et de présenter leurs cas de manière à être compris, leurs cas de maladies ou autre chose.

Q. C'est-à-dire d'expliquer leurs symptômes?—R. Justement.

Par l'hon. M. Murphy:

Q. A l'hôpital des Sœurs Grises combien y a-t-il de soldats canadiens-français?—R. Soixante-deux.

Q. A présent?—R. Oui.

Q. Qui ne parlent pas l'anglais?—R. Je pourrais dire qu'il y en a quarante qui ne parlent pas l'anglais.

Maintenant, il y a autre chose: Un soldat passe à l'examen médical, et il est envoyé à l'hôpital, soit l'hôpital Général, ou l'hôpital Victoria; et là il n'y a personne qui parle français.

Par l'hon. M. Marcl:

Q. Est-ce qu'on lui donne le choix de l'hôpital ou si on l'envoie à un hôpital sans consulter?—R. On ne lui donne pas le choix, je ne crois pas.

Q. Dans ces deux institutions il est très difficile d'avoir du français?—R. Très difficile.

Q. Ni des médecins, ni des gardes-malades?—R. La même chose. Je citerai le cas d'un nommé Biron. Ce garçon là ne parle pas un mot d'anglais, et il n'a pas d'instruction, pas même en français. Il a été envoyé à l'hôpital Général, il y a été envoyé de force, et ce garçon là prétend qu'il n'a eu aucune satisfaction dans ses plaintes. "D'une manière ou d'une autre, dit-il, je n'ai pas pu avoir les soins que j'ai demandés."

Q. Est-ce que des soldats ont demandé d'être envoyés à l'hôpital Notre-Dame ou à l'Hôtel-Dieu?—R. Pas encore. Il faut choisir l'hôpital Victoria ou l'hôpital Général.

Q. Les soldats préféreraient-ils aller à l'hôpital Notre-Dame ou à l'Hôtel-Dieu?—R. Ce serait une bonne chose.

Q. Parce qu'ils pourraient se faire comprendre plus facilement?—R. Ils pourraient se faire comprendre.

Q. Si vous avez autre chose à déclarer, d'autres plaintes à faire, nous sommes prêts à vous entendre.—R. A propos de la langue française, je n'ai pas autre chose.

Q. Est-ce que vous avez de la misère pour vos pensions?—R. J'ai fait paraître quelque chose dans les journaux, il y a deux jours, et j'ai reçu trois ou quatre plaintes; mais je préfère les présenter à Mlle Ross avant de faire des plaintes. Quant aux pensions, il y en a très peu qui m'en ont fait rapport; je puis référer cela à Mlle Ross. C'est en partie sur la question de la langue française que les soldats n'ont pas été satisfaits.

Q. Vous ne pouvez pas vous faire comprendre?—R. Ils ne peuvent pas se faire comprendre. Quand ils sont punis pour avoir commis une petite offense, plus souvent qu'autrement c'est parce qu'ils n'ont pas pu s'expliquer sur ce qu'ils ont fait.

Par M. Middlebro:

Q. Parlez-vous anglais?—R. Un peu, mais pas assez pour m'expliquer en anglais.

Par Sir Herbert Ames:

Q. Est-ce que vous avez autre chose à dire?—R. J'ai ce certificat-ci à présenter. C'est à propos de Paul Caty. C'est un cas de pension; on lui a arrêté sa pension, il veut faire une plainte.

Q. Dans ce cas-ci, laissez la plainte entre les mains du secrétaire, elle sera considérée et nous obtiendrons du département une réponse à propos de cela.

Q. Est-ce que vous avez autre chose?—R. C'est tout pour le moment.

Q. Si vous avez des plaintes à présenter nous sommes prêts à les soumettre au gouvernement et à en obtenir une réponse pour chaque cas.—R. Alors, j'aurai seulement à en référer à M. le secrétaire?

Q. Oui. Faites les plaintes par écrit, mentionnant dans chaque cas le numéro du soldat, et nous demanderons au gouvernement une réponse dans chaque cas.

Et le déposant ne dit rien de plus.

C. FREREAULT,
Secrétaire.

Major D. D. McTAGGART called, sworn and examined.

By the Chairman:

Q. I understand you are the medical officer in charge of the Khaki League?—A. I was. It was part of my duties. I was the president of the Medical Board and the medical officer in charge and the officer in charge of the clearing hospital, and also in charge of the Isolation hospital.

Q. Are you no longer in that position?—A. I am president of the mobilization centre in charge of all the examination of recruits going abroad and those coming back for pensions.

Q. Prior to your new command you have had a good deal of experience dealing with these returned soldiers and you have been a very faithful attendant here listening to what has been going on. The committee would be very glad of any counsel or advice you might care to give us on this matter?—A. I was placed in charge of the military convalescent hospitals that were first opened in Montreal. That is the hospital down in Belmont park which contained about fifty beds. Then it was reopened for the reception of men who had gone abroad. They were treated there, and after it was filled up another hospital was opened in St. George's Hall, and then a third hospital in the old Andrew Allan house at the end of McTavish street. These were all under the charge of the Khaki League. The Khaki League were simply practically quarter-masters. They equipped the building and supplied the stores. The administration of that building was placed under myself as medical officer connected with the Army Medical service.

[Major D. D. McTaggart.]

By Hon. Mr. Daniel:

Q. Who supplied the food and nursing?—A. The nursing was supplied by the Voluntary Aid Nurses.

Q. Of the Khaki League?—A. They simply supplied the food and the administration was entirely under the C. A. M. C.

Q. The Army Medical Corps supplied the medical officers?—A. Yes. I was medical officer in charge with my staff.

Q. Did they supply anything else besides the medical service?—A. No, the whole house was fitted up by the Khaki League and the whole thing supplied and the stationery, etc. was supplied by the Militia Department.

By the Chairman:

Q. You had three hospitals?—A. Yes. Two are open at present.

Q. Are they both full?—A. Yes.

Q. Are they more in demand by the men themselves than the Grey Nunnery?—A. When I was there my hospitals became overcrowded and I had to transfer a certain number to the Grey Nuns Hospital, and after they had been there a time a request came to be taken back to the Khaki League.

Q. They liked the Khaki League better?—A. I undertook the administration of the Khaki League Hospital the same as I had administered the general hospital of which I am one of the staff. If a patient came in there he was treated as a patient in the hospital. I have a complete index of every case that has been in the hospital, a card index, a complete record of every case in the hospital since it was opened.

Q. And you had complete charge of the hospital?—A. Yes.

Q. No combatant in there?—A. No, no combatant should be in there according to my idea of the King's regulations. The hospital should be in charge of a medical officer. All medical hospitals should be under the absolute charge of medical officers, even as regards discipline, because the medical officer is the one that knows what discipline can be meted out to refractory patients.

Q. Whether it should be severe or not?—A. A patient may be too ill to undergo severe punishment. It should be absolutely under the control of the medical officer in charge, and that is where I think the Hospitals Commission has failed; that is, the medical side has been subservient to the combatant side. That is, that combatant side has been established first, whereas to my mind the Military Hospitals Commission should have been a medical body.

By Brigadier-General Mason:

Q. Do you know of any case where there is a combatant officer in charge?—A. I do not know of any case except here. The officer commanding A Unit is in command of all these hospitals.

The CHAIRMAN: Major Hall is practically in charge.

By Brigadier-General Mason:

Q. Is he a combatant officer?—A. Yes.

Q. Is he a medical officer?—A. No.

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. Is he a medical man?—A. No.

Q. And in charge of an hospital?—A. Yes. Another point I might point out that the sick arriving in Montreal are sent to Major Hall, and he distributes them to the different hospitals, whereas that duty absolutely belongs to the medical officer, and then another question came up about granting leave. I as medical officer in charge said "You will not grant leave to any patient in the hospital without my consent. I ask leave to be granted; then you will give it. The medical officer is the one to grant leave." And the message came back to me, "I will grant leave without your consent and I said, "You will do no such a thing," and I said, "I am medical officer in charge according to the King's regulations. I am in charge and should be."

[Major D. D. McTaggart.]

Q. Major Hall did not undertake to extend any control over the Belmont Home or McTavish Home?—A. I think he did at first, but I rather resented it.

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. You did not so much resent it, but rather told him to get out of the road?—A. Yes. The medical officer should be absolutely supreme, and that is where I think the mistake is made. The "A" Unit should be a barracks, and the general hospitals should be absolutely under the control of each medical officer in charge.

By the Chairman:

Q. The "A" Unit should be a barracks?—A. Yes.

Q. Under military discipline?—A. Yes.

Q. And the hospital should be under a medical officer?—A. Yes.

Q. That is your opinion?—A. Yes, and that when we discharge a man from the hospital who is unlikely to receive any further benefit from the treatment, then discharge him back to the barracks in charge of the officer of the unit.

Q. There are about 300 men at the nunnery to-day. How many of those do you consider should be in "A" Unit, and how many should be under medical care?—A. That I could not answer because I have not seen these men. If I could go over them and have the men paraded before me I could tell you.

Q. Would you suppose the proportion would be half and half or anything like that?—A. It might possibly be, because I think there are a great many men that could be in the barracks, that only require to report to the hospital once or twice a week. These men could be in the barracks under the medical supervision of medical officers in the barracks, where they could go through their physical training, and carry on their vocational training work.

Q. Your objection is to the mixing at the Grey Nunnery of purely medical cases which are still convalescent with the other cases?—A. That would be one objection.

Q. Have you any other objection?—A. I am not familiar with the conditions at the Grey Nuns. I have never had charge. The ideal system for the Hospitals Commission would be the establishment of a large hut hospital outside the city, purely under the Canadian Army Medical Corps. That is a large hut outside the city where all these men could be sent. That would be to my mind the ideal condition.

Q. Would there be any difficulty in getting sufficient medical treatment if you were three or four miles away from the city —A. I see no reason why we should not have the best treatment.

Q. Would the men be resident there?—A. Put in resident men—

Q. Do you think there should be a medical officer at the Grey Nunnery at night?

—A. If there are from two to three hundred patients there in that hospital I think it would be wise to have a resident officer there.

Q. One all the time?—A. Yes.

By Brigadier-General Mason:

Q. There are cases of epileptics there?—A. Yes. You may say that other medical officers will be within easy reach but how often do you telephone for a medical man and he is not to be found.

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. Will you tell me what you think about a medical parade. Do you think the patients should be paraded every day?—A. I do. When I was at the other hospital I had my medical parade every morning. There is no reason why every patient cannot be paraded at that hour.

[Major D. D. McTaggart.]

By Hon. Mr. Marcil:

Q. Some patients cannot get out of bed?—A. It is a medical parade all the same. You announce your parade. The outdoor patients are paraded.

By the Chairman:

Q. The parade may be by the doctors?—A. Yes. These patients may be in bed, but it is the parade hour, and the doctor announces his parade for that hour.

Q. It is in a military sense a parade?—A. Yes. Those that are out of bed are paraded, so that the medical man can make his inspection of them. Then the medical man makes his rounds the same as in a large hospital, and every patient can be seen whether he is in bed or out of bed.

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. You are firmly of that opinion so far as these convalescents go in these various stages?—A. Yes. I think those in hospitals should be seen every day.

By Mr. Ross (Middlesex):

Q. Would that parade interfere with their vocational training in your opinion?—A. I do not think so. Make your medical parade at a certain hour in the morning. The medical care of the patient of course is the first consideration.

Q. The harm that would be done would be more than offset by the good?—A. Yes. The vocational work is a secondary consideration.

Witness discharged.

The Committee adjourned until 8.30 p.m.

The Committee resumed at 8 p.m.

Major G. E. HALL, called, sworn and examined.

By the Chairman:

Q. What position do you occupy?—A. Officer commanding "A" Unit Military Hospitals Commission command.

By Hon. Mr. Murphy:

Q. Have you any military experience, any overseas experience?—A. I have, sir. I went with the first division in August 1914.

Q. How long were you over?—A. I enlisted for overseas service in August 1914.

By the Chairman:

Q. In what unit?—A. First Canadian Heavy Battery, left Montreal middle August, 1914, for Valcartier. I was in France nine months and a half.

Q. Were you at the front?—A. In France, yes. With my battery. I was second in command of the First Heavy Battery.

Q. Who is your superior officer at present?—A. The officer commanding is Colonel Sharples; also the general officers commanding M.D. 4 and M.D. 5, that is General Wilson, Montreal, and General Fages, Quebec.

Q. Are you in military district 5?—A. Yes.

Q. Those hospitals here are not in M.D. 5?—A. No, in M.D. 4.

Q. How do you happen to be under Gen. Fages?—A. On account of "A" unit comprising the one convalescent home and one sanitarium in M.D. 5.

Q. Does "A" unit correspond with military districts 4 and 5?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Then I understand your superior officer is Col. Sharples and General Wilson?—A. Yes, sir, and Gen. Fages.

[Major G. E. Hall.]

Q. Do you report to all three of them?—A. No, sir. I report to Col. Sharples.

Q. Is your jurisdiction parallel to that of Captain Grey, or do you have entirely different fields of action?—A. Entirely different, sir.

Q. What are your duties, and what are his?—A. My duties are entirely administrative and operative.

Q. And his?—A. Medical.

Q. Entirely medical?—A. Yes.

Q. If there should arise any difference of opinion at the Grey Nuns Hospitals for example, whose opinion would rule? Would that depend upon the character of the question? If it were a medical question his opinion would rule and if it were a military question would your opinion rule?—A. Absolutely. I have never attempted to overrule Captain Grey or any other medical officers in connection with medical matters.

Q. Who has charge of the discipline of the men?—A. I have, sir.

Q. Who has charge of the physical comforts of the hospital in matters of light, air, ventilation and all those things?—A. I have, sir.

Q. Are you responsible for its cleanliness or otherwise?—A. Yes.

Q. And for its discipline?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. We have had a good many criticisms of the conditions of the Grey Nuns Hospital, and I took a memorandum of some of them, and I am going to ask you with regard to these criticisms. In the first place, one of the criticisms was that the Grey Nuns Hospital recreation room in the basement was too small, 92 feet long, 42 feet wide, 15 feet high, and that it usually contained about 200 men, that it was not a fit place for convalescents, that there was no quiet and no fresh air. What have you to say to that criticism, as to the suitability of the place?—A. In the first place up until approximately four weeks ago there were less than 180 men in that institution, and it is only within that time that the number has increased to over 200. I am free to admit that the accommodation from a recreation point of view was rather cramped.

Q. How many men have you there now under your command to-day?—A. About 230 approximately.

Q. Do you consider that 230 men are too many for that recreation room?—A. Not now.

Q. Why not now?—A. Because the Vocational Training classes have been removed and immediately they were removed I took steps to have these vocational classrooms turned into non-smoking rest rooms for the men and they are now occupied.

Q. Does your staff for administrative purposes take any portion of that large room known as the rest room?—A. A room about 8 by 10 between the two sections of the old vocational classrooms.

Q. Now the criticism that was made was in respect to the discipline of men who are convalescents, who had been, we will say out in the evening and came back. A good deal of criticism was made as to the location and furnishing of the detention rooms that you have there? What can you say regarding that?—A. On my assuming command on the 1st of August, 1916, of A Unit, it was very forcibly impressed upon me the necessity of having detention cells for convalescent soldiers, and I took immediate action, and after consultation with at least one of the members of the Montreal branch of the Military Hospitals Commission, as well as my O.C., a location was decided upon for the cells and detention room. There was only one available space. I placed the matter before the Canadian Engineers of military district No. 4. They drew up plans and specifications, called for tenders, and those four cells and detention room were built in accordance with the plans and specifications of the Canadian Engineers of the Canadian Militia.

Q. Is there any furnishing at all in connection with them?—A. Absolutely none.

Q. If a man is put into one of the cells he lies on the floor?—A. No, he has blankets.

Q. Except for the blankets he is on the floor?—A. Yes.

[Major G. E. Hall.]

Q. No mattress or couch or anything of that kind?—A. No.

Q. How many men have you had in those cells at any one time?—A. At times I have had them full, I am sorry to say, in the beginning.

Q. How many men would there be in one of those cells?—A. One, sir.

Q. You would never put more than one man in a cell?—A. Certainly not.

Q. You have had four men in, one in each of your cells?—A. Yes.

Q. You have a detention room besides?—A. Yes.

Q. You have had men in that cell?—A. Yes.

Q. Do you have a good many men return under the influence of liquor after they have been out in the evening?—A. Occasionally.

Q. What do you do with them when a convalescent man comes back under the influence of liquor?—A. If I may be permitted to say, in the British Army, a man is either drunk or sober, and if he is drunk he is tried. The man who returns to the home drunk is placed under arrest and is paraded for offence on that charge the next morning. In every instance I will go so far as to say, and I am prepared to back it up, that so far as the non-commissioned officers and men of my staff are concerned, a man is given the benefit of the doubt in every case, and if there is any question as to whether he is drunk or sober the man gets the benefit of it.

Q. That is he is given a bed to sleep it off?—A. Yes.

Q. If there is any question about it, and you think he would be noisy or troublesome in the night, you put him in the cell?—A. If he gets beyond control, if he upsets the whole ward where perhaps there will be sixty or seventy men and nothing can be done with him, then he is placed in the cells.

Q. The recreation room on the basement floor is not occupied as a sleeping apartment at all?—A. No, sir.

Q. So that at night, when the men are upstairs, that lower floor is vacant?—A. Absolutely, sir.

Q. And you put them into the cells and they are no disturbance to the people in the sleeping apartments above?—A. Except for the large staircase, naturally when a man is very noisy, his shouts and yelling will be heard upstairs.

Q. Supposing you have a man who is more or less of a cripple, who is allowed out in the evening, and who comes in the worse of liquor, would you put him into the clink for the night, on the floor, if he were physically in a deteriorated condition?—A. No, sir.

Q. Do you consider his medical condition when you are deciding whether you shall put a man into the cells for a night or not?—A. Most decidedly.

Q. Would you say that you have never put a man in there whose medical condition would suffer in consequence of his having to sleep at night on the floor?—A. For one night, sir?

Q. Yes?—A. I do, sir.

Q. There was one case that was brought up in connection with a man named Brook. You remember that instance on the 16th February? Brook was a patient and I understand he got into an altercation with a non-commissioned officer and was struck by the non-commissioned officer?—A. I think you are referring to Rooke.

Q. Yes. Will you give us an account of what occurred on that occasion?—A. On my return from lunch that day my sergeant-major reported to me the occurrence.

Q. What did the occurrence consist of as reported to you?—A. Of an altercation between the Sergeant—

Q. By the name Hornet?—A. Yes, and one of the other N.C.O's of the guard.

Q. By the name of Viggar?—A. No, Vigor.

Q. Not Viger?—A. No, and Private Rooke.

Q. Was it the subject of an inquiry?—A. It was.

Q. Did you preside at the inquiry?—A. I did, sir.

[Major G. E. Hall.]

Q. What was the evidence and the decision?—A. I very seriously reprimanded Sergeant Hornet.

Q. For what?—A. Plainly speaking, losing his head.

Q. And striking a patient?—A. No, sir, he did not strike a patient. There was no evidence to that effect. I held this inquiry. I might say this occurrence took place about 1.30 on a Friday afternoon. I ordered the investigation for 6.30 that evening but had to postpone it until 2.30 the following afternoon. Prior to the session on the Friday evening, I transferred Sergeant Hornet to another convalescent home.

Q. You transferred him before the inquiry?—A. Yes.

Q. Then when did you reprimand him?—A. Saturday afternoon.

Q. After the inquiry?—A. Yes.

Q. When he was at the other home?—A. Yes.

Q. Was there any further punishment inflicted?—A. On Sergeant Hornet?

Q. Yes?—A. No, sir.

Q. Was any serious injury done to Rooke?—A. Not that I am aware of. He did not complain of any injury.

Q. Were the other convalescent patients very indignant over the treatment that was accorded to Rooke by Sergeant Hornet?—A. Apparently they were, sir.

Q. What steps did they take in the matter?—A. They attempted to rush the guard.

Q. How was that trouble quelled?—A. By my quartermaster-sergeant, who was a battery sergeant-major of the 2nd Brigade, Canadian Field Artillery, and by my company sergeant-major who enlisted with me as a sergeant in the 1st Heavy Battery.

Q. Then you have a group of the men who were with you overseas?—A. Yes.

Q. How did they happen to come back?—A. They were wounded, sir. If I may be permitted to state, between 80 and 85 per cent of the non-commissioned officers and men on my administrative staff are returned overseas men who have been discharged.

Q. Who have seen service at the front?—A. Yes.

Q. Not merely went through England?—A. No, sir, seen service in France and discharged here in Canada as medically unfit for further military service.

Q. Some of those who spoke on behalf of the soldiers themselves have complained of the hours in which they were detained in the Grey Nunnery; they spoke regarding the hours in which men were permitted to get out in the open air, out of the hospital. Did you receive instructions from your superior officer with respect to the schedule of hours men were to follow?—A. I did, sir.

Q. That came to you for enforcement only; it was not a rule of your own making?—A. The syllabus was forwarded to me by O.C. of the command on the beginning of my command.

Q. Is it an order such as went to all hospitals throughout Canada, all O.C.'s of units?—A. All O.C.'s of units.

Q. Throughout Canada?—A. Yes.

Q. Are the same hours to be found in Halifax, St. John and elsewhere?—A. Yes, as far as I know.

Q. It was a circular order?—A. Yes.

Q. What are those hours?—A. For returned overseas C.O.'s and men who are declared medically fit they are allowed out daily 5 p.m. until 10.30 and on Saturday and Sundays 1 p.m. to 10.30. In the event of a man being married they are issued passes to sleep at home. I might say that when these men return from furlough they are all paraded before me. I have a talk with them and impress upon them as concisely as possible the standing orders, the special orders, and the daily orders which govern their conduct not only in the home, but outside the home, and make them realize that if they follow those orders, they will not only keep out of trouble, but save me a lot of trouble, and the members of my staff. They are all made aware of that before they are assigned beds in any institution under my command on their return from furlough. I do not leave it to any non-commissioned officer or man and I make it thoroughly understood that if at any time they have a grievance, or any misunderstanding to ask to be paraded before me in the proper manner, and that I would see that they got satisfaction.

Q. Now there is a general criticism regarding those hours, convalescent men stating that while the sun is shining is the time they want to be out, not after the sun goes down in the wintertime. What are the reasons why the hours were so arranged?—A. With the syllabus that is laid down, practically the best part of the whole day is taken up with physical and vocational training.

Q. The reason they are not let out in the daytime is because they are occupied with their various kinds of training?—A. Except the lunch hour.

Q. Supposing you have men who are not taking any physical or vocational training, are they permitted to go out in the daytime at all?—A. Not unless especially recommended by the medical officer in charge.

Q. But on his recommendation you would allow any man to go out?—A. Yes. I might say in addition to my previous remarks, that in the case of married men who live in Montreal and have their wives and families here, if recommended by the medical officer, they are issued with passes to sleep at home. They are allowed out daily from 5 p.m. until the next morning, and a very large percentage of the men are married.

Q. You exercise control over the Belmont Park Home and the McTavish Home?—A. Yes, so far as the discipline goes.

Q. Do you visit them daily?—A. No.

Q. Who is the local representative of military authority at those two places?—A. Well they are operated by the Khaki League.

Q. But some military or medical authority is in charge?—A. The Army Medical Corps so far as the medical end of it is concerned.

Q. There was a strange statement made here that we did not understand last night, that at one time there were twenty-five tuberculosis patients in the Grey Nunnery without the knowledge of the authorities of the nunnery?—A. What authorities are referred to?

Q. Take the statements that at one time there were twenty-five tuberculosis patients in there without the knowledge?—A. They were in there to my knowledge and on my orders.

Q. Where did they come from and why were they there?—A. They were either cases returned from Ste. Agathe who had refused treatment, whose period of treatment had expired, and who were recommended for discharge, or they were cases who were proceeding to Ste. Agathe or cases recommended for Ste. Agathe, who had refused treatment.

Q. How long did you have them there?—A. The period of each varies.

Q. Were they segregated?—A. Yes.

Q. Not allowed to mingle with the other patients at all?—A. No, except they marched down to their meals and marched back again.

Q. Did they eat in the same room with the others?—A. They had a table by themselves. That order has always been in force since I have been in command and that order has always been enforced to the letter.

Q. Do they have a sleeping ward to themselves?—A. Yes.

Q. Have you any there now?—A. There may be three or four.

Q. Always kept separate?—A. Yes, it is absolutely essential that these tuberculosis cases must be detained somewhere. The men refuse treatment at Ste. Agathe. I have to submit the matter to the A.D.M.S. of the district that the man has refused treatment, he has to be finally medically boarded, and a recommendation forwarded to me from headquarters of the district, authorizing his discharge.

[Major G. E. Hall.]

Q. I suppose where the man insists upon it even although he is in an advanced stage of tuberculosis he can have his discharge?—A. If it is recommended to me I have no other course to follow.

Q. If a man won't take the treatment provided for him, and goes——?—A. He signs a release refusing further treatment.

Q. Although the medical authorities would be glad to keep him and have him cured if possible?—A. Certainly.

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. When you speak of the administration of the hospital, so far as you are concerned, that is purely disciplinary?—A. Yes.

Q. The medical end you have nothing whatever to do with?—A. No, sir, except so far as furnishing the staff for the medical officer.

Q. What do you mean by that?—A. All the non-commissioned officers and men under the medical officer in a convalescent home or sanitarium under my command are on my pay-roll and they are under me for discipline.

By the Chairman:

Q. Subject to your orders?—A. Yes.

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. Do you mean the medical officers?—A. No, the non-commissioned officers, men and the orderlies.

Q. That is wholly for discipline purposes?—A. Yes.

Q. With the medical end, did you have the placing of the patients?—A. To the different homes?

Q. Yes?—A. Yes.

Q. Would it not strike you that, as the different homes were of a different nature, the medical man ought to have that work, or what do you think?—A. I think perhaps on some occasions for which there is good reason I do not, but generally speaking, as my headquarters were located temporarily in the Grey Nuns Convalescent Home, the documents, which included their medical board at the discharge depot in Quebec were gone over by the medical officer of the Grey Nuns Convalescent Home, and so many men were sent to Khaki League Home No. 1 and so many to No. 3 and so many remained in the Grey Nuns Convalescent Home, and so many were sent to Ste Agathe.

Q. By your orders, or by whose orders?—A. By my orders.

Q. Would it strike you that there were a great many of these cases, one very different from the others in these medical cases?—A. Certainly.

Q. Would you not think a medical man would be the best man to pass on the cases, as to where they should be sent?—A. I was carrying out my orders.

Q. Where did you get these orders?—A. Colonel Sharples.

Q. Is Colonel Sharples a medical man?—A. He is a very experienced military man.

Q. But not a medical man?—A. I am not in a position to say that.

Q. And all you had to do was to follow out what was told you from headquarters?—A. Yes.

Q. And that is all you did?—A. Yes.

Q. We have heard complaints here that in the Grey Nuns Hospital there is a lack of light and a lack of air. Are you competent to judge of that?—A. Daylight I presume, is meant.

Q. I suppose so?—A. No doubt there has been. So far as air is concerned, I fail to see where any one could have handled the situation any better. They are convalescent. They are not men fit for service. If a window is open back of my head here I may not raise any objection to it. A window might be open 10 feet from me behind another man's head who would raise an awful disturbance over the cold air coming into that recreation room. To take care of that situation, to the very best of our ability, the matter was laid before the Canadian Engineers of this Military District, who went over the recreation room, decided on the type or types at least, of ventilators that should be installed, which would draw the atmosphere out, and the tender covering the most expensive type was accepted by the Canadian Engineers of this district, and the ventilators were installed at a cost of approximately $100.

Q. Are they in operation?—A. Yes.

Q. That is what was done so far as air is concerned?—A. Yes.

Q. And light?—A. The excessive snowfall, and the falling of snow off the roofs, particularly on the west and east sides, naturally caused a great depth of snow outside of the windows, and, as far as possible, the snow was removed from the immediate proximity of same.

By Mr. Sutherland:

Q. I was going to ask you if you require artificial light there during the daylight hours?—A. On certain days I required it often.

By Hon. Mr. Murphy:

Q. During winter?—A. Yes.

Q. Only?—A. Only.

Q. Although your office is right next to the window?—A. Yes.

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. Then you give your orders for the evening parade from headquarters too?—A. That is part of the syllabus and standing orders.

Q. Do you think, taking these complaints into consideration, and taking the allotment of the men—just let us get away from the Medical Hospitals Service and the Canadian Army Medical Corps altogether—do you think that a hospital such as the Grey Nuns or any other hospital is better under the discipline of any officer other than the medical officer, providing that medical officer knows his business?—A. No question about that.

Q. You think it is better?—A. Better operated so far as discipline is concerned by a combatant officer, do you mean?

Q. Yes?—A. Most decidedly.

Q. You think it is better?—A. There is no question about it.

Q. You think as a combatant officer when punishment is to be given to convalescents that you are in a position to say better what punishment is to be given than a medical man?—A. From a military standpoint, yes, sir.

Q. No, from a convalescent standpoint, never mind the military. Do you tell this Committee that you are in a better position to judge what punishment should be meted out to a convalescent man than a medical man?—A. A man is not put in the cells if he has been paraded before me for offence (and is deserving of detention in cells), unless he is declared fit by the medical officer.

Q. What I am asking you is this: do you as a man, having no knowledge whatever more than the ordinary man sitting around this table has of a convalescent's condition, a convalescent being a man who to my idea, I may tell you frankly here is under medical care—do you think as a man that you are in as fit a condition to judge of that man's punishment as a medical man who knows the absolute internal condition of that man?—A. I do, sir.

Q. Why?—A. Well, for many reasons.

Q. Tell us some of them?—A. Because I have been through it all myself.

Q. Through what?—A. Through the war, as long as I was in overseas service. I have my whole heart and soul devoted to the interests of those men, and in every instance I can only repeat my statement made a few minutes ago to the chairman that the man gets the benefit of the doubt.

[Major G. E. Hall.]

By the Chairman:

Q. Were you wounded?—A. No, sir.

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. Now then, on your own statement of facts, with your whole heart and soul in it you as a layman, as against a medical man, cannot tell the condition of that man medically?—A. No, except by referring to his last medical report which I have.

Q. How long ago would that last medical report be made?—A. Within a month at the outside.

Q. What you say is this, that you as a layman, although there may be a medical report on that man a month old, and although that man may have undergone in his physical condition a change which you may not have known of, and the doctors did not see this man for many days at a time, according to the evidence here, you think that your opinion of that man's punishment is as good as the judgment of the man who knows just what that man needs for the curing of him?—A. Yes.

Q. Do you think that?—A. Yes, because here if there were any question or doubt in my mind regarding that man, before he was punished I would consult with the medical authorities.

Q. But how can you, in your mind, tell what the trouble with that man is as against the medical authorities? Can any one of us at this table tell?—A. Well, that's a pretty broad question.

Q. Your statement is broad. Is it not an absolute impossibility for any layman to know the condition of a man who has been reported on for a month and whether the punishment is good for him or bad for him?—A. Well, if a man is deserving of punishment, and he is fit for it—he is punished.

Q. According to your lights?—A. Yes, and also that of the medical officer.

Q. But is the medical officer's opinion taken prior to the time that man is punished?—A. In doubtful cases every time.

Q. What do you call a doubtful case?—A. That would depend entirely on his disability.

Q. You get back to the original question. However we will not argue it further?—A. May I cite a case?

Q. Yes, I am only arguing it out with you?—A. Supposing a man has been a habitual drunkard, not only overseas, but since he returned, and he is fit for detention, should he not get the limit, so far as military punishment goes?

Q. Let me answer that question by asking you another one. Supposing that same man although he has been and still is a drunkard and he comes back suffering from shell shock, would you be right in putting that man in the cells?—A. No, sir. I would not put a shell shock case in the cells.

Q. And they never were put there?—A. Perhaps over night, if a man came in like a raving maniac, and nothing could be done, as I have cited some cases, a man who had to be handcuffed temporarily, and there was medicine given him to quiet his nerves.

By the Chairman:

Q. Are there not some men who have returned from the front, who, if they got liquor would be very badly affected?—A. Yes, they go absolutely crazy. I have known cases where with one drink a man has got in a bad condition, been robbed and his boots taken off his feet.

Q. Is it the quality of the liquor given him or the condition of the man who takes it?—A. It is the quality of the liquor according to the man's own statement.

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. In the army or out of it?—A. Have I got to answer that?

Q. No. There was evidence given here today or yesterday that a man who was practically what I have heard described as a "border-land" man, who was put in these cells, and kept there, from a Saturday night I think it was until a Monday with other men who had been drunk. Do you think that was proper treatment?—A. That man would be paraded before me on Sunday morning.

Q. The evidence here was that he was continually confined from Saturday until Monday and he was practically a "border-land" man. That was a Halifax case. You think that under those circumstances that you as a layman or myself or the Chairman would be as well able to judge of that man's detention and punishment as a medical officer?—A. No, because I would get medical advice before detaining him that long.

Q. Before you detain a man do you always get medical advice?—A. Except in a case of emergency: for instance a man may be brought in from different parts of the city; they might telephone the sergeant of the guard that a returned soldier was drunk, creating a disturbance in some part of the city, and an escort would be sent for him and he would be brought back. If he were in such a state as to warrant being put in the cells, he would be placed there until morning.

Q. Are there provisions made in the cells for drunkards?—A. Generally speaking, yes.

Q. What other cases are there besides drunkenness that are committed to the cells?—A. Serious cases of insubordination, threatening to strike a non-commissioned officer. These cases are subject to close arrest.

By Hon. Mr. Daniel:

Q. Absent without leave?—A. No.

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. Nothing but violence?—A. No.

Q. Those are the only classes of cases committed to the cells?—A. Yes.

Q. When these men are committed to the cells they have no mattresses to sleep on?—A. No.

Q. They can roll up in the blankets and lie on the floor?—A. Yes.

Q. Which, I think you will agree with me, even to a man who has been drinking, is rather a serious way to leave him?—A. Yes.

Q. Provided that man's medical condition is not what it should be?—A. Far better than the cell accommodation they provided prior to my taking command.

Q. That may or may not be. You have tried to better it?—A. I have tried to better it.

Q. Do you think that ought to be or ought not to be? Do you not think that is pretty severe for a well man?—A. A well man would not get blankets.

Q. He would be left alone?—A. Yes.

Q. On the bare floor?—A. Yes.

Q. A convalescent gets one blanket?—A. Two blankets.

Q. One under and one above?—A. Yes.

Q. Not much better than the floor?—A. Well I would say better than the floor.

Q. Will you go this far, that it is pretty stringent?—A. It is, sir.

Q. And if it is stringent for that well man, it is 100 per cent more stringent for a convalescent, I do not care whether he is drunk or not?—A. Not necessarily.

Q. The men that come back and are confined in the Grey Nuns are all men that are more or less ill: they would not be there otherwise?—A. They may be detained here pending disposal of their case. Camp men who have never been outside of Montreal—

Q. Let us leave those and go to the Overseas fellows, the real ones, the man that is there from overseas and is a sick man. To leave that sick man in a cell with a blanket above and a blanket below is pretty stringent treatment. Do you agree with me there?—A. Not in return for the offence he is guilty of.

[Major G. E. Hall.]

By the Chairman:

Q. Do you regard incarceration in the cell as a punishment or as a prevention against that man disturbing the peace of others, which is your prime object in putting him in the cell?—A. Prevention is my prime object, sir.

Q. To prevent him disturbing the peace of others?—A. Yes.

Q. Could he not be just as well prevented if he were placed on a paillasse in the cell?—(No answer.)

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. Do you not think, Major, that in the ordinary police station there is a mattress, and do you not think that your returned convalescent soldier will be just as quiet on a mattress as he would be on the floor with a blanket over him?—A. He would be more comfortable, sir.

Q. And if more comfortable, he would be more quiet?—A. That does not necessarily follow.

Q. We are all so constituted, is the returned soldier any different?—A. Well, it depends on the quality of the liquor he has had. Would you believe it, sir, in some instances the man's condition is due to the quality of liquor he has had. I could cite cases where during his whole period of convalescence one charge of drunkenness against a man was due to the quality of the liquor.

Q. I do not just get you, when you say one charge of drunkenness. Was it due to the quality of the liquor that he never took another drink?—A. He was never up before me on the charge of drunkenness afterwards.

Q. A nerve man will go to liquor some?—A. Yes.

Q. And if the nerve man goes to liquor do you always know that it is a nerve man who is before you for drunkenness?—A. Oh, I will not say I know in every case.

Q. Do you think, then, supposing you made a mistake, that it is a fair proposition to put a nerve man in the cell without a mattress? Let us leave the military side and get down to the human aspect. What do you think of that?—A. Well, what is the use of having discipline, sir, unless it is enforced with reason, and that is what I am trying to do—enforce it with reason.

Q. With reason?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. If, Major, it has been enforced with reason without proper medical advice and upreintendence, what do you think of that?—A. Well, I am open for criticism sir, if I have done that.

Q. And you are open to conviction?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Then do you not really think that before any man such as a soldier returned from overseas suffering from nerves, and which you may or may not know, is brought before you on a charge of drunkenness, it would always be better—leaving out the fact that sometimes it may or may not be necessary that the greatest good accomplishes the greatest thing—that it would always be well before these men are disciplined and sent to the cells to have medical opinion upon them?—A. Perhaps it would, sir.

MR. PARDEE: That is my opinion, Major, I am not finding fault with you, you are acting according to your orders.

By the Chairman:

Q. In which case it would follow that a medical man ought always to be on duty, day and night, at the Grey Nunnery?—A. Yes, sir.

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. Do you believe there is any reason why, with a 24 hour day and nine men available, serving three hours each, making 27 hours, there should not be continually at the Grey Nuns Hospital a medical man?—A. No, sir.

Q. You agree on that, Major Hall, you think there ought to be? Now you can give me one more opinion: Do you not think that with men suffering as these men are—and we all know what they have gone through and what they have suffered—that when a man complained that he had not seen a doctor for several days there is no reason why a schedule should not be drawn up whereby these men should be paraded every day for sickness when they are in that hospital?—A. Absolutely none, sir.

Q. Absolutely no reason why these men should not be medically paraded every day?—A. At the same time, I may say in that connection that in a great many cases the men are to blame themselves. They are only too ready to sit back, so to speak, and let one day after another pass, when they realize they should report sick and that it is their duty to do so. In the event of their reporting sick they will be paraded before a medical officer or a medical Board.

Q. If a regulation were adopted providing for a compulsory medical parade every day, the man would have to report, would he not?—A. There is a point involved there which makes me a little reluctant in answering the question.

Q. Well, give us your idea.—A. Of course, in the field on service, if a man is unfit for duty he has to report sick.

Q. That is compulsory?—A. Yes, sir. If he does not report sick he has got to do duty. There is no alternative. Now, in a Convalescent Home a man may unintentionally or intentionally fail to report sick. That man cannot be punished.

Q. But suppose the man is not a bed patient. In that case, as was very well put by the Chairman this afternoon, the Doctor would be the fellow who would parade, now, if the rule of the hospital is that such and such a ward should parade from ten to eleven, and that another ward should parade from eleven to twelve, in order to observe the schedule of vocational training, and so on, then that man would have to parade whether he liked it or not, would he not?—A. Yes.

By the Chairman:

Q. There is no reason why the medical examination of different patients should not take place every 24 hours?—A. From a military point of view, sir, I fail to see any reason why it should not. I do not wish to infringe on the medical side of it.

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. Let us try what we can to effect a betterment. Now, you told us that from 80 to 85 per cent of your staff in that Hospital was composed of men who had been overseas and had been discharged?—A. Throughout the whole command, sir.

Q. That includes your Hospital Command—your Grey Nuns Hospital, and so forth?—A. Yes.

Q. Would it strike you, Major Hall, by reason of fact, that this 80 or 85 per cent who had gone through strong disciplinary training on the field and off the field, and were imbued with military ideas from their heads to their heels, would perhaps not be the best men to deal with these convalescents?—A. No, sir.

Q. You still think that what they want is discipline?—A. No, sir.

Q. You do not think that?—A. Oh, no.

Q. What do you think they need?—A. The exercising of diplomacy and tact, first and foremost.

Q. Do you always think that is better?—A. Always.

A. And you think the through and through military man is the best to exercise that?—A. I think so.

Q. You do?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. How often are you at the Grey Nuns' Hospital?—A. Well, up to yesterday I had my temporary headquarters there.

Q. Do you live there all the time?—A. I was there pretty much all the time. I had my office and headquarters there.

Q. How long were you there during the course of the day?—A. From nine o'clock in the morning until from half past six to half past seven at night, and on Sunday forenoons.

[Major G. E. Hall.]

Q. Then, as to the rest of the hospitals under this Commission, how much do you see of them?—A. Not as much as I would like to see.

Q. What other hospitals are under your command?—A. The two Khaki League Homes in Montreal, the Laurentian Sanitarium, so far as relates to the men under my command in that institution, the Laurentide Inn Military Sanitarium, the Savard Park Convalescent Home, and the Lake Edward Sanitarium.

By the Chairman:

Q. And the St. George's Home?—A. No, sir.

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. So you do not see much of the discipline in these institutions?—A. Actually, no, sir.

Q. But you are responsible for discipline?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Then how often, for instance, would you see the Lake Edward or the Savard Park Convalescent Homes in the course of a month?—A. I do not average once a month.

Q. And the discipline therefore is carried on by men deputed by you?—A. So far as discipline is concerned.

Q. There is a medical officer there in charge in each one of these places?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you not think that man is in better position to carry on the discipline than you? When I say that, I mean you, or any officer in your position; I am not talking about you personally but talking about the whole proposition?—A. You mean as to the enforcement of discipline?

Q. Yes?—A. If it were possible for a non-combatant officer, such as an Army Medical Corps officer is, to maintain discipline, why is it necessary for them to appeal to a combatant officer when a man refuses to abide by the regulations?

Q. When did they do that?—A. Right yesterday afternoon in this city.

Q. What happened?—A. Two (2) very insubordinate men at the Royal Victoria Hospital, who laughed and jeered at the medical officer up there.

Q. That was not in any sense a hospital under your command in the way of being actually under your aegis?—A. No, sir, the Royal Victoria is not.

Q. Let us take a case in the Khaki League Hospitals it would not be necessary here?—A. Yes, only yesterday, I had to send an escort to the Khaki League Home, No. 3, to bring a man down under arrest.

Q. For what?—A. Drunkenness, and bringing liquor into the Home. The Medical officer phoned me personally that he could not do anything with him.

Q. Then as far as your opinion goes, it is in direct conflict with that of Dr. McTaggart?—A. I do not know what he said.

Q. Dr. McTaggart said that he had charge of No. 1 and No. 3 Khaki League Hospitals and that in all cases in those hospitals he had administered discipline and had actual charge of the patients?—A. Not after I assumed command.

Q. He had not?—A. Certainly not.

Q. You assumed command when?—A. The 1st August.

Q. That is a matter for you and Dr. McTaggart to fight out. I understood him to say that as well as being medical officer in charge he was disciplinary officer.—A. A medical officer cannot sentence a man whether it affects his pay or not.

Q. That is another thing for you and him to fight out, because he says you have not that power.—A. I am not of that opinion; if he were correct I would have no authority as O.C. "A" Unit.

Q. If he were given rank and put in charge of that hospital by the military authorities, he would have power?—A. Not being a combatant officer, he would not. There is a vast difference between a combatant officer in the British army and a non-combatant.

Q. What is the difference?—A. I will cite you a few examples of non-combatant officers: Army Pay Corps officers, Army Medical Corps officers, Veterinary Corps and Army Dental Corps officers.

Q. The Army Medical Corps officer is a non-combatant officer?—A. Yes.

Q. Are you an Army Medical Corps officer, or under the Canadian Military Hospitals Commission?—A. No, I am in the Canadian Artillery, and am simply detailed to the Military Hospitals Commission Command.

Q. You are in the Military Hospitals Commission Command?—A. Yes.

Q. Why does that give you any better standing than a man in the Army Medical Corps?—A. That is not for me, in my humble position, to say.

Q. That is something above you. I am going to submit to you, as a very humble layman that a man, in the Army Medical Corps, I do not know much about the Militia end of it, ought surely to be as much able and have as much right to exercise discipline, as a man under the Military Hospitals Commission Command. I cannot myself, I am quite free to say to you, quite get it; it looks to me to be funny, but you say that it is so?—A. All the O.C.'s commanding the different units of the Military Hospitals Commission command are combatant officers.

Q. Of which Command?—A. Of the M.H.C.C.

By the Chairman:

Q. Under Colonel Sharples?—A. Under Colonel Sharples' command.

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. As a matter of fact these Army Medical Corps men have been in the field for years and years carrying on this work?—A. Some of them.

Q. And the moment the war breaks out and the Military Hospitals are established the Army Medical man is deprived of his rank as a combatant officer, and the Commission that is created only after the war breaks out, supercedes him, is that the state of affairs?—A. I think that is a very unfair question to put to me.

Q. I do not want to put you in an unfair position at all, what I am trying to get at is why a man under the Military Hospitals Commission should be a combatant officer, whereas the man in the Army Medical Corps, who has served years in the Militia of the country should, by a stroke of the pen become a non-combatant officer. I do not care to press the question. But I take it that is the state of affairs, and if that be so we would like to know it for the information of the committee?—A. Is that a direct question as far as I am personally concerned?

Q. If you care to answer it is, but if you do not care to answer, do not do so?—A. I was in the Militia before the war, and went overseas.

Q. I am quite willing to give you full credit for doing so. A. And I came back and I was unfit to return, and convalesced all the winter. This position was offered me and it depended entirely upon my physical condition and ability as to whether I would accept it permanently or not. I did not expect, aside from everything else, that I would be physically able for any length of time to hold it down.

Q. Quite so, Major, I am not finding any fault with that, far be it from me to do so, but I am only trying to get at the facts. I will put it this way, there appears to be difficulty in the way; so far as the Army Medical Corps and so far as the Military Hospitals Commission Command goes, there seems to be a divided authority. And if this Committee can, by getting at the bottom of the trouble, bring about a remedy, we want to do so. We have heard Captain Grey speak here to-day, and you have given your evidence here to-night, from which it is clear that there is a divided authority. Now the question is how can we remedy that. All I am asking you is how it is that a Army Medical man has less standing as a combatant officer, than a Military Hospitals Commission Command officer has.

[Major G. E. Hall.]

The CHAIRMAN: I will put the question a little differently to the way Mr. Pardee has put it. Are we to understand that among the functions which an Army Medical Corps officer may exercise, that of discipline is not one and that, of the functions which a combatant officer may exercise, discipline is one?—A. Yes.

Q. Does that express the essential difference?—A. Yes.

Q. And that is the whole story, is it?—A. Yes.

By Mr. Pardee:

Q. Then an Army Medical Corps man is not entitled to discipline any soldier?—A. No, sir.

By Hon. Mr. Daniel:

Q. It is stated that no medical officer has any power of command. I think you stated that no medical officer has any command——

The CHAIRMAN: Has disciplinary powers.

By Hon. Mr. Daniel:

Q. I think you stated that a medical officer has no command, and that any officer who has command has disciplinary powers, that goes without saying, the fact of his commanding gives him that power. I would like the Major to say if he did not make that statement?—A. I do not recollect replying in those words because I do not remember any question being put to me that would call for that reply.

Q. Is it your opinion that no medical officer has command?—A. From a disciplinary point of view.

Q. I am speaking on the point of "command." That includes discipline does it not?—A. Being in "command" and "in charge of" are quite different.

Q. I am speaking of the word "command."—A. I do not know of any medical officers in command at the moment, so far as my command is concerned.

Q. Can you tell me how is an ambulance corps conducted, and who has command of it? There are about 100 or 150 men, are there not, in that corps? Who are officers, for discipline and everything else?—A. The commanding officer.

Q. What kind of officer? What would you call him, a combatant officer, or an officer of the Canadian Army Medical Corps?—A. The Army Medical Corps, sir.

Q. Certainly. Then, if you made the statement that no medical officer exercised the command the statement would not be correct, would it?—A. But, sir, I do not say that, I did not make that statement.

Q. Supposing you did, if you had made it, it would not be correct would it?—A. I would ask the Chairman to request the reporter to read the notes. If I made the statement, I do not recollect doing so.

Q. Then you would not make that statement now, that no medical officer exercised any command?—A. No, sir, I would not.

Q. That was the impression I think you gave to the Committee. You said that in your opinion you thought it was much better to have a combatant officer in command of the hospitals, and you gave the reason that having been at the front you knew what was the practice on the other side. Having been there, will you tell me what is the practice in the British hospitals, and at the front with regard to that?—A. I could not say.

Q. You do not know?—A. No.

Q. Very well, we will leave it at that then. I may say that I have already asked that question of Colonel MacKenzie Forbes, who has been at the front. I asked him with regard to the command at the hospitals and I mentioned specially the No. 1 Canadian Hospital, and he said it was entirely controlled and commanded by the medical officers in each hospital. That was a fact over there, but you think here that it is absolutely necessary that a combatant officer should be in command of the hospital?—A. Conditions were such, sir, or at least I will put it this way: Conditions were evidently such that it warranted combatant officers being put in command of the hospitals, so far as enforcing discipline is concerned.

[Major G. E. Hall.]

Q. I did not quite catch that, would you mind repeating it?—A. In this country conditions were evidently such or had reached such a stage that it warranted combatant officers being put in command of these convalescent homes and sanatoria.

By the Chairman:

Q. That is the Canadian practice?—A. Yes, so far as the organization of the Military Hospitals Commission Command is concerned.

By Hon. Mr. Daniel:

Q. Do the Canadian Army Medical Corps officers have command of the ordinary hospitals in Canada, the military hospitals that are not under the Military Hospitals Commission, or is a combatant officer put in charge of them?—A. Matters of discipline, it is for a combatant officer to deal with them.

The CHAIRMAN: To make a fair comparison you should take convalescent hospitals in both cases. A hospital filled with active treatment cases, that is to say bed cases, is hardly to be compared with a hospital full of convalescent patients who are out on the street half of the time.

Hon. Mr. DANIEL: As far as this witness is concerned, I do not think it makes any difference. It is the principle, not the kind of patient confined in a hospital.

By Hon. Mr. Daniel:

Q. It is the question of administration, you are speaking of, is it not?—A. Of course, sir, there is a vast difference between a hospital and a convalescent home. A hospital, generally speaking, contains bed cases, whereas a convalescent home, generally speaking, contains convalescents able to go out.

Q. You spoke, I think, of the Khaki League hospital here whose medical officer is obliged to send to you for assistance to take a man and put him under arrest?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you think that is because the medical officer had no command; in other words he has no force at his disposal. Supposing you had no force at your disposal, that you had no non-commissioned officers or corporal of the guard and five men, would you have any more actual force than the medical officer?—A. But I have in each one of the homes under my command.

Q. Just so, that is what I am getting at?—A. Non-commissioned officers and men.

Q. Because you are put in command, and you have these men placed at your disposal?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now, supposing the hospital guard is told to report to the medical officer in charge of the hospital for his instructions, would he not have just as much power as you?—A. No, sir.

Q. Why not?—A. Because, as I said before——

Q. Answer that? Why would he not?—A. Because he is not a combatant officer.

Q. But the guard is ordered to report to him for duty and he gives his instructions. What is the difference?—A. The sergeant of the guard and the N.C.O.'s and men composing that guard are on my staff and directly under me for discipline. They are to carry out my orders first and foremost.

Q. I am not finding fault with that at all. But supposing you are ordered to send a file of men to a certain hospital to report there for guard duty, and to report to the medical officer in charge, you have done your duty in carrying out your order in sending that guard where it was wanted; and the guard reports to the medical officer for duty and gets his orders?—A. I give the orders, sir, but out of respect for the medical officer, and he naturally being the medical officer in charge of the home, would give the senior N.C.O. instructions to report to the medical officer.

Q. You think that could not be done. Do you know whether it is done in other armies?—A. It may be, sir, I am not prepared to say it is not.

Q. And with regard to the military hospitals in England, do you know the practice there?—A. No, sir.

[Major G. E. Hall.]

By the Chairman:

Q. There are one or two things I intended to speak of in my examination. There was a reference made to the fire escapes in the Grey Nunnery, first that they are insufficient and subsequently that they were locked up. Would you consider that building safe in case of fire?

Hon. Mr. MURPHY: First of all, is that the fact?

By the Chairman:

Q. Are the exits to the fire escapes locked?—A. No, sir, they are out of bounds for the men.

Q. If a fire should take place there at night are the fire escapes properly available?—A. Yes.

Q. Are there fire escapes to all floors, do they extend up to the second and third storeys?—A. There is one fire escape, sir, and there is another being installed.

Q. Do you consider that you have ample fire escape accommodation, or will have when this other one is installed?—A. That is a little difficult question, sir, to ask me.

Q. Well, you must visit and inspect that building from time to time?—A. That is quite true, sir, but for what number of men?

Q. For 200 men.—A. Yes, for 200.

Q. You have fire escapes enough for 200 men?—A. Yes, with the one that is being installed now.

Q. How are your men distributed in the matter of sleeping? How many sleep on the first floor, how many on the second, third and fourth floors?—A. The smallest number on the top floor.

Q. Have you any idea how many there would be on the top floor?—A. I cannot say offhand tonight.

Q. I suppose fifty on each floor anyway?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Do you make any attempt to have the men who are lame or not quite so efficient as others placed on the lower floor?—A. That is a matter for the medical officer, sir.

Q. I thought that the fire escapes belonged to your jurisdiction?—A. That is quite true. But if a man is lame I do not assign him to a bed on the first or the fourth floor, that is done by the medical officer and his staff.

Q. The question of the assignment of the bed where the patient shall sleep?—A. Absolutely, sir.

Q. You were speaking a little while ago of the liquor evil. I know that you are very anxious to protect your men as far as possible from the evil effects of liquor. What are the regulations here with reference to the selling of liquor to soldiers?—A. All licensed hotels and bars are placed out of bounds for troops.

Q. By whom?—A. By orders of the General Officer Commanding the District.

Q. That is a prohibition on the soldier?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. It does not affect the saloon keeper at all?—A. No, sir. That is for certain hours, with the exception of a couple of hours in the morning, and I think it is from six to eight at night, I am not sure.

Q. Are there any hours of the day when your men can get out, when it is perfectly legal for them to get drink if they want to?—A. Yes, sir, at night.

Q. They can go to a bar and drink if they want to at night without infringing any law?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is there any civic or provincial law that prohibits the sale of liquor to soldiers within certain hours?—A. Not that I am aware of, sir. If so, I do not consider it was necessary to issue that district order placing these licensed hotels and saloons out of bounds except during these limited hours.

Q. What can be done to protect your men from being ruined by the excessive use of liquor? What is being done to protect them, what more can be done to protect them? Are they perfectly free, if they want to, to ruin themselves while in a convalescent condition?—A. It is the bottled stuff, sir, that they buy, which is prepared right here in the city.

Q. Is it drugged?—A. An awful concoction, sir.

Q. Unfit to drink?—A. I have had in my own office on one occasion seven different grades, and without mentioning any names, a gentleman who was in a position to know tested them and there was only one which he pronounced fit for a man to drink.

Q. What was the deleterious ingredient?—A. I cannot say as to that.

Q. Wood alcohol, or that sort of stuff?—A. Oh, yes. The trouble is they have these glass corks with an ordinary lead seal which can be lifted up, the cork extracted, the bottle refilled and the lead cover replaced, and if the label is not scratched or mutilated in any way, the bottle is ready for reselling. It is not like a seal that has to be broken in order to extract the cork.

Q. Do you know whether there is any legislation to render legal the selling of mixed liquors of that kind?—A. I understand it is illegal, sir.

Hon. Mr. DANIEL: Under the Adulteration of Foods Act.

The WITNESS: I would like to go on record if I may at this opportunity: So far as the blind pigs in Ste. Agathe are concerned, they are playing havoc with those tubercular men up there. They are practically ignoring openly the law in Ste. Agathe. It is a prohibition town as you are no doubt aware. But they are selling it, openly selling it, and they will continue to sell it.

Q. That is, the law is absolutely defied up there?—A. Yes, sir. I have a written statement from Capt. Byers the medical officer in charge of the sanitarium at Ste. Agathe to that effect.

Q. A good deal has been said about the pay-books being taken away from the men. Do you know whether or not the large majority of returned soldiers have their pay book?—A. The majority, yes.

Q. It is the exception and not the rule that a man does not get his pay-book?—A. Yes, the exception, sir. I have known of a cot case or a stretcher case, for instance, who came back as such from England, who was not issued his pay-book on leaving England.

Q. Where did it go to?—A. It probably came over from England to Canada with his documents, but it may not have, of course.

Q. When a man gets separated from his pay-book, what is the reason?—A. Now, sir, you are asking me to make a statement which—

Q. We would like to have you make this statement for the sake of the soldier, in order to get at the facts if we can?—A. That is a matter for the Accountant and Paymaster General to speak of.

Q. But I am asking you from your experience, as you have met and talked with the men. You know the men who came over here without pay-books, how did it happen that they came back without the book?—A. In some cases they have told me frankly that the books were taken away from them in England.

By Hon. Mr. Murphy:

Q. Do you mean forcibly?—A. No, they were simply asked for them.

By Hon. Mr. Daniel:

Q. They were asked for the pay-book for a temporary purpose?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And it was not given back to them?—A. It was not given back to them.

Q. When a man is discharged, is it not a fact that his pay-book reappears, and his accounts are made up?—A. Of course, after a man returns from overseas service he will from time to time receive advances on his pay and allowance, which would be recorded on his last pay certificate which would not be recorded in his pay-book.

Q. I was referring to the statements of some of the men that they had not got their pay-books. As a matter of fact does not the pay-book reappear when the man is discharged and his account made up?—A. In some cases, sir, but I have known of instances where the man disputed his account as not being correct. For instance, he received a cheque for such and such an amount covering his pay and allowances in full up to date his discharge was effective. He claimed there was some money still due him.

Q. On the strength of having his pay-book with him?—A. So far as his balance was concerned upon his departure from England and upon his arrival at the Discharge Depot in Canada.

Q. Did the pay-book reappear?—A. The man is supposed to have his pay-book.

By the Chairman:

Q. Who discharges these men? Do you do that?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. When you discharge a man is his pay-book always there?—A. That is not for me to say, sir.

Q. As a matter of fact, when you discharge a man is his pay-book there as a rule?—A. A man may be discharged without his pay-book being in evidence. The officer paying casualties is responsible for his cheque or cheques being made up covering the balance due him up to and including the date of his discharge.

Q. I am not speaking of his responsibilities, I am speaking of the actual fact. When you discharge a man does he have his pay-book?—A. Generally speaking, yes, sir, unless he is one of the exceptions and does not have it.

Q. Unless he became separated from his pay-book in England?—A. Yes.

Q. There is only one more question to ask. Returning to the matter of the cells. In your opinion would a convalescent soldier be just as well disciplined, as far as discipline is concerned, in a cell with a mattress as in a cell without one?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And the danger of injuring him physically would be avoided if he had a mattress rather than if he had to sleep on the floor?—

Hon. Mr. MURPHY: Provided he did not inflict self-injury.

A. Before I took command, sir, there was a mattress and a so-called detention room in the Grey Nuns' Convalescent Home, and the mattress was used on more than one occasion, (of which I am personally aware), as a means of escape; with its assistance the men got out.

Q. I do not think the mattress could be used as a means of escape from the cells you have in the Grey Nunnery?—A. No, sir, because they were built according to the designs of the engineers, the other was not.

Q. So that is not a reason why you do not have a mattress?—A. Of course there are exceptions, but generally speaking, the less inviting you can make a cell or a detention room—

Q. The greater the punishment?—A. Not only that, sir, but the less crime you have, and I have had evidence of it.

By Hon. Mr. Daniel:

Q. What about the temperature of these cells in the winter time. Were they warm or were they cold?—A. There were times, sir, when they were cold. There were times, sir, when the recreation room was cold, there were times when my office was so cold I could hardly hold my pen.

Q. If a man who was drunk was put into one of these cells on the bare floor at a time when the cells were cold, would he be given any more than the two blankets you spoke of?—A. Yes, sir, he would, and they got them too.

Q. He would get enough blankets to keep him warm, would he?—A. Yes. There are two dozen standard army grey blankets which are kept for the sole use of the men in the cells and are issued from my Quartermaster's stores.

Q. Is the floor in the cells of cement or wood?—A. It is a wooden floor.

[Major G. E. Hall.]

Q. How far from the ground is it?—A. There is a cellar underneath the whole of the recreation room.

Q. Are these cells under the recreation room?—A. Outside of it but on the same floor level.

Q. Is there a cellar underneath the cells?—A. Underneath the whole floor, sir.

Q. I thought the cells were in a separate building?—A. No, sir.

The CHAIRMAN: They are in the corridor as you go into the hospital.

By Hon. Mr. Daniel:

Q. For how many hours would these men be detained in the cells at one time?—A. There have been cases where men were detained there for 168 hours.

Q. Without a medical officer seeing them?—A. No, sir, before that man was sentenced he was considered fit for detention by the medical officer.

Q. Suppose a man, a drunken man, is placed in the cell at night, is he paraded before you the next morning?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is he then released or is he sent back to confinement?—A. It all depends upon the nature of the charge, sir.

Q. Well, take a case of ordinary drunkenness?—A. An ordinary case of drunkenness brings admonishment on the first charge. The fine for the second charge, the fine is $2. For the third charge, and every subsequent offence the fine is $3, but if within a certain period, $5. If within another certain period (8 months), $6. All above according to Royal Warrant.

Q. If they sober up they are really not sent back to the cells, that is, if there is no drunkenness?—A. If it is a straight charge of drunkenness I cannot sentence a man to cells. I cannot mete out any other sentence to a man for drunkenness but fines according to Royal Warrant, just the same as in the case of a man who is absent without leave. That man automatically forfeits his pay for the period he is absent, according to Royal Warrant.

Q. I used to hear it said that being merely drunk was not a military offence, but there would have to be disorderly conduct, or some other offence?—A. A man has either got to be fit or unfit for duty. You cannot, in the army touch a man for being under the influence of liquor.

Q. Then being simply under the influence of liquor does not count?—A. Oh, no.

WITNESS discharged.

Committee adjourned to meet in Toronto on Tuesday, March 20, 1917.

EXHIBIT No. 1.

Submitted by Major L. P. D. TILLEY, M.L.A.

PROVINCE OF NEW BRUNSWICK.

LAND SETTLEMENT AFTER THE WAR.

For some time the Government of the Province of New Brunswick has had under consideration the subject of assisting ex-soldiers who desire to emigrate at the close of the war and who, it is pointed out, should, if possible, be retained within the Empire and not be allowed to drift abroad for want of guidance and knowledge of opportunities available to them in the Dominion.

It is quite apparent that the greatest measure of assistance that can be given by this Government to ex-soldiers coming to us at the close of the war will be along agricultural lines.

After some very considerable consideration had been given to the subject, a Bill was introduced at the session of the Legislature of 1916, being Chapter 9, 6th George V., entitled "An Act to Provide for Settlements After the War". This Act is as follows:—

"Whereas, it is expected that after the cessation of the present war there will be a large influx of population into this Province, composed largely of residents of the Province who have served overseas and also residents of the United Kingdom who have served the Empire in the present war, together with others whose altered circumstances may render their emigration advisable;

And Whereas, it is desirable to provide a comprehensive system for settling such persons upon suitable lands in this Province in communities so organized as to provide for social comfort and co-operation;

And Whereas, one of the principal features of such scheme will be the provision for such settlers of homes and practical assistance and instruction in agriculture and all other matters necessary for the successful development of such communities;

Be it, therefore, enacted by the Lieutenant-Governor and Legislative Assembly, as follows:—

1. The "Farm Settlement Board" as constituted under the Act 2 George V., Chapter 28, is hereby empowered to submit for the approval of the Advisory Board hereinafter constituted, the selection of such lands within the Province as may be suitable for the purpose hereinbefore recited, and also the acquisition of such private lands as may be found to be necessary and suitable for the said purpose and the furnishing of such supplies, equipment, instruction and education and other services as may be necessary.

2. The Lieutenant Governor in Council shall appoint a Board to consist of not more than five persons, who shall be known as the "Advisory Settlement Board", which shall report to the Lieutenant Governor in Council on all propositions for the borrowing of money, the acquisition of lands or other property, the fixing of general conditions for selling, leasing or otherwise disposing of said lands or property to settlers, the terms and conditions upon which money may be loaned to settlers, including the terms of re-payment by such settlers, and generally the details of all projects connected with the carrying out of the purpose of this Act. The Farm Settlement Board shall act in such matters only in conformity with the general regulations or specific directions which may be made or given from time to time by the Lieutenant Governor in Council, and shall be under the supervision of the Minister of Agriculture.

3. The services of the said Advisory Board shall be gratuitous and honorary.

4. The Lieutenant Governor in Council may, from time to time, borrow upon the credit of the Province, such sum or sums of money in such form of securities for repayment, at such rate of interest, and upon such terms and conditions as may be deemed advisable for the promotion of the purpose of this Act.

5. Within ten days after the opening of each session of the Legislature, a full report of all proceedings of the Lieutenant Governor in Council, the Advisory Board and the Farm Settlement Board, under this Act shall be laid on the table of the House by the Minister of Agriculture.

6. The Lieutenant Governor in Council, upon the recommendation of the said Minister, shall make such regulations as may be necessary for determining the rights and liabilities of all settlers under this Act and in respect of all other matters in relation to the carrying out of the purpose of this Act as shall be deemed necessary or advisable, and such regulations so made shall have the same force and effect as if enacted herein and shall be judicially noticed by all courts.

By this it will be seen that the Government is authorized to take such steps as will provide homes and practical assistance and instruction in agriculture, and all other matters necessary for the development of a comprehensive system for settling residents of the province who have served overseas and also residents in the United Kingdom who have served the Empire in the present war, together with others whose altered circumstances may render their emigration advisable, upon suitable lands in this Province, in colonies or communities so located as to provide for social comfort and co-operation.

The Farm Settlement Board, referred to in Section 1 of the Act, has been actively engaged during the past few years placing settlers upon the vacant farms of the Province and in this has been unusually successful.

The Advisory Settlement Board, referred to in Section 2 of the Act, has already been appointed and has held joint meetings with the Farm Settlement Board. At these meetings it was arranged to go ahead with active preparations, looking towards the consummation of the scheme at the earliest possible moment, placing us in a position to receive the class of immigrants for whom the assistance is intended at any time.

The project provides for settlement in groups or communities, the number of settlers in each case depending upon the soil and the area of suitable land that is available in such locality. Each of these groups will be constantly in touch with an illustration farm, operated by the Government for the purpose of supplying instruction, employment, necessary implements and assistance generally in the operation of a farm. It is proposed to have available for settlement, lots ranging from 10 acres to 100 acres, with a view to meeting the requirements of the different applicants.

Conditions of Settlement.

It is proposed to give the settlers free land, when this is owned by the Government, and, in the case of land purchased from private individuals, the settlers will be charged the actual cost of the farm. In addition to the land acquired, the settler will be charged with improvements made to the property, such as erecting a suitable residence and barn and such other improvements as may be considered necessary. The estimated cost of each holding will be from Five Hundred Dollars (£100) to Fifteen Hundred Dollars (£300).

The settler will be asked to make an initial payment of 5 per cent of the value on taking possession of one of these farms, the balance to be paid in nineteen annual payments, with interest at the prevailing rate. If a settler so desires, he can have the privilege of paying for the property in full at the end of ten years or sooner, but in no case will he be given a deed before the expiration of ten years.

Size of Holdings.

Each area for settlement will be divided into lots ranging from ten acres to one hundred acres, with a view to meeting the requirements of the different applicants.

Provincial Assistance.

Seed-grain will, where necessary, be provided by order of the Farm Settlement Board, and sold at cost and on easy terms to the purchasers of the improved farms.

The services of the officials representing the different branches of the Department of Agriculture will be available for the benefit of the settlers.

Situation.

The areas for settlement will be located in different parts of the province where suitable land can be obtained near market and transportation facilities.

Character and Quality of Soil.

In most instances the land is rolling and of good quality, varying from sandy loam to clay loam, and in some cases heavy clay. In localities where there is a light sandy soil, the land will be divided into small holdings for the raising of poultry and small fruits.

Opportunities for Production and Marketing.

Sufficient cleared land will be available for settlers on each holding. Where possible, a co-operative system for selling the products of the farms will be established. It will be the aim of the Government to see that the highest prices are secured for all products.

Transportation.

Settlements will all be placed near railway lines or water communication, allowing direct connection with the larger towns and cities.

Employment.

It is proposed, as far as possible, to utilize the services of the new settlers in clearing and preparing their colony farms for occupation or in working on the illustration farms, thus affording them practical experience and a fair wage.

Vocational Training.

Opportunities are afforded within the province for agricultural education by means of schools established at different points. Here short courses are held throughout the year at which practical instruction in farm work is given.

For settlers' wives and daughters opportunity is afforded for instruction in domestic science, this work being under the Department of Agriculture and carried on by the department direct and through the women's institutes throughout the province almost continually.

Technical Education.

The Government proposes in the near future to establish technical schools in the province, where returned soldiers and settlers can avail themselves of the technical training afforded and equip themselves for other occupations than that of farming. This work has not reached an advanced stage in New Brunswick as yet, but the matter is now receiving the attention of the Government and it is proposed to begin the work of technical education in the almost immediate future.

The carrying out of the above scheme will be, by regulations, prepared by the joint Advisory and Farm Settlement Boards, and approved of by the Lieutenant-Governor-in-Council.

In addition to the form of settlement indicated above, should any returned soldiers who desire to settle in the province have sufficient capital to make it unnecessary to take advantage of the community settlement idea, the Government can through the Farm Settlement Board, supply such with good farms in desirable localities, farms that will be capable of greater production and consequently a larger income during the first few years. These can be obtained at from Two Thousand Dollars ($400) to Four Thousand Dollars (£800).

Suitable lands are available for agricultural specialties such as poultry, sheep raising or bee culture, and may be obtained by approved settlers at a minimum rent.

Regulations Governing the Sale of Land.

All applications for farms under "An Act to Provide for Settlement After the War" must be made either to the Agent General for the Province of New Brunswick, at 37 Southamption Street, Strand, London, W.C., or to the Secretary of the Farm Settlement Board, St. John, New Brunswick, Canada. Printed forms of application with declaration by applicant may be had at the above offices, where a description of the lots available can be obtained.

The applicants must be supported by any proof required by the said Board.

Allotments will be made only to married men who are bona fide settlers, settlement and occupation being the basis of the contract.

Contract for the Purchase of Improved Farms.

The contract will provide that:—

On payment to the Farm Settlement Board of five per cent of the purchase price and execution of the official contract, the settler may go into possession of the farm allotted to him.

The balance of the purchase price of the land shall be payable in nineteen annual payments with interest at per cent.

The contract shall only be assignable for good cause approved by the Farm Settlement Board.

The settler shall pay all taxes assessed against the farm from the date of the contract.

The buildings on the farm shall be insured in favour of the Farm Settlement Board until paid for by the settler, and the insurance premium shall be paid by him.

The settler shall keep records of his farming operations in account books to be supplied by the Farm Settlement Board, which shall be available for inspection by any member of the Board or their Agent.

The settler shall, until paid for, keep all buildings and improvements on the farm in good and tenantable repair, order and condition.

The settler shall break, cultivate, sow and crop such portions of his farm as from time to time may be expedient in the good farming operations of the said land.

The settler's operations on his own land shall be carried on under the advice and with the approval of a Government Superintendent.

The settler shall not, until he has paid the full purchase price, cut or remove any timber or logs from his farm without first getting the written consent of the said Board.

When warranted by conditions the Farm Settlement Board may make provision for a supply of seed and the use of farm machinery in favour of the settler.

The settler may at his option pay in full for his farm at any time, but shall not receive his deed before the expiration of ten years from date of purchase.

The title to lands sold by the Farm Settlement Board shall remain in the Board until the purchaser has made all his payments required by his contract.

While the contract contains the usual provisions for forfeiture in case of default, the settler is assured that these regulations will be sympathetically administered with the single purpose of making him a successful and contented farmer upon the land in the Province of New Brunswick.

The Government of this Province, in accordance with the steps taken in the other Provinces appointed a Committee to be known as The Returned Soldiers Employment Committee (Nova Scotia). It also has direct charge of re-educating grievously disabled soldiers.

ORDER IN COUNCIL.

1. The Military Hospitals Commission should undertake to assist and advise all provincial or local committees or organizations with respect to the best methods and plans to be adopted to attain the objects in view who, upon their return to Canada, are physically and otherwise fit to assume such employment. All expenditures necessary in undertaking the duty should be borne by the Province.

One of the members of the Committee to be designated by the Provincial Government should be ex-officio a member of the Commission.

7. Through its central Committee each Province should furnish to the Commission a detailed statement of the institutions and facilities within its borders which will be available for the purpose of taking care of and providing for the various classes of returned soldiers referred to in suggestion No. 5, including all necessary particulars regarding the accommodation available and the terms and conditions under which such institution and facilities might be made use of for the purpose mentioned under Provincial and Local administration.

EXHIBIT No. 3.

REPORT of the Secretary of the Returned Soldiers' Employment Bureau of Nova Scotia, respecting Convalescent Homes.

(Submitted by W. B. MacCoy.)

HALIFAX, N.S., February 22, 1917.

To the President and Members of the Committee.

This question of convalescent homes and medical treatment while entirely belonging to the Military Hospitals Commission, Ottawa, is one, nevertheless, in which this Committee must of necessity take serious interest as it directly affects the interests of our Nova Scotia men.

For some time back this matter has given me very great anxiety and worry, because I have realized that the Class 2 men of this province are receiving absolutely neither the medical attention or the necessary expert treatment recommended by the Medical Board. It is a crime and shame that Nova Scotians who have received their wounds or become invalided defending the Empire, should be so neglected upon their return to these shores, that nothing is being done to decrease that disability with the inevitable result that they are daily deteriorating physically.

I have urged this matter again and again upon the Military Hospitals Commission, and have given them my time in an effort to secure a proper building or buildings for a convalescent home, all apparently without any actual progress being made. Finally, feeling that this subject should not be allowed to be delayed any longer, I addressed the following letter to Senator McLennan:—

"I have been hoping for some time that definite and prompt action would be taken by the Commission regarding the marginally noted subject matter.

"If Dalhousie has been actually accepted, then immediate steps should be taken to take over the building so that the public will know that this province has at least a place where the Class 2 men can receive treatment and attention.

"Every steamer is increasing the number of men who should be in a Convalescent home, and at the present time the number has reached two hundred and forty men who are all out patients.

"This is a state of affairs that has now come to the point where no further delay can safely be allowed to take place, either in the interests of the men or that of the Commission.

"Men and their friends are complaining of the neglect of their individual cases. None of these out-patients are receiving the treatment recommended by the Medical Board held on them at various discharge depots at time of discharge. This is not the fault of the A.D.M.S. because the military hospitals are full, and the men cannot obtain treatment in their home locality because of the inability of the doctors to do so for various reasons.

"Take the recent case of Joseph M. Douglas, his cause of disability is G.S.W. left arm with ulnar and medium nerve paralysis. The Board's recommendation is "Convalescent Home for Massage." Where is there such a place and how can he in his own village, "Spanish Ship Bay, N.S.," obtain the kind of massage required, and even if he could I am unaware of a provision whereby the expense would be paid.

"I am writing you as this province's representative to see to it that the present state of affairs regarding convalescent home in this province is remedied without further delay.

"Ontario and the West by this time has surely obtained enough sanatoria and convalescent homes to do them until these Maritime Provinces have had a fair share of the same. Because Ontario has had a larger enlistment, and therefore larger casualty list is no reason why our convalescent men should be all out-patients by force of circumstances. The other provinces must have their share of these as well, and by this I do not mean men who can go to convalescent homes for treatment, but out-patients because there are none to go to.

"I have, to date, kept the newspapers from printing articles sent them on this question, but the pressure is becoming daily greater and I cannot succeed much longer.

"The question now is does the Commission propose providing for our convalescent men and that without further delay. Every day's delay means that much less prospect for the returned men to get back to their former physical condition.

"I am sending a copy of this to Mr. Dobell who knows the circumstance here."

I also sent to Mr. W. M. Dobell, who was here a few months ago and is thoroughly conversant with the needs of this province, a copy of letter forwarded Senator McLennan, and he replied as follows:—

"I am just in receipt of your letter of the 26th inst. covering copy of your letter of the same date to send to Senator McLennan. I am fully alive to the situation in your Province, and I have urged that prompt action be taken to rectify it every time I have been in Ottawa.

"I am writing to Senator McLennan, and I hope that your definite statement of the present situation may result in prompt action.

"There is more accommodation required in Ontario but that is no reason why Nova Scotia should be without any."

I also received the following reply from Senator McLennan:—

"I duly received your favour of the 26th ulto., and since its receipt have been in conference with the heads of our departments in relation to the matter on which you touch.

"Progress is being made at Dalhousie, and Colonel Thompson has taken up the case of the man to whom you refer, and similar ones, with a view of preventing deterioration by sending them, until our institutions in Nova Scotia are ready, to other places.

"We will write you in connection with this matter."

The following letter was also received from Colonel Thompson:

"Your letter of January 26th to Senator McLennan has been handed to me for attention. A former letter of mine will have advised you regarding Dalhousie.

"2. You will understand that until the Clayton Home is vacated, cleaned and made ready for the reception of our own soldiers, or until Dalhousie is ready for these men, we have no accommodation other than the Ross Hospital in Nova Scotia at the present time.

"3. It is expected that the coloured soldiers in the Clayton Home will soon be returning to the West Indies and our Architect advised us that the work at the Dalhousie Building is progressing.

"4. I desire to draw your attention to the fact that any cases requiring special treatment should not be sent to their own homes, but should be sent to a Hospital under the M.H.C. where treatment can be given.

"5. With particular reference to Joseph M. Douglas whose case you refer to—this man may be sent to the Grey Nuns' Hospital, Montreal. I am writing today to Capt. Morton, Halifax, to investigate this case and all similar ones that may now be in the Province, and to report upon each, so that we may be advised from time to time and thereby be able to make arrangements to give these men the best treatment the Commission can afford, pending the time when this can be done in Halifax."

The only result to date of these last communications is an intimation that Captain Forton is to report upon each case in the Province, but they have that now, as the following explanation shows:

When a Maritime man lands here he is taken to the Discharge Depot where he is medically boarded and classified. This Board has before it the man's documents containing the English Board's opinion. The Canadian Medical Board's opinion is copied into the Military Hospitals Commission forms, so that each man's case is on file at Ottawa, with full particulars of his disability and Canadian Board's recommendation.

There is a rumour that the Clearing Hospital Pier No. 2 is to be used temporarily for a Convalescent Home. Supposing that it is true, it can only be a makeshift, as the Pier 2 will very shortly be needed for active cases from England. In any event what is needed, and immediately, is a Convalescent Home properly equipped and with expert medical attendance.

There is a further rumour that the Clayton Convalescent Home is also to be used for the more serious cases. Both of these are only temporary.

The situation in this Province is so acute and serious that I would urge this Committee to pass a strongly worded resolution and to follow it up with a delegation to Ottawa. It is only fair to state that in my opinion, this state of affairs is not due to the officials at Ottawa, but to the Commission itself.

Those of Class 2 who are tubercular will very shortly be able to be treated by reason of the additional accommodation at Kentville, being erected at the joint expense of the Federal and Local Governments.

Vocational Training.

It will be remembered that on the 25th day of August, 1916, a scheme of organization for training disabled soldiers was placed before this Committee.

This matter is also being delayed because of the neglect in the appointment of a Medical Officer to undertake the work.

Medical Officer.

Dr. A. McD. Morton, is supposed to be the Medical Officer for "B" Unit, Nova Scotia, but he has not been relieved of his medical duties at the Citadel, and it is therefore impossible for him to give the attention required to the duties of his office.

Appended hereto is a tabulated statement of Class 2 men as of this date (February 20, 1917).

Welcome Committees.

We have committees all over the province and they are doing good work, both in welcoming and obtaining employment.

Both the Halifax Citizens and Dartmouth Citizens Committees are also of great help.

(Sgd.) W. B. MacCOY,
Secretary.

EXHIBIT No. 4.

Order in Council creating the Soldiers Employment Commission of the Province of Quebec. Dated November 10, 1915.

(Submitted by Hon. George A. Simard).

Concerning the Interprovincial Conference at Ottawa in October, 1915 re Providing employment for members of the Canadian Expeditionary Force who return to Canada during the period of the War.

The Honorable the Secretary of the Province, in a report dated the 10th November 1915, sets forth: that the following suggestions were adopted at an Inter-Provincial Conference held at Ottawa in October 1915, regarding the problem of taking care of and providing employment for members of the Canadian Expeditionary Force who return to Canada during the period of the war.

1. The Military Hospitals Commission should undertake to assist and advise all Provincial or local committee or organizations with respect to the best methods and plans to be adopted to attain the objects in view.

2. The Government of each Province should appoint a Central Provincial Committee consisting of such number of members as each Province may deem advisable.

3. All expenditures necessary in connection with the organization and administration of Provincial and other purely local committees should be borne by Provincial or local authorities or by voluntary contributions.

4. Each of the Provinces of Canada working through its Central Committee should assume the responsibility of endeavoring to find employment for discharged soldiers who, upon their return to Canada are physically and otherwise fit to assume such employment. All expenditures necessary in undertaking the duty should be borne by the Provinces.
